PREFACE

Within the pages of this book are contained some of the most beautiful words ever written in the English language; within the pages of this book are contained some of the greatest plays ever written in any language. This volume of work has become part of our heritage and, translated into all the tongues of the world, has become for each nationality, for each culture, part of their heritage, too; a cornerstone of literature and drama. For William Shakespeare's writings, like the music of Bach or the paintings of Leonardo, have transcended the pettiness of time and place and have become part of those eternal things that speak to all men at all times. Shakespeare is the universal dramatist.

More has been written about Shakespeare than he ever wrote himself. From schoolboys to dons, from scholars to scientists, the volume of critical analysis grows and grows. Shakespeare has attracted the most intricate theories ranging from arguments over authorship to the best kind of scholastic research. Bowdler censored the plays; other writers have taken the themes and modernised them; Americans have made musicals of them while Italians, of course, have made operas; pedants have tried to turn them into dull, intellectual excercises and schoolmasters have given the learning of these great lines as punishment. But Shakespeare has withstood all that has been written about him and all that has been done to him for the simple reason that he wrote for the theatre. Each time actors re-create his plays in front of an audience he becomes a living dramatist again. The performance generates the excitement of the drama and the words become instruments of the actor's art and the dramatist's will.

One cannot help feeling that Shakespeare would be astonished at the mystique that now surrounds his work. Consider him: an actor-writer working in a theatrical company for his daily bread; rehearsing, performing, travelling and having to write the plays sometimes to a tormenting deadline. Perhaps he would rush to rehearsal, not quite happy with the last act, and hear the first reading of the play. The actors would voice their comments, telling him that certain lines were impossible to speak or that such and such a scene could not possibly work in performance. And one has the picture of him listening patiently, correcting where necessary and then waiting for that moment when the play was ready for the audience, when the lines would be spoken and heard, when that first ripple of laughter might float across to the stage or a gasp might greet some stunning dramatic effect. This was the vital experience of the contact between player and playgoer.

It is in the theatre that, I hope, you will first be introduced to a play by William Shakespeare. It is in the theatre that, I hope, you will first sense the eternal quality of the master's work. It is in the theatre that, I hope, you will first experience the life of the plays.

And afterwards, perhaps, you will take this text and read it, for it is the permanent record of the play. In these printed pages you will be able to re-discover those things which stirred you. You may commit to memory those passages which you love most and each time you read the play your reference will be that performance to an audience of which you were a part. Shakespeare, himself, says of actors:

"We are such stuff
As dreams are made on, and our little life
Is rounded with a sleep."

This book, then, contributes to the permanence of the great dramatist whose four hundredth anniversary of birth we now celebrate and give thanks for. This book is a tribute to him. My wish is that it may long be your companion and your delight.

INTRODUCTION

It is not likely that the hand — of Vicar John Bretchgirdle presumably — trembled when it originally marked in the Stratford-upon-Avon Register that on April 26th, 1564 there was baptized the first son of John Shakespeare, William Shakespeare. Nobody could foresee that this would be the most famous entry in the whole register — and so the third child and first son of alderman Shakespeare and his wife Mary Arden, though doubly welcomed by his parents, was seemingly just one of the many whose birth meant something only to his family.

The records remain silent for several years about his life-story; but suddenly, more than eighteen years later, we find on November 27th, 1582 an entry in the Bishop of Worcester's Register which tells us about the issue that day of a special licence — only one reading of the banns — for the marriage of William Shakespeare and Anne Whateley of Temple Grafton, a village five miles west of Stratford.

On the next day, November 28th, 1582, we find a bond exempting the Bishop of Worcester from all responsibility should the marriage of "William Shagspere", and "Anne Hathwey" of Stratford prove not valid because of some previous contract of the two parties, or other lawful obstacle (consanguinity, affinity etc.). The sureties in this bond—because Shakespeare was still a minor—were Fulk Sandells and John Richardson, farmers of Stratford. Though we cannot now be sure, it seems most likely that Ann Whateley of Temple Grafton and Anne Hathaway of Stratford were one and the same girl, "Whateley" being mcrely a clerk's slip in copying names from an allegation.

Such a bond was normal procedure when it was necessary to perform the marriage ceremonies without delay; and the next record extant reveals us the probable reason why this was necessary. On May 26th, 1583, the Stratford parish church saw the christening of "Susanna, daughter to William Shakespeare". Nor was this the only child: two years later, on Candlemas Day, his next children "Hamnet & Judeth sonne and daughter to William Shakspere" were baptized in the same church, as the parish register informs us.

From now on, neither the Register nor any other record gives us a clue to Shakespeare's life for several years. The only exception is a mention of William Shakespeare's name in a suit of his parents against a distant relative, Edmund Lambert, in a property matter. This was in 1588. But, apart from this, Shakespeare's life at this time is wide open to conjecture: these are his "lost years".

Then, suddenly, in September 1592, Shakespeare's name appears in London. An impoverished poet and dramatist, Robert Greene, bitterly complaining and admonishing his colleagues, Christopher Marlowe and probably two others, George Peele, and either Thomas Nashe or Thomas Lodge, in his farewell book, Groatsworth of Wit, writes this passage containing an unmistakable pun upon Shakespeare's name and personal history:

"Base minded men all three of you, if by my misery you be not warned: for unto none of you (like me) sought those burrs to cleave: those Puppets (I mean) that spake from our mouths, those Antics garnished in our colours. Is it not strange, that I, to whom they all have been beholding: is it not like that you, to whom they all have been beholding, shall (were ye in that case as I am now) be both at once of them forsaken? Yes trust them not: for there is an upstart Crow, beautified with our feathers, that with his Tyger's heart wrapt in a Player's hide, supposes he is as well able to bombast out a blank verse as the best of you: and being an absolute Iohannes fac totum, is in his own conceit the only Shake-scene in a country."

There may be some differences in detailed interpretation of this passage, but it is clear that by autumn 1592 Shakespeare was both a player and a playwright.

Next year saw the publication of his first work, with the author's name still not on the title but as a signature on the dedication inside. It was the narrative poem, Venus and Adonis, followed in 1594 by The Rape of Lucrece. Quite probably this growing popularity was the cause of a direct allusion to him and to his work included in anonymous commendatory verses to Willobie his Avisa (registered on September 3rd, 1594):

Though Collatine have dearly bought,

To high renown, a lasting life,

And found, that most in vain have sought,

To have a Fair, and Constant wife,

Yet Tarquin pluch'd his glistering grape,

And Shake-speare, paints poor Lucroce's rape.

Other allusions may be found at this time in the works of Michael Drayton, William Covell, and perhaps in the Epistle to Saint Peter's Complaint by Robert Southwell.

Quite clearly, the next record presents us Shakespeare as an actor in the Lord Chamberlain's company. "William Kempe William Shakespeare & Richarde Burbage seruantes to the Lord Chamberleyne" were payees for Court performances at Greenwich on December 26th and 27th, 1594.

Two years later, death touched the family of the young poet and actor. On August 11th, 1596 Hamnet, his son, was buried at Stratford, as the parish register informs us. Some time later, Shakespeare was living in the Parish of St Helen's, Bishopsgate; this is borne out by the report of "petty collectors" who next year tried in vain to collect from him arrears assessed in the previous October. Shakespeare's name appears on similar lists for four years.

On October 20th, 1596 the poet's father was granted a Coat of Arms, "viz. Gold, on a Bend Sables, a Speare of the first steeled argent. And for his crest or eognizance a falcon his wings displayed Argent standing on a wreath of his colours: suppo[rting] a Spear Gold steeled as aforesaid set upon a helmet with mantles & tassels as hath been accustomed and doth more plainly appear depicted on this margent." Thus we read in the College of Arms Vincent MS 157 — and on the margin are executed the new arms and the crest of the Shakespeares. The motto Non sanz droict appears at the head of this document.

This granting of arms is only one of several facts showing us that Shakespeare must have been a man of considerable property by now. But, observing strict chronology, before we can quote another significant example of Shakespeare's well-being, we must mention a strange document which gives us some reason to believe that by November 1596 Shakespeare was living on the south bank of the Thames, probably in the liberty of Clink, Bankside. The relevant document is a writ of attachment issued to the sheriff of Surrey on the instigation of one William Wayde, "who craved surcties of peace against William Shakespeare" and others "for fear of death, and so forth."

On May 4th, 1597 Shakespeare bought, from William Underhill, New Place, the second largest house in Stratford at the corner of Chapel Street and Chapel Lane — originally built a hundred years earlier by Sir Hugh Clopton. It is likely that some repairs had to be done to the house, because in the following year the Stratford Corporation paid to Shakespeare 10d for one load of stone \leftarrow possibly what was left after the repairs.

By this time Shakespeare was considered to be wealthy as we see from the only extant letters where his name is mentioned, the so-called Quiney correspondence, in which Shakespeare is asked by Richard Quiney for a loan of £30, and from the fact that the note of corn and malt taken on 4th of February, 1597 "in the xlth yeare of the raigne of our moste gracious Soveraigne Ladie Queen Elizabethe" lists William Shakespeare of Chapel Street as having 10 quarts of malt (?) although, because of dearth, it was necessary to economize in grain.

But Shakespeare had certainly other things on his mind: in September of this year he was cast in one of the principal parts of Ben Jonson's Every Man in his Humour, as we see from the list of actors printed after the text of the play in the First Folio of Ben Jonson's Works (1616). The same month Palladis Tamia: Wit's Treasury by Francis Meres was registered — a collection of apothegms on philosophy and the arts containing in its

"Comparative discourse of our English Poets with the Greeke, Latine, and Italian Poets" an invaluable passage on Shakespeare's achievements:

"The English tongue is mightily enriched, and gorgeously invested in rare ornaments and resplendent abiliments by Sir Philip Sidney, Spencer, Daniel, Drayton, Warner, Shakespeare, Marlowe and Chapman ...

"As the soul of Euphorbus was thought to live in Pythagoras: so the sweet witty soul of Ovid lives in mellifluous & honey-tongued Shakespeare, witness his Venus and Adonis, his Lucrece, his sugared sonners among his private friends, &c.

"As Plautus and Seneea are accounted the best for Comedy and Tragedy among the Latins: so Shakespeare among the English is the most excellent in both kinds for the stage: for Comedy, witness his Gentlemen of Verona, his Errors, his Love Labour's Lost, his Love Labour's Won, his Midsummer's Night Dream, & his Merchant of Venice: for Tragedy his Richard the 2. Richard the 3. Henry the 4. King John, Titus Andronicus and his Romeo and Julier.

"As Epius Stolo said, that the Muses would speak with Plautus' tongue, if they would speak Latin: so I say that the Muses would speak with Shakespeare's fine filed phrase, if they would speak English ..."

Further, Meres mentions Shakespeare among those who are "the best among our Poets", "our best for Tragedy", "the best for Comedy" and who "are the most passionate among us to bewail and bemoan the perplexities of Love"

In 1598 there was also published the first play by Shakespeare with his name on the title page, Love's Labour's Lost, though perhaps its original first edition, now lost, preceded this issue in this claim.

1599 saw the opening of the Globe Theatre and appropriately on February 21st, Shakespeare became one of the seven original housekeepers of the Globe with a one-tenth share. Six of these housekeepers were members of the Lord Chamberlain's Company. It is not clear whether Shakespeare held this share and a similar one acquired in the Blackfriars Theatre (on August 9th, 1608) to the end of his life; nor is it clear when he parted with them, if he ever did so. He was still holding them in 1612, however, as is proved by the mentioning of his name in the suit of Ostler v. Heminges (9th[?] October 1615).

On August 23rd, 1600 Shakespeare is for the first time mentioned in the Stationer's register when Andrew Wyse and William Aspley "Entred for their copies vnder the handes of the wardens Two bookes, the one called Muche a Doo about nothingc... Wrytten by master Shakesperc."

From now on the records tell us Shakespeare's prosperous life story in individual records of his transactions.

Next year, on March 25th, Thomas Whittington, husbandman of Shottery, mentions Anne Shakespeare, "wyf unto Mr Wyllyam Shaxpere", in his testament. She owed him 40s which he bequeathed to the poor of Stratford. The late summer of this year dealt a blow to the poet; his father John was buried on September 8th. Exactly eight years and a day after, funeral services were read over the body of Shakespeare's mother, "Mayry Shaxspere wydowe".

On May Day 1602, Shakespeare bought 127 (or 107?) acres of land in Old Stratford, an agricultural area to the north of the borough, for £320 from William and John Combe. On September 28th of the same year, Shakespeare became copyholder of a cottage in Chapel Lane, opposite New Place, which is mentioned later that year when a second fine was levied on it. The description in the relavant record lists two additional orehards and Shakespeare is titled "generosus" in it.

In 1603, Queen Elizabeth I died; when James I took over the Lord Chamberlain's company, the Royal Licence for the King's men names Shakespeare in the second place in the member's list of the company. Next year in March, they were all supplied with 4½ yards of red cloth for liveries, as they took part in the coronation procession of the new king. By that time, however, Shakespeare seems to have ceased acting, as in the note at the end of the Folio text of Ben Jonson's Sejanus Shakespeare's name is included in the list of "the principal Tragoedians" for the last time.

Shakespeare was still living in London in those days, with a Huguenot tire-maker (a manufacturer of women's headdresses), Christopher Mountjoy who lived at the corner of Silver and Monkwell Streets in Cripplegate ward. This is proved by Shakespeare's deposition in a law-suit, made in London on May 11th, 1612. This deposition is important as it contains the first of six known signatures of Shakespeare. Late in 1604, Shakespeare himself was engaged in a law-suit: he brought an action for the recovery of £1 15r 10d from a Stratford apothecary Phillip Rogers who bought from the poet several bushels of malt and later even borrowed money from him and paid only the first instalment of his debt.

On May 4th, 1605 Shakespearc's fellow-actor and one of the original housekeepers of the Globe, Augustine Phillips, made his will wherein he bequeathed the poet "thirty shillings peece in gould".

On July 24th of the same year, Shakespeare bought from one Ralph Huband "of Ippesicy in the countryc of Warr. Esquier" for £440 "of lawfull Englishe money" his interest in a lease of tithes in Stratford, Old Stratford, Welcombe and Bishopton. Nevertheless, this purchase still did not make Shakespeare the principal tithe-owner in Stratford.

Next year, on August 1st, Shakespeare is marked in a survey of Rowington as being a tenant of the Chapel Lane Cottage.

5th June, 1607 saw the marriage of Shakespeare's daughter Susanna to John Hall, a well-known physician. Hall is said to have had puritanical leanings which contrasts strangely with the opinions voiced by Shakespeare in his plays. Shakespeare's first grandchild, Elizabeth, was baptized next year on February 21st.

On December 17th, 1608 Shakespeare took legal action against one John Addenbrook which was repeated later on March 15th, 1609. But in the meantime Addenbrook moved outside the jurisdiction of the Stratford Court of Record.

On September 9th of the same year, Shakespeare's mother was buried.

It is generally assumed that Shakespeare settled at Stratford, in New Place, about 1610 — that year he assured conveyance of the Old Stratford land acquired in 1602.

In 1611, probably, Shakespeare and Richard Lane, another holder of Stratford tithes, drafted a Bill of Complaint claiming that the other holders, particularly the Combes, were not paying their share so that they themselves were "usually dryven to pay the same for preservacion of their estates".

An inventory of Robert Johnson's goods — he lived in Henley Street — made on October 11th, 1611 after his death, lists "A lease of a barne that he holieth of Mr. Shaxper xxii" which is the only record of Shakespeare's Henley Street property made during the poct's life (apart from his will).

Next, Shakespeare is mentioned in the will of John Combe of January 28th, 1613

wherein he was bequeathed five pounds.

Quite possibly the next record is one the full significance of which has not been fully grasped: on March 10th of the same year, Shakespeare bought from Henry Walker, a "citizein and Minstrell of London" a gate-house close to the Blackfriars Theatre, for £140. The very next day, he mortgaged this house to Walker for £60, perhaps as security against the payment. The pertinent documents are signed by Shakespeare's own hand (2nd and 3rd signatures).

On 31st of the same month, Shakespeare was paid 44s for his share in designing the heraldic device of Francis Manners, 6th Earl of Rutland (1578—1632) for the tilt of March 24th. The star of Shakespeare's company, Richard Burbage, was paid likewise 44s "for paynting and making vt".

In September 1614 there started a long controversy about enclosure in Welcombe which affected Shakespeare as a landholder. His name is several times mentioned in "The Particulers of Olde Stratforde" which are the main source of our information. This controversy lasted till September 1615.

At Christmas of 1614, Shakespeare seems to have had a distinguished company, for the Accounts list "Item for one quart of sack and one quart of clarett winne genen to a preacher at the newe place, xxd."

In the spring of the next year, Shakespeare and others issued a friendly Bill of Complaint against Matthias Bacon which enabled Bacon to surrender the tithe deeds of the Lodging of the Prior of Blackfriars. Shakespeare's Gatehouse was a part of this.

The poet's days were coming near to their final sunset: on February 10th, 1616 when Shakespeare's younger daughter Judith married Thomas Quincy, the poet had already drafted his will which was finally signed by him on March 25th.

On April 23rd, 1616, probably on his birthday, Shakespeare died and was buried two days later in the parish church.

These are the facts of Shakespeare's life, the story of official records and early contemporary allusions. They tell us that William Shakespeare of Stratford upon Avon, whose early life history is open to conjecture, became a successful dramatist and poet some time before 1592, that he was a leading member of the leading theatre-company of Elizabethan London, that he made money which he invested in property at Stratford and that he died in his native town.

Though these facts are interesting to the "general reader", he is nevertheless in the same position as one who wonders what Shakespeare really looked like. Shakespeare's life-story is known only in the outline — and it is filled in by more conjectures of varying certainty. These are based on detailed research of background, by drawing comparisons with other Elizabethans of similar origin and career and, finally, by explaining Shakespeare's verses as a direct echo of his personal experience. It is only natural that everybody who reconstructs Shakespeare's life to some extent projects his "ideal life of Shakespeare" into the established facts.

The rich variety of opinions which is to be found in Shakespeare's verses and the multicoloured experiences which seem to be mirrored in them give ample scope for all kinds of guesswork. It is not necessary to stress that these records which happen to be extant may in no way reflect the most important events in Shakespeare's life. You will have noticed that no mention of the poet's marriage was made: till today no record was found, though there seems to be an interesting coincidence touching this subject in the registry of St Martin's: two leaves covering the crucial year 1582 had been cut out of it. At the same time we must remember that this marriage most probably took place at Temple Grafton, for which no register covering this period is extant. Thus we must be very cautious in attempting to take a journey into the full story of Shakespeare's life — the occasional mile-stones of the records, though never misleading in themselves, may seem to be giving us a completely wrong direction.

Let us remember the cautionary words of Ben Jonson warning all who strive to know what Shakespeare really looked like: "...loke /Not on his Picture, but his Booke."

If it were not for two of Shakespeare's colleagues, John Heminges and Henry Condell, the Complete Edition of Shakespeare's Works would include twenty-two less plays than we are accustomed to find in the canon. Heminges and Condell published in 1623 the first complete edition of Shakespeare's works in a one-volume folio edition (s.c. First Folio - F₁) where we find all the plays with the exception of Pericles. Not all of them were therein published for the first time, however.

Several of them have been published separately in Shakespeare's life-time or before the printing of F_1 without the poet's direct supervision. Professor Pollard divided these editions — the so-called Quartos —into "bad" and "good" according to the merits of their texts. Thus we have several texts for some of Shakespeare's plays; e.g. for Hamlet, where there are three unidentical texts.

You must remember that there is no Shakespeare's manuscript for any of the canon plays contained in this edition; but the critics are convinced that a part of Sir Thomas

More, a play counted to the "Shakespeare Apocrypha", is written in Shakespeare's own hand. Thus the editor's task is a very difficult one — he has to try to establish conjecturally the original Shakespearian text from printed versions of different reliability, full of misprints, gaps and almost indecipherable passages. What we are accustomed to read in our study or hear from the stage is in many cases a result of several generations' editorial work.

Nicholas Rowe, Alexander Pope, Lewis Theobald, Thomas Hanmer, William Warburton, Samuel Johnson, Edward Capell, George Steevens, Edmond Malone — these are the names of classical editorship. Though they often worked intuitively, projecting their own ideas of what Shakespeare should have written into the extant editions, not resorting or unable to resort to the original texts — still their work is invaluable: Rowe added uniform stage-directions and Dramatis Personae, Theobald, Capell and Malone laid the foundations of a really scholarly handling of all kinds of Shakespearian problems, especially the textual ones.

This was in the eighteenth century. The nineteenth century orought new names to editorship: Nikolaus Delius (a German scholar), Aiexander Dyce, William George Clark, John Glover, W. Aldis Wright (these three edited the Cambridge Shakespeare which has in the meantime become the s.c. accepted text), H. H. Furness, Israel Gollancz, C. H. Herford. This century's editions were taken care of by W. J. Craig and R. H. Case, W. L. Cross, C. F. T. Brooke, A. Quiller-Couch, John Dover Wilson, G. L. Kittredge and, most recently, G. B. Harrison, Peter Alexander, Charles Jasper Sisson and Una Ellis-Fermor, with a galaxy of others who devote their efforts to some plays only. Some of the scholars do not belong to the main line of Shakespearian editorship, though the results of their work have added immensely to the editing of the poet, e.g. the palaeographer, Edward Maunde Thompson, who identified Shakespeare's handwriting in the play of Sir Thomas More, or the great names of Shakespearian scholarship, E. K. Chambers and W. W. Greg.

The following short introduction to the individual plays is the result of life-long studies of outstanding scholars - in short, it is the fragrance of "other people's flowers"

THE APPROXIMATE CHRONOLOGICAL ORDER OF THE PLAYS (opposed by some scholars)

1 Henry VI (1589-1590 later revised) 2 and 3 Henry VI (1590-91) Richard III (1592-93) The Comedy of Errors (1592-93) Titus Andronicus (1593-94) The Taming of the Shrew (1593-94) Two Gentlemen of Verona (1594-95) Love's Labour's Lost (1594-95) Romeo and Juliet (1595-96) Richard II (1595-96) A Midsummer Night's Dream (1596) King John (1596-97) The Merchant of Venice (1596-97) 1 and 2 Henry IV (1597-98) Much Ado About Nothing (1598-99) Henry V (1598-99) Julius Caesar (1599-1600) As You Like It (1596-1600) Twelfth Night (1599 - 1600) Hamlet (1599-1600) Merry Wives of Windsor (1597-1601?) THE POEMS
Venus and Adonis (1592)
Lücrece (1593-94)
The Sonnets (1593-1600)
The Phoenix and the Turtle (1601)

The plays are discussed in the order in which they are arranged in this edition.

THE TEMPEST

Written about 1611-1612, first published in F1 from an edited transcription of the foul papers (i.e. the original Shakespeare manuscript with corrections and additions, not the final "fair copy"), which were carefully prepared for stage-production (perhaps because, at that time, Shakespeare already did not supervise the production in person). It was performed on November 1st, 1611 at Whitehall. For the island and shipwrecking the sources are narratives describing the shipwreck of Sir George Somers, Sir Thomas Gates, William Strachey, Sylvester Jourdan and Richard Rich which took place at the Bermudas during their voyage to Virginia, on July 25th, 1609. These narratives consist of Rich's ballad of News from Virginia, Jourdan's A Discovery of the Barmudas, an official publication of the London Council of Virginia, A True Declaration of the Estate of the Colonie in Virginia, and Strachey's manuscript A True Reportory of the Wracke and Redemption of Sir Thomas Gates, Knight, not published till 1625. The actual plot of The Tempest resembles in many ways that of Li Tre Satiri, one of the four scenari for commedie dell'arte by Neri. Gonzalo's Utopian discourse is taken from the essay, Of the Cambales, in Giovanni Florio's translation of Montaigne. The Tempest is the only play by Shakespeare which conforms to the classical unities: the action takes place in one place and in one day. It is the second shortest play of Shakespeare.

TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA

Written 1594—1595, but the date can hardly be fixed with precision; not even the usually helpful allusions to "the wars" or to pestilence tell us anything in this play. It was first published in F₁, probably from a transcript of the theatre prompt-book. There is no record of performance before 1762. The only indisputable source is the story of Felix and Felismena in Jorge de Montemayor's Diana Enamorada, a Spanish prose romance. It had been translated into English by Bartholomew Yonge or earlier into French by Nicholas Collin. A play on its theme was performed at Court in 1585. It is noted by Campbell that many features of the Two Gentlemen are common in Italian comedies.

THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR -

Written 1597–1601, but again the date of composition is open to conjecture. It was first published in 1602 with a very garbled text in a quarto edition (Q_1) : "A Most pleasaunt and excellent conceited Comedie, of Syr Iohn Falstaffe, and the merrie Wiues of Windsor. Entermixed with sundrie variable and pleasing humors, of Syr Hugh the Welch Knight, Iustice Shallow, and his wise Cousin M. Slender. With the swaggering vaine of Auncient Pistoll, and Corporall Nym. By William Shakespeare. As it hath bene diverse times Acted by the right Honorable my Lord Chamberlaines servants. Both before her Maiestie, and else-where." The text is a memorial reconstruction of a version very close to the one of the First Folio. It has been reissued by the printer W. Jaggard in 1619 (Q_2). The full text of the comedy was first printed in F_1 , its basis being probably a transcript of the prompt-book. Though we may find in the play several topical allusions, no source for this comedy has been found yet; the plot is essentially Shakespeare's, the theme of a lover hidden by an unfaithful wife is common.

TWELFTH NIGHT OR WHAT YOU WILL

Written about 1599—1600. First printed — from foul papers or a transcript of these — in the Folio. There is no decisive evidence that it was performed before 1602. The immediate source of this play is the story of Apolonius and Silla in Barnabe Riche's Farewell to the Military Profession (1581). Shakespeare's debt, however, is not great. Several suggestions may have been taken from Giraldi Cintio's Hecatommithi, Sidney's Arcadia, the play of Sir Clyomon and Clamydes, or Emanuel Forde's Parismus.

MEASURE FOR MEASURE

is one of the "problem plays" — or dark comedies, as they are sometimes called — about the composition and ethics of which critics do not agree. It was written probably 1604 and later expanded, and first published in the F₁ perhaps from a transcript of foul papers. There is a record of its performance in the Revels Account on December 26th, 1604: "By his Maiesties plaiers. On S' Stiuens night in the Hall A play Caled Mesure for Mesur. Shaxberd." The substantial source of Measure for Measure was George Whetstone's two-part play, Promos and Cassandra, 1578, itself based upon Giraldi Cintio's Hecatonimithi, which may have been written after a historical incident of 1547 near Milan, In this case Shakespeare's Duke would be Fernando Gonzaga, the governor of the province.

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING

Written about 1598—1599, first published from foul papers in a quarto edition in 1600: "Much adoc about Nothing. As it hath been sundrie times publikely acted by the right honourable, the Lord Chamberlaine his servants. Written by William Shakespeare." This is one of the "good" quartos and it was used with some reference to the prompt-book in the setting of the F₁ text. The main theme of this play may be traced back to the story of Timbreo and Fenicia from Matteo Bandello's Novelle (translated by F. de Belleforest in Histoires Tragiques) and to the story of Ariodante and Genevra in Ariosto's Orlando Furioso. The latter was known to the Elizabethan public not only in Sir John Harington's translation, but also from several poetical and dramatical adaptations. The sub-plot of Beatrice and Benedick is Shakespeare's own, though it might have been influenced by the wit-combats in Baldassare Castiglione's Il Cortegiano, translated in 1561 by Sir Thomas Hoby. Much Ado About Nothing is sometimes considered to be Meres' Love Labours Wonne.

A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM

Written about 1596. First published 1600 from foul papers in a quarto edition, Q_1 : "A Midsommer nights dreame. As it hath beene sundry times publickely acted, by the Right honourable, the Lord Chamberlaine his servants. Written by William Shakespeare." A new edition. Q_2 , appeared in 1619; it was set up from Q_1 . The Folio text was set up from Q_2 with some additional stage-directions. It is almost certain that this play was originally written for a wedding entertainment and perhaps two different endings (one, the fairy mask, for the original entertainment, the second, Puck's epilogue, for public performance) are printed in all texts one after the other. The whole fantasy seems to be Shakespeare's own, but the different components of this comedy are in some way indebted to Plutarch's Life of Theseus, Chaucer's Knight's Tale, Ovid's Metamorphoses, Scot's Discovery of Witcheraft, and to Elizabethan folk-lore.

LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST

Written about 1594—1595. First published 1598, presumably from foul papers, in a quarto edition (Q_1) : "A Pleasant Conceited Comedie Loues labors lost. As it was presented before her Highnes this last Christmas. Newly corrected and augmented By W. Shakespeare. "This title implies that Love's Labour's Lost had been already published before Q_D probably in a surrepritious quarto from which Q_1 , was "newly corrected and augmented". Though the text in Q_1 is badly printed, it served as the copy for setting the play in F_1 . The plot seems to be Shakespeare's own: numerous topical allusions in the play — written rather for a courtly than a popular audience — make many lines hardly intelligible to the modern reader.

THE MERCHANT OF VENICE

Written about 1596—1597. First published 1600 (two years after its entry in the Stationers' Register) from foul papers in a quarto edition (Q_1) : "The most excellent Historic of the Merchant of Venice. With the extreame crueltie of Shylocke the Iewe towards the sayd Merchant, in cutting a just pound of his flesh: and the obtayning of Portia by the choyse of three chests. As it hath beene diuers times acted by the Lord Chamberlaine his Seruants. Written by William Shakespeare." This quarto, reprinted in 1619, served, perhaps with a prompt-book, as the Folio compositor's copy. The source of the bond-theme was Il Pecarone (The Simpleton), by Ser Giovanni Fiorentino, the idea of the caskets was from Richard Robinson's version of the Gesta Romanorum. The play also contains some parallels to Marlowe's Jew of Malta.

AS YOU LIKE IT

Written sometime between 1596-1600. First printed from a prompt-book or from a transcript of it in the First Folio. The only source is Thomas Lodge's Rosalynde, or Euphues' Golden Legacy. Shakespeare may have referred to the manuscript pseudo-Chaucerian Tale of Gamelyn, upon which Rosalynde was based. According to tradition, Shakespeare played Adam in this play.

ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL

Written about 1602—1604. It is a very difficult play to date, because it is not homogeneous. It was first printed — probably from foul papers — in the Folio. The only source is Boecaceio's Decameron, the tale of Giglietta di Nerbona, as translated in William Painter's Palace of Pleasure (1566). This very difficult — though rewarding — play, one of the "dark comedies", is sometimes considered to be Meres's Loue Labours Wonne.

THE TAMING OF THE SHREW

Written about 1593—94. First printed from foul papers in the First Folio. In 1594, however, there appeared in a quarto edition "A Pleasant Conceited Historie, called The taming of a Shrew. As it was sundry times acted by the Right honorable the Earle of Pembrook his scruants", of which there are, speaking broadly, three different opinions of scholars: a) that it was a source for The Taming of the Shrew; b) that it is a "bad" quarto of this play; and c) that it is a play independent from, but having common source with The Taming of the Shrew. The Christopher Sly scenes, though not identical with those of The Shrew, are in A Shrew complete in themselves. Both plays were confused in the publishing trade of the 16th century. If we do not take A Shrew into account no source for the Kate-Petruchio story is known; the Bianca sub-plot is based upon Ariosto's Suppositi or its translation by George Gascoigne, Supposes.

THE WINTER'S TALE

Written about 1610—1611. First printed — presumably from a trancript of foul papers — in the Folio. The main source was Greene's romance, Pandosto or The Triumph of Time (1588), reprinted as Dorastus and Fawnia (1607). Other hints were perhaps taken from Lyly's Woman in the Moon (1597) or Marston's Pygmalion's Image (1598).

THE COMEDY OF ERRORS

Written about 1592.-1593, first published in F₁, perhaps from foul papers. There is a record of its performance on December 28th, 1594 at Gray's Inn; "By his Maiesties plaiers. On Inosents night. The plaie of Errors. Shaxberd." The subject for this comedy is taken from Plautus's Menaechmi, and perhaps his Amphitrus. Shakespeare may have read these plays in the Latin original. The Commedy of Errors is Shakespeare's shortest play.

KING JOHN

Written about 1596—1597. First printed — from author's copy that had perhaps served as the prompt-book — in the Folio. The principal sources are "The Troublesome Raigne of Iohn King of England, with the discouerie of King Richards Cordelions Base sonne (vulgarly named, The Bastard Fawconbridge): also the death of King Iohn at Swinstead Abbey" — and "The Second part of the troublesome Raigne of King Iohn, conteining the death of Arthur Plantaginet, the landing of Lewes, and the poysning of King Iohn at Swinstead Abbey" — an anonymous two-part play, printed in 1591, "which is followed pretty closely as regards historical events, the selection of scenes, and even the logical run of many of the dialogues" (Chambers). Nevertheless it was entirely re-written; Shakespeare's play contains less comedy and the strong anti-papist sentiment of The Troublesome Reign almost entirely disappeared.

RICHARD II

Written about 1595-1596. First published 1597 from foul papers in a quarto edition (Q_1) : "The Tragedie of King Richard the second. As it hath beene publikely acted by the right Honourable the Lorde Chamberlaine his servants." This quarto was reprinted several times ($(Q_2-1598; Q_3-1598; Q_4-1608; Q_5-1615)$, though not without changes or additional, previously censored, material, as we may see from the title page of Q_5 : "The Tragedie of King Richard the Second: With new additions of the Parliament Sceane, and the deposing of King Richard. As it hath been lately acted by the Kinges Maiesties servants, at the Globe. William Shake-speare." When this play was printed in the Folio, it was set from Q_2 and Q_5 either used as a prompt-book or collated with it. The main source of Richard II was Raphael Holinshed's The Chronicles of England, Scotland and Ireland, first published in 1577, though its second enlarged edition of 1587 was used by Shakespeare.

* . . .

Written about 1597—1598. First published 1598 from foul papers in a quarto edition (Q₁): "The History of Henrie the Fourth; With the battell at Shrewsburie, betweene the King and Lord Henry Percy, surnamed Henrie Hotspur of the North: With the humorous conceits of Sir Iohn Falstaffe". This quarto was reprinted next year (Q₂—1599) "... Newly corrected by W. Shake-speare"—and in 1604 (Q₂), 1608 (Q₄), 1613 (Q₅) and 1622 (Q₆). From the 1613 Quarto with some literary editing the Folio text 1623 was set. The Folio title draws attention to the historical part of the subject not to the comical: "The First Part of Henry the Fourth, with the Life and Death of Henry Sirnamed Hotspur." The historical source of this play is Holinshed's Chronicles; for the comic scenes Shakespeare probably took hints from an anonymous play, The Famous Victories of Henry the Fifth.

HENRY IV, PART 2

Written about 1597—1598. First printed 1600 from foul papers in a quarto edition: "The Second part of Henrie the fourth, continuing to his death, and coronation of Henrie the fift. With the humours of sir Iohn Falstaffe, and swaggering Pistoll. As it hath been sundrie times publikely acted by the right honourable, the Lord Chamberlain his seruants. Written by William Shakespeare." No reprints of this quarto are known. The Folio text was set from Q collated perhaps with the prompt-book, as it contains lines omitted in Q leaving out some which are there. As in the First Part, the sources are Holinshed's Chronicles and The Famous Victories.

HENRY V

Written about 1589—1599. Last play of the s.c. "second tetralogy", beginning with Richard II. First printed 1600 in a very garbled version (reported text?) in a quarto edition (Q₁): "The Chronicle History of Henry the fift, With his battel fought at Agin Court in France. Togither with Auntient Pistoll. As it hath bene sundry times playd by the Right honorable the Lord Chamberlaine his servants." This quarto was reprinted in 1602 (Q₂) and 1619 (Q₃) with the false date of 1608. The Folio text was set independently from foul papers. The sources are Holinshed's Chronicle and The Famous Victories (Wooing Seene).

HENRY VI, PART 1

Written about 1598—1590. First printed in the Folio, perhaps from the author's (or authors') fair copy, later revised. This play was registered by Blount and Jaggard before the printing as "The thirde parte of Henry ye Sixt". There is a record extant about "Harey the vi" having been performed on March 3rd, 1592: this may have been either this play, or its source. The main source is Holinshed's Chronicles, but hints were perhaps taken from Edward Halle's Chronicles, Robert Fabyan's New Chronicles of England and of France, and Chronicle by Richard Grafton.

HENRY VI, PART 2

Written about 1590—1591. First printed 1594 as a reported text in a quarto edition (Q₁): "The First part of the Contention betwirt the two famous Houses of Yorke and Lancaster, with the death of the good Duke Humphrey: And the banishment and death of the Duke of Suffolke, and the Tragicall end of the proud Cardinall of Winehester, with the notable Rebellion of Iacke Cade: And the Duke of Yorkes first claime vnto the Crowne." This quarto was reprinted in 1600 (Q₂). In 1619, there appeared a third Quarto of this play, together with its sequel: "The Whole Contention between the two Famous Houses, Lancaster and Yorke. With the Tragicall ends of the good Duke Humfrey, Richard Duke Yorke, and King Henrie the sixt. Divided into two Parts: And newly corrected and enlarged. Written by William Shakespeare, Gent." But an authoritative text was not printed until First Folio: it was set from fair copy originally used as prompt-book and later revised. Sources for this play were the usual ones: the Chronicles of Holinshed, Halle, Fabyan, and perhaps Grafton, and John Stow's Annales, or a Generale Chronicle of England from Brute until the present yeare of Christ 1580.

HENRY VI, PART 3

Its history runs in similar lines to that of the Sceond Part. It was written about 1590—1591 and contains (I, iv, 137) the line parodied by Robert Greene in his Groatsworth of Wit, "Tiger's heart wrapp'd in a woman's hide" (see page IX). It was first printed 1595 in an octavo edition (called nevertheless Q₁): "The True Tragedie of Richarde Duke of Yorke, and the death of good king Henrie the sixt: With the whole contention betweene the two Houses, Lancaster and Yorke; as it was sundry times acted by the Right Honourable the Earle of Pembrooke his seruantes." This text was reprinted in 1600 (Q₂) and in 1619 (Q₃) as "The whole contention..." The authoritative text is the First Folio — with the same characteristics and sources as Henry VI, Part 2.

RICHARD III

Written about 1592-1594. First printed 1597 ("communal reconstruction for provincial prompt-book") in a quarto edition (Q1): "The Tragedy of King Richard the third. Containing, His treacherous Plots against his brother Clarence: the pittiefull murther of his innocent nephews: his tyranicall vsurpation: with the whole course of his detested life, and most deserved death. As it hath beene lately Acted by the Right honourable the Lord Chamberlaine his servants." This text was reprinted in 1598 (Q2); the title of this edition adds "By William Shake-speare." Next reprint of 1602 (Q3) assures the buver that it is "Newly augmented" - but there are no additions. There were yet three other reprints of this play, in 1605 (Q4) in 1612 (Q5) and in 1622 (Q6). Each of the six quartos is printed from its predecessor, with the possible exception of Q5. The Folio text was set from Q₃ and Q₆ collated with foul papers. Sources for this play, the last of the "first tetralogy", are Holinshed's and Hall's Chronicles, and Sir Thomas More's History of Richard III. It is very difficult to bring it in any distinct relation with an anonymous play (1590?) "The True Tragedie of Richard the Third: wherein is showne the death of Edward the fourth, with the smothering of the two young Princes in the Tower: With a lamentable ende of Shore's wife, an example for all wicked women. And lastly the conjunction and ioyning of the two noble Houses, Lancaster and Yorke. As it was playd by the Quecnes Maiesties Players", which was registered in 1594.

HENRY VIII

Written about 1612-1613. First printed in First Folio "from foul papers carefully prepared for production (or a transcript of them)". The text has elaborate stage-directions. Scholars agree that this play was written by two authors, Shakespeare and, most probably, John Fletcher. The sources for this play are Holinshed's Chronicles, Foxe's Book of Martyrs for the Cranmer episode, and possibly Samuel Rowley's play When you see me, You know me, Or the famous Chronicle Historic of King Henry the eight.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA

Written about 1597—1620 (?) First printed 1602, perhaps from a private transcript by the author, in a quarto edition. First issue: "The Historie of Troylus and Cresseida. As it was acted by the Kings Maiesties servants at the Globe. Written by William Shakespeare". Second issue: "The Famous Historie of Troylus and Cresseid. Excellently expressing the beginning of their loues, with the conceited wooing of Pandarus Prince of Licia. Written by William Shakespeare." The preface to the second issue begins: "Eternall reader, you have heere a new play, never stal'd with the Stage, never clapper-clawd with the palms of the vulger..." which seems to suggest that Troilus and Cressida was never acted publicly, in direct contradiction to the assertions of the First Issue title-page. The Folio text was set from Quarto collated with foul papers. The sources for this play were Chaucer's Troilus and Criseyde, Lydgate's The Sege of Troye, or Caxton's Recuyell of the Historyes of Troye, Robert Henryson's Scottish Testament of Cresseid, and Homer (Chapman's translations, Seaven Books of the Iliades and Achilles Shield, and Arthur Hall's Ten Bookes of Homers Iliades). Part of Troilus and Cressida are sometimes suspected to have been written by other authors: Dekker, Chettle, Chapman and Marston.

TIMON OF ATHENS

Written about 1607-1608. First printed in F₁ "from foul papers left unfinished". The text is not satisfactory. The sources were Plutarch's Lives of Antonius and Alcibiades, Paynter's Palace of Pleasure, Lucian's dialogue, Timon, or the Misanthrope, and an anonymous play Timon, extant in manuscript only.

CORIOLANUS

Written about 1607-1608. First printed in F_1 "from foul papers carefully prepared for production". The sources are Plutarch's life of Coriolanus, probably in North's translation, and possibly William Camden's Remaines of a greater Worke concerning Britaine.

JULIUS CAESAR

Written about 1599—1600. First printed in F₁, perhaps from a transcript of the prompt-book. It is a good text, though it may have been cut. The only known source for this play is Plutarch's Lives of Brutus, Caesar and Antony, translated by Sir Thomas North from the French version by Jacques Amyot. Shakespeare's possible debt to lost plays on this subject is only a matter of conjecture.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA

Written about 1606–1607. First printed in F₁ — though registered in 1608 — perhaps from foul papers, which were carefully prepared for production. The main source is North's translation of Plutarch's Life of Antonius: hints may have been taken from Appian's Bella Civilia, Samuel Daniel's Cleopatra (earlier version) or Lady Pembroke's Antonius.

CYMBELINE

Written about 1609—1610. First printed in F, from a prompt-book (which contained some foul papers). There are several probable sources for this play: Boccaccio's Decameron (the story of Bernabo of Genoa) for the wager theme, Fairfax's translation of Tasso's Gerusalemme Liberata in Godfrey of Boulogne, or The Mirrour of Knighthood, or an anonymous play, The Rare Triumphs of Love and Fortune, for the Belarius theme; and finally, Holinshed's Chronicles, for historical material.

TITUS ANDRONICUS

Written about 1593—1594, first published 1594 from foul papers in a quarto editon (Q₁): "The Most Lamentable Romaine Tragedic of Titus Andronicus: as it was Plaide by the Right Honourable the Earle of Darbie, Earle of Pembrooke, and Earle of Sussex their Seruants". This Quarto was reprinted (with several conjectural passages in place of damaged places in the printer's copy) in 1600 (Q₂), and the latter's reprint appeared in 1611 (Q₂). The Folio text was set from Q₃ which had been supplemented and used as a prompt-book. The themes of a revengeful Moor and of the love-relations between a Moor and a white lady were common; additional material was perhaps drawn from Seneca's Thyestes and Troades (cannibalism and sacrifice in I, i) and Ovid's Metamorphoses.

PERICLES (not included in the First Folio).

Written about 1608-1609. First printed 1609 in a Quarto edition (Q_1 —reported text): "The Late, And much admired Play, Called Pericles, Prince of Tyre. With the true Relation of the whole Historie, aduentures, and fortunes of the said Prince: As also, The no lesse strange, and worthy accidents, in the Birth and Life, of his Daughter Mariana. As it hath been diucrs and sundry times acted by his Maiesties Seruants, at the Globe on the Banck-side. By William Shakespeare." This quarto was reprinted in 1609 (Q_2), 1611 (Q_3), 1619 (Q_4) and 1630 and 1635. The play was not included in F_1 either because the editors were convinced that Shakespeare's part in this play was not great enough to justify its inclusion in F_1 , or because they were unable to replace a "bad" quarto text by a good one. Pericles was included in Shakespearian canon in 1664, when it was added to F_2 . The conjectural collaborator in Pericles was perhaps George Wilkins, who in 1608 published a prose novel, The Painfull Adventures of Pericles Prince of Tyre. Being the true History of the Play of Pericles, as it was lately presented by the worthy and ancient Poet Iohn Gower. The story of Apollonius of Tyre was widespread and it is included in Gower's Confessio Amantis.

KING LEAR

Written about 1605—1606(?). First printed 1608 in a quarto edition from a too careful transcript of foul papers or from shorthand notes (Q₁, the s.c. "Pied Bull Quarto"): "Mr. William Shak-speare: His True Chronicle Historie of the life and death of King Lear and his three Daughters. With the vnfortunate life of Edgar, sonne and heire to the Earle of Gloster, and his sullen and assumed humor of Tom of Bedlam: As it was played before the Kings Maiestic at Whitehall vpon S. Stephans night in Christimas Hollidayes. By his Maiesties seruants playing vsually at the Globe on the Bancke-side." This Quarto was reprinted (with conjectural corrections) in 1619 (Q₂). The Folio text seems to have been set from Q₁ collated with the prompt-book. The main source was perhaps Holinshed's Chronicles, though it is further contained in the Mirrour for Magistrates (contributed by John Higgins) and Spencer's Faerie Queene. An outline of the Gloucester story is in Sidney's Areadia. The relation of King Lear to an anonymous play, "The True Chronicle history of King Leir, and his three daughters, Gonorill, Ragan and Cordella. As it hath bene divers and sundry times lately acted", published in 1605, is a very complicated one.

ROMEO AND JULIET

Written about 1595—1596, first printed in a Quarto edition (Q₁: presumably a reported text): "An Excellent conceited Tragedie of Romeo and Iuliet. As it hath been often (with great applause) plaid publiquely, by the right Honourable the L. of Hunsdon his Servants." Another edition of this play appeared in 1599 (Q₇, the basis of the text were foul papers and some use was made of Q₁): "The Most Excellent and Lamentable Tragedie, of Romeo and Iuliet. Newly corrected, augmented, and amended: As it hath bene sundry times publiquely acted, by the right Honourable the Lord Chamberlaine his Servants." Before the appearance of F₁, this text was reprinted twice (?): in 1609 (Q₃) and some time after 1612; we cannot be sure, because Q₁ bears no date at all. The Folio text was printed from Q₃. There are many sources from which Shakespeare might have drawn: without doubt the most handy was Arthur Brooke's poem, The Tragicall Historye of Romeus and Juliet. There existed a play on this theme — this fact is mentioned by Brooke—but nothing more is known about it and the relation of Shakespeare's drama to this play is not clear.

MACBETH

Written about 1606—1607. First printed in F₁ from a prompt-book which shows signs of cuts and additional material (Hecate scenes by John Middleton?). The main sources for this play are Holinshed's Chronicles, Reginald Scot's Discoverie of Witchcraft, Newes from Scotland, Daemonologie, and William Stewart's Buik of the Groniclis of Scotland, which is a metrical and expanded version of Hector Boece's Groniclis of Scotland, translated by John Bellenden. Macbeth is the third shortest play of Shakespeare.

HAMLET

Written about 1599—1600. First printed 1603 in a quarto edition (Q₁) with text probably as reported by the actor who played Marcellus: "The Tragicall Historic of Hamlet Prince of Denmarke By William Shake-speare: As it hath beene diverse times acted by his Hignesse servants in the cittie of London: as also in the two Vniversities of Cambridge and Oxford, and else-where." Another quarto edition appeared in 1604 (Q₂): this time it was a fairly reliable text of the foul papers with some use of Q₁: "The Tragicall Historic of Hamlet, Prince of Denmarke. By William Shakespeare. Newly imprinted and enlarged to almost as much againe as it was, according to the true and perfect Coppie." The F₁ text was printed from Q₂ after it was collated with the prompt-book or its transcript. Thus the "accepted' text of Hamlet, by far the longest and most closely studied of Shakespeare's dramas, is a kind of compromise including all passages alternatively missing on Q₂ and F₁. The sources are P. de Belleforest's French Histoires Tragiques based on Historiae Danicae by Saxo Grammaticus (12th century), and probably the s.c. Ur-Hamlet, a play perhaps by Thomas Kyd, now lost.

OTHELLO

Written about 1604—1605. First printed 1622 "from a private transcript of foul papers" in a quarto edition (Q_1) : "The Tragoedy of Othello, the Moore of Venice. As it hath beene diverse times acted at the Globe, and at the Black-Friers, by his Maiesties Servants. Written by William Shakespeare." Second and third editions appeared only after F_1 , in 1630 (Q_2) and 1655 (Q_2) . The Folio text was set from Q_1 after collating with a prompt-book. The source for this play is a novella in Giraldi Cinthio's Hecatonmithi. Slakespeare seems to have read it in the original Italian, as no contemporary English version is known.

Over forty other plays have been ascribed to Shakespeare, of which 14 are the s.c. "Shakespeare Apocrypha": Arden of Feversham, Locrine, Edward III, Muccdorus, The First Part of Sir John Oldeastle, Thomas Lord Cronwell, The London Prodigal, The Puritan, A Yorkshire Tragedy, The Merry Devil of Edmonton, Fair Em, The Two Noble Kinsmen, The Birth of Merlin and Sir Thomas More.

THE POEMS

VENUS AND ADONIS

Written about 1592, first published 1593 in a quarto edition. It became immediately very popular, because it was reprinted at least fifteen times before 1640. Shakespeare calls it "the first heire of my invention" — either because it is his first work to be written, or the first to be published. The theme is classical; the immediate sources may have been Thomas Lodge's Scillaes Metamorphosis and Ovid's Metamorphoses.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

Written about 1593—1594. It may have been referred to by Shakespeare in the dedication to his Venus and Adonis, as the "graver labour". It was first published 1594 in a quarto edition; seven other editions were printed before 1640. Shakespeare perhaps knew several versions of the story, which is included in Ovid's Fasti, Livy's Annals, Chaucer's The Legend of Good Women, Painter's Palace of Pleasure, and other works.

THE SONNETS

Written about 1593-1600, first printed by Thomas Thorpe in 1609. There are many inter-related problems connected with these 154 sonnets, the main one being the authenticity of the order of the sonnets, the identity of "Mr. W. H.", of the "Rival Poet" and of the "Dark Lady". The identity of Mr. W. H. is further obscured by the ambiguity of the word "begetter".

A LOVER'S COMPLAINT

This poem, the authorship and date of origin of which is uncertain, was published in the same volume as Shakespeare's Sonnets: "A Louers complaint. By William Shakespeare." The only external evidence for Shakespeare's authorship is strongly gainsaid by the internal evidence.

THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM

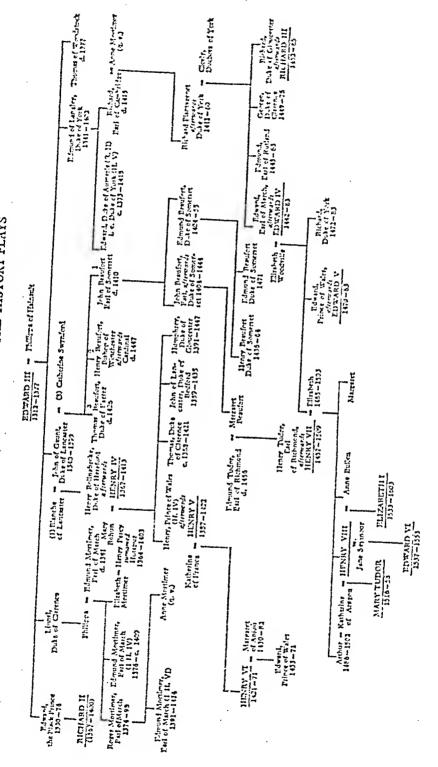

A miscellany, published 1599 in an octave edition under Shakespeare's name, probably because his poems sold well, with an inserted half-title, Sonnets To sundry Notes of Musicke. Only five of these poems are certainly Shakespeare's (1, 2, 3, 5, 17). Another edition appeared in 1612, though in the meantime there may have been another printing, now lost.

PHOENIX AND TURTLE

Written about 1601. One of the poems in Robert Chester's collection, "Loves Martyr, Or Rosalins Complaint, Allegorically shadowing the truth of Loue, in the constant Fate of the Phoenix and Turtle...", which includes verses by Ben Jonson, John Marston, George Chapman, Shakespeare, and other anonymous poets. This collection was reprinted in 1611 under a new title, "The Anuals of great Brittaine..."

MIRANDA, daughter to PROSPERO.

ARIEL, an airy Spirit.

IRIS, CERES, JUNO, Nymphs, Reapers,

Other Spirits ottending on PROSPERO.

Scene,-The Sea, with a Ship: afterwords an uninhabited Island.

ACT I.

Scene 1.—On a Ship at Sea.—A Storm, with Thunder and Lightning.

Enter a Shipmaster and a Boatswain.

Master. Boatswain,—
Boats. Here, master: what cheer?
Moster. Good: Speak to the mariners: fall to 't yarely, or we run ourselves aground; bestir, bestir.

[Exil.]

Enter Mariners.

Boats. Heigh, my hearts; cheerly, cheerly, my hearts; yare, yare: take in the top-sail; 'Tend to the master's whistle.—Blow till thou burst thy wind, if room enough!

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Ferdinand, Gonzalo, and others.

Alon. Good Boatswain, have care. Where's the master? Play the men.
Boats. I pray now, keep below.
Ant. Where is the master, Boatswain?

Ant. Where is the master, Boatswain?
Boots. Do you not bear him? You mar our labour; keep your cabins: you do assist the storm.

Gon. Nay, good, be patient.

Boots. When the sea is. Hence! What care these roarers for the name of king? To cabin: silence: trouble us not.

Gon. Good; yet remember whom thou bast

Con. Good; yet remember whom thou bast aboard.

Boats. None that I more love than myself.

You are a counsellor: if you can command these elements to silence, and work the peace of the present, we will not hand a rope more; use your authority. If you cannot, give thanks you have lived so long, and make yourself ready in your cabin for the mischance of the hour, if it so hap. - Cheerly, good hearts .-Out of our way, I say. Exit.

Gon. I have great comfort from this fellow: methinks he hath no drowning mark upon him; his complexion is perfect gallows. Stand fast, good fate, to his hanging make the rope of his destiny our cable, for our own doth little advantage! If he he not horn to be hanged, our case is miserable. Exeunt.

Re-enter Boatswain.

Boats. Down with the top-mast; yare; lower, lower; hring her to try with main-course. [A cry within.] A plague upon this howling! They are louder than the master. or our office.~

Re-enter Sebastian, Antonio, and Gonzalo Yet again? What do you here? Shall we give o'er, and drown? Have you a mind to sink? Seb. A pox o' your throat! you bawling, hlasphemous, incharitable dog!

Work you, then. Boats.

Ant. Hang, cur, hangl you whoreson, insolent noise-maker, we are less afraid to he drowned than thou art.

I'll warrant him from drowning; though the ship were no stronger than a nutshell, and as leaky as an unstanch'd wench.

Boats. Lay her a-hold, a-hold: set her two courses; off to sea again, lay her off.

Enter Mariners, wet.

Mar. All lost! to prayers, to prayers! all lostl Exeunt.

Boals. What, must our mouths he cold? The king and prince at prayers! let us assist them,

For our case is as theirs.

Seb. I am out of patience. [drunkards.~ Ant. We are merely cheated of our lives hy This wide-chapp'd rascal;-Would mightst lie drowning;

The washing of ten tides!

He'll he hanged yet; Gon. Though every drop of water swear against it, And gape at wid'st to glut him. [A confused noise within.]—Mercy on us! split, we split!-Farewell, my wife and children! Farewell, brother!-We split, we split, we split!--

Exit. Ant. Let's all sink with the king. Seb.Let's take leave of him. Exil.

Gon. Now would I give a thousand furlongs of sea for an acre of barren ground; long heath, brown furze, any thing: The wills above he done! hut I would fain die a dry death. [Exit.

Scene II.—The Island; before the Cell of PROSPERO.

Enter Prospero and Mipanda.

If hy your art, my dearest father, you have Put the wild waters in this roar, allay them:

The sky, it seems, would pour down stinking pitch,

But that the sea, mounting to the welkin's cheek,

Dashes the fire out. O, I have suffer'd With those that I saw suffer a hrave vessel. Who had, no doubt, some noble creatures in her, Dash'd all to pieces. O, the cry did knock Against my very heartl poor souls! they perish'd.

Had I been any god of power, I would Have sunk the sea within the earth, or e'er It should the good ship so have swallowed, and The freighting souls within her.

Pro. Be collected: No more amazement; tell your piteous heart, There's no harm done.

O, woe the day! Mira. Pro. No harm.

I have done nothing but in care of thee, (Of thee, my dear one! thee, my daughter!) who Art ignorant of what thou art, nought knowing Of whence I am; nor that I am more better-Than Prospero, master of a full poor cell, And thy no greater father.

More to know Mira. Did never meddle with my thoughts.

Pro. Tis time Lend thy hand, I should inform thee further. And pluck my magic garment from me.-So; Lays down his mantle.

Lie there my art .- Wipe thou thine eyes; have comfort.

The direful spectacle of the wreck, which touch'd The very virtue of compassion in thee, I have with such provision in mine art So safely order'd, that there is no soul-No, not so much perdition as an hair, Betid to any creature in the vessel Which thou heard'st cry, which thou saw'st sink. Sit down;

For thou must now know further.

Mira. You have often Begun to tell me what I am; but stopp'd, And left me to a hootless inquisition; Concluding, Stay, not yet.

The hour's now come; Pro. The very minute bids thee ope thine ear; Obey, and he attentive. Canst thou remember A time before we came unto this cell? I do not think thou canst; for then thou wast Out three years old.

Mira. Certainly, sir, I can.

Pro. By what? by any other house, or person? Of any thing the image tell me, that Hath kept with thy remembrance.

'Tis far off; Mira. And rather like a dream than an assurance That my remembrance warrants: Had I not Four or five women once, that fended me?

Pro. Thou hadst, and more, Miranda: But else how is it, That this lives in thy mind? What seest thou In the dark hackward and ahysm of time? If thou remember'st aught, ere thou cam'st here, How thou cam'st here, thou mayst.

Mira. But that I do not. Twelve years since, Miranda, twelve years since,

Thy father was the Duke of Milan, and A prince of power.

Mira. Sir, are not you my father?

Pro. Thy mother was a piece of virtue, and She said—thou wast my danghter; and thy father

Was Duke of Milan; and his only heir A princess; no worse issued.

Mira. O, the heavens! What foul play had we that we came from thence; Or blessed was't, we did?

Pro. Both, both, my girl;
By foul play as thou say'st, were we heaved
thence;

But blessedly holp hither.

Mira. O, my heart bleeds
To think o' the teen that I have turn'd you to,
Which is from my remembrancel Please, you,
further.

Pro. My brother, and thy uncle, call'd Antonio—

I pray thee, mark me,—that a brother should Be so perfidious!—he whom, next thyself, Of all the world I loved, and to him put The manage of my state; as, at that time, Throngh all the signiories it was the first, And Prospero the prime duke; being so reputed In dignity, and, for the liberal arts, Without a parallel; those being all my study, The government I cast upon my brother, And to my state grew stranger, being transported And rapt in secret studies. Thy false uncle—Dost thou attend me?

Mira. Sir, most heedfully.

Pro. Being once perfected how to grant suits, How to deny them; whom to advance, and whom

To trash for over-topping; new created The creatures that were mine; I say, or chang'd them,

Or else new form'd them; having both the key
Of officer and office, set all hearts
To what tune pleased his ear; that now he was
The ivy, which had hid my princely trunk,
And suck'd my verdure out on't.—Thou attend'st not; I pray thee, mark me.

Mira. O good sir, I do. [dedicate Pro. I thus neglecting worldly ends, all To closeness, and the bettering of my mind With that, which, but by being so retired, O'er-prized all popular rate, in my false brother Awaked an evil nature; and my trust, Liko a good parent, did beget of him A falsehood, in its contrary as great As my trust was; which had, indeed, no limit, A confidence sans bound. Ho being thus lorded,

Not only with what my revenue yielded, But what my power might else exact,—like one, Who having, unto truth, by telling of it, Made such a sinner of his memory, To credit his own lie,—he did believe Ho was the duke; ont of the substitution, And executing the outward face of royalty, With all prerogative:—Hence his ambition Growing,—Dost hear?

Mira. Your tale, sir, would cure deafness.

Pro. To have no screen between this part he play'd

And him he play'd it for, he needs will be Absolute Milan: Me, poor man!—my library Wasdukedomlargeenough; oftemporalroyalties He thinks me now incapable: confederates (So dry he was for sway) with the king of Naples, To give him annual tribute, do him homage; Subject his coronet to his crown, and bend The dnkedom, yet unbowed, (alas, poor Milan!) To most ignoble stooping.

Mira.

O the heavens!

Pro. Mark his condition, and the event; then If this might be a brother. [tell me, Mira. I should sin

To think but nobly of my grandmother: Good wombs have borne had sons.

Pro. Now the condition. This king of Naples being an enemy To me inveterate, hearkens my brother's sunt; Which was that he in lieu o' the premises,—Of homage, and I know not how much tribute,—Should presently extirpate me and mine Out of the dukedom; and confer fair Milan, With all the honours, on my brother: Whereon, A treacherous army levied, one midnight Fated to the purpose, did Antonio open The gates of Milan; and i'the dead of darkness, The ministers for the purpose hurried thence Me, and thy crying self.

Mira. Alack, for pity! I, not rememb'ring how I eried out then, Will cry it o'er again: it is a hint, That wrings mine eyes to 't.

Pro. Hear a little further,
And then I'll bring thee to the present business
Which now's upon us; without the whic. this
Were most impertinent. [story
Mira. Wherefore did they not,

That hour, destroy us?

Pro. Well demanded, wench;
My tale provokes that question. Dear, they durst not;

(So dear the love my people bore me) nor set A mark so bloody on the business; but With colours fairer painted their foul ends. In few, they hurried us aboard n bark; Bore us some leagues to sea; where they prepar'd A rotten carcass of a boat, not rigg'd, Nor tackle, sail, nor mast; the very rats Instinctively had quit it: there they hoist us, To cry to the sea that roar'd to us; to sigh To the winds, whose pity, sighing back again,

Did us but loving wrong.

Mira.

Alackl what trouble

Was I then to you!

Pro. Ol a cherubim

Thou wast, that did preserve mel Thou didst smile,

Infused with a fortitude from heaven, When I have deck'd the sea with drops full salt; Under my burden groan'd; which raised in me An undergoing stomach, to bear up Against what should ensue.

Mira. How came we ashore?

Pro. By Providence divine.

Some food we had, and some fresh water, that A noble Neapolitan, Gonzelo, Out of his charity, (who being then appointed Master of this design,) did give us; with Rich garments, linens, stuffs, and necessaries, Which since have steaded much; so, of his gentleness, Knowing I loved my books, he furnish'd me, From my own library, with volumes that I prize above my dukedom.

Would I might Mira.

But ever see that man!

Pro. Now I arise:-Sit still, and hear the last of our sea-sorrow. Here in this island we arrived; and here Have I, thy schoolmaster, made thee more profit Than other princes can, that have more time For vainer hours, and tutors not so careful.

Mira. Heavens thank you for't! And now,

I pray you, sir,

(For still 'tis beating in my mind,) your reason

For raising this sea-storm?

Pro. Know thus far forth.-By accident most strange, bountiful Fortune, Now my dear lady, hath mine enemies Brought to this shore: and by my prescience I find my zenith doth depend upon A most auspicious star; whose influence If now I court not, but omit, my fortunes Will ever after droop,-Here cease more questìons, Thou art inclin'd to sleep; 'tis a good dulness, And give itway;-I know thou canst not choose.

[Miranda sleeps. Come away, aervant, come: I am ready now; Approach, my Ariel; come.

Enter ARIEL.

fcome - Ari. All hail, great master! grave sir, hail! I To answer thy best pleasure; be't to fly, To swim, to dive into the fire, to ride On the curl'd clouds; to thy strong bidding, task Ariel and all his quality.

Hast thou, spirit, Pro. Perform'd to point the tempest that I bade thee?

To every article.

I boarded the king's ship; now on the beak, Now in the waist, the deck, in every cabin, I flamed amazement: Sometimes, I'd divide, And burn in many places; on the top-mast, The yards, and bowsprit, would I flame distinctly,

Then meet and join: Jove's lightnings, the precursors

O' the dreadful thunder-claps, more momentary And sight-out-running were not: The fire, and

Of sulphurous roaring, the most mighty Neptune Seem'd to besiege, and make his bold waves Yea, his dread trident shake. [tremble, My brave spirit!

Who was so firm, so constant, that this coil

Would not infect his reason?

Ari. Not a soul, But felt a fever of the mad, and play'd Some tricks of desperation: All, but mariners; Plung'd in the foaming brine, and quit the vessel, Then all afire with me: the king's son, Ferdinand, With hair up-staring (then like reeds, not hair), Was the first man that leap'd; cried, Hell is why, that's my spirit! And all the devils are here!

But was not this nigh shore?

Ari.

Pro. But are they, Ariel, safe? Ari. Not a hair perish'd: On their sustaining garments not a blemish, Butfresher than before: and, as thou bad'st me, In troops I have dispersed them 'bout the isle. The king's son have Ilanded by himself; Whom I left cooling of the air with sighs, In an odd angle of the isle, and sitting, His arms in this sad knot.

Of the king's ship, The mariners, say, how thou hast disposed, And all the rest o' the fleet?

Ari. Safely in harbour Is the king's ship; in the deep nook, where once Thou call'dst me up at midnight to fetch dew From the still-vex'd Bermoothes, there she's hid: The mariners all under hatches stow'd;

Whom, with a charm join'd to their suffer'd labour,

I have left asleep; and for the rest o' the fleet. Which I dispersed, they all have met again; And are upon the Mediterranean flote, Bound andly home for Naples: Supposing that they saw the king's ship wreck'd,

And his great person perish.

Pro.

Ariel, thy charge Exactly is performed; but there's more work: What is the time o' the day? Past the mid season.

Ari. Pto. At least two glasses: The time 'twixt six and now Must by us both be spent most preciously.

Is there more toil? Since thou dost give me pains,

Let me remember thee what thou hast promis'd, Which is not yet perform'd me.

How now? moody?

What is't thou canst demand? Ari. My liberty.

Pro. Before the time be out? No more! Ari. I pray thee Remember, I have done thee worthy service; Told thee no lies, made no mistakings, serv'd

Without or grudge or grumblings: thou didst promise

To bate me a full year.

Dost thou forget From what a torment I did free thee? Ari.

P70. Thou dost; and think'st It much to tread the ooze of the salt deep; To run upon the sharp wind of the north; To do me business in the veins o' the earth,

When it is bak'd with frost. I do not, sir. Ατi. Pro. Thou liest, malignant thing! Hast thou forgot [envy,

The foul witch, Sycorex, who, with age and Was grown into a hoop? hast thou forgot her? Ari. No, sir.

Pro. Thou hast: Where was she born? speak; tell me.

Sir, in Argier. Ari. Pro. Oh, was she so? I must, Once in a month, recount what thou hast been, Which thou forget'st. This damn'd witch, Sycorax, For mischiefs manifold, and sorceries terrible Close by, my master. To enter human hearing, from Argier.

Thou know'st, was banished; for one thing she did,

They would not take her life: Is not this true? Ay, sir. Ari.

This blear-eyed hag was hither brought Pro. with child. islave.

And here was left by the sailors: Thou, my As thou report'st thyself, wast then her servant: And, for thou wast a spirit too delicate To act her earthy and abhorr'd commands, Refusing her grand 'hests, she did confine thee. By help of her more potent ministers, And in her most unmitigable rage Into a cloven pine; within which rift Imprison'd, thou didst painfully remain A dozen years; within which space she dled. And left thee there: where thou didst vent thy groans,

As fast as mill-wheels strike: Then was this island, (Save for the son that she dld litter here, A freckled whelp, hag-born,) not honour'd with A human shape.

Yes: Caliban her son. Ari. Pro. Dull thing, I say so; he, that Caliban, Whom now I keep in service. Thou best know'st What torment I did find thee in: thy groans Did make wolves howl, and penetrate the breasts Of ever-angry bears; it was a torment To lay upon the damn'd, which Sycorax

Could not again undo; it was mine art, When I arriv'd, and heard thee, that made gape The pine, and let thee out.

Ari. I thank thee, master Pro. If thou more murmur'st I will rend an And peg thee in his knotty entrails, till Thou hast howl'd away twelve winters. Pardon, master: I will be correspondent to command,

And do my spriting gently.

Pro. Do so; and after two days I will discharge thee.

That's my noble master! Ari. What shall I do? say what? what shall I do? Go, make thyself like to a nymph o' the sea: Be subject to no sight but mine; invisible To every eye-ball else. Go, take this shape And hither come in 't: hence, with diligence.

Exit ARIEL. Awake, dear heart, awake! thou hast slept well; Awake!

Mira. The strangeness of your story put Heaviness in me.

Shake it off; Come on; We'll visit Caliban, my slave, who never Yields us kind answer.

'Tis a villain, sir, Mira.

I do not love to look on.

But, as 'tis, We cannot miss him: he does make our fire, Fetch in our wood; and serves in offices What ho! slave! Caliban! That profit us. Thou earth, thou! speak.

,Cal. [Within.] There's wood enough within. Come forth, I say; there's other business for thee:

Come forth, thou tortoise! when?

Re-enter ARIEL, like a water-numbh.

Fine apparition! My quaint Ariel,

Hark in thine ear.

Ari. My lord, it shall be done. [Exit. Pro. Thou poisonous slave, got by the devil himself Upon thy wicked dam, come forth!

Enter CALIBAN.

Cal. As wicked dew as e'er my mother brush'd

With raven's feather from unwholesome fen, Drop on you both! a south-west blow on ye. And blister you all o'er.

Pro. For this, be sure, to-night thou shalt have cramps,

Side-stitches that shall pen thy breath up;

urchins Shall, for that vast of night that they may work, All exercise on thee; thou shelt be pinch'd As thick as honey-combs, each pinch more stinging

Than bees that made them.

Cal. I must eat my dinner. This island's mine, by Sycorax my mother, Which thou tak'st from me. camest first,

Thou strok'dst me, and mad'st much of me; wouldst give me

Water with berries in 't; and teach me how To name the bigger light, and how the less, That burn by day and night: and then I lov'd thee.

And shew'd thee all the qualities o' the isle, The fresh springs, brine pits, barren place, and fertile; Cursed be I that did so!-All the charms Of Sycorax, toads, beetles, bats, light on youl For I am all the subjects that you have, Which first was mine own king; and here you sty me In this hard rock, whiles you do keep from me The rest of the island.

Pro. Thou most lying slave, Whom stripes may move, not kindness: I have used thee, Filth as thou art, with human care; and lodged In mine own cell, till thou didst seek to violate

The honour of my child. Cal. O ho, O ho!-would it had been done! Thou didst prevent me; I had peopled else

This isle with Calibans. Abhorred slave; Pro.Which any print of goodness will not take, Being capable of all ill! I pitied thee, Took pains to make thee speak, taught thee each hour savage, One thing or other: when thou didst not,

Know thine own meaning, but wouldst gabble

A thing most brutish, I endow'd thy purposes With words that made them known: But thy good natures vile race Though thou didst learn, had that in 't which

Could not abide to be with: therefore wast thou Deservedly confined into this rock,

Who hadst deserved more than a prison. Cal. You taught me language; and my profit on 't

Fetch us in fuel: and be quick, thou wert best, Shrug'st thou, To answer other business. malice?

If thou neglect'st, or dost unwillingly What I command, I'll rack thee with old cramps; Fill all thy bones with aches; make thee roar, That beasts shall tremble at thy din.

No, pray thee!-Cal. I must obey: his art is of such power, [Aside. It would control my dam's god, Setebos, And make a vassal of him.

Pro.

So, slave; hence! Exit CALIBAN.

Re-enter ARIEL invisible, playing and singing; FERDINAND following him.

ARIEL'S SONG.

Come unto these yellow sands, And then take hands: Court'sied when you have, and kiss'd, (The wild waves whist,) Foot it featly here and there; And sweet sprites, the burden bear.

Hark, hark! Bur, Bowgh, wough, The watch-dogs bark: Bur, Bowgh, wowgh. Hark, hark! I hear [Dispersedly. [Dispersedly.

The strain of strutting chanticlere Cry, Cock-a-doodle-doo.

Where should this music be? i' the air. Fer. or the earth?

It sounds no more:—and sure it waits upon Some god of the island. Sitting on a bank Weeping again the king my father's wreck, This music crept by me upon the waters; Allaying both their fury, and my passion With its sweet air: thence I have follow'd it, Or it hath drawn me rather:-But 'tis gone. No, it begins again.

ARIEL sings.

Full fathom five thy father lies; Of his bones are coral made; Those are pearls that were his eyes: Nothing of him that doth fade, But doth suffer a sea-change Into something rich and strange . Sea-nymphs hourly ring his knell:

[Burden, ding-dong. Hark! now I hear them, -ding-dong bell.

The ditty does remember my drown'd father:-

This is no mortal business, nor no sound That the earth owes:—I hear it now above me.

Pro. The fringed curtains of thine eye advance,

And say, what thou seest yond'. Mira. What is 't? a spirit? Lord, how it looks about! Believe me, sir,

It carries a brave form:-But 'tis a spirit. Pro. No, wench; it eats and sleeps, and hath such senses seest, As we have, such: This gallant, which thou

Was in the wreck: and but he's something stain'd call him With grief, that's beauty's canker, thou might'st A goodly person: he hath lost his fellows.

And strays about to find them. Mira.

A thing divine; for nothing natural I ever saw so noble.

It goes on, As my soul prompts it:—Spirit, fine spirit! I'll free thee

Within two days for this.

Most sure the goddess On whom these airs attend!-Vouchsafe, my prayer

May know, if you remain upon this island; And that you will some good instruction give. How I may bear me here: My prime request. Which I do last pronounce, is, O you wonder! If you be maid or no?

Mira. No wonder, sir;

But certainly a maid. Fer. My language! heavens!-

I am the best of them that speak this speech, Were I but where 'tis spoken. Pro. How! the best?

What wert thou, if the king of Naples heard thee? Fer. A single thing, as I am now, that wonders To hear thee speak of Naples: He does hear me; And, that he does, I weep: myself am Naples: Who with mine eyes, ne'er since at ebb, beheld The king my father wreck'd.

Mira. Alack, for mercy! Fer. Yes, faith, and all his lords: the Duke of And his brave son, being twain.

The Duke of Milan, And his more braver daughter, could control Aside.

If now 'twere fit to do't:-At the first sight They have changed eyes:-Delicate Ariel, I'll set thee free for this!—A word, good sir; I fear you have done yourself some wrong: a word. Mira. Why speaks my father so ungently? This

Is the third man that e'er I saw; the first That e'er I sigh'd for: pity, move my father To be inclined my way!

Feτ. O, if a virgin, And your affection not gone forth, I'll make you The queen of Naples.

Soft, sir; one word more.-Pro.They are both in either's powers; but this swift business

I must uneasy make, lest too light winning [Aside. Make the prize light. One word more; I charge thee,

That thou attend me: thou dost here usurp The name thou ow'st not; and hast put thyself Upon this island, as a spy, to win it From me, the lord on't.

No, as I am a man. Fer. Mira. There's nothing ill can dwell in such a If the ill spirit have so fair an house, [temple:

Good things will strive to dwell with't. Follow me.-Pro.

[To FERD. Speak not you for him; he's a traitor.—Come. I'll manacle thy neck and feet together: Sea-water shalt thou drink; thy food shall be The fresh-brook muscles, wither'd roots, and husks Wherein the acorn cradled: Follow.

No; I will resist such entertainment, till [He draws. I might call him | Mine enemy has more power.

O dear father, Mira. Make not too rash a trial of him, for He's gentle, and not fearful.

What, I say, Pro. My foot my tutor! Put thy sword up, traitor; Who makest a show, but darest not strike, thy conscience

Is so possess'd with guilt: come from thy ward: For I can here disarm thee with this stick. And make thy weapon drop.

Beseech you, father! Mira. Pro. Hence; hang not on my garments.

. Sir, have pity; ·Mira.

Pil be his surety.
Silence! one word more Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee. Whati

An advocate for an imposter? hush! Thou think'st there are no more such shapes [wench] as he,

Having seen but him and Caliban: Foolish To the most of men this is a Caliban.

And they to him are angels.

My affections Mira.Are then most humble; I have no ambition To see a goodlier man.

Come on; obey: [To FERD. Thy nerves are in their infancy again. And have no vigour in them;

So they are: Fer. My spirits, as in a dream, are all bound up. My father's loss, the weakness which I feel, The wreck of all my friends, or this man's threats,

To whom I am subdued, are but light to me, Might I but through my prison once a day Behold this maid: all corners else o' the earth Let liberty make use of; space enough Have I, in such a prison.

It works:-Come on. Thou hast done well, fine Ariell-Follow me.-

[To Ferd. and Mir. Hark, what thou else shalt do me. [To Ariel. Be of comfort; Mira. My father's of a better nature, sir,

Than he appears by speech; this is unwonted, Which now came from him.

Thou shalt be as free As mountain winds: but then exactly do All points of my command.

To the syllable. Ari. Pro. Come, follow: speak not for him. (Exeunt.

ACT II.

Scene I .- Another part of the Island.

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, GONZALO, ADRIAN, FRANCISCO, and others.

Gon. Beseech you, sir, be merry: you have (So have we all) of joy; for our escape [cause Is much beyond our loss: Our hint of woe Is common; every day, some sailor's wife, The masters of some merchant, and the merchant, Have just our theme of woe: but for the miracle, I mean our preservation, few in millions Can speak like us: then wisely, good sir, weigh Our sorrow with our comfort.

Alon.

Seb. He receives comfort like cold porridge. Ant. The visitor will not give him o'er so. Seb. Look, he's winding up the watch of his By and by it will strike.

Gon. Sir, Seb. One,-Tell. foffer'd. When every grief is entertain'd, that's Gon. Comes to the entertainer-

Seb. A dollar.

Dolour comes to him, indeed; you Gon. have spoken truer than you purposed.

You have taken it wiselier than I meant Seb. you should.

Gon. Therefore, my lord,-

Ant. Fye, what a spendthrift is he of his tongue! Alon.

Gon.

I pr'ythee spare. Well, I have done: But yet-Seb.

He will be talking.

Ant. Which of them, he, or Adrian, for a good wager, first begins to crow?

Seb. The old cock. The cockrel. Ant. Seb. Done: the wager? Ant. A laughter.

Seb. A matcb.

Adr. Though this island seem to be desert,— Ha, hs, hal Seb.

Ant. So, you've paid. sible. Adr. Uninhabitable, and almost inacces-

Seb. Yet,-

Adr. Yet.-Ant. He could not miss it.

Adı. It must needs be of subtle, tender, and delicate temperance.

Ant. Temperance was a delicate wench.

Seb. Ay, and a subtle; as he most learnedly delivered. Adr. The air breathes upon us here most

Seb. As if it had lungs, and rotten ones. Ant. Or, as 'twere perfumed by a fen.

Hereiseverythingadvantageoustolife. Gon. Ant. True; save means to live.

Of that there's none, or little. Seb. Gon. Howlush and lusty the grasslooks how Ant. The ground, indeed, is tawny. With an eye of green in 't. Seb.

Ant. He misses not much.

Seb. No; he doth but mistake the truth totally. Gon. But the rarity of it is (which is indeed almost beyond credit)-

Seb. As many vouch'd rarities are.

Thatour garments, being, as they were, drenched in the sea, hold, notwithstanding, their freshness and glosses; being rather new dyed, than stained with salt water.

Ant. If but one of his pockets could speak.

would it not say, he lies? Seb. Ay, or very falsely pocket up his report. Gon. Methinks, our garments are now as fresh as when we put them on first in Africk, at the marriage of the king's fair daughter Claribel to the king of Tunis.

Seb. 'Twas a sweet marriage, and we prosper well in our return.

Adr. Tunis was never graced before with such a paragon to their queen.

Gon. Not since widow Dido's time.

Ant. Widow? a pox o' that! How came Pr'ythee, peace. that widow in? Widow Didol

Seb. What if he had said, widower Encas too? good lord, how you take it!

Adr. Widow Dido, said you? you make me study of that: She was of Carthage, not of Tunis. This Tunis, sir, was Carthage.

Gon.

Carthage? Adr. Gon. I assure you, Carthage. harp. Ant. His word is more than the miraculous Seb. He hath raised the wall, and honses too. Ant. What impossible matter will he make easy next?

Seb. I think he will carry this island home in his pocket, and give it his son for an apple.

And, sowing the kernels of it in the sea, bring forth more islands.

Gon. Ay?

Why, in good time. Ant.

Gon. Sir, we were talking, that our garments seem now as fresh as when we were at Tunis at the marriage of your daughter, who is now queen.

Ant. And the rarest that e'er came there. Seb. 'Bate, I beseech you, widow Dido.

Ant. O, widow Dido; ay, widow Dido. Gon. Is not, sir, my doublet as fresh as the first day I wore it? I mean, in a sort.

Ant. That sort was well fish'd for.

Gon. When I wore it at your daughter's marriage? Alon. You cram these words into mine ears,

The stomach of my sense: Would I had never Married my daughter there! for, coming thence, My son is lost; and, in my rate, she too, Who is so far from Italy removed,

I ne'er again shall see her. O thou mine heir Of Naples and of Milan, what strange fish Hath made his meal on thee!

By all of us; and the fair sonl herself Weigh'd, between lothness and obedience, at Which end o' the beam she'd how. We have lost your son,

I fear, for ever: Milan and Naples have More widows in them of this business' making, Than we bring men to comfort them: the fault's Your own.

Alon. So is the dearest of the loss.

My lord Schastian, The truth you speak doth lack some gentleness, And time to speak it in; you ruh the sore, When you should bring the plaster.

Seb. Very well. Ant. And most chirurgeonly.

Gon. It is foul weather in us all, good sir, When you are cloudy.

Seb. Foul weather? Ant. Very fonl. Gon. Had Inplantation of this isle, mylord,-

They dropp'd, as by a thunder-stroke. What might, more:-Sebastian?-O Worthy what might?-No And yet, methinks, I see it in thy face, What thou shouldst be: the occasion speaks thee; and My strong imagination sees a crown

Dropping upon thy head.

Seb. What, art thou waking?

Do you not hear me speak? Ant. Seb. I do; and, surely, It is a sleepy language; and thou speak'st Out of thy sleep: What is it thou didst say?

This is a strange repose, to be asleep fing, With eyes wide open, standing, speaking, mov-And yet so fast asleep.

Noble Sebastian, Ant.

Seb. Thou dost snore distinctly; There's meaning in thy snores.

Ant. I am more serious than my custom: you Must be so too, if heed me; which to do Trebles thee o'er.

Well. I am standing water. Seb. Ant. I'll teach you how to flow.

Do so: to ebb. Hereditary cloth instructs me.

Ant. If you but knew, how you the purpose cherish, Whiles thus you mock it! how, in stripping it, You more invest it! Ebbing men, indeed, Most often do so near the bottom run, By their own fear, or sloth.

Pr'ythee, say on: Seb. The setting of thine eye, and cheek, proclaim A matter from thee; and a birth, indeed, Which throes thee much to yield.

Ant. Thus, sir: Although this lord of weak remembrance, this, Who shall be of as little memory When he is earth'd, hath here almost persuaded (For he's a spirit of persuasion only)

Alon. Why, how now, ho! awake! Why are you drawn?

Wherefore this ghastly looking?

Gon. What's the matter? Seb. Whiles we stood here securing your repose, Even now, we heard a hollow burst of bellowing Like bulls, or rather lions; did it not wake you? It struck mine ear most terribly.

Alon. I heard nothing. Ant. O, 'twas a din to fright a monster's ear; To make an earthquake! sure it was the roar Of a whole herd of lions.

Alon. Heard you this, Gonzalo? Gon. Upon mine honour, sir, I heard a humming,

And that a strange one too, which did awake I shaked you, sir, and cried; as mine eyes open'd,

I saw their weapons drawn:-there was a noise, That's verity: 'Best stand upon our guard; Or that we quit this place: let's draw our [further search weapons.

Scene II .- Another part of the Island.

Enter CALIBAN, with a burden of wood. A noise of thunder heard.

Cal. All the infections that the sun sucks up make him

By inch-meal a disease! His spirits hear me, And yet I needs must curse. But they'll nor [pinch, mire, tongues,

Do hiss me into madness:—Lo! now! lo!

Enter TRINCULO.

Here comes a spirit of his; and to torment me. For bringing wood in slowly: I'll fall flat:

Perchance he will not mind me.

Trin. Here's neither bush nor shrub, to bear off any weather at all, and another storm brewing; I hear it sing i' the wind; yond same black cloud, yond huge one, looks like a foul bumbard that would shed his liquor. If it should thunder, as it did before, I know not where to hide my head: youd same cloud cannot choose but fall by pailfuls.—What have we here? a man or a fish? dead or alive? A fish: he smells like a fish: a very ancient and fishlike smell; a kind of, not of the newest, Poor-John. A strange fish! Were I in England now (as once I was), and had but this fish painted, not a holiday fool there but would give a piece of silver: there would this monster make a man; any strange beast there makes a man: when they will not give a doit to relieve a lame beggar, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian. Legg'd like a man! and his fins like arms! Warm, o' my troth! I do now let loose my opinion, hold it no longer; this is no fish, but an islander, that hath lately suffered by a thunder-bolt. [Thunder.] Alas! the storm is come again: my best way is to creep. under his gaberdine; there is no other shelter hereabout: Misery acqueints a man with strange bedfellows. I will here shroud, till the dregs of the storm be past.

Enter Stephano singing; a bottle in his hand.

Sie. I shall no more to sea, to sea, Here shall I die ashore;-

This is a very scurvy tune to sing at a man's Well, here's my comfort. [Drinks. funeral:

The master, the swabber, the boatswain, and I, The gunner, and his mate,

Lov'd Idali, Meg, and Marian, and Margery, But none of us car'd for Kate: For she had a tongue with a tang,

Would cry to a cailor, Go, hang; She lov'd not the savour of tar nor of pitch

Yet a tailor might scratch her where'er she diditch: Then to sea, boys, and let her go hang.

This is a scurvy tune too: But here's my Drinks. comfort.

Col. Do not torment me: Ohl Ste. What's the matter? Have we devils here? Do you put tricks upon us with savages, and men of Inde? Hal I have not 'scaped drowning, to be afeard now of your four legs; From bogs, fens, flats, on Prosper fall, and for it hath been said, As proper a man as ever went on four legs cannot make him give ground: and it shall be said so again, while Stephano

Cal. The spirit torments me: Oh!

Ste. This is some monster of the isle, with four legs: who hath got, as I take it, an ague: Where the devil should be learn our language? I will give him some relief, if it be but for that: If I can recover him, and keep him tame, and get to Naples with him, he's a present for any emperor that ever trod on next's leather.

Cal. Do not torment me, pr'ythee;

Ste. He's in his fit now; and does not talk after the wisest. He shall taste of my bottle:

if he have never drunk wine afore, it will go near to remove his fit. If I can recover him. and keep him tame, I will not take too much for him: be shall pay for him that bath him, and that soundly.

Cal. Thou dost me yet but little bart; thou

Anon; I know it by thy trembling; Now Prosper works upon thee.

Sie. Come on your ways; open your mouth: bere is that which will give language to you, cat; open your mouth; this will shake your shaking, I can tell you, and that soundly: you cannot tell who's your friend: open your chaps again.

Trin. I should know that voice: It should he-But be is drowned; and these are devils:

Oh! defend me!-

Ste. Four legs and two voices; a most deli-cate monster! His forward voice now is to speak well of his friend; his backward voice is to utter foul speeches, and to detract. If all the wine in my bottle will recover him, I will help his ague: Come-Amen! I will pour some in thy other mouth.

Trin. Stephano,—
Ste. Doth thy other mouth call me? Mercy! mercy! This is a devil, and no monster: I will leave him; I have no long spoon.

Trin. Stephanol-if thou beest Stephano. touch me, and speak to me; for I nm Trinculo; -be not afeard,—thy good friend Trinculo.

Stc. If thou beest Trinculo, come forth; I'li pull thee by the lesser legs: if any be Trinculo's legs; these are they. Thou art very Trinculo indeed: How cam'st thou to be the siege of this moon-calf? Can he vent Trinculos?

Trin. I took him to be killed with a thunderstroke:-But art thou not drowned, Stephano? I hope, now, thou art not drowned. Is the storm over-blown? I hid me under the dead moon-calf's gaberdine for fear of the storm. And art thou living, Stephano? O Stephano, two Neapolitans 'scaped!

Ste. Pr'ythee, do not turn me about; my (sprites, stomach is not constant.

Cal. These be fine things, and if they be not That's a brave god, and bears celestial liquor: I will kneel to him.

Ste. How didst thou 'scape? how cam'st thou hither? swear by this bottle, how thou cam'st hither. I escaped upon a butt of sack, which the sailors heaved overboard, by this bottlel which I made of the bark of a tree, with mine own hands, since I was cast ushore.

Cal. I'll swear, upon that bottle, to be thy True subject; for the liquor is not earthly.

Ste. Here; swear then how thou escap'dst. Trin. Swam ashore, man, like a duck; I can swim like a duck, I'll be sworn.

Ste. Here, kiss the book: Though thou canst swim like a duck, thou art made like n goose.

Trin. O Stephano, hast any more of this? Ste. The whole butt, man; my cellar is in a rock by the sea-side, where my wine is hid. How now, moon-calf? how does thine ague?

Cal. Hast thou not dropped from heaven? Ste. Out o' the moon, I do assure thee: I was the man i' the moon, when time was.

Cal. I have seen thee in her, and I do adore thee:

My mistress showed me thee, and thy dog and hush.

Ste. Come, swear to that; kiss the book: I will furnish it anon with new contents: swear. Trin. By this good light, this is a very shallow monster:-I afeard of him? a very weak monster;—The man i' the moon!—a most poor credulous monster: Well drawn, monster, in good sooth.

Cal. I'll show thee every fertile incb o' the island;

And kiss thy foot: I pr'ythee, be my god.

Trin. By this light, a most perfidious and drunken monster; when his god's asleep, he'll rob his bottle.

Cal. I'll hiss thy foot: I'll swear myself thy subject.

Ste. Come on, then; down, and swear. Trin. I shall laugh myself to death at this puppy-beaded monster: n most scurvy monster! I could find in my heart to beat him,-

Stc. Come, kiss.

Trin. -hut that the poor monster's in drink: An abominable monster!

Cal. I'll show thee the best springs; I'll pinck thee berries: I'll fish for thee, and get thee wood enough.

A plague upon the tyrant that I serve! I'll bear him no more sticks, but follow thee, Thou wondrous man.

Trin. A most ridiculous monster! to make a wonder of n poor drunkard.

Cal. I pr'ythee, let me bring thee where crabs grow; And I with my long nails will dig thee pig-nuts; Show thee n jay's nest, and instruct thee how

To spare the nimble marmozet; I'll bring thee To clust'ring filberts, and sometimes I'll get thee

Young sea-mells from the rock: Wilt thou go with me?

Ste. I pr'ythee now lead the way, without any more talking.- Trinculo, the king and all our company else being drowned, we will in-berit here.—Here; [To CAL.] hear my hottle. Fellow Trinculo, we'll fill him by and by again. Cal. Farewell, master: farewell, farewell.

ACT III.

Scene I.—Before Prospero's Cell.

Enter FERDINAND, bearing a log.

Fer. There be some sports are painful, and their labour Delight in them sets off: some kinds of baseness Are nobly undergone; and most poor matters Point to rich gods. This my mean task would he As heavy to me, as 'tis odious; but The mistress which I serve quickens what's dead,

And makes my labours pleasures: Oh, she is Ten times more gentle than her father's crabbed;

And he's composed of harshness. I must remove Some thousands of these logs, and pile them up, Upon a sore injunction: My sweet mistress Weeps when she sees me work; and says such baseness

Had never like executor. I forget: labours,
But these sweet thoughts do even refresh my
Most busy, least when I do it.

Enter MIRANDA, and PROSPERO at a distance.

Mira. Alas, now! pray you, Work not so hard: I would the lightning had Burnt up those logs that you are enjoin'd to pile! Pray, set it down, and rest you: when this burns, 'Twill weep for having wearied you. My father Is hard at study; pray, now, rest yourself; He's safe for these three hours.

Fer. O most dear mistress, The sun will set before I shall discharge What I must strive to do.

Mira. If you'll sit down,
Pil bear your logs the while: pray, give me that;
Pil carry it to the pile.

Fer. No, precious creature: I had rather crack my sinews, break my back, Than you should such dishonour undergo, While I sit lazy by.

Mira. It would become me As well as it does you: and I should do it With much more ease; for my good will is to it, And yours against.

Pro. [Aside.] Poor worm! thou art infected;

This visitation shows it.

Mira. You look wearily.

Fer. No, noble mistress; 'tis fresh morning with me

When you are by at night. I do beseech you, Chiefly that I might set in my prayers, What is your name?

. Mira. Miranda:—O my father, I have broke your 'hest to say so!

Fer. Admir'd Miranda! Indeed the top of admiration; worth What's dearest to the world! Full many a lady I have eyed with best regard; and many a time The harmony of their tongues hath into bondage Brought my too diligent ear: for several virtues Have I lik'd several women: never any With so full soul, but some defect in her Did quarrel with the noblest grace she owed, And put it to the foil: but you, O you, So perfect and so peerless, are created

Of every creature's best.

Mira.

I do not know
One of my sex1 no woman's face remember,
Save, from my glass, mine own; nor have I seen
More that I may call men, than you, good friend,

And my dear father: how features are abroad, I am skill-less of; but, by my modesty,—
The jewel in my dower,—I would not wish Any companion in the world but you;
Nor can imagination form a shape,
Resides yourself to like of Reut I prattle

Something too wildly, and my father's precepts Therein forget.

Fer. I am, in my condition,
A prince, Miranda; I do think, a king,—
I would, not so!—and would no more endure
This wooden slavery than I would suffer
The flesh-fly blow my mouth. Hear my soul speak:

The very instant that I saw you, did My heart fly to your service; there resides, To make me slave to it; and for your sake Am I this patient log-man.

Mira. Do you love me?
Fer. O heaven, O earth, bear witness to this sound,

And crown what I profess with kind event, If I speak true! if hollowly, invert What best is boded me to mischief! I, Beyond all limit of what else i' the world, Do love, prize, honour you.

Mira. I am a fool

To weep at what I am glad of. Pro. [Aside.] Fair

Pro. [Aside.] Fair encounter
Of two most rare affections! Heavens rain grace
On that which breeds between them!

Fer. Wherefore weep you?

Mira. At mine unworthiness, that dare not offer

What I desire to give; and much less take
What I shall die to want. But this is trifling;
And all the more it seeks to hide itself, [cunning;
The bigger bulk it shows. Hence, bashful
And prompt me, plain and holy innocence!
I am your wife, if you will marry me;
If not, I'll die your maid: to be your fellow

You may dony me; but Pil be your servant Whether you will or no.

Fer. My mistress, dearest, And I thus humble ever.

Mira. My husband, then? Fer. Ay, with a heart as willing.

As bondage e'er of freedom: here's my hand.

Mira. And mine, with my heart in 't: and now farewell

Till half an hour hence.

Fer. A thousand! thousand! [Exeunt Ferd. and MIRA.

Pro. So glad of this as they I cannot be,
Who are surprised withal; but my rejoicing
At nothing can be more. I'll to my book;
For yet, ere supper time; must I perform
Much business appertaining.
[Exit.

Scene II.—Another part of the Island. 35

Enter STEPHANO and TRINCULO; CALIBÂN following with a bottle.

Ste. Tell not me;—when the butt is out, we will drink water; not a drop before: therefore bear up, and board 'em: Servant-monster, drink to me.

Trin. Servant-monster! the folly of this island! They say there's but five upon this isle: we are three of them; if the other two be brained like us, the state totters.

Ste. Drink, servant-monster, when I bid thee: thy eyes are almost set in thy head.

Trin. Where should they be set else? he were a brave monster indeed, if they were set in his tail

Ste. My man-monster hath drowned his ! tongue in sack: for my part, the sea cannot drown me: I swam, ere I could recover the shore, five-and-thirty leagues, off and on, by this light.—Thou shalt he my lientenant, monster, or my standard. istandard.

Trin. Your lieutenant, if you list; he's no Sie. We'll not run, monsieur-monster.

Trin. Nor go neither: but you'll lie, like dogs; and yet say nothing neither.

Ste. Moon-calf, speak once in thy life, if thon beest a good moon-calf.

Cal. How does thy bonour? Let me lick thy shoe. I'll not serve him; be is not valiant.

Trin. Thou liest, most ignorant monster: I am in case to justle a constable. Why, thou deboshed fish thou, was there ever a man a coward that hath drunk so much sack as I to-Wilt thou tell a monstrous lie, heing hut half a fish and half a monster?

Cal. Lo, how he mocks me! wilt thou let Trin. Lord, quoth hel-that a monster should be such a naturall

Cal. Lo, lo again! hite him to death, I pr'ythee.

Trinculo, keep a good tongue in your head: if you prove a mutineer, the next tree. The poor monster's my subject, and he shall not suffer indignity. Cal. I thank my noble lord. Wilt thou be pleased to hearken once again to the suit I made thee?

Stc. Marry will I: kneel and repeat it; I will stand, and so shall Trinculo.

Enter ARIEL, invisible.

Ccl. As I told thee before, I am subject to a tyrant; a sorcerer, that by his cunning hath cheated me of this island.

Thou liest.

.. Cal. Thou liest, thou jesting monkey, thou; I would my valiant master would destroy thee! I do not lie.

Ste. Trinculo, if you trouble him any more in his tale, by this hand, I will supplant some of your teeth.

Trin. Wby, I said nothing.

Ste. Mum, then, and no more. - [To CALIBAN.]

Proceed.

"Cal. I say, by sorcery ho got this isle: From me he got it. If thy greatness will Revenge it on him-for I know thou der'st, But this thing dare not.

Ste That's most certain. Cal. Thou shalt be lord of it, and I'll serve thee.

Sie. How now shall this be compassed? Canst thou bring me to the party? [asleep, :Cal. Yea, yea my lord; I'll yield him thee

Where thou mayst knock a nail into his head. here thou mays: Ari. Thou lest; thou canst not. [patchi—Ari. Thou lest; thou canst not. Thou scurry

I do beseech thy greatness, give him blows, And take his bottle from him: when that's gone He shall drink nought but brine; for I'll not

Where the quick freshes are.

Ste. Trinculo, run into no further danger! interrupt the monster one word further, and, by this hand, I'll turn my mercy out of doors. and make a stock-fish of thee.

Trin. Why, what did I? I did nothing. I'll go further off.

Sic. Didst thon not say, he lied? Ari. Thou liest.

Ste. Do I so? take thou that, [Strikes him.] As you like this, give me the lie another time. Trin. I did not give the lie.-Out o' your wits and hearing too? ---- A pox o' your pottle! this can sack and drinking do. - A murrain on your monster, and the devil take your fingers!

Cal. Ha, ha, hal

Ste. Now, ferward with your tale. Pr'ythee, stand further off.

Cal. Beat him enough: after a little time,

I'll heat him too. Ste. Stand further .- Come, proceed.

Cal. Why, as I told thee, 'tis a custom with him I' the afternoon to sleep: there thou mayst brain him.

Having first seized his books; or with a log Batter his skull, or paunch him with a stake Or cut his wezand with thy knife. Remember, First to possess his books; for without them

He's but a sot, as I am, nor hath not One spirit to command: they all do hate him As rootedly as I. Burn but his books.

He has hrave utensils,—for so he calls them,-Which, when be has a house, he'll deck withal. And that most deeply to consider is

The beauty of his daughter; he bimself Calls her a nonpareil; I never saw woman, But only Sycorax my dam and she; But she as far surpasseth Sycorax,

As great'st does least.

Stc. Is it so brave a lass? Cal. Ay, lord; she will become thy bed, I warrant.

And bring thee forth brave brood.

Ste. Monster, I will kill this man: his daughter and I will he king and queen;-save our graces!-and Trinculo and thyself shall he viceroys .- Dost thou like the plot, Trinculo!

Trin. Excellent.

Ste. Give me thy band; I am sorry I beat thee: hut while thou livest, keep a good tongue in thy head.

Cal. Within this half hour will he be asleep:

Wilt thou destroy him then?

Ste. Ay, on mine honour.

Ari. This will I tell my master.

Cal. Thou mak'st me merry: I am full of Ay, on mine honour.

pleasure;

Let us be jocund: will you troll the catch You taught me but while-ere?

Ste. At thy request, monster, I will do reason, any reason. Come on, Trinculo, let us sing. Sings.

Flout 'em, and scout 'em; and scout 'em and flout 'em; Thought is free.

Cal. That's not the tune.

[ARIEL plays the tune on a tabor and pipe. Ste. What is this same?

Trin. This is the tune of our catch, played by the picture of Nobody.

Ste. If thou beest a man, show thyself in thy likeness: if thou beest a devil, take 't as thon list

Trin. O, forgive me my sins!

Gon.

Ste. He that dies, pays all debts: I defy thee:-Mercy upon us!

Cal. Art thou afeard? Ste. No, monster, not I.

Cal. Be not afeard; the isle is full of noises, Sounds, and sweet airs, that give delight and hart not.

Sometimes a thousand twangling instruments Willhum about mine ears; and sometimes voices, That, if I then had waked after long sleep,

Will make me sleep again; and then, in dreaming, friches i The clouds, methought, would open and show Ready to drop upon me: that, when I waked,

I cried to dream again. Ste. This will prove a brave kingdom to me, where I shall have my music for nothing.

Cal. When Prospero is destroyed.

Ste. That shall be by and by: I remember the story.

Trin. The sound is going away: let's follow it, and after, do our work. Ste. Lead, monster, we'll follow.-I would I could see this taborer: he lays it on.

Trin. Wilt come? I'll follow, Stephano. Exeunt.

Scene III.—Another part of the Island.

Enter Alonzo, Sebastian, Antonio. GONZALO, ADRIAN, FRANCISCO, and others

Gon. By'r lakin, I can go no further, sir; My old bones ache: here's a maze trod, indeed, Through forth-rights and meanders! by your I needs must rest me. patience.

Old lord, I cannot blame thee, Alon. Who am myself attach'd with weariness, To the dulling of my spirits: sit down, and rest. Even here I will put off my hope, and keep it No longer for my flatterer: he is drown'd Whom thus we stray to find: and the sea mocks Our frustrate search on land. Well, let him go. Ant. I am right glad that he's so out of hope.

Aside to SEB. Do not, for one repulse, forego the purpose.

That you resolved to effect.

As when they are fresh.

Seb. The next advantage Will we take thoroughly. [Aside to ANT. Ant. [Aside to SEB.] Let it be tonight; For, now they are oppress'd with travel, they Will not, nor cannot, use such vigilance,

Seb. [Aside to ANT.] I say tonight; no more.

Solemn and strange music; and PROSPERO above, invisible. Enter several strange Shapes, bringing in a banquet; they dance about it with gentle actions of salutation, and inviting the King, &c., to eat, they depart.

Alon. What harmony is this? My good friends hark!

Marvellous sweet musicl Gon. Alon. Give us kind keepers, heavens! What were these?

Seb. A living drollery: now I will believe, That there are unicorns; that, in Arabia There is one tree, the phoenix' throne; опе At this hour reigning there. [phoenix Ant. I'll believe both;

And what does else want credit, come to me. And I'll be sworn 'tis true: travellers ne'er did lie. Though fools at home condemn them

If in Naples I should report this now, would they believe me? If I should say, I saw such islanders, For, certes, these are people of the island,-Who, though they are of monstrous shape, yet, note.

Their manners are more gentle-kind than of Our human generation you shall find Many, nay, almost any Honest lord.

Thou hast said well; for some of you there present

Are worse than devils. Aside. I cannot too much muse, Alon. Such shapes, such gesture, and such sound, expressing, Although they want the use of tongue, -a kind Of excellent dumb discourse.

Pro. Praise in departing. [Aside. Fran. They vanish'd strangely.

No matter, since Seb. They have left their viands behind; for we have stomachs,- Will't please you taste of what is here?

Alon.Not I. Gon. Faith, sir, you need not fear. When we were boys, leers, Who would believe that there were mountain-

Dew-lapp'd like bulls, whose throats had hanging at them

Wallets of flesh? or that there were such men, Whose heads stood in their breasts? which now we find,

Each putter-out of one for five, will bring us Good warrant of.

I will stand to, and feed, Although my last: no matter, since I feel, The best is past:—Brother, my lord the duke, Stand to, and do as we.

Thunder and lightning. Enter ARIEL like a harpy; claps his wings upon the table, and with a quaint device the banquet vanishes.

Ari. You are three menof sin, whom destiny, That hath to instrument this lower world, And what is in 't,—the never-surfeited sea Hath caused to belch up; and on this island Where man doth not inhabit; you 'mongst men Being most unfit to live. I have made you mad; And even with such like valour, men hang and [drown Their proper selves.

[ALON., SEB. &c., draw their swords. You fools! I and my fellows Are ministers of fate; the elements, Of whom your swords are temper'd, may as well Wound the loud winds, or with bemock'd-at stabs Kill the still-closing waters, as diminish One dowle that's in my plume; my fellow-ministers Are like invulnerable; if you could hurt,

Yourswords are now too massy for your strengths, And will not be uplifted. But, remember,-For that's my business to you,—that you three From Milan did supplant good Prospero; Expos'd unto the sea, which hath requit it, Him, and his innocent child: for which foul deed The powers, delaying, not forgetting have Incensed the seas and shores, yea, all the creatures.

Against your peace: Thee, of thy son, Alonzo. They have bereft; and do pronounce by me, Ling'ring perdition,-worse than any death Can be at once,—shall step by step attend You and your ways; whose wraths to guard you from .-

Which here, in this most desolate isle; else falls Upon your heads, - is nothing but heart's sorrow, And a clear life ensuing,

He vanishes in thunder: then, to soft music, enter the Shapes agoin, and donce with mops ond mows, and corry out the toble.

Pro. [Aside.] Bravely the figure of this harpy hast thou

Perform'd, my Ariel; a grace it had devouring: Of my instruction hast thou nothing 'bated, In what thou hadst to say: so, with good life, And observation strange, my meaner ministers Their several kinds have done: my high charms And these, mine enemies, are all knit up [work, In their distractions: they now are in my power; And in these fits I leave them, whilst I visit they Young Ferdinand,-who suppose And his and my loved darling. [drown'd,~ Exit PROSPERO from obove.

Gon. I' the name of something holy, sir, why In this strange stare? [stand you

O, it is monstrous! monstrons! Alon. Methought the billows spoke, and told me of it; The winds did sing it to me; and the thunder, That deep and dreadful organ-pipe, pronounced The name of Prosper; it did hass my trespass. Therefore my son i' the coze is bedded; and I'll seek him deeper than e'er plummet sounded. And with him there lie mudded.

Exit. Seb. But one fiend at a time,

I'll fight their legions o'er.

I'll be thy second. . Ant. [Exeunt SEB. and ANT. Gon. All three of them are desperate; their great guilt, Like poison given to work a great time after, Now gins to bite the spirits: - I do he seech you That are of suppler joints, follow them swiftly, And hinder them from what this ecstacy May now provoke them to.

Adr. Follow, I pray you. Exeunt. 1:

ACT IV.

10 Scene I .- Before Prospero's Cell. Enter Prospero, Ferdinand, and Miranda

"Pro. If I have too austerely punished you. Your compensation makes amends; for I Have given you here a thread of mine own life, Or that for which I live; who once again I tender to thy hand: all thy vexations Were hut my trials of thy love, and thou Hast strangely stood the test: here, afore Heaven, I ratify this my rich gift. O Ferdinand, Do not smile at me, that I boast her off, For thou shalt find she will outstrip all praise, And make it halt behind her.

Fer. I do believe it,

Against an oracle.

Pro. Then, as my gift, and thine own acquisition

Worthily purchas d, take my daughter: But If thou dost break her virgin knot before All sanctimonious ceremonies may With full and holy rite he minister'd, No sweet aspersion shall the heavens let fall To make this contract grow: hut harren hate, Sour-eyed disdain, and discord, shall hestrew The union of your hed with weeds so loathly, Tha you shall hate it both: therefore, take As Hymen's lamps shall light you. Fer. As I hope For quiet days, fair issue, and long life, With such love as 'tis now; the murkiest den The most opportune place, the strong'st sugges-Our worser Genius can, shall never melt [tion Mine honour into lust; to take away The edge of that day's celebration, [founder'd, When I shall think, or Phoebus' steeds are Or night kept chain'd helow.

Fairly spoke: Sit, then, and talk with her, she is thine own:-What, Ariel; my industrious servant, Ariel!

Enter ARIEL.

Ari. What would my potent master? here I am. [service Pro. Thou and thy meaner fellows your last .

Did worthily perform; and I must use you In such another trick: go, bring the rabble, O'er whom I give thee power, here, to this place: Incite them to quick motion; for I must Bestow upon the eyes of this young couple Some vanity of mine art; it is my promise, Some vanity of mine.

And they expect it from me.

Presently?

Pro. Ay, with a twink. Ari. Before you can say, Come and go, And hreathe twice; and cry, so, so; Each one, tripping on his toe, Will he here with mop and mow:

Do you love me, master? no? [approach Pro. Dearly, my delicate Ariel. Do not Till thou dost hear me call.

Ari. Well I conceive. Exit. Pro. Look thou be true: do not give dalliance Too much the rein: the strongest oaths are straw To the fire i' the blood: be more abstemious, Or else, good night your vow!

I warrant you, sir. The white cold virgin snow upon my heart Ahates the ardour of my liver.

Well.-Pro. Now come, my Ariel: hring a corollary, Rather than want a spirit: appear, and pertly.-No tongue; all eyes; be silent. [Soft music.

Enter IRIS. A Masque.

Iris. Ceres, most bounteons lady, thy rich leas Of wheat, rye, barley, vetches, oats, and pease; Thy turfy mountains, where live nibhling sheep, Andflatmeadsthatch'd withstover, them to keep; Thy hanks with peonied and lilied hrims, Which spongy April at thy 'hest hetrims, To make cold nymphs chaste crowns; and thy hroom groves,

Whose shadow the dismissed bachelor loves, Being lass-lorn; thy pole-clipt vineyard; And thy sea-marge, sterile and rocky-hard, Where thon thyself dost air: The queen o' the sky Whose watery arch, and messenger, am I,

Bids thee leave these; and with her sovereign grace,

Here on this grass-plot, in this very place, To come and sport: her peacocks fly amain; Approach, rich Ceres, her to entertain.

Enter CERES.

Cer. Hail, many-colour'd messenger, that ne'er

Dost disobey the wife of Jupiter;
Who, with thy saffron wings, upon my flowers
Diffusest honey drops, refreshing showers;
And with each end of thy blue bow dost crown
My bosky acres, and my unshrubb'd down,
Rich scarf to my proud earth;—why hath thy

Summon'd me hither, to this short-grass'd green?

Iris. A contract of true love to celebrate;

And some donation freely to estate

On the bless'd lovers.

Cer. Tell me, heavenly bow, If Venus, or her son, as thou dost know. Do now attend the queen? since they did plot The means, that dusky Dis my daughter got, Her and her blind boy's scandal'd company I have forsworn.

Iris. Of her society
Be not afraid. I met her deity
Cutting the clouds towards Paphos; and her son Dove-drawn with her: here thought they to have done

Some wanton charm upon this man and maid,
Whose vows are that no bed-rite shall be paid
Till Hymen's torch be lighted; but in vain;
Mars' hot minion is return'd again;
Her waspish-headed son has broke his arrows,
Swears he will shoot no more, but play with
And be a boy right out.

[sparrows,

Cer. Highest queen of state, Great Juno comes; I know her by her gait.

Enter JUNO.

Jun. How does my bounteous sister? Go with me,
To bless this twain, that they may prosperous be,

SONG.

And honour'd in their issue.

Jun.—Honour, riches, marringe-blessing,
Long continuance, and increasing,
Hourly joys be still upon you!
Juno sings her blessings on you.

Cer.—Earth's increase, and foison plenty,
Barns and garners never empty;
Vines, with clust'ring bunches growing;
Plants, with goodly burden bowing;
Spring come to you, at the farthest,
In the very end of harvest!
Scarcity and want shall shun you
Ceres' blessing so is on you.

Fer. This is a most majestic vision, and Harmonious charmingly: May I be bold To think these spirits?

Pro. Spirits, which by mine art I have from their confines called to enact My present fancies.

Per. Let me live here ever; So rare a wonder'd father, and a wise, Makes this place Paradise.

[Juno and Ceres whisper, and send Iris on employment.

Pro. Sweet now, silence; Juno and Ceres whisper seriously; There's something else to do; hush, and be mute, Or else our spell is marr'd.

Iris. You nymphs, call'd Naiads, of the wind'ring brooks, [looks, With your sedged crowns. and ever harmless Leave your crisp channels, and on this greenland Answer your summons: Juno does command. Come, temperate nymphs, and help to celebrate A contract of true love; be not too late.

Enter certain Nymphs.

You sun-burn'd sicklemen, of August weary, Come hither from the furrow, and be merry; Make holiday; your rye-straw hats put on, and these fresh nymphs encounter every one In country footing.

Enter certain Reapers, properly habited; they join with the Nymphs in a graceful dance; towards the end whereof Prospero starts suddenly, and speaks; after which, to a strange, hollow, and confused noise, they heavily vanish.

Pro. [Aside] I had forgot that foul conspiracy
Of the beast Caliban and his confederates
Against my life; the minute of their plot
Is almost come.—[To the Spirits.]Well done;
—avoid;—no more. [passion

Fer. This is strange: your father's in some

That works him strongly.

Mira. Never till this day.

Saw I him touch'd with anger so distemper'd. Pro. You do look, my son, in a moved sort, As if you were dismay'd: be cheerful, sir: Our revels now are ended: these our actors, As I foretold you, were all spirits, and Are melted into air, into thin air And, like the baseless fabric of this vision The cloud-capp'd towers, the gorgeous palaces, The solemn temples, the great globe itself, Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve, And, like this insubstantial pageant faded, Leave not a rack behind: We are such stuff As dreams are made of, and our little life Is rounded with a sleep.—Sir, I am ver'd; Bear with my weakness; myold brain is troubled, Be not disturb'd with my infirmity If you be pleased, retire into my cell, And there repose; a turn or two I'll walk, To still my beating mind. We wish your peace. Fer. Mira.

Pro. Come, with a thought:—I thank you;
—Ariel, come.

Enter ARIEL.

Ari. Thy thoughts I cleave to: What's thy pleasure?

Pro. Spirit,

We must prepare to meet with Caliban.

Ari. Ay, my commander; when I presented

Ceres,

I thought to have told thee of it; but I fear'd Lest I might anger thee.

Pro. Say again, where didst thou leave these Ari. I told you, sir, they were red-hot with drinking: So full of valour that they smote the air SCENE I.

For breathing in their faces; beat the ground For kissing of their feet; yet always bending Towards their project: Then I beat my tahor, At which, like unhack'd colts, they prick'd their ears.

Advanced their eyelids, lifted up their noses As they smelt music; so I charm'd their ears, That, calf-like, they my lowing follow'd through Tooth'd hriers, sharp furzes, pricking goss, and thorns Which enter'd their frail shins: at last I left them I' the filthy mantled pool heyond your cell There dancing up to the chins, that the foul lake O'erstunk their feet.

This was well done, my bird; Pro.

Thy shape invisible retain thou still:

The trumpery in my house, go, hring it hither, For stale to catch these thieves.

I go, I go. |Exit. Ari. Pro. A devil, a born devil, on whose nature Nurture can never stick; on whom my pains, Humanely taken, all, all lost, quite lost: And as, with age, his hody uglier grows, So his mind cankers: I will plague them all,

Re-enter ARIEL, loaden with glistering apparel, &c.

Even to roaring: - Come, hang them on this line. PROSPERO and ARIEL remain invisible. Enter

CALIBAN, STEPHANO, and TRINCULO, all wet. Cal. Pray you, tread softly, that the blind mole may not Hear a footfall: we now are near his cell. Sie. Monster, your fairy, which you say is a harmless fairy, has done little better than played the Jack with us.

Trin. Monster, I do smell all horse-piss; at which my nose is in great indignation.

Ste. So is mine. Do you hear, monster? If I should take a displeasure against you; look you,-Trin. Thou wert but a lost monster.

Cal. Good, my lord, give me thy favour still: Be patient, for the prize I'll bring thee to Shall hood-wink this mischance: therefore speak Isoftly, All's hush'd as midnight yet. Trin. Ay, hut to lose our bottles in the pool— Ste. There is not only disgrace and dishonour in that, monster, but an infinite loss.

Trin. That's more to me than my wetting: yet this is your harmless fairy monster.

Ste. I will fetch off my hottle, though I be o'er ears for my labour. ihere.

Cal. Pr'ythee, my king, be quiet: Seest thou This is the mouth o' the cell: no noise, and enter. Do that good mischief, which may make this island

Thine own for ever, and I, thy Calihan,

For aye thy foot-licker.

Ste. Give me thy hand: I do hegin to have bloody thoughts.

Trin. O king Stephano! O peer! O worthy Stephanol look, what a wardrobe here is for thee.

Cal. Let it alone, thon fool; it is hut trash. Trin. O, ho, monster; we know what he-longs to a frippery.—O king Stephano!

Ste. Put off that gown, Trinculo; by this hand. I'll have that gown.

Trin. Thy grace shall have it. [mean, Cal. The dropsy drown this fool! what do you!

To dote thus on such luggage? Let's along, And do the murder first: if he awake,

From toe to crown he'll fill our skins with pinches;

Make us strange stuff.

Ste. Be you quiet, monster .- Mistress line, is not this my jerkin? Now is the jerkin under the line: now, jerkin, you are like to lose your hair, and prove a hald jerkin.

Trin. Do, do: We steal by line and level, ain't like your grace.

Sie. I thank thee for that jest: here's a garment for 't: wit shall not go unrewarded while I am king of this country: Steal by line and level, is an excellent pass of pate; there's another garment for 't.

Trin. Monster, come, put some lime upon your fingers, and away with the rest. [time, Cal. I will have none on 't: we shall lose our

And all he turned to barnacles, or to apes

With foreheads villanous low.

Ste. Monster, lay to your fingers; help to hear this away where my hogshead of wine is, or I'll turn you out of my kingdom: go to, carry this. Trin. And this.

Ste. Ay, and this.

A noise of hunters heard. Enter divers Spirits, in shape of hounds, and hunt them about. PROSPERO and ARIEL setting them on.

Pro. Hey, Mountain, hey!
Ari. Silver! there it goes, Silver! [hark!
Pro. Fury, Fury! there, Tyrant, there! hark,
[CAL., STE., and TRIN. are driven out.

Go, charge my goblins that they grind their joints With dry convulsions; shorten up their sinews With aged cramps; and more pinch-spotted make Than pard or cat o'mountain. them, Ari. Hark, they roar.

Pro. Let them be hunted soundly: At this Lie at my mercy all mine enemies: Shortly shall all my lahours end, and thou Shalt have the air at freedom: for a little Follow, and do me service. Exeunt.

ACT V.

Scene I.—Before the Cell of Prospero.

Enter Prospero in his magic robes; and ARIEL.

Pro. Now does my project gather to a head: My charms crack not; my spirits obey; and time Goes upright with his carriage. How's the day? Ari. On the sixth honr; at which time, my You said our work should cease. Hord.

Pro. I did say so, When first I raised the tempest. Say, my spirit, How fares the king and 's followers?

Confin'd together Ari. In the same fashion as you gave in charge; Just as you left them, sir; all prisoners In the lime-grove which weather-fends your cell; They cannot budge till your release. The king. His brother, and yours, ahide all three distracted; And the remainder mourning over them,

Brimrul of sorrow and dismay; but chiefly Him you termed, sir, The good old lo d Gonzalo; His tears run down his heard, like winter's drops From eaves of reeds: your charm so strongly works them,

That if you now beheld them, your affections Would become tender.

Pro. Dost thou think so, spirit? Ari. Mine would, sir, were I hnman.

Pro. And mine shall. Hast thou, which art but air, a touch, a feeling Of their afflictions? and shall not myself, One of their kind, that relish all as sharply Passion as they, be kindlier moved than thou art? Though with their high wrongs I am struck to the quick, Yet, with my nobler reason, 'gainst my fury Do I take part: the rarer action is In virtue than in vengeance: they being penitent, The sole drift of my purpose doth extend Not a frown further. Go, release them, Ariel; My charms I'll break, their senses I'll restore. And they shall be themselves.

I'll fetch them, sir. Ari. Exit. Pro. Ye elves of hills, brooks, standing lakes, and groves;

And ye that on the sands with printless foot Do chase the ebbing Neptune, and do fly him When he comes back; you demi-puppets that By moonshine do the green sour ringlets make, Whereoftheewenotbites; and you who sepastime Is to make midnight mushrooms, that rejoice To hear the solemn curfew; by whose aid, Weak masters though ye be, -I have bedimm'd Thencontidesun, call'dforth the mutinous winds, And 'twixt the green sea and the azured vault Set roaring war: to the dread rattling thunder Have I given fire, and rifted Jove's stont oak With his own boit: the strong-based promontory Have I made shake: and by the spurs pluck'd up The pine and cedar: graves, at my command, Have waked their sleepers, oped, and let them forth By my so potent art. But this rough magic I here abjurc: and, when I have required Some heavenly music, -which even now I do, --To work mine end upon their senses, that This airy charm is for, I'll break my staff, Bury it certain fathoms in the earth, And deeper than did ever plummet sound I'll drown my book. [Solemn music.

Re-enter ARIEL: after him ALONSO, with a frantic gesture, attended by Gonzalo; SEBAS-TIAN and ANTONIO in like manner, attended by ADRIAN and FRANCISCO: they all enter the circle which PROSPERO had made, and there stand charmed; which Prospero observing, speaks.

A solemn air, and the best comforter To an unsettled fancy, cure thy brains, [stand, Now useless, boil'd within thy skull! There For you are spell-stopp'd. Holy Gonzalo, honourable man, Mine eyes, even sociable to the show of thine, Fallfellowly drops. — The charm dissolves apace; And as the morning steals upon the night, Melting the darkness, so their rising senses Begin to chase the ignorant fumes that mantle Their clearer reason.—O good Gonzalo, My true preserver, and a loyal sir To him thou follow'st; I will pay thy graces Home, both in word and deed.-Most cruelly Didst thou, Alonzo, use me and my daughter: Thy brother was a furtherer in the act;

Thou'rt pinch'd for 't now, Sebastian, flesh and blood .-

You brother mine, that entertain ambition Expell'd remorse and nature; who, with Sebastian.strong,-

Whose inward pinches therefore are most Would here have kill'd your king; I do forgive

Unnatural though thou art.—Their understand-Begins to swell; and the approaching tide Will shortly fill the reasonable shore That now lies foul and muddy. Not one of them That yet looks on me, or would know me.—Ariel, Fetch me the hat and rapier in my cell; Exit ARIEL.

I will discase me, and myself present As I was sometime Milan: quickly, spirit; Thon shalt ere long be free.

ARIEL re-enters, singing, and helps to attire PROSPERO.

Ari. Where the bee sucks, there suck I; In the cowslip's bell I lie: There I couch when owls do cry. On the bat's back I do fly After summer merrily Merrily, merrily shall I live now, Under the blossom that hangs on the bough.

Pro. Why, that's my dainty Ariel: I shall miss thee: But yet thou shalt have freedom: so, so, so.-To the king's ship, invisible as thou art: There shalt thou find the mariners asleep. Under the hatches; the master and the boatswain

Being awake, enforce them to this place; And presently, I pr'ythee. Ari. I drink the air before me, and return A Or e'er your pulse twice beat. Exit ARIEL.

Gon. All torment, trouble, wonder, and amazement Inhabits here. Some heavenly power guide us Out of this fearful country!

Behold, sir king, 🗸 The wronged Duke of Milan, Prospero: For more assurance that a living prince Does now speak to thee, I embrace thy body; And to thee and thy company I bid

A hearty welcome Whether thou beest he or no, Alon. Or some enchanted trifle to abuse me, As late I have been, I not know: thy pulse 11-Beats, as of flesh and blood; and, since I saw thee,

The affliction of my mind amends, with which, I fear, a madness held me: this must crave? An if this be at all,—a most strange story. Thy dukedom I resign; and do entreat Thou pardon me my wrongs.—But how should Prospero

Be living and be here?

First, noble friend. Pro. Let me embrace thine age, whose honour cannot Let me emplace the Be measured or confined.

Whether this be

Or be not, Pil not swear.

You do yet taste and You Some subtilties o' the isle, that will not let you Believe things certain-Welcome, my friends. Aside to SEB. and ANT. all:-

But you, my brace of lords, were I so minded,

flords

I here could pluck his highness' frown upon you. And justify you traitors; at this time I'll tell no tales.

Seb. The devil speaks in him. Aside. Pro. No.

For you, most wicked sir, whom to call brother Would even infect my mouth, I do forgive Thy rankest fault,-all of them; and require My dukedom of thee, which, perforce, I know Thou must restore.

If thou beest Prospero, Alon. Give us particulars of thy preservation: How thou bast met us here, who three hours since Were wreck'd upon this shore; where I have lost-daughter?

I am woe for 't. sir. Alon. Irreparable is the loss; and patience Says it is past her cure.

I rather think

You have not sought her help; of whose soft grace For the like loss I bave ber sovereign aid. And rest myself content.

You the like loss? Alon.Pro. As great to me as late; and, supportable Tomakethedearloss, have I means much weaker Than you may call to comfort you; for I Have lost my daughter.

Pro. In this last tempest. I perceive these At this encounter do so much admire That they devour their reason, and scarce think. Their eyes do offices of truth, their words Are natural breath: but, howsoe'er you have Been justled from your senses, know for certain That I am Prospero, and that very duke Which was thrust forth of Milan; who most (landed, strangely

Upon this shore, where you were wreck'd, was To be the lord on't. No more yet of this; For 'tis a chronicle of day by day, Not a relation for a breakfast, nor Behtting this first meeting. Welcome, sir; This cell's my court; here have I few attendants, And subjects none abroad: pray you, look in. My dukedom since you have given me again, I will requite you with as good a thing: At least bring forth a wonder, to content ye As much as me my dukedom.

The entrance of the Cell opens, and discovers EERDINAND and MIRANDA playing at chess.

Mira. Sweet lord, you play me false. Fer. No. my dearest love, I would not for the world. Mira. Yes, for a score of kingdoms you should (wrangle, And I would call it fair play. If this prove

A vision of the island, one dear son

Alon. Now all the blessings Of a glad father compass thee about!

Arise and say how thou cam'st here. Mira. O, wonder! How many goodly creatures are there here! How beauteous mankind is! O brave new world. That hath such people in't!

Pro. 'Tis new to thee. Alon. What is this maid, with whom thou wast at play?

Your eld'st acquaintance cannot be three hours: Is she the goddess that hath sever'd us, And brought us thus together?

Sir. sbe's mortal: But by immortal providence she's mine: I chose her when I could not ask my father For his advice, nor thought I had one: she Is daughter to this famous Duke of Milan, Of whom so often I have heard renown But never saw before; of wbom I have Received a second life; and second father This lady makes him to me.

Alon. I am hers: But O, how oddly will it sound that I Must ask my child forgiveness!

There, sir, stop; Let us not burden our remembrances

With a heaviness that's gone. I have inly wept, Gon. Or should have spoke ere this. Look down, you And on this couple drop a blessed crown; [gods, For it is you that have coulk'd forth the way Which brought us hither!

Alon. I say, Amen, Gonzalo! Gon. Was Milan thrust from Milan, that his issne

Should become kings of Naples? O, rejoice Beyond a common joy; and set it down With gold on lasting pillars: in one voyage Did Claribel her husband find at Tunis; And Ferdinand, her brother, found a wife Where he himself was lost; Prospero his duke-In a poor isle; and all of us ourselves When no man was his own.

Alon. Give me your hands: [To FERD. ond MIR. Let grief and sorrow still embrace his heart That doth not wish you joy!

Be 't so! Amen! Gon.

Re-enter ARIEL, with the Master and Boatswain amazedly following.

O look, sir, look, sir; here are more of us! I prophesied, if a gallows were on land, This fellow could not drown. Now, blasphemy, That swear'st grace o'erboard, not an oath on shore?

Hast thou no month by land? What is the news? Boais. The best news is, that we have safely found Our king and company: the next, our ship, Which, but three glasses since, we gave out split, Is tight, and yare, and bravely rigg'd, as when We first put out to sea.

Sir, all this service | Ari. Have I done since I went.

EPILOGUE.

SPOKEN BY PROSPERO Now my charms are all o'erthrown, And what strength I have 's mine own,-Which is most faint: now 'tis true, I must be here confined by you, Or sent to Naples. Let me not, Since I have my dukedom got, And pardon'd the deceiver, dwell In this bare island by your spell; But release me from my bands With the help of your good hands. Gentle breath of yours my sails Must fill, or else my project fails, Which was to please. Now I want Spirits to enforce, art to enchant; And my ending is despair Unless I be relieved by prayer Which pierces so, that it assaults Mercy itself, and frees all faults. 15 As you from crimes would pardon'd be, Let your indulgence set me free.

ACT I.

Scene 1-An open place in Verona.

Enter VALENTINE and PROTEUS.

Val. Cease to persuade, my loving Protens; Home-keeping youth hath ever homely wits; Wer't not affection chains thy tender days To the sweet glances of thy honour'd love, I rather would entreat thy company To see the wonders of the world abroad, Than, living dully sluggardiz'd at home, Wear out thy youth with shapeless idleness. But since thou lov'st, love still, and thrive therein. Even as I would, when I to love begin. [adien!]

Pro. Wilt thou be gone? Sweet Valentine, Think on thy Proteus, when thou haply seest Some rare noteworthy object in thy travel: Wish me partaker in thy happiness When thou dost meet good hap: and in thy danger, If ever danger do environ thee, Commend thy grievance to my holy prayers, For I will be thy beadsman, Valentine.

Val. That's on some shallow story of deep love, How young Leander cross'd the Hellespont. Pro. That's a deep story of a deeper love;

For he was more than over shoes in love.

Val. 'Tis true; for you are over boots in love, And yet you never swam to Hellespont.

Pro. Over the boots! nay, give me not the Val. No, I will not for it boots thee not.

Pro. Val. To be in love, where scorn is bought with grosns;

Coy looks with heart-sore sighs; one fading moment's mirth With twenty watchful, weary, tedions nights:

If haply won, perhaps a hapless gain; If lost, why then a grievous labour won; However, but a folly bought with wit, Or else a wit by folly vanquished. fool.

Pro. So, by your circumstance, you call me Val. So, by your circumstance, I fear you'll prove.

Pro. Tis love you cavil at; I am not Love.

Val. Love is your master, for he masters you: And he that is so yoked by a fool, Val. And on a love-book pray for my success. And he that is so yoked by a fool, Pro. Upon some book I love I'll pray for thee. Methinks should not be chronicled for wise.

Pro. Yet writers say, As in the sweetest bud The eating canker dwells, so eating love Inhabits in the finest wits of all. [bud

Val. And writers say, As the most forward Is eaten by the canker ere it blow, Even so by love the young and tender wit Is turn'd to folly; blasting in the bud, Losing his verdure even in the prime, And all the fair effects of future hopes. But wherefore waste I time to counsel thee That art a votary to fond desire?

Once more adieu: my father at the road Expects my coming, there to see me shipp'd. Pro. And thither will I bring thee, Valentine. Val. Sweet Proteus, no; now let us take our leave.

At Milan let me hear from thee by letters
Of thy success in love, and what news else
Betideth here in absence of thy friend;
And I likewise will visit thee with mine.

Pro. All happiness bechance to thee in Milan!

Val. As much to you at home! and so farewell.

[Exit VALENTINE.

Pro. He after honour hunts, I after love:
He leaves his friends to dignify them more;
I leave myself, my friends, and all for love.
Thou, Julia, thou hast metamorphos'd me;
Made me neglect my studies, lose my time,
War with good counsel, set the world at nought:
Made wit with musing weak, heart sick with thought.

Enter SPEED.

Speed. Sir Proteus, save you. Saw you my master?

Pro. But now he parted hence, to embark for Milan.

Speed. Twenty to one, then, he is shipp'd already;

And I have play'd the sheep in losing him.

Pro. Indeed a sheep doth very often stray

An if the shepherd be awhile away.

Speed. You conclude that my master is a shepherd, then, and I a sheep?

Pro. I do.

Sheed. Why, then, my horns are his horns

Speed. Why, then, my horns are his horns whether I wake or sleep.

Pro. A silly answer, and fitting well a sheep.

Speed. This proves me still a sheep.

Pro. True; and thy master a shepherd.

Speed. Nay; that I can deny by a circum-

pro. It show all go hard but I'll prove it by nother.

Speed. The sheph ward seeks the sheep, and not he sheep the shepherd; but I seek my master, and my master seeks not be me: therefore, I am sheep

Pro. The sheep for food ther follow the shepnerd, the shepherd for food the follows not the sheep; thou for wages follows west thy master, hy master for wages follows and thee: therefore, thou art a sheep.

Speed. Such another proof with make me cry bas.

Pro. But dost thou hear? gal I v'st thou my letter to Julia?

Speed. Ay, sir; I, a lost muttone.
letter to her, a laced mutton; and she, a laced mutton, gave me, a lost mutton, nothing for my labour!

Pro. Here's too small a pasture for such a store of muttons.

Speed. If the ground be overcharged you were best stick her?

Pro. Nay; in that you are astray; 'twere best pound you.

Speed. Nay, sir; less than a pound shall serve me for carrying your letter.

Pro. You mistake: I mean the round

Pro. You mistake; I mean the pound, a pinfold.

Speed. From a pound to a pin? fold it over and over, [your lover.]
Tis threefold too little for commission a letter.

'Tis threefold too little for carrying a letter to Pro. But what said she? did she nod? Speed. [Nodding.] Ay.

Pro. Nod-Ay-why, that's noddy.

Speed. You mistook, sir; I say she did nod: and you ask me if she did nod; and I say, A;

Pro. And that set together is—noddy.

Speed. Now you have taken the pains to me it together, take it for your pains.

Pro. No, no; you shall have it for bearing the letter.

Speed. Well, I perceive I must be fain to bear with you.

Pro. Why, sir, how do you bear with me? Speed. Marry, sir, the letter very orderly: having nothing but the word noddy for my pains.

Pro. Beshrew me, but you have a quick wit.

Speed. And yet it cannot overtake your slow purse.

Pro. Come, come; open the matter in brief: what said she?

Speed. Open your purse, that the money and the matter may be both at once delivered. Pro. Well, sir, here is for your pains: what said she?

Speed. Truly, sir, I think you'll hardly win

Pro. Why, couldst thou perceive so much from her?

Speed. Sir, I could perceive nothing at all from her; no, not so much as a ducat for delivering your letter: and being so hard to me that brought your mind, I fear she'll prove as hard to you in telling her mind. Give her no token but stones; for she's as hard as steel.

Pro. What! said she nothing?

Speed. No, not so much as—Take this for the pains. To testify your bounty, I thank you you have testern'd me; in requital whereof henceforth carry your letters yourself: and so sir, I'll commend you to my master. [wreck

Pro. Go, go; begone, to save your ship from Which cannot perish, having thee aboard, in Being destined to a drier death on shore. If must go send some better messenger: If fear my Julia would not deign my lines, if Receiving them from such a worthless post.

Jul. Of all the fair resort of gentlemen That every day with parle encounter me. In thy opinion which is worthiest love? Luc. Please you, repeat their names;

show my mind

According to my shallow simple skill.

Jul. What think'st thou of the fair Sir Eglamoura

Luc. As of a knight well-speken, neat, and But were I you, he never should he mine.

Jul. What think'st thou of the rich Mercatio? Luc. Well of his wealth; nut of minisch, of Jul. What think'st thou of the gentle Proteus? in us!

Jul. How now! what means this passion at his name? Ishame

Luc. Pardon, dear madam; 'tis a passing That I, unworthy body as I am,

Should censure thus on lovely gentlemen.

Jul. Why not on Proteus, as of all the rest? Luc. Thenthus: of many good I think him best. Jul. Your reason?

Luc. I have no other but a woman's reason; I think him so, because I think him so.

Jul. And wouldst thou have me cast my love on him? laway. Luc. Ay, if you thought your love not cast Jul. Why, he of all the rest hath never moved me. floves ye. Yet he of all the rest, I think, best

Jul. His little speaking shows his love but small.

Luc. Fire that is closest kept burns most of all. "Jul. They do not love that do not show their love Itheir love.

Luc. O, they love least that let men know Jul. I would I knew his mind.

Luc. Peruse this paper, madam.

(Gives a letter. 'Jul. [reads] 'To Julia,'-Say, from whom? That the contents will show.

Luc. That the contents win silve.

Jul. Say, say; who gave it thee?

Luc. Sir Valentine's page; and sent, I think,

[the way, He would have given it you; but I, heing in

Did in your name receive it; pardon the fault, I pray.

Jul. Now, by my modesty, a goodly broker! Dare you presume to harbour wanton lines? To whisper and conspire against my youth? Now, trust me, 'tis an office of great worth, And you an officer fit for the place. There, take the paper; see it be return'd;

Or else return no more into my sight.

Luc. To plead for love deserves more fee Luc. To plead for love Jul. Will you be gone? Ithan hate. Luc. That you may ruminate.

Jul. And yet, I would I had o'erlook'd the It were a shame to call her back again, [letter. And pray her to a fault for which I chid her. What fool is she, that knows I am a maid, And would not force the letter to my view?
Since maids, in modesty, say No to that
Which they would have the profierer construe Ay. Fie, fiel how wayward is this foolish love, That, like a testy bahe, will scratch the nurse,

And presently, all humbled, kiss the rod!

When willingly I would have had her here! How angrily I taught my hrow to frown, When inward joy enforced my heart to smile! My penance is to call Lucetta hack, And ask remission for my folly past:-What, ho! Lucetta?

Re-enter LUCETTA.

Luc. What would your ladyship?

Jul. Is it near dinner time? I would it were: That you might kill your stomach on your meat.

That you mign sair, you And not upon your maid.
What is't you took up

So gingerly?

Luc. Nothing.

Jul. Why didst thou stoop then? Luc. To take a paper up that I let fall.

Jul. And is that paper nothing?

Luc. Nothing concerning me. Jul. Then let it lie for those that it concerns. Luc. Madam, it will not lie where it concerns. Unless it have a false interpreter.

Jul. Some love of yours hath writ to you in thyme. Luc. That I might sing it, madam, to a tune:

Give me a note: your ladyship can set. Jul. As little by such toys as may be possible; Best sing it to the tune of Light o' love.

Luc. It is too heavy for so light a tune. Jul. Heavy! belike it hath some burden, then.

Luc. Ay; and melodious were it, would you sing it.

Jul. And why not you?

Luc. I cannot reach so high. Jul. Let's see your song.-How now. lit out: minjon? Luc. Keep tune there still, so you will sing

And yet methinks I do not like this tune.

Jul. You do not?

Luc. No, madam; it is too sharp. Jul. You, minion, are too saucy. Luc. Nay, now you are too flat,

And mar the concord with too harsh a descant; There wanteth but a mean to fill your song. Jul. The mean is drown'd with your unruly hase. Luc. Indeed, I hid the base for Proteus. [me. Jul. This babble shall not henceforth trouble

Here is a coil with protestation!-Tears the letter.

Go, get you gone; and let the papers lie: You would be fingering them, to anger me.

Luc. She makes it strange; but she would be best pleased

To be so anger'd with another letter. Jul. Nay, would I were so anger'd with the same!

O hateful hands, to tear such loving words! Injurious wasps! to feed on such sweet honey, And kill the hees that yield it, with your stings! I'll kiss each several paper for amends.

And here is writ-kind Julia: unkind Julia: As in revenge of thy ingratitude,

I throw thy name against the bruising stones, Trampling contemptuously on thy disdain. Look, here is writ-love-wounded Proteus:-Poor wounded name! by hosom, as a bed,

Shall lodge thee till thy wound be thoroughly heal'd:

And thus I search it with a sovereign kiss, But twice or thrice was Proteus written down: Be calm, good wind, blow not a word away Till I have found each letter in the letter, [bear Except mine own name; that some whirlwind Unto a ragged, fearful, hanging rock, And throw it thence into the raging seal Lo, here in one line is his name twice writ,-Poor forlorn Proteus, passionate Proteus, To the sweet Julia; that I'll tear away; And yet I will not, sith so prettily He couples it to his complaining names. Thus will I fold them one upon another; Now kiss, embrace, contend, do what you will.

Re-enter Lucetta.

Luc. Madam, dinner's ready, and your father

Jul. Well, let us go.

Luc. What! shall these papers lie like telltales here?

Jul. If you respect them, best to take them .. Luc. Nay, I was taken up for laying them down:

Yet here they shall not lie for catching cold. Jul. I see you have a month's mind to them. Luc. Ay, medam, you may say what sights you see;

I see things too, although you judge I wink. Jul. Come, come; wilt please you go? Exeunt.

Scene III.—The same. A Room in Antonio's House.

Enter Antonio and Panthino.

Ant. Tell me, Panthino, what sad talk was that

"Wherewith my brother held you in the cloister? Pan. 'Twas of his nephew Proteus, your son.

Ant. Why, what of him?
Pan. He wonder'd that your lordship Pan. Would suffer him to spend his youth at home, While other men, of slender reputation, Put forth their sons to seek preferment out: Some to the wars, to try their fortune there; Some to discover islands far away; Some to the studious universities. For any, or for all these exercises, He said that Proteus, your son, was meet; And did request me to importune you To let him spend his time no more at home, Which would be great impeachment to his age, In having known no travel in his youth. (that Ant. Norneed'st thou much importune me to Whereon this month I have been hammering. I have consider'd well his loss of time, And how he cannot be a perfect man, Not being tried and tutor'd in the world: Experience is by industry achieved And perfected by the swift course of time: Then tell me, whither were I best to send him?

Pan. I think your lordship is not ignorant How his companion, youthful Valentine, Attends the emperor in his royal court.

Ant. I know it well. him thither: Pan. Twere good, I think, your lordship sent There shall be practise tilts and tournaments, Hear sweet discourse, converse with noblemen. And be in eye of every exercise Worthy his youth and nobleness of birth.

Ant. I like thy counsel; well hast thou advised: And that thou may'st perceive how well I like it, The execution of it shall make known;

Even with the speediest execution

I will dispatch him to the emperor's court. Pan. Tomorrow, may it please you, Don Al-With other gentlemen of good esteem, [phonso, Are journeying to salute the emperor,

And to commend their service to his will. Ant. Good company; with them shall Proteus go.

And—in good time;—now will we break with Enter PROTEUS.

Pro. Sweet love! sweet lines! sweet life! Here is her hand, the agent of her heart; Here is her oath for love, her honour's pawn: O that our fathers would applaud our loves, To seal our happiness with their consents! O heavenly Julia!

Ant. How now? what letter are you reading Pro. May't please your lordship, 'tisa word or Of commendation sent from Valentine, Deliver'd by a friend that came from him.

Ant. Lend me the letter; let me see whatnews. Pro. There is no news, my lord; but that he

How happily he lives, how well-beloved. And daily graced by the emperor;

Wishing me with him, partner of his fortune. Ant. And how stand you affected to his wish? Pro. As one relying on your lordship's will, And not depending on his friendly wish.

Ant. My will is something sorted with his,

Muse not that I thus suddenly proceed; For what I will, I will, and there an end. I am resolved that thou shalt spend some time With Valentinus in the emperor's court; What maintenance he from his friends receives,

Like exhibition shalt thou have from me. Tomorrow be in readiness to go:

Excuse it not, for I am peremptory.

Pro. My lord, I cannot be so soon provided; Please you, deliberate a day or two. | after thee: Ant. Look, what thou want'st shall be sent No more of stay; to-morrow thou must go.

Come on, Panthino; you shall be employ'd 🤫 To hasten on his expedition. Exeunt ANT. and PAN.

Pro. Thus have I shunn'd the fire, for fear of [drown'd: burning, And drench'd me in the sea, where I am I fear'd to show my father Julia's letter, Lest he should take exceptions to my love; And with the vantage of mine own excuse A Hath he excepted most against my love. O, how this spring of love resembleth The uncertain glory of an April day; Which now shows all the beauty of the sun, And by and by a cloud takes all awayl

Re-enter Panthino.

Pan. Sir Proteus, your father calls for you; He is in haste; therefore, I pray you, go. " Pro. Why, this it is! my heart accords thereto; And yet a thousand times it answers no. Exeunt.

ACT II.

CENE I .- MILAN. An opartment in the DUKE'S Paloce.

Enter VALENTINE and SPEED.

Speed. [Picking up a glove.] Sir, your glove. Vol. Not mine: my gloves are on.

Speed. Why, then, this may be yours; for this is but one. [mine:

Val. Hal let me see: ay, give it to me; it's Sweet ornament that decks a thing divine Ah, Silvial Silvia! [Silvia!

Speed. [Calling.] Madam Silvial Madam Val. How now, sirrah?

Speed. She is not within hearing, sir. Val. Why, sir, who bade you call her?

Speed. Your worship, sir; or else I mistook. Val. Well, you'll still be too forward. Speed. And yet I was last chidden for being too slow. (Silvia? Val. Go to, sir; tell me, do you know Madam

Speed. She that your worship loves?

Val. Why, how know you that I am in love? Speed. Marry, by these special marks: first you have learned, like Sir Proteus, to wreath your arms like a mal-content; to relish a love-song, like a robin redbreast; to walk alone, like one that had the pestilence; to sigh, like a school-boy that had lost his A B C; to weep, like a young wench that had buried her grandam; to fast, like one that takes diet; to watch, like one that fears robbing; to speak puling, like a begger at Hallowmas. You were wont, when you laughed, to crow like a cock; when you walked, to walk like one of the lions; when you fasted, it was presently after dinner; when you looked sadly, it was for want of money: and now you are metamorphosed with a mistress, that, when I look on you, I can hardly think you my master.

Val. Are all these things perceived in me? Speed. They are all perceived without you. Val. Without me? they cannot.

Speed. Without yon? nay, that's certain; for, without you were so simple, none else would: but you are so without these follies, that these follies are within you, and shine through you like the water in a urinal; that not an eye that sees you but is a physician to comment on your malady.

Val. But tell me, dost thou know my lady

Silvia?

Speed. She that you gaze on so, as she sits at supper? Val. Hastthouobservedthat?evensheImean.

Speed. Why, sir, I know her not. Val. Dost thou know her by my gazing on her, and yet knowest her not?

Speed. Is she not hard favoured, sir? Val. Not so fair, boy, as well favoured. Speed. Sir, I know that well enough.

Val. What dost thou know? Speed. That she is not so fair as (of you) well favoured.

Val. I mean that her beauty is exquisite, but her favour infinite.

Speed. That's because the one is painted and the other out of all count.

Val. How painted? and how out of count? Speed. Marry, sir, so painted, to make her fair, that no man counts of her beauty.

Val. How esteemest thou me? I account of her beauty.

Speed. You never saw her since she was deformed.

Val. How long hath she been deformed? Speed. Ever since you loved her.

Val. I have loved her ever since I saw her; and still I see her beautiful.

Speed. If you love her, you cannot see her.

Val. Why Speed. Because love is blind. O that you had mine eyes; or your own eyes had the lights they were wont to have when you chid at Sir Proteus for going ungartered!

Val. What should I see then?

Speed. Your own present folly and her passing deformity; for he, being in love, could not see to garter his hose; and you, being in love, cannot see to put on your hose.

Val. Belike, boy, then you are in love: for last morning you could not see to wipe my shoes.

Speed. True, sir; I was in love with my bed; I thank you, you swinged me for my love, which makes me the bolder to chide you for yours.

Val. In conclusion, I stand affected to her. Speed. I would you were set; so your affec- .

tion would cease. Val. Last night she enjoined me to write some lines to one she loves. Speed. And have you?

Val. I have.

Speed. Are they not lamely writ? Val. No, boy, but as well as I can do them;-Peace; here she comes.

Speed. O excellert motion! O exceeding puppetl now will he interpret to her.

Enter SILVIA.

Val. Madam and mistress, a thousand goodmorrows.

Speed. O, give you good even!-Here's a million of manners. Aside.

Sil. Sir Valentine and servant, to you two

Speed. He should give her interest, and she gives it to him. [Aside. Val. Asyou enjoin'd me, I have writ your letter Unto the secret nameless friend of yours; Which I was much unwilling to proceed in But for my duty to your ladyship.

Sil. I thank you, gentle servant; 'tis very clerkly done.

Val. Now trust me madam, it came hardly off; For being ignorant to whom it goes

I writ at random, very doubtfully. Sil. Perchance you think too much of so much

Val. No, madam; so it stead you, I will write, Please you command, a thousand times as much: And yet;

Sil. A pretty period! Well, I guess the sequel; And yet I will not name it:—and yet I care not: And yet take this again; - and yet I thank you; Meaning henceforth to trouble you no more.

Speed. And yet you will; and yet another yet. Aside.

Val. What means your ladyship? do you not like it?

Sil. Yes, yes; the lines are very quaintly writ: But since unwillingly, take them again; [Gives back the letter. Nay, take them.

Val. Madam, they are for you. Sil. Ay, ay, you writ them, sir, at my request; But I will none of them; they are for you: I would have had them writ more movingly.

Val. Please you, I'll write your ladyship another. [ove another. [over; Sil. And when it's writ, for my sake read it And if it please you, so; if not, why, so.

Val. If it please me, madam! what then? Sil. Why, if it please you, take it for your labour.

And so good morrow, servant. [Exil Silvia. Speed. O jest unseen, inscrutable, invisible, As a nose on a man's face, or a weather-cock on a steeple!

My master sues to her; and she hath taught her suitor,

He being her pupil, to hecome her tutor.

Dexcellent device! was there ever heard a better?

That my master, heing scribe, to himself should write the etter?

Val. How now, sir? what are you reasoning with yourself?

Speed. Nay, I was thyming: 'tis you that have he reason.

Val. To do what?

Speed. To be a spokes man from Madam Silvia? Val. To whom?

Speed. To yourself: why, she woos you by a figure.

Val. What figure?

Speed. By a letter, I should say. Val. Why, she hath not writ to me?

Speed. What need she when she hath made you write to yourself? Why, do you not perceive Val. No, believe me. [the jest?

Speed. No believing you indeed, sir. But did you perceive her earnest?

Val. She gave me none except an angry word. Speed. Why, she hath given you a letter. Val. That's the letter I writ to her friend. Speed. And that letter hath she deliver'd, and there an end.

Val. I would it were no worse.

Speed. I'll warrant you 'tis as well. For often you have writ to her; and she, in modesty,

Or else for want of idle time, could not again

Or else for want of idle time, could not again reply;

Or fearing else some messenger that might her mind discover, (her lover.— Herself hath taught her love himself to write unto Herself hath taught her love himself to write unto All this I speak in print, for in print I found it.— Why muse you, sir? 'tis dinner time.

Val. I have dined.

Speed. Ay, but hearken, sir; though the cameleon Love can feed on the air, I am one that am nourished by my victuals, and would fain have meat; O, be not like your mistress; he moved, be moved.

[Execunt.

Scene II.—Verona. A Room in Julia's House.

Enter PROTEUS and JULIA.

Pro. Have patience, gentle Julia.

Iul. I must, where is no remedy.

Pro. When possibly I can I will return.

Iul. If you turn not you will return the sooner:

Keep this remembrance for thy Julia's sake.
[Giving a ring.
Pro. Why, then, we'll make exchange has

Pro. Why, then, we'll make exchange; here, take you this.

Jul. And seal the bargain with a holy kiss. Pro. Here is my hand for my true constancy; And when that hour o'erslips me in the day Wherein I sigh not, Julia, for thy sake, The next ensuing hour some foul mischance Torment me for my love's forgetfulness! My father stays my coming; answer not: The tide is now: nay, not thy tide of tears; That tide will stay me longer than I should:

Julia, farewell.—What! gone without a word?
Ay; so true love should do: it cannot speak;
For truth bath hetter deeds than words to grace it.

Enter PANTHINO.

Pan. Sir Proteus, you are stay'd for.
Pro. Go; I come, I come:—
Alas! this parting strikes poor lovers dumh.
[Exeunt.

Scene III .- The same. A Street.

Enter LAUNCE, leading a dog.

Laun. Nay, 'twill he this hour ere I have done weeping; all the kind of the Launces have this very fault: I have received my proportion, like the prodigious son, and am going with Sir Proteus to the Imperial's court. I think Crab my dog be the sourest-natured dog that lives: my mother weeping, my father wailing, my sister crying, our maid howling, our cat wringing her hands, and all our house in a great perplexity; yet did not this cruel-hearted cur shed one tear: he is a stone, a very pebble stone, and has no more pity in him than a dog: a Jew would have wept to have seen our parting; why, my grandam having no eyes, look you, wept herself blind at my parting. Nay, I'll show you the manner of it: this shoe is my father; -no, this left shoe is my father;-no, no, this left shoe is my mother; nay, that cannot be so neither; yes; it is so, it is so; it hath the worser sole. This shoe with the hole in it is my mother, and this my A vengeance on 't! there 'tis. Now, father. sir, this staff is my sister; for, look you, she is as white as a lily and as small as a wand; this hat is Nan our maid; I am the dog:-no, the dog is himself, and I am the dog,—O, the dog is me, and I am myself; ay, so, so. Now come I to my father; Father, your blessing; -now should not the shoe speak a word for weeping; now should I kiss my father; well, he weeps on: -now come I to my mother (O, that she could speak now!) like a wood woman;—well, I kiss her:—why there 'tis; here's my mother's breath up and down; now come I to my sister; mark the moan she makes: now the dog all this while sheds not a tear, nor speaks a word; hut:see how I lay the dust with my tears.

Enter PANTHINO.

Pan. Launce, away, away ahoard; thy master is shipped, and thou art to post after with oars. What's the matter! why weep'st thou, man? Away, ass; you will lose the tide if you tarry any longer.

Laun. It is no matter if the tied were lost; for it is the unkindest tied that ever man tied. Pon. What's the unkindest tide?

ldog. Laun. Why, he that's tied here: Crab, my Pan. Tut, man; I mean thou'lt lose the flood: and, in losing the flood, lose thy voyage; and, in losing thy voyage, lose thy master; and in losing thy master, lose thy service; and, in losing thy service,—Why dost thou stop my mouth?

Laun. For fear thou shouldst lose thy tongue.
Pon. Where should I lose my tongue?

Laun. In thy tale. Pan. In thy tale?

Laun. Lose the tide, and the voyage, and the aster, and the service? The tide! Why, master. man, if the river were dry, I am able to fill it with my tears; if the wind were down, I could drive the boat with my sighs.

Pan. Come, come away, man; I was sent to call thee.

Laun. Sir, call me what thou darest. Pon. Wilt thou go?

Laun. Well, I will go. Exeunt.

Scene IV .- Milan. An Abortment in the DUKE'S Poloce.

Enter VALENTINE, SILVI Silvia, THURIO. and Sil. Servant-Vol. Mistress?

Speed. Master, Sir Thurio frowns on you.

Vol. Ay, boy, it's for love. Speed. Not of you.

Vol. Of my mistress, then. Speed. 'Twere good you knocked him.

Sil. Servant, you are sad. Vol. Indeed, madam, I seem so.

Thu. Seem you that you are not? Vol. Haply I do.

Thu. So do counterfeits.

Vol. So do you.

Thu. What seem I that I am not? Vol. Wise.

Thu. What instance of the contrary? Vol. Your folly.

Thu. And how quote you my folly?
Vol. I quote it in your jerkin.
Thu. My jerkin is a doublet.
Vol. Well, then, I'll double your folly.

Thu. How?

Sil. What, angry, Sir Thurio? do you change

Colour? Vol. Give him leave, madam: he is a kind of cameleon.

Thu. That hath more mind to feed on your blood than live in your air.

Vol. You have said, sir.

Thu. Ay, sir, and done too, for this time.
Vol. I know it well, sir; you always end ere you begin. [quickly shot off.

Sil. A fine volley of words, gentlemen, and Vol. 'Tis indeed, madam; we thank the giver.

Sil. Who is that, servant?

Vol. Yourself, sweet lady; for you gave the fire. Sir Thurio borrows his wit from your ladyship's looks, and spends what he borrows kindly in your company.

Thu. Sir, if you spend word for word with me. I shall make your wit bankrupt.

Val. I know it well, sir; you have an exchequer of words, and, I think, no other treasure to give your followers; for it appears by their bare liveries that they live by your bare words. Sil. No more, gentlemen, no more; here comes my father.

Enter DUKE.

Duke. Now, daughter Silvia, you are hard beset.

Sir Valentine, your father's in good health: What say you to a letter from your friends Of much good news?

My lord, I will be thankful To any happy messenger from thence.

Duke. Know you Don Antonio, your countryman? man

Val. Ay, my good lord; I know the gentle-To be of worth, and worthy estimation,

And not without desert so well reputed. Duke. Hath he not a son?

serves Val. Ay, my good lord; a son that well de-The honour and regard of such a father.

Duke. You know him well?

Vol. Iknewhimasmyself; for from our infancy We have conversed and spent our hours together: And though myself have been an idle truent.

Omitting the sweet benefit of time

To clothe mine age with angel-like perfection. Yet hath Sir Proteus-for that's his name-Made use and fair advantage of his days; His years but young, but his experience old; His head unmellow'd, but his judgment ripe;

And, in a word,—for far behind his worth Come all the praises that I now bestow,--He is complete in feature and in mind,

With all good grace to grace a gentleman.

Duke. Beshrew me, sir, but if he make this He is as worthy for an empress' love As meet to be an emperor's counsellor. Well, sir; this gentleman is come to me, With commendation from great potentates And here he means to spend his time awhile:

I think 'tis no unwelcome news to you. Vol. Should I have wished a thing it had been Duke. Welcome him, then, according to his worth;

Silvia, I speak to you; and you, Sir Thurio:-For Valentine, I need not 'cite him to it: I'll send him hither to you presently.

Vol. This is the gentleman I told your ladyship Had come along with me, but that his mistress

Did hold his eyes lock'd in her crystal looks. Sil. Belike that now she hath enfranchised Upon some other pawn for fealty.

Vol. Nay, sure, I think she holds them prisoners still. [blind.

Sil. Nay, then, he should be blind; and, being How could be see his way to seek out you?

Val. Why, lady, love hath twenty pairs of eyes. Thu. They say that love hath not an eye at all. Val. To see such lovers, Thurio, as yourself; Upon a homely object love can wink.

Enter PROTEUS.

Sil. Have done, have done; here comes the gentleman. [seech you Vol. Welcome, dear Proteus!—Mistress, Ibe-Confirm his welcome with some special favour. Sil. His worth is warrant for his welcome hither.

If this be he you oft have wish'd to hear from.

Val. Mistress, it is: sweet lady, entertain him

To he my fellow-servant to your ladyship.

Sil. Too low a mistress for so high a servant.

Sil. 100 low a mistress for so high a servant.

Pro. Notso, sweetlady; hut too mean a servant

To have a look of such a worthy mistress.

Val. Leave off discourse of disability:—

Val. Leave off discourse of disability:—
Sweet lady, entertain him for your servant.
Pro. My duty will I boast of, nothing else.
Sil. And duty never yet did want his meed.
Servant, you are welcome to a worthless mistress.
Pro. I'll die on him that says so but yourself.
Sil. That you are welcome?
Pro. No; that you are worthless.

Enter Servant.

Ser. Madam, my lord your father would speak with you.

Sil. I'll wait upon his pleasure. [Exit Servant. Come, Sir Thurio, Go with me.—Once more, new servant, welcome.

I'll leave you to confer of home affairs;
When you have done we look to hear from you.
Pro. We'll both attend upon your ladyship.

Pro. We'll both attend upon your ladyship.

[Exeunt Sil., Thu., and Speed.
Val. Now, tell me, how do all from whence you came? [much commended.
Pro. Your friends are well, and have them Val. And how do yours?

Pro. I left them all in health.

Val. How does your lady? and how thrives your love?

Pro. My tales of love were wont to weary you;

I know you joy not in a love discourse.

Val. Ay, Proteus; but that life is alter'd now:
I have done penance for contemning love;
Whose high imperious thoughts have punish'd me
With bitter fasts, with penitential groans,
With nightly tears, and daily heart-sore sighs;
For, in revenge of my contempt of love,
Love hath chased sleep from my enthralled eyes,
'and made them watchers of mine own heart's sorrow.

O, gentle Proteus, love's a mighty lord;
And hath so humbled me, as I confess,
Fhere is no woe to his correction,
Nor, to his service, no such joy on earth!
Now no discourse, except it he of love;
Now can I break my fast, dine, sup, and sleep,
Upon the very naked name of love.

Pro. Enough; I read your fortune in your eye: Was this the idol that you worship so?

Val. Even she; and is she not a heavenly saint?
Pro. No; but she is an earthly paragon.
Val. Call her divine.

Pro. I will not flatter her.
Val. O, flatter me; for love delights in praises.

Pro. When I was sick you gave me bitter pills, And I must minister the like to you.

Val. Then speak the truth by her; if not divine,

Yet let her be a principality, Sovereign to all the creatures on the earth.

Pro. Except my mistress.

Val. Sweet, except not any,

Except thou wilt except against my love.

Pro. Have I not reason to prefer mine own?

Val. And I will help thee to prefer her too:

She shall he dignified with this high honour—

To bear my lady's train, lest the base earth

Should from her vesture chance to steal a kiss,

And, of so great a favour growing proud, Disdain to root the summer-swelling flower, And make rough winter everlastingly. (this?

Pro. Why, Valentine, what hraggardism is Val. Pardon me, Proteus: all I can is nothing To her whose worth makes other worthies She is alone.

Pro. Then let her alone.

Val. Not for the world; why, man, she is mine And I as rich in having such a jewel As twenty seas, if all their sand were pearl, The water nectar, and the rocks pure gold. Forgive me that I do not dream on thee Because thou seest me dote upon my love. My foolish rival, that her father likes Only for his possessions are so huge, Is gone with her along; and I must after, For love, thou know'st is full of jealousy.

Pro. But she loves you?

Val. Ay, we are hetroth'd:
Nay, more; our marriage hour,
With all the cunning manner of our flight,
Determined of: how I must climb her window,
The ladder made of cords; and all the means
Plotted and 'greed on for my happiness.
Good Proteus, go with me to my chamber,
In these affairs to aid me with thy counsel.
Pro. Go on before; I shall inquire you forth:

I must unto the road to disembark
Some necessaries that I needs must use;
And then I'll presently attend you.
Val. Will you make haste?

Pro. I will .-Exit VAL. Even as one heat another heat expels, Or as one nail by strength drives out another, So the remembrance of my former love Is by a newer object quite forgotten. Is it mine eye, or Valentinus' praise, Her true perfection, or my false transgression, That makes me, reasonless, to reason thus? She's fair; and so is Julia that I love, That I did love, for now my love is thaw'd; Which like a waxen image 'gainst a fire Bears no impression of the thing it was. Methinks my zeal to Valentine is cold. And that I love him not as I was wont: O! hut I love his lady too, too much; And that's the reason I love him so little. How shall I dote on her with more advice; That thus without advice begin to love her? 'Tis but her picture I have yet beheld, And that hath dazzled my reason's light; But when I look on her perfections There is no reason but I shall he hlind. If I can check my erring love, I will: If not, to compass her I'll use my skill. [Exit.

Scene V .- The same. A Street.

Enter SPEED and LAUNCE.

Speed. Launce! hy mine honesty, welcome

Laun. Forswear not thyself, sweet youth; for I am not welcome. I reckon this always—that a man is never undone till he he hanged; no never welcome to a place till some certain shot be paid and the hostess say, welcome.

Speed. Come on, you madcap; I'll to the ale-house with you presently; where, for one shot of fivepence, thou shalt have five thou-

But, sirrah, how did thy sand welcomes. master part with Madam Julia?

Speed. But shall she marry him?

Laun. No.

Speed. How, then? shall he marry her?

Laun. No, neither.

Speed. Why, then, how stands the matter with them?

Laun. Marry, thus; when it stands well with him it stands well with her. Sheed. What an ass art thou? I understand thee not.

Laun. What a block art thou, that thou;

My staff understands me. caust not! Speed. What thou say'st?

Laun. Ay, and what I do, too; look thee, I'll but lean, and my staff understands me.

Speed. It stands under thee, indeed. lone, Laun. Why, stand under and understand is all Speed. But tell me true, will't be a match? Loun. Ask my dog: if he say ay, it will; if he say no, it will; if he shake his tail and say nothing, it will.

Speed. The conclusion is, then, that it will. Speed. The conclusion is, then, that it will. Laun. Thou shalt never get such a secret from me but by a parable.

Speed. 'Tis well that I get it so. But, ! Launce, how say'st thou-that my master is! become a notable lover?

Laun. I never knew him otherwise. Speed. Then how?

Laun. A notable lubber as thou reportest him to be.

Speed. Why, thou whoreson ass, thou mistakest me

thy master.

Sheed. I tell thee, my master is become a hot lover Laun. Why, I tell thee I care not though he burn himself in love. If thou wilt go with me to the sie-house, so; if not, thou art an Hebrew, a Jew, and not worth the name of a Christian.

Speed. Why? Laun. Because thou hast not so much charity in thee as to go to the ale with a Christian. Wilt thou go?

Speed. At thy service.

Exeunt.

Scene VI.—The some. An Apartment in the Palace.

Enter PROTEUS.

Pro. To leave my Julia, shall I be forsworn; To love fair Silvia shall I be forsworn; To wrong my friend, I shall be much forsworn: And even that power which gave me first my oath Provokes me to this threefold perjury. Love bade me swear, and love bids me forswear; O sweet-suggesting love, if thou hast sinn'd, Teach me, thy tempted subject, to excuse it. At first I did adore a twinkling star, But now I worship a celestial sun. Unheedful vows may heedfully be broken; And he wants wit that wants resolved will To learn his wit to exchange the bad for better. Fie, fie, unreverend tonguel to call her bad, Whose sovereignty so oft thou has preferr'd With twenty-thousand-soul-confirming oaths. Laun. Marry, after they closed in earnest I cannot leave to love, and yet I do; they parted very fairly in jest.

But there I leave to love where I leave But there I leave to love where I should love. Julia I lose, and Valentine I lose: If I keep them, I needs must lose myself; If I lose them, thus find I by their loss, For Valentine, myself; for Julia, Silvia. Speed. What! are they broken?

Leun. No; they are both as whole as a fish. For love is still more precious in itself: !fair!-And Silvia-witness heaven, that made her Shows Julia but a swarthy Ethiope. I will forget that Julia is alive. Remembiring that my love to her is dead; And Valentine I'll hold an enemy, Aiming at Silvia as a sweeter friend. I cannot now prove constant to myself Without some treachery used to Valentine:-This night he meaneth with a corded ladder To climb celestial Silvia's chamber-window-Myself in counsel, his competitor: Now presently I'll give her father notice Of their disguising and pretended flight; Who, all enraged, will banish Valentine; For Thurio, he intends, shall wed his daughter: But, Valentine, being gone, I'll quickly cross, By some slytrick, blunt Thurio's dull proceeding. Love, lend me wings to make my purpose swift. As thon hast lent me wit to plot this drift! Exit, > SCENE VIL-VERONA. A Room in Julia's House.

Enter JULIA and LUCETTA.

Jul. Counsel, Incetta! gentle girl, assist me! And, even in kind love, I do conjure thee,— Who art the table wherein all my thoughts Are visibly character'd and engraved,-To lesson me; and tell me some good mean, Laun. Why, fool, I meant not thee, I meant How, with my honour, I may undertake A journey to my loving Proteus.

Luc. Alas! the way is wearisome and long. Jul. A true-devoted pilgrim is not weary To measure kingdoms with his feeble steps Much less shall she that hath love's wings to fig. And when the flight is made to one so dear, Of such divine perfection, as Sir Proteus.

Luc. Better forbear till Proteus make return. Jul. O, know'st thou not his looks are my soul's food? Pity the dearth that I have pined in By longing for that food so long a time. Didst thou but know the inly touch of love, Thou wouldst as soon go kindle fire with snow As seek to quench the fire of love with words.

Luc. I do not seek to quench your love's hot But qualify the fire's extreme rage, Lest it should burn above the bounds of reason.

Jul. The more thou damm'st it up, the more it burns; The current that with gentle murmur glides. Thou know'st, being stopp'd, impetiently doth rage; But when his fair course is not hindered He makes sweet music with the enamell'd stones, Giving a gentle kiss to every sedge He overtaketh in his pilgrimage; And so by many winding nooks he strays, With willing sport, to the wild ocean. Then let me go, and hinder not my course:

I'll be as patient as a gentle stream, And make a pastime of each weary step, Till the last step have brought me to my love; And there I'll rest as, after much turmoil, A blessed soul doth in Elysium.

Luc. But in what habit will you go along?

Jul. Not like a woman; for I would prevent
The loose encounters of lascivious men;
Gentle Lucetta, fit me with such weeds
As may be seem some well-reputed page. [hair.

Luc. Why, then, your ladyship must cut your Jul. No, girl; I'll knit it up in silken strings, With twenty odd-conceited true-love knots:

To be fantastic may become a youth

Of greater time than I shall show to be.

Luc. What fashion, madam, shall I make your breeches? [lord,
Jul. That fits as well as—" Tell me, good my
What compass will you wear your farthingale?"
Why, even that fashion thou best lik'st, Lucetta.
Luc. You must needs have them with a cod-piece, madam.

Jul. Out, out, Lucetta! that will be ill-favour'd.

Luc. A round hose, madam, now's not worth a pin,

Unless you have a cod-piece to stick pins on.
Jul. Lucetta, as thou lov'st me, let me have
What thou think'st meet, and is most mannerly:
But tell me, wench, how will the world repute me
For undertaking so unstaid a journey?

I fear me it will make me scandaliz'd. Igo not.
Luc. If you think so, then stay at home, and
Jul. Nay, that I will not.

Luc. Then never dream on infamy, but go. If Proteus like your journey when you come, No matter who's displeas'd when you are gone: I fear me he will scarce be pleased withal.

Jul. That is the least, Lucetta, of my fear: A thousand oaths, an ocean of his tears, And instances as infinite of love, Warrant me welcome to my Proteus.

Luc. All these are servante to deceitful men.

Jul. Basemen, that use them to so base effect!

But truer stars did govern Proteus' birth:

His words are bonds, his oaths are oracles;

His love sincere, his thoughts immaculate;

His tears pure messengers sent from his heart;

His heart as far from fraud as heaven from earth.

Luc. Pray heaven he prove so when you come to him! [wrong, Jul. Now, as thou lov'st me, do him not that To bear a hard opinion of his truth; Only deserve my love by loving him,

To bear a hard opinion of his truth;
Only deserve my love by loving him,
And presently go with me to my chamber,
To take a note of what I stand in need of
To furnish me upon my longing journey.
All that is mine I leave at thy dispose,
My goods, my lands, my reputation;
Only, in lieu thereof, dispatch me hence:
Come, answer not, but to it presently;
I am impatient of my tarriance. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

Scene I.—Milan. An Ante-room in the Duke's Palace.

Enter Duke, Thurio, and Proteus.

Duke. Sir Thurio, give us leave, I pray, awhile; We have some secrets to confer about.

[Exil Thurso.

Now, tell me, Proteus, what's your will with me?

Pro. My gracious lord, that which I would idiscover,
The law of friendship bids me to conceal;

The law of friendship bids me to conceal;
But, when I call to mind your gracious favours
Done to me, undeserving as I am,
My duty pricks me on to utter that Which else no worldly good should draw from Know, worthy prince, Sir Valentine, my friend,
This night intends to steal away your daughter;
Myself am one made privy to the plot.
I know you have determined to bestow her
On Thurio, whom your gentle daughter hates;
And should she thus be stolen away from you,
It would be much vexation to your age.
Thus, for my duty's sake, I rather chose
To cross my friend in his intended drift,
Than, by concealing it, heap on your head
A pack of sorrows, which would press you down,

Being unprevented, to your timeless grave.

Duke. Proteus, I thank thee for thine honest care:

Which to requite, command me while I live. This love of theirs myself have often seen, Haply when they have judged me fast asleep; And oftentimes have purposed to forbid Sir Valentine her company and my court; But, fearing lest my jealous aim might err, And so, unworthily, disgrace the man,—A rashness that I ever yet have shunn'd,—I gave him gentle looks; thereby to find That which thyself hast now disclos'd to me, And, that thou may'st perceive my fear of this, Knowing that tender youth is soon suggested, I nightly lodge her in an upper tower, The key whereof myself have ever kept; And thence she cannot be conveyed away, imean

Pro. Know, noble lord, they have devised a How he her chamber-window will ascend, And with a corded ladder fetch her down; For which the youthful lover now is gone, And this way comes he with it presently; Where, if it please you, you may intercept him. But, good my lord, do it so cunningly, That my discovery be not aimed at; For love of you, not hate unto my friend, Hath made me publisher of this pretence.

Duke. Upon mine honour, he shall never know That I had any light from thee of this. Pro. Adieu, my lord; Sir Valentine is coming. [Exit.

Enter VALENTINE.

Duke. Sir Valentine, whither away so fast?
Val. Please it your grace, there is a messenger
That stays to bear my letters to my friends,
And I am going to deliver them.

Duke. Be they of much import?

Val. The tenor of them doth but signify
My health and happy being at your court.

Duke. Nay, then, no matter; stay with me awhile;

I am to break with thee of some affairs That touch menear, wherein thou must be secret. 'Tis not unknown to thee that I have sought To match my friend, Sir Thurio, to my daughter.

Val. I know it well, my lord; and, sure, the match [man]
Were rich and honourable; besides, the gentle-

Is full of virtue, hounty, worth, and qualities Beseeming such a wife as your fair daughter: Cannot your grace win her to fancy him?

Duke. No, trust me; she is peevish, sullen, froward,

Proud, disobedient, stuhhorn, lacking duty;
Neither regarding that she is my child
Nor fearing me as if I were her father:
And, may I say to thee, this pride of hers,
Upon advice, hath drawn my love from her;
And, where I thought the remnant of mine age
Should have heen cherished by her child-like duty,

I am now full resolved to take a wife, And turn her out to who will take her in: Then let her heauty he her wedding-dower; For me and my possession she esteems not.

or me and my possession she esteems not.

Vol. What would your grace have me to do in this?

Duke. There is a lady, sir, in Milan, here, Whom I affect; hut she is nice, and coy, And nought esteems my aged eloquence: Now, therefore, would I have thee to mytutor,—For long agone I have forgot to court: Besides, the fashion of the time is chang'd;—How and which way I may hestow myself. To he regarded in her sun-hright eye.

Vol. Win her with gifts, if she respect not words; Dumh jewels often, in their silent kind, More than quick words do move a woman's mind.

Duke. But she did scorn a present that I sent her. [contents her: Val. A woman sometimes scorns what hest]

Val. A woman sometimes scorns what hest Send her another; never give her o'er; For scorn at first makes after-love the more. If she do frown, 'tis not in hate of you, But rather to heget more love in you: If she do chide, 'tis not to have you gone; For why, the fools are mad if left alone. Take no repulse whatever she doth say: For, get you gone, she doth not mean away: Flatter and praise, commend, extol their graces; Thoughne'ersoblack, saytheyhaveangels'faces. That man that hath a tongue, I say, is no man. If with his tongue he cannot win a woman.

Duke. But she I mean is promised by her friends

Duke. Now, as thou art a gentleman of blood, Advise me where I may have such a ladder.

Val. When would you use it? pray, sir, tell me that.

Duke. This very night; for love is like a child, I fly not death to fly his deadly doe: That longs for everything that he can come hy. Tarry I here I but attend on death; Val. By seven o'clock I'll get you such a ladder. But fly I hence I fly away from life.

Duke. But, hark thee; I will go to her alone; How shall I hest convey the ladder thither? Vol. It will he light, my lord, that you may hear it

I pray thee, let me feel thy cloak upon me.— What letter is this same? What's here?—To Silvio?

And here an engine fit for my proceeding!
I'll he so hold to break the seal for once. [Reods.
My thoughts do horbour with my Silvio nightly;
And sloves they ore to me, that send themflying.
O, could their moster come and go as lightly,

Himself wouldlodge where senseless they ore lying.

My herold thoughts in thy pure bosom rest them, While I, their king, thot thither them importune, Do curse the groce thot with such groce hoth bless'd them, Because myself do want my servants' fortune: I cutse myself, for they are sent by me, That they should horbour where their lord should be.

What's here? Silvio, this night I will enfronchise thee: 'Tis so; and here's the ladder for the purpose Why, Phaeton,-for thon art Merops' son,-Wilt thou aspire to guide the heavenly car, And with thy daring folly hurn the world? Wilt thou reach stars because they shine on thee? Go, hase intruder! over-weening slave! Bestow thy fawning smiles on equal mates; And think my patience, more than thy desert, Is privilege for thy departure hence: Thank me for this, more than for all the favours Which, all too much, I have hestow'd on thee. But if thou linger in my territories Longer than swiftest expedition Will give thee time to leave our royal court. By heaven, my wrath shall far exceed the love I ever hore my daughter or thyself.

Begone, I will not hear thy vain excuse,
But, as thou lov'st thy life, make speed from hence. [Exit DUKE.

Val. And why not death, rather than living torment?

To die is to be hanish'd from myself; And Silvia is myself: hanish'd from her Is self from self: a deadly hanishmentl What light is light if Silvia he not seen? What joy is joy if Silvia he not hy? Unless it he to think that she is hy, And feed upon the shadow of perfection. Except I be by Silvia in the night There is no music in the nightingale; Unless I look on Silvia in the day There is no day for me to look upon: She is my essence; and I leave to be, If I be not by her fair influence Foster'd, illumined, cherish'd, kept alive. I fly not death to fly his deadly doom: Tarry I here I but attend on death;

Enter PROTEUS and LAUNCE.

Pro. Run, boy, run, run, and seek him out. Laun. So-ho! so-ho!

Pro. What seest thou?

Laun. Him we go to find: there's not a hair in's head but 'tis a Valentine.

Pro. Valentine?
Val. No.
Pro. Who then? his spirit?

Val. Neither.

Pro. What then? Val. Nothing.

[strike? Laun. Can nothing speak? master, shall I

Pro. Whom wouldst thou strike?

Laun. Nothing. Pro. Villain, forbear. [you,--] a word.

io much of bad already hath possess'd them. Pro. Then in dumb silence will I bury mine, for they are harsh, untuneable, and bad. Val. Is Silvia dead?

Pro. No, Valentine.
Val. No Valentine, indeed, for sacred Silvia!-Iath she forsworn me?

Pro. No, Valentine. [me!-

Vhat is your news? Laun. Sir, there's a proclamation that you are vanish'd. Pro. That thou art banished; O, that's the rom hence, from Silvia, and from me thy friend.

Val. O, I have fed upon this woe already, and now excess of it will make me surfeit.

Joth Silvia know that I am banished? Pro. Ay, Ay; and she hath offer'd to the doom,-Vhich, unreversed, stands in effectual force,-I sea of melting pearl, which some call tears: 'hose at her father's churlish feet she tender'd Vith them, upon her knees, her humble self; Vringing her hands, whose whiteness so became them,

Val. No more; unless the next word that thou speak'st lave some malignant power upon my life: so, I pray thee, breath it in mine ear, s ending anthem of my endless dolour. [help, Pro. Cease to lament for that thou canst not nd study help for that which thou lament'st. ime is the nurse and breeder of all good. lere if thou stay thou canst not see thy love; esides, thy staying will abridge thy life: lope is a lover's staff; walk hence with that, nd manage it against despairing thoughts. 'hy letters may be here though thou art hence: Thich, being writ to me, shall be deliver'd ven in the milk-white bosom of thy love.

The time now serves not to expostulate: Come, I'll convey thee through the city gate: And, ere I part with thee, confer at large Of all that may concern thy love affairs:
As thou lov'st Silvia, though not for thyself,
Regard thy danger, and along with me.
Val. I pray thee, Launce, an if thou seest my boy, Bid him make haste and meet me at the north Pro. Go, sirrah, find him out. Come. Valentine.

Val. O my dear Silvia, hapless Valentine! [Exeunt VAL. and PRO.

Laun. I am but a fool, look you; and yet I have the wit to think my master is a kind of knave: but that's all one if he be but one knave. He lives not now that knows me to be in love: Laun. Why, sir, I'll strike nothing: I pray yet I am in love; but a team of horse shall not Pro. Sirrah, I say, forbear: Friend Valentine, pluck that from me; nor who 'tis I love, and Igood news, | yet 'tis a woman: but what woman I will not Val. She hath more qualities than a water-spaniel,-which is much in a bare Christian. Here is the cat-log [Pulling out a paper] of her conditions. Imprimis, She can fetch and carry. Why, a horse can do no more: nay, a horse cannot fetch, but only carry: therefore is she better than a jade. Item, She can milk; look you, a sweet virtue in a maid with clean hands.

Enter Speed.

Speed. How now, Signior Launce? what news with your mastership?

Laun. Withmymaster's ship? why, it is at sea. Speed. Well, your old vice still; mistake the word.

What news, then, in your paper? [heard'st. Laun. The blackest news that ever thou Speed. Why, man, how black?
Laun. Why, as black as ink.

Speed. Let me read them. read. Laun. Fie on thee, jolthead; thou canst not Speed. Thou liest, I can. Laun. I will try thee: Tell me this: Who begot thee? Speed. Marry, the son of my grandfather. Laun. O illiterate loiterer! it was the son of thy grandmother: this proves that thou canst not read. Speed. Come, fool, come: try me in thy paper.

Laun. There; and St. Nicholas be thy speedl Speed. Imprimus, She can milk.

Laun. Ay, that she can.

Speed. Item, She brews good ale.
Laun. And thereof comes the proverb,—
Blessing of your heart, you brew good ale.
Speed. Item, She can sew.
Laun. That's as much as to say, can she so?

Speed. Item, She can knit. Loun. What need a man care for a stock with a wench, when she can knit him a stock. Speed. Item, She can wash and scour.

Laun. A special virtue; for then she need not be washed and scoured. Speed. Item, She can spin.

Laun. Then may I set the world on wheels, when she can spin for her living.

Speed. Item, She hath many nameless virtues. Loun. That's as much as to say, hastard virtues; that, indeed, know not their fethers, and therefore have no names.

Speed. Here follow her vices.

Laun. Close at the heels of her virtues. Speed. Item, She is not to be kissed fasting, in respect of her breath.

Laun. Well, that fault may be mended with a breakfast. Read on.

Speed. Item, She hath a sweet mouth.

Laun. That makes amends for her sour breath. Speed. Item, She doth talk in her sleep.

Loun. It's no matter for that, so she sleep not in her talk.

Speed. Item, She is slow in words.

Laun. O villain, that set this down among her vices! To be slow in words is a woman's only virtue: I pray thee, out with 't; and place ! it for her chief virtue.

Speed. Item, She is proud.

Laun. Out with that too: it was Eve's legacy, and cannot be ta'en from her.

Speed. Item, She hath no teeth.

Laun. I care not for that neither, because I love crusts.

Speed, Item, She is curst.

Laun. Well; the best is, she hath no teeth to bite.

. Speed. Item, She will often praise her liquor. Laun. If her liquor be good, she shall: if she will not, I will; for good things should be praised.

Speed. Item, She is too liberal.

Laun. Of her tongue she cannot; for that's writ down she is slow of: of her purse she shall not; for that I'll keep shut; now of another thing she may; and that I cannot help. Well, proceed.

Speed. Item, She hath more hair than wit. and more faults than hairs, and more wealth than faults.

Laun. Stop there; I'll have her: she was mine, and not mine, twice or thrice in that last !

article. Rehearse that once more.

Speed. Item, She hath more hair than wit,-Laun. More hair than wit,—it may be; I'll prove it: The cover of the salt hides the salt, and therefore it is more than the salt; the hair that covers the wit is more than the wit; for the greater hides the less. What's next?

Speed.—And more faults than hairs,

Laun. That's monstrous: O, that that were! out!

Speed.—And more wealth than faults.
Laun. Why, that word makes the faults gracious. Well, I'll have her: and if it be a match, as nothing is impossible.

Speed. What then? Laun. Why, then will I tell thee,—that thy master stays for thee at the north gate.

Speed. For me?

Laun. For thee? sy: who art thou? he hath stay'd for a better man than thee.

Speed. And must I go to him? Laun. Thou must run to him, for thou hast stay'd solong that going will scarce serve the turn. Speed. Why didst not tell me sooner? 'pox As you in worth dispraise Sir Valentine. of your love-letters! Exit.

Loun. Now will be be swinged for resding my letter. An unmannerly slave that will thrust himself into secrets!-I'll after, to rejoice in the boy's correction.

Scene II.—The same. A Room in the DUKE'S Palace.

Enter Duke and Thurso; Proteus behind.

Duke. Sir Thurio, fear not but that she will love you

Now Valentine is banish'd from her sight. Thu. Since his exile she hath despised me most. Forsworn my company and rail'd at me. That I am desperate of obtaining her.

Duke. This weak impress of love is as a figure Trenched in ice; which with an hour's heat Dissolves to water and doth lose his form. A little time will melt her frozen thoughts, And worthless Valentine shall be forgot. How now, Sir Proteus? Is your countryman,

According to our proclamation, gone?

Pro. Gone, my good lord.
Duke, My daughter takeshi sgoing grievously. Pro. A little time, my lord, will kill that grief. Duke. So I believe; but Thurio thinks not so .-Proteus, the good conceit I hold of three. For thou hast shown some sign of good desert,

Makes me the better to confer with thee.

Pro. Longer than I prove loyal to your grace,
Let me not live to look upon your grace, leffect Duke. Thou know'st, how willingly, I would The match between Sir Thurio and my daughter.

Pro. I do, my lord.

Duke. And also I think, thou art not ignorant How she opposes her against my will.

Pro. She did, my lord, when Valentine was here.

Duke. Ay, and perversely she persevers so. What might we do to make the girl forget The love of Valentine and love Sir Thurio?

Pro. The hest way is to slander Valentine With falsehood, cowardice, and poor descent; Three things that women highly hold in hate. Duke. Ay, but she'll think that it is spoke in hate.

Pro. Ay, if his enemy deliver it: Therefore it must with circumstance, be spoken By one whom she esteemeth as his friend. thim.

Duke. Then you must undertake to slander Pro. And that, my lord, I shall he loth to do: 'Tis an ill office for a gentleman;

Especially against his very friend. [tage him Duke. Where your good word cannot advan-

Your slander never can endamage him; Therefore, the office is indifferent,

Thu. Therefore, as you unwind her love from him.

Lest it should ravel, and be good to none, You must provide to bottom it on me: Which must be done by praising me as much

Duke. And, Proteus, we dere trust you in this kind;

Because we know, on Valentine's report, You are already love's firm votary, And cannot soon revolt and change your mind. Upon this warrant shall you have access. Where you with Silvia may confer at large; For she is lumpish, heavy, melancholy, And, for your friend's sake, will be glad of you; Where you may temper her by your persuasion To hate young Valentine and love my friend.

Pro. As much as I can do I will effect: But you, Sir Thurio, are not sharp enough: You must lay lime to tangle her desires By wailful sonnets, whose composed rhymes Should be full fraught with serviceable vows. Duke. Ay, much the force of heaven-bred poesy.

Pro. Say that upon the altar of her beauty You sacrifice your tears, your sighs, your heart; Write till your ink be dry; and with your tears Moist it again; and frame some feeling line That may discover such integrity: For Orpheus' lute was strung with poets' sinews; Whose golden touch could soften steel and stones. Make tigers tame and hugh leviathans Forsake unsounded deeps to dance on sands, After your dire lamenting elegies, Visit by night your lady's chamber-window With some sweet concert: to their instruments Tune a deploring dump; the night's dead silence Will well become such sweet complaining griev-practice: Thu. And thy advice this night I'll put in Therefore, sweet Proteus, my direction-giver, Let us into the city presently To sort some gentlemen well skill'd in music:

I have a sonnet that will serve the turn To give the onset to thy good advice. Duke. About it, gentlemen.

[supper: Pro. We'll wait upon your grace till after And afterward determine our proceedings. Duke. Even now about it; I will pardon you. Exeunt.

ACT IV.

Scene 1 .- A Forest neur MANTUA.

Enter certain Outlaws.

1. Out. Fellows, stand fast; I see a passenger. 2 Out. If there be ten, shrink not, but down with 'em.

Enter VALENTINE and SPEED. 3 Out. Stand, sir, and throw us that you have about you;

If not, we'll make you sit, and rifle you. Speed. Sir, we are undonel these are the villains

That all the travellers do fear so much.

Val. My friends,-

1 Out. Whence came you? Val. From Milan.

3 Out. Have you long sojourn'd there? Val. Some sixteen months; and longer might have stay'd

If crooked fortune had not thwarted me. I Out. What! were you banish'd thence? Val. I was.

2 Out. For what offence? hearse: Val. For that which now torments me to re-I kill'd a man, whose death I much repent; But yet I slew him manfully in fight Without false vantage or base treachery

1 Out. We'll have him; sirs, a word. Speed. Master, be one of them: It is an honourable kind of thievery.

Val. Peace, villain! [take to? 2 Out. Tell us this. Have you anything to Val. Nothing but my fortune.

3 Out. Know, then, that some of us are gentle-Such as the fury of ungovern'd youth Thrust from the company of awful men: Myself was from Verona banish'd For practising to steal away a lady,

On silly women or poor passengers. 3 Out. No; we detest such vile base practises. Come, go with us, we'll bring thee to our crews, And show thee all the treasure we have got; Which, with ourselves, all rest at thy dispose. Exeunt. Scene II.—Milan. Court of the Palace.

Enter Proteus.

Pro. Already have I been false to Valentine, And now I must be as unjust to Thurio. Under the colour of commending him I have access my own love to prefer; But Silvia is too fair, too true, too holy, To be corrupted with my worthless gifts. When I protest true loyalty to her She twits me with my falsehood to my friend: When to her beauty I commend my vows She bids me think how I have been forsworn In breaking faith with Julia whom I loved: And, notwithstanding all her sudden quips, The least whereof would quell a lover's hope, Yet, spaniel-like, the more she spurns my love The more it grows, and fawneth on her still. But here comes Thurio: now must we to her window.

And give some evening music to her ear.

Enter Thurso and Musicians.

Thu. How now, Sir Proteus? are you crept before us? | llove

Pro. Ay, gentle Thurio; for you know that Will creep in service where it cannot go. [here. Thu. Ay, but I hope, sir, that you love not Pro. Sir, but I do; or else I would be hence. Thu. Whom? Silvia?

Pro. Ay, Silvia—for your sake. [men, Thu. I thank you for your own. Now, gentle-Let's tune, and to it lustily awhile.

Enter Host, at a distance; and Julia, in boy's clothes.

Host. Now, my young guest! methinks you're allycholly; I pray you, why is it?

Jul. Marry, mine host, because I cannot be merry.

Host. Come, we'll have you merry: I'll bring you where you shall hear music, and see the gentleman that you ask'd for.

Jul. But shall I hear him speak?

Host Av that you shall.

Host. Ay, that you shall. Jul. That will be music.

[Music plays.

Host. Harki harki

Jul. Is he among these?

Host. Ay; but peace, let's hear 'em.

SONG.

Who is Silvia? what is she,
That all our swains commend her?
Holy, fair, and wise is she,
The heavens such grace did lend her.
That she might admired be.
Is she kind as she is fair?
For beauty lives with kindoess:
Love doth to her eyes repair,
To help him of his blindness;
And, being help'd, inhabits there.
Then to Silvia, let us sing,
That Silvia is excelling;
She excels each mortal thing

Host. How now? are you sadder than you were before?

Upon the dull earth dwelling. To her let us garlands bring.

How do you, man! the music likes you not.

Jul. You mistake; the musician likes me not.

Host. Why, my pretty youth?

Jul. He plays false, father.

Host. How out of tune on the strings?

Jul. Not so; but yet false that he grieves my very heart-strings.

Host. You have a quick ear.

Jul. Ay, I would I were deafl it makes me have a slow heart.

Host. I perceive you delight not in music. Jul. Not a whit, when it jars so.

Host. Hark, what fine change is in the music. Jul. Av: that change is the spite.

Jul. Ay; that change is the spite.

Host. You would have them always play but one thing?

Jul. I would always have one play but one

But, host, doth this Sir Proteus, that we talk on, often resort unto this gentlewoman?

Host. I'll tell you what, Launce, his man, told me he loved her out of all nick.

Jul. Where is Launce?

Host. Gone to seek his dog; which, tomorrow, by his master's command, he must carry for a present to his lady.

Jul. Peace! stand aside! the company parts.

Pro. Sir Thurio, fear not you! I will so plead
That you shall say my cunning drift excels.

Thu. Where meet we? Pro. At Saint Gregory's well.

Thu. Farewell.

Exeunt Thurso and Musicians.

SILVIA appears above, at her window.

Pro. Madam, good even to your ladyship.
Sil. I thank you for your music, gentlemen:

Who is that that spake? (truth,
Pro. One, lady, if you knew his pure heart's You'd quickly learn to know him by his voice

Sil. Sir Proteus, as I take it. [vant. Pro. Sir Proteus, gentle lady, and your ser-

Sil. What is your will?

Pr. That I may compass yours.

Sil. You have your wish; my will is even this.—

That presently you hie you home to bed, Thou subtle, perjured, false, disloyal man! Think'st thou I am so shallow, so conceitless,

To be seduced by thy flattery,
That hast deceived so many with thy vows?
Return, return, and make thy love amends.
For me,—by this pale queen of night I swear
I am so far from granting thy request
That I despise thee for thy wrongful suit.
And by and by intend to chide myself

Even for this time, I spend in talking to thee.

Pro. I grant, sweet love, that I did love a
But she is dead.

[lady;

Jul. 'Twere false if I should speak it;

For I am sure she is not buried. [Aside. Sil. Say that she be; yet Valentine, thy friend Survives; to whom, thyself art witness.

I am betrothed. And art thou not ashamed To wrong him with thy importunacy?

Pro. I likewise hear that Valentine is dead. Sil. And so suppose am I: for in his grave Assure thyself my love is buried.

Pro. Sweet lady, let me rake it from the earth.
Sil. Go to thy lady's grave, and call hers
thence;

Or, at the least, in hers sepulchre thine.

Jul. He heard not that.

Pro. Madam, if your heart be so obdurate,
Vouchsafe me yet your picture for my love;
The picture that is hanging in your chamber;
To that I'll speak, to that I'll sigh and weep:

For, since the substance of your perfect self Is else devoted, I am but a shadow:
And to your shadow I will make true love.

And to your shadow I will make true love.

Jul. If 'twere a substance, you would, sure, deceive it,

And make it hut a shadow, as I am. [Aside. Sil. I am very loth to be your idol, sir; Bnt, since your falsehood shall hecome you well To worship shadows and adore false shapes, Send to me in the morning, and I'll send it: And so, good rest.

Pro. As wretches have o'er-night, That wait for execution in the morn.

[Exeunt PRO., and Stl., from above. Jul. Host, will you go?

Host. By my hallidom, I was fast asleep.
Jul. Pray you, where lies Sir Proteus?
Host. Marry, at my honse. Trust me, I think 'tis almost day.

Jul. Not so; but it hath heen the longest night That e'er I watch'd, and the most heaviest.

[Execunt.]

Scene III .- The same.

Enter EGLAMOUR.

Egl. This is the hour that Madam Silvia Entreated me to call and know her mind; There's some great matter she'd employ me in. Madam, madam!

SILVIA appears above, at her window.

Sil. Who calls?

Egl. Your servant and your friend;
One that attends your ladyship's command.

Sil. Sir Eglamour, a thousand times good

Egl. As many, worthy lady, to yourself.
According to your ladyship's impose,
I am thus early come to know what service
It is your pleasure to command me in.

It is your pleasure to command me in.
Sil. O Eglamour, thou art a gentleman,
Think not I flatter, for I swear I do not,— Valiant, wise, remorseful, well accomplish'd: Thou art not ignorant what dear good will I hear unto the banish'd Valentine: Nor how my father would enforce me marry Vain Thurio, whom my very soul ahhorr'd. Thyself hast loved; and I have heard thee say No grief did ever come so near thy heart As when thy lady and thy true love died, Upon whose grave thou vow'dst pure chastity. Sir Eglamour, I would go to Valentine. To Mantua, where I hear, he makes ahode; And, for the ways are dangerous to pass, I do desire thy worthy company, Upon whose faith and honour I repose. Urge not my father's anger, Eglamour, But think upon my grief, a lady's grief; And on the justice of my flying hence, To keep me from a most unholy match, Which heaven and fortune still reward with I do desire thee, even from a heart [plagues. As full of sorrows as the sea of sands, To bear me company, and go with me: If not, to hide what I have said to thee, That I may venture to depart alone.

Egl. Madam, I pity much your grievances; Which, since I know they virtuously are placed, I give consent to go along with you; Recking as little what betideth me As much I wish all good befortune you.

When will you go?

Sil. This evening coming. Egl. Where shall I meet you?

Sil. At Friar Patrick's cell, Where I intend holy confession.

Egl. 1 will not fail your ladyship: Good morrow, gentle lady.

Sil. Good morrow, kind Sir Eglamour.
[Exeunt.

Scene IV.—The same.

Enter LAUNCE, with his dog.

Laun. When a man's servant shall play the cur with him, look you, it goes hard: one that I hrought up of a puppy; one that I saved from drowning, when three or four of his blind hrothers and sisters went to it! I have taught him—even as one would say precisely. Thus I would teach a dog. I was sent to deliver him as a present to Mistress Silvia from my master; and I came no sooner into the dining-chamber hut he steps me to her trencher and steals her capon's leg. O, 'tis a foul thing when a cur cannot keep himself in all companies! I would have, as one should say, one that takes upon him to he a dog indeed, to he, as it were, a dog at all things. If I had not had more wit than he, to take a fault upon me that he did, I think verily he had heen hang'd for 't; sure as I live he had suffer'd for 't; you shall judge. He thrusts me himself into the company of three or four gentleman-like dogs under the duke's table: he had not been there-bless the mark -a pissing while, but all the chamber smelt him. Out with the dog, says one; What cur is that? says another; Whip him out, says a third; Hang him up, says the duke. I, having been acquainted with the smell before, knew it was Crab; and goes me to the fellow that whips the dogs: Friend, quoth I, you mean to whip the dog? Ay, marry do I, quoth I. he. You do him the more wrong, quoth I; 'twas I did the thing you wot of. He makes me no more ado, hut whips me out of the chamber. How many masters would do this for their servant? Nay, I'll he sworn, I have sat in the stocks for puddings he had stolen, otherwise he had heen executed: I have stood on the pillory for geese he hath killed, otherwise he had suffer'd for 't: thou thinkest not of this now!-Nay, I remember the trick you served me when I took my leave of Madam Silvia; did not I bid thee still mark me and do as I do? When didst thou see me heave up my leg and make water against a gentlewoman's farthingale? didst thou ever see me do such a trick?

Enter PROTEUS and JULIA.

Pro. Sehastian is thy name? I like thee well, And will employ thee in some service presently. Jul. In what you please:—I will do what I

Pro. I hope thou wilt.—How now, you whoreson peasant? [To LAUNCE. Where have you heen these two days loitering? Laun. Marry, sir, I carried Mistress Silvia the dog you hade me.

Pro. And what says she to my little jewel?

Laun. Marry, she says your dog was a cnr;

and tells you currish thanks is good enough for such a present.

Pro. But she received my dog?

Laun. No, indeed, she did not; bere have I brought him back again.

Pro. What! didst thou offer ber this from me? Laun. Ay, sir; the other squirrel was stolen from me hy the bangman's boys in the marketplace: and then I offer'd her mine own; who is a dog as hig as ten of yours, and therefore the gift the greater.

Pro. Go, get thee hence and find my dog again,

Or ne'er return again into my sight. Away, I say. Stay'st thou to vex me here? A slave, that still an end turns me to shame.

Exit LAUNCE.

Sebastian, I have entertain'd thee, Partly that I have need of such a youth That can with some discretion do my husiness. For 'tis no trusting to youd foolish lout; But, chiefly, for thy face and thy behaviour, Which-if my augury deceive me not-Witness good hringing up, fortune, and truth: Therefore, know thou, for this I entertain thee. Go presently, and take this ring with thee, Deliver it to Madam Silvia: She loved me well deliver'd it to me. itoken:

Jul. It seems you loved not ber, to leave ber

Jul. It seems. She's dead, belike. Not so: I think she lives.

Pro. Why dost thou cry, Alas!
Jul. I cannot choose hut pity her.

Pro. Wherefore shouldst thou pity her?

Jul. Because, methinks, that she loved you as well

As you do love your lady Silvia:

She dreams on him that has forgot her love; You dote on her that cares not for your love. 'Tis pity love should be so contrary: And thinking on it makes me cry, Alas!

Pro. Well, give her that ring, and there-withal This letter;—that's her chamher.—Tell my lady I claim the promise for her heavenly

Your message done hie home unto my chamber, Where thou shalt find me sad and solitary.

Exit PROTEUS.

Jul. How many women would do such a message?

Alas, poor Proteus! thou hast entertain'd A fox to he the shepherd of thy lambs; Alas, poor fool! why do I pity him That with his very heart despiseth me? Because he loves her, he despiseth me; Because I love him, I must pity him. This ring I gave him, when be parted from me, To bind him to remember my good will: And now am I-unhappy messenger-To plead for that which I would not obtain; To carry that which I would have refused; To praise his faith, which I would have dis-praised. I am my master's true confirmed love. But cannot he true servant to my master Unless I prove false traitor to myself. Yet will I woo for him; but yet so coldly As, heaven it knows, I would not have him speed.

Enter SILVIA, attended.

Gentlewoman, good day! I pray yon, he my mean

To hring me where to speak with Madam Silvia. . Sil. What would you with berif that I be she? Jul. If you be she I do entreat your patience To hear me speak the message I am sent on.

Sil. From whom?

Jul. From my master, Sir Proteus, madam. Sil. Ob!—he sends you for a picture?

Jul. Ay, madam.

Sil. Ursula, bring my picture there. Picture brought. Go, give your master this: tell him from me,

One Julia, that his changing thoughts forget, Would better fit his chamber than this shadow.

Jul. Madam, please you peruse this letter. Pardon me, madam; I bave unadvised Delivered you a paper that I should not.

This is the letter to your ladyship.

Sil. I pray thee, let me look on that again.
Jul. It may not be; good madam. pardon me.
Sil. There, hold.

I will not look upon your master's lines: I know they are stuff'd with protestations, And full of new-found oaths; which he will break As easily as I do tear his paper. Jul. Madam, he sends your ladyship this Sil. The more shame for him that he sends it me;

For I have heard him say a thousand times His Julia gave it him at his departure: Though his false finger have profaned the ring, Mine shall not do his Julia so much wrong.

Jul. She thanks you.

Sil. What say'st thou? Jul. I thank you, madam, that you tenderher: Poor gentlewoman! my master wrongs her much.

Sil. Dost thou know her?

Jul. Almost as well as I do know myself: -To think upon her woes, I do protest,

That I have wept an bundred several times. Sil. Belike she thinks that Proteus hath forsook her. sorrow. Jul. I think she doth, and that's her cause of Sil. Is she not passing fair?

Jul. She hath heen fairer, madam, than she is:

When she did think my master loved her well. She, in my judgment, was as fair as you; But since she did neglect her looking -glass, And threw ber sun-expelling mask away, The air bath stary'd the roses in ber cheeks, And pinch'd the lily-tincture of her face, That now she is become as black as I.

Sil. How tall was she?

Jul. About my stature: for at Pentecost, When all our pageants of delight were play'd, Our youth got me to play the woman's part, And I was trimm'd in Madam Julia's gown; Which serv'd me as fit, by all men's judgment, As if the garment had been made for me: Therefore, I know she is about my height. And at that time I made ber weep a-good, For I did play a lamentable part; Madam, 'twas Ariadne, passioning For Theseus' perjury and unjust flight;

Which I so lively acted with my tears That my poor mistress, moved therewithal. Wept bitterly; and would I might be dead If I in thought felt not her very sorrow!

Sil. She is beholden to thee, gentle youth!-Alas, poor lady! desolate and left!-I weep myself, to think upon thy words. Here, youth, there is my purse: I give thee this For thy sweet mistress' sake, because thou lov'st her.

Farewell. J*Exil* Silvia. Jul. And she shall thank you for 't if e'er you know her.

A virtuons gentlewoman, mild and beautiful. I hope my master's suit will be but cold, Since she respects my mistress' love so much Alas, how love can trifle with itself! Here is her picture. Let me see; I think, If I had such a tire, this face of mine Were full as lovely as is this of hers: And yet the painter flatter'd her a little. Unless I flatter with myself too much. Her hair is auburn, mine is perfect yellow: If that be all the difference in his love, I'll get me such a colour'd periwig. Her eyes are grey as glass; and so are mine: Ay, but her forehead's low, and mine's as high. What should it be that he respects in her But I can mak respective in myself, If this fond love were not a blinded god? Come, shadow, come, and take this shadow up, For 'tis thy rival. O thou senseless form, Thou shalt be worshipp'd, kiss'd, lov'd, and ador'd:

And were there sense in his idolatry My substance should be statue in thy stead. I'll use thee kindiy for thy mistress' sake, That used me so; or else, by Jove I vow, I should have scratch'd out your unseeing eyes, To make my master out of love with thee.

Exit.

ACT V.

SCENE I .- The same. An Abbey.

Enter EGLAMOUR.

Egl. The sun begins to gild the western sky: And now it is about the very hour That Silvia at Patrick's cell should meet me. She will not fail; for lovers break not hours, Unless it be to come before their time; So much they spur their expedition.

Enler SILVIA. See where she comes: Lady, a happy evening! Sil. Amen, amen! go on, good Eglamour! Out at the postern by the abbey wall; I fear I am attended by some spies.

Egl. Fear not: the forest is not three leagues If we recover that, we are sure enough. Exeunt.

SCENE IL—The same. An Apartment in the DUKE'S Palace.

Enter Thurio, Proteus, and Julia.

Thu. Sir Proteus, what says Silvia to my suit? Pro. O, sir, I find her milder than she was; And yet she takes exceptions at your person.

Thu. What! that my leg is too long Pro. No; that is it too little. frounder. Pro. But love will not be sourr'd to what it loaths.

Thu. What says she to my face?

Pro. She says it is a fair one. fblack. Thu. Nay, then, the wanton lies; my face is Pro. But pearls are fair; and the old saying is Black men are pearls in beauteous ladies' eyes,

Jul. 'Tis true, such pearls as put out ladies' eyes;

For I had rather wink than look ou them.

Aside. Thu. How likes she my discourse? Pro. Ill when you talk of war. Deace?

Thu. But well when I discourse of love and Jul. But better, indeed, when you hold your peace. Aside.

Thu. What says she to my valour? Pro. O, sir. she makes no doubt of that. Jul. She needs not, when she knows it cowardice. (Aside.

Thu. What says she to my birth? Pro. That you are well derived.

Jul. True; from a gentleman to a fool. [Aside Thu. Cousiders she my possessions?

Pro. O, ay; and pities them. Thu. Wherefore?

Jul. That such an ass should owe them. Aside.

Pro. That they are out by lease. Jul. Here comes the Duke. Enter DUKE.

Duke. How now, Sir Proteus? how now, Thurio?

Which of you saw Sir Eglamour of late? Thu. Rot I.

Pro. Nor Duke. Saw you my daughter? Pro. Neither. Duke. Why, then she's fled unto that peasant Valentine; And Eglamour is in her company. Tis true; for Frier Lawrence met them both, As he in penance wander'd through the forest: Him he knew well, and guess'd that it was she;

But, being mask'd, he was not sure of it: Besides, she did intend confession At Patrick's cell this even; and there she was

These likelihoods confirm her flight from hence: Therefore, I pray you, stand not to discourse. But mount you presently; and meet with me Upon the rising of the mountain-foot That leads towards Mantua, whither they are Dispatch, sweet gentlemen, and follow me Exit.

Thu. Why, this it is to be a peerish girl, That flies her fortune when it follows her: I'll after; more to be reveuged ou Eglamour

Than for the love of reckless Silvia. Pro. And I will follow, more for Silvia's love Than hate of Eglamour that goes with her-

Jul. And I will follow, more to cross that love Than hate for Silvia, that is gone for love. [Exil-SCENE III .- Frontiers of MARITUA. The Forest.

Enter Silvia, and Outlaws.

Out. Come, come; 1 Thu. I'll wear a boot to make it somewhat; Be patient; we must bring you to our captain. Sil. A thousand more mischances than this

Have learn'd me how to brook this patiently. Come, bring her away.

2 Out. Come, bring her away.
1 Out. Where is the gentleman that was with her? us,

2 Out. Being nimble-footed, he hath ont-run But Moyses and Valerius follow him. Go thou with her to the west end of the wood: There is our captain: we'll follow him that's fled. The thicket is beset; he cannot 'scape.

I Out. Come, I must bring you to our captain's cave;

Fear not; he bears an honourable mind, And will not use a woman lawlessly. Sil. O Valentine, this I endure for thee. Exeunt.

Scene IV .- Another part of the Forest. Enter VALENTINE.

Val. How use doth breed a habit in a man! This shadowy desert, unfrequented woods, I better brook than flourishing peopled towns: Here can I sit alone, unseen of any, And to the nightingale's complaining notes Tune my distresses and record my woes. O thou that dost inhabit in my breast, Leave not the mansion so long tenantless, Lest, growing ruinous, the building fall, And leave no memory of what it was l Repair me with thy presence, Silvia; Thou gentle nymph, cherish thy forlorn swain!-What halloing and what stir is this to-day! [law, These are my mates, that make their wills their Have some unhappy passenger in chase: They love me well; yet I have much to do To keep them from uncivil outrages. Withdraw thee, Valentine; who's this comes Steps aside.

Enter Proteus, Silvia, and Julia.

Pro. Madam, this service I have done for Though you respect not aught your servant To hazard life, and resone you from him flove. That would have forced your honour and your Vouchsafe me, for my meed, but one fair look; A smaller boon than this I cannot beg, And less than this, I am sure, you cannot give.

Val. How like n dream is this I see and hear! Love, lend me patience to forbear awhile.

Sil. O miserable, unhappy that I am! Pro. Unhappy were you, madam, ere I came; But, by my coming, I have made you happy. Sil. By thy approach thou makest me most unhappy.

Jul. And me, when he approacheth to your Dresence.

Sil. Had I been seized by a hungry lion, I would have been a breakfast to the beast, Rather than have false Proteus rescue me. O, heaven be judge how I love Valentine, Whose life's as tender to me as my soul; And full as much,—for more there cannot be,-I do detest false, perjured Proteus: Therefore begone: solicit me no more.

Pro. What dangerous action, stood it next to death,

Would I not undergo for one calm look?

O, 'tis the curse in love, and still approved, When women cannot love where they're beloved.

beloved. Sil. When Proteus cannot love where he's Read over Julia's heart, thy first best love, Forwhose dear sake thou didst then rend thy faith Into a thousand oaths; and all those oaths Descended into perjury, to love me. Thou hast no faith left now, unless thou hadst And that's far worse than none; better have none Than plural faith, which is too much by one: Thou counterfeit to thy true friend!

Pto. Who respects friends?

Sil. All men but Protens. Pro. Nay, if the gentle spirit of moving words Can no way change you to a milder form,

I'll woo you like a soldier, at arms' end; [you. And love you 'gainst the nature of love—force

Sil. O heaven!

Pro. I'll force thee yield to my desire. Val. Ruffian, let go that rude uncivil tonch; Thou friend of an ill fashion!

Pro. Valentine! Val. Thou common friend, that's without faith or love,-For such is a friend now;—treacherous man! Thou hast beguil'd my hopes; nought but mine

Could have persuaded me. Now I dare not say I have one friend alive; thon wouldst disprove

Who should be trusted now, when one's right is perjured to the bosom? Proteus, I am sorry I must never trust thee more, But count the world a stranger for thy sake. The private wound is deepest: O time, most curst! Mongstallfoes, that a friend should be the worst.

Pro. My shame and guilt confound me.-Forgive me, Valentine: if hearty sorrow Be a sufficient ransom for offence, I tender it here; I do as truly suffer As e'er I did commit.

Val. Then I am paid: And once again I do receive thee honest.— Who by repentance is not satisfied Is nor of heaven nor earth; for these are pleased; By penitence the Eternal's wrath's appeas'd:-And, that my love may appear plain and free, All that was mine in Silvia I give thee.

Jul. O, me, unhappyl Pro. Look to the boy. | listhe matter? Val. Why, boy! why, wag! how now? what Look up; speak.

Jul. O good sir, my master charged me To deliver a ring to Madam Silvia;

Which, out of my neglect, was never done.

Pro. Where is that ring, boy?

Here 'tis: this is it. Jul. [Gives a ring.

Pro. How! let me see:

Why, this is the ring I gave to Julia. Jul. O, cry you mercy, sir, I have mistook; This is the ring you sent to Silvia.

Shows another ring. Pro. But how camest thou by this ring? at my depart

I gave this unto Julia. Jul. And Julia herself did give it me; And Julia herself hath brought it hither. Pro. How! Julia!

Jul. Behold her that gave aim to all thy oaths,
And entertain'd them deeply in her heart:
How oft hast thou with perjury cleft the root?
O Proteus, let this habit make thee blush!
Be thou asham'd that I have took upon me
Such an immodest raiment; if shame live
In a disguise of love:

It is the lesser blot, modesty finds, [minds. Women to change their shapes, than men their Pro. Than men their minds! 'tis true; O heaven! were man

But constant, he were perfect: that one error Fills him with faults; makes him run through all th' sins:

Inconstancy falls off ere it begins:
What is in Silvia's face but I may spy
More fresh in Julia's with a constant eye?
Val. Come come a hand from either:

Val. Come, come, a hand from either:
Let me be blest to make this happy close:
'Twere pity two such friends should be long foes.

Pro. Bear witness, Heaven, I have my wish for ever.

Jul. And I have mine.

Enter OUTLAWS, with DUKE and THURIO.

Out. A prize, a prize, a prize!

Val. Forbear, I say; it is my lord the duke.

Your grace is welcome to a man disgrac'd,

Banished Valentine.

Duke. Sir Valentine!
Thu. Yonder is Silvia; and Silvia's mine.
Val. Thurio, give back, or else embrace thy death;

Come not within the measure of my wrath:
Do not name Silvia thine; if once again,
Milan shall not behold thee. Here she stands,
Take but possession of her with a touch;—
I dare thee but to breathe upon my love.—
Thu. Sir Valentine, I care not for her, I;
I hold him but a fool that will endanger
His body for a girl that loves him not:
I claim her not, and therefore she is thine.

Duke. The more degenerate and base art thou, To make such means for her as thou hast done, And leave her on such slight conditions.—
Now, by the honour of my ancestry, I do applaud thy spirit, Valentine, And think thee worthy of an empress' love. Know then, I here forget all former griefs, Cancel all grudge, repeal thee home again.—Plead a new state in thy unrivall'd merit, To which I thus subscribe,—Sir Valentine, Thou art a gentleman, and well derived; Take thou thy Silvia, for thou hast deserv'd her.

Val. I thank your grace: the gift hath made me happy. I now beseech you, for your daughter's sake, To grant one boon that I shall ask of you.

Duke. I grant it for thine own, whate'er it be.

Val. These banish'd men, that I have kept withal.

Are men endued with worthy qualities;
Forgive them what they have committed here,
And let them be recall'd from their exile:
They are reform'd, civil, full of good,
And fit for great employment, worthy lord.

Duke. Thou hast prevail'd; I pardon them, and thee;

Dispose of them as thou know'st their deserts. Come, let us go; we will include all jars
With triumphs, mirth, and rare solemnity.

Val. And, as we walk along, I dare be bold With our discourse to make your grace to smile: What think you of this page, my lord?

Duke. I think the boy hath grace in him; he blushes. [than boy. Vol. I warrant you, my lord; more grace Duke. What mean you by that saying? Vol. Please you, I'll tell you, as we pass along, That you will wonder what hath fortuned.—Come, Proteus: 'tis your penance, but to hear The story of your loves discovered:

That done, our day of marriage shall be yours; One feast, one house, one mutual happiness.

(Exeunt.

Scene,—Windson; and the parts adjacent.

ACT I.

SCENE I .- WINDSOR. Before PAGE'S House. Enter Justice Shallow, Slender, and Sir Hugh Evans.

Shal. Sir Hugh, persuade me not; I will make a Star-chamber matter of it; if he were twenty Sir John Falstaffs he shall not abuse Robert Shallow, esquire.

Slen. In the county of Gloster, justice of peace, and coram.

Shal. Ay, cousin Stender, and Custalorum. Slen. Ay, and Ratolorum too; and a gentleman born, master parson; who writes himself Armigero; in any bill, warrant, quittance, or obligation,-Armigero!

Shal. Ay, that we do; and have done any time these three hundred years.

Slen. All his successors, gone before him, have done 't; and all his ancestors, that come after him, may: they may give the dozen white luces in their coat.

Shal. It is an old coat. Eva. The dozen white louses do become an old coat well; it agrees well, passant: it is a familiar beast to man, and signifies-love.

Shal. The luce is the fresh fish; the sait fish is an old coat.

Sicn. I may quarter, coz?
Shal. You may, by marrying.
Eva. It is marring indeed, if he quarter it.

Shal. Not a whit.

Eva. Yes, py'r lady; if he has a quarter of your coat, there is but three skirts for yourself, in my simple conjectures: but this is all one. If Sir John Falstaff have committed disparagements unto you, I am of the church, and will be glad to do my benevolence to make atonements and compromises between you. Shal. The Council shall hear it; it is a riot. Eva. It is not meet the Council hear a riot; there is no fear of Got in a riot; the Council, look you, shall desire to hear the fear of Got, and not to hear a riot; take your vizaments in that.

Shal. Ha! o' my life, if I were young again, the sword should end it.

Eva. It is petter that friends is the sword. and end it: and there is also another device in my prain, which, peradventure, prings goot discretions with it. There is Anne Page, which is daughter to Master George Page, which is pretty virginity.

Sten. Mistress Anne Page? She has brown hair, and speaks small like a woman.

Eva. It is that fery person for all the 'orld. as just as you will desire; and seven hundred pounds of monies, and gold, and silver, is her grandsire, upon his death's bed, (Got deliver to a joyful resurrection!) give, when she is able to overtake seventeen years old: it were a goot motion if we leave our pribbles and prabbles and desire a marriage between Master Abraham and Mistress Anne Page.

Shal. Did her grandsire leave her seven penny.

hundred pound?

Eva. Ay, and her father is make her a petter Shal. I know the young gentlewoman; she has good gifts.

Eva. Seven hundred pounds, and possibilities, is goot gifts.

Shal. Well, let us see honest Master Page. Is Falstaff there?

Eva. Shall I tell you a lie? I do despise a liar as I do despise one that is false; or, as I despise one that is not true. The knight, Sir John, is there; and, I beseech you, be ruled by your well-willers. I will peat the door [knocks] for Master Page. What, hoal Got pless your house here!,

Enter Page.

Page. Who's there?
Eva. Here is Got's plessing, and your friend, and Justice Shallow: and here young Master Slender; that, peradventures, shall tell you another tale, if matters grow to your likings.

Page. I am glad to see your worships well: I thank you for my venison, Master Shallow.

Shal. Master Page, I am glad to see you; much good do it your good heart! I wished your venison better; it was ill killed:—How doth good Mistress Page?—and I love you always with my heart, la; with my heart. Page. Sir, I thank you.

Shal. Sir, I thank you; by yea and no, I do. Page. I am glad to see you, good Master Slender.

Slen. How does your fallow greyhound, sir? I heard say he was outrun on Cotsale.

Page. It could not be judged, sir.
Slen. You'll not confess; you'll not confess.
Shal. That he will not;—'tis your fault; 'tis your fault:- 'Tis a good dog.

Page. A cur, sir. Shal. Sir, he's a good dog, and a fair dog. Can there be more said? he is good, and fair. Is Sir John Falstaff here?

Page. Sir, he is within; and I would I could do a good office between you.

Eva. It is spoke as a Christians ought to speak. Shal. He hath wronged me, Master Page.

Page. Sir, he doth in some sort confess it. Shal. If it be confessed, it is not redressed; is not that so, Master Page? He hath wronged had it: for though I cannot remember what I me; indeed he hath; at a word he hath; believe me; Robert Shallow, esquire, saith he is wronged.

Enter Sir John Falstaff, Bardolph, Nym and PISTOL.

Fal. Now, Master Shallow; you'll complain of me to the king?

Shal. Knight, you have beaten my men. killed my deer, and broke open my lodge.

Fal. But not kissed your keeper's daughter? Shal. Tut, a pin! this shall be answered. Fal. I will answer it straight;-I have done all this:—That is now answered.

Shal. The Council shall know this.

Fal. 'Twere better for you if it were known in counsel: you'll be laughed at.

Eva. Pauca verba, Sir John, goot worts.

Fal. Good worts! good cabbage.—Slender, I broke your head; what matter have you against me?

Slen. Marry, sir, I have matter in my head against you; and against your coney-catching rascals, Bardolph, Nym, and Pistol. carried me to the tavern, and made me drunk, and afterwards picked my pocket.

Bard. You Banbury cheese! Slen. Ay, it is no matter. Pist. How now, Mephostophilus? Slen. Ay, it is no matter.

Nym. Slice, I say! pauca, pauca; slice! that's my humour. [tell, cousin?

Slen. Where's Simple, my man?—can you Eva. Peace: I pray you! Now let us under-There is three umpires in this matter, as I understand: that is-Master Page, fidelicit, Master Page; and there is myself, fidelicit, myself; and the three party is, lastly and finally, mine host of the Garter. [tween them.

Page. We three to hear it, and end it be-Eva. Fery goot. I will make a prief of it in my note-book; and we will afterwards 'ork upon the cause, with as great discreetly as we can.

Fal. Pistol,-

Pist. He hears with ears.

Eva. The tevil and his tam! what phrase is this, He hears with ear? Why, it is affectations. Fal. Pistol, did you pick Master Slender's Slen. Ay, by these gloves, did he, (or I would I might never come in mine own great chamber again else,) of seven groats in mill-sixpences, and two Edward shovel-boards, that cost me two shilling and two pence a-piece of Yead Miller, by these gloves.

Fal. Is this true, Pistol?

Eva. No; it is false, if it is a pick-purse. thou mountain-foreigner!-Sir Pist. Ha, John, and master mine,

I combat challenge of this latten bilbo: Word of denial in thy labras here;

Word of denial: froth and scum, thou liest. Slen. By these gloves, then, 'twas he.

Nym. Be advised, sir, and pass good humours: I will say, marry trap, with you, if you run the nuthook's humour on me: that is the very note of it.

Slen. By this hat, then, he in the red face did when you made me drunk, yet I am not altogether an ass.

Fal. What say you, Scarlet and John?

Bard. Why, sir, for my part, I say the gentle-man had drunk himself out of his five sentences. Eva. It is his five senses; fie, what the ignorance is!

Bord. And heing fap, sir, was, as they say, cashiered; and so conclusions passed the careires.

Slen. Ay, you spake in Latin then too; hut 'tis no matter: I'll ne'er he drunk whilst I live again, hut in honest, civil, godly company, for this trick. If I he drunk, I'll he drunk with those that have the fear of God, and not with drunken knaves.

Eva. So Got 'udge me, that is a virtuous mind. Fal. You hear all these matters denied, gentlemen; you hear it.

Page. Nay, daughter, carry the wine in; we'll

Page. How now, Mistress Ford?

Fol. Mistress Ford, hy my troth, you are very well met: hy your leave, good mistress.

Kissina her. Page. Wife, hid these gentlemen welcome:-Come, we have a hot venison pasty to dinner; come, gentlemen, I hope we shall drink down all unkindness.

[Exeunt oll but SHAL., SLEN., and Evans.

· Sien. I had rather than forty shillings I had my Book of Songs and Sonnets here .-

Enter SIMPLE.

How now, Simple! Where have you heen? I must wait on myself, must I? You have not The Book of Riddles about you, have you?

Sim. Book of Riddles! why, did you not lend it to Alice Shortcake upon All-hallowmas last, a fortnight afore Michaelmas?

Shol. Come, coz; come, coz; we stay for you. A word with you, coz; marry this, coz; there is, as 'twere, a tender, a kind of tender, made afar off hy Sir Hugh here.—Do you understand me? Slen. Ay, sir, you shall find me reasonable;

if it he so, I shall do that that is reason.

Shal. Nay, hut understand me. Slen. So I do, sir.

Eva. Give ear to his motions, Master Slender: I will description the matter to you, if you he capacity of it.

Slen. Nay, I will do as my cousin Shallow says: I pray you, pardon me; he's a justice of peace in his country, simple though I stand here. Eva. But this is not the question; the question is concerning your marriage.

Shol. Ay, there's the point, sir.

Eva. Marry is it; the very point of it; to Mistress Anne Page.

Slen. Why, if it he so, I will marry her upon any reasonable demands.

Evo. But can you affection the 'oman? Let us command to know that of your mouth, or of your lips; for divers philosophers hold that the lips is parcel of the mouth.—Therefore, precisely, can you carry your good will to the maid?

Shal. Cousin Ahraham Slender, can you love her?

Slen. I hope, sir,-I will do as it shall hecome one that would do reason.

Eva. Nay, Got's lords and his ladies, you must speak possitable if you can carry her your desires towards her.

Shal. That you must. Will you, upon good dowry, marry her?

Slen. I will do a greater thing than that upon your request, cousin, in any reason.

Shal. Nay, conceive me, conceive me, sweet z; what I do is to pleasure you, coz. Can you love the maid?

Slen. I will marry her, sir, at your request; hut if there he no great love in the heginning, yet Heaven may decrease it upon hetter acquaintance, when we are married, and have more occasion to know one another. I hope, upon familiarity will grow more contempt: hut if you say, marry her, I will marry her, that I am freely dissolved, and dissolutely.

Eva. It is a fery discretion answer; save, the faul' is in the 'ort dissolutely: the 'ortis, according to our meaning, resolutely;—his meaning is good.

Shal. Ay, I think my cousin meant well. [la Slen. Ay, or else I would I might he hanged, Re-enter ANNE PAGE.

Shol. Here comes fair Mistress Anne.--Would I were young for your sake, Mistress Anne! Anne. The dinner is on the table; my father desires your worships' company.

Shal. I will wait on him, fair Mistress Anne.

Eva. Od's plessed will! I will not he absence at the grace.

[Exeunt SHAL, ond Sir H. EVANS. Anne Will't please your worship to come in, sir? am very well.

Slen. No, I thank you, forsooth, heartily: I

Anne The dinner attends you, sir.

Slen. Iam not a-hungry, Ithank you, for sooth. Go, sirrah, for all you are my man, go wait upon my cousin Shallow. [Exit SIMPLE.] A justice of peace sometime may he heholden to his friend for a man.-I keep but three men and n hoy yet, till my mother he dead: hut what though? yet I live like a poor gentleman horn.

Anne I may not go in without your worship;

they will not sit till you come.

Slen. I' faith, I'll eat nothing; I thank you as much as though I did.

Anne I pray you, sir, walk in. Slen. I had rather walk here, I thank you; I hruised my shin the other day with playing at sword and dagger with a master of fence, three veneys for a dish of stewed prunes; and, hy my troth, I cannot shide the smell of hot meat since. Why do your dogs bark so? be there hears i the town? talked of.

Anne I think there are, sir; I heard them Slen. Hove the sport well; but I shall as soon quarrel at it as any man in England:—You are afraid, if you see the hear loose, are you not?

Anne Ay, indeed, sir.

Slen. That's meat and drink to me now. have seen Sackerson loose twenty times; and have taken him by the chain: but, I warrant you, the women have so cried and shricked at it that it passed:-but women, indeed, cannot abide em; they are very ill-favoured rough

Re-enter PAGE.

Page. Come, gentle Master Slender, come: we stay for you.

Slen. I'll eat nothing, I thank you, sir.

Page. By cock and pye, you shall not choose sir: come, come.

Slen. Nay, pray you, lead the way.

Slen. Mistress Anne, yourself shall go first. Anne Not I, sir; pray you, keep on.

Slen. Truly, I will not go first; truly, la: I will not do you that wrong. Anne I pray you, sir.

Slen. I'll rather be unmannerly than troublesome: you do yourself wrong indeed, la. Exeunt.

Scene II .- The same.

Enter Sir HUGH EVANS and SIMPLE.

Eva. Go your ways, and ask of Doctor Caius' house which is the way: and there dwells one Mistress Quickly, which is in the manner of his nurse, or his dry nurse, or his cook, or his laundry, his washer, and his wringer.

Simp. Well, sir.

Eva. Nay, it is petter yet:—give her this letter; for it is a 'oman that altogether's acquaintance with Mistress Anne Page: and the letter is, to desire and require her to solicit your master's desires to Mistress Anne Page: I pray you, begone; I will make an end of my dinner; there's pippins and cheese to come. Exeunt.

Scene III -A Room in the GARTER INN.

Enter Falstaff, Host, Bardolph, Nym, PISTOL, and ROBIN.

Fal. Mine host of the Garter.-

Host. What says my bully-rook? Speak scholarly and wisely.

Fal. Truly, mine host, I must turn away some of my followers. Host. Discard, bully Hercules; cashier: let them wag; trot, trot.

Fal. I sit at ten pounds a-week. Host. Thou'rt an emperor, Caesar, Keisar, and Pheezar. I will entertain Bardolph; he shall draw, he shall tap: said I well, bully Hectori

Fal. Do so, good mine host.

Host. I have spoke; let him follow. Let me see thee froth and lime: I am at a word: follow. Exit Host.

Fal. Bardolph, follow him: a tapster is a good trade: an old cloak makes a new jerkin; a withered servingman a fresh tapster. Go; adieu. Bard. It is a life that I have desired; I will thrive. Exit BARDOLPH. Pist. O base Gongarian wight! wilt thou the spigot wield?

Nym. He was gotten in drink: is not the humour conceited? His mind is not heroic, and there's the humour of it.

Fal. I am glad I am so acquit of this tinderbox; his thefts were too open; his filching was like an unskilful singer; he kept not time.

Nym. The good humour is, to steal at a minute's rest.

Pist. Convey, the wise it call: Steal foh; a fice for the phrase!

Fal. Well, sirs, I am almost out at heels.

Pist. Why, then, let kibes ensue.
Fal. There is no remedy; I must coney-catch; I must shift.

Pist. Young ravens must have food.
Fal. Which of you know Ford of this towne Pist. I ken the wight; he is of substance good. Fal. My honest lads, I will tell you what I am about.

Pist. Two yards, and more.
Fal. No quips now, Pistol. Indeed I am in the waist two yards about: but I am now about no waste; I am about thrift. Briefly, I do mean to make love to Ford's wife; I spy entertainment in her; she discourses, she carves, she gives the leer of invitation: I can construe the action of her familiar style; and the hardest voice of her behaviour, to be English'd rightly, is, I am Sir John Falstaff's.

Pist. He hath studied her well, and translated her well; out of honesty into English. [pass?

Nym. The anchor is deep: will that humour Fal. Now, thereport goes, she has all the rule of her husband's purse; she hathlegions of angels.

Pist. As many devils entertain; and, To her, boy, say I.

Nym. The humour rises; it is good: humour me the angels.

Fal. I have writ me here a letter to her: and here another to Page's wife; who even now gave me good eyes too, examined my parts with most judicious eyliads: sometimes the beam of her view gilded my foot, sometimes my portly belly.

Pist. Then did the sun on dunghill shine.

Nym. I thank thee for that humour. Fal. O, she did so course o'er my exteriors with such a greedy intention, that the appetite of her eye did seem to scorch me up like a burning-glass! Here's another letter to her: she bears the purse too; she is a region in Guiana, all gold and bounty. I will be cheater to them both, and they shall be exchequers to me; they shall be my East and West Indies, and I will trade to them both. Go, bear thou this letter to Mistress Page; and thou this to Mistress Ford; we will thrive, lads, we will thrive.

Pist. Shall I Sir Pandarus of Troy become, And by my side wear steel? then, Lucifer take all!

Nym. I will run no base humour: here, take the humour letter; I will keep the 'haviour of lletters tightly: reputation.

Fal. Hold, sirrah, [to ROB.,] bear you these Sail like my pinnace to these golden shores. -Rogues, hence, avauntl vanish like hailstones, [pack'

Trudge, plod, away, o' the hoof; seek shelter, Falstaff will learn the humour of this age, French thrift, you rogues; myself, and skirted and fullam holds. And high and low beguile the rich and poor;

Tester I'll have in pouch when thou shalt lack, Base Phrygian Turk! Nym. I have operations in my head, which be humours of revenge.

Pist. Wilt thou revenge? Num. By welkin, and her starl Pist. With wit or steel? Num. With both the humours, I: I will discuss the humour of this love to Page. Pist. And I to Ford shall eke unfold.

How Falstaff, varlet vile. His dove will prove, his gold will hold, And his soft couch defile.

Nym. My humour shall not cool: I will incense Page to deal with poison; I will possess him with yellowness, for the revolt of mien is dangerous: that is my true humour.

Pist. Thou art the Mars of malcontents: I second thee; troop on. Excunt.

Scene IV .- A Room in Dr. CATUS'S House. Enter Mrs. QUICKLY, SIMPLE, and RUGBY.

Quick. What: John Rugbyl-I pray thee go to the easement and see if you can see my master, Master Doctor Caius, coming: if he do, i' faith, and find anybody in the house, here will he an old abusing of God's patience and the king's English.

Exit RUGBY. Rug. I'll go watch. Quick. Go; and we'll have a posset for 't soon at night, in faith, at the laster end of a sea-coal at night, in faith, at the latter end of a sea-coal | Quick. I beseech you, he not so phicometic; fire. An honest, willing, kind fellow, as ever | hear the truth of it. Quick. Ay, forsooth, I'llfetchityou, Iamrled he went not in himself: if he had found the young man, he would have been horn-mad. Caius. Fe, fe, fe, fe! ma foi, il fail fort chaud. Je m'en vais à la Cour,—la grande affaire. Quick. Is it this, zir?

Caius. Ouy; mette le au mon pocket: depeche, quickly:-Vere is dat knave, Rugby?

Ouick. What, John Rugby! John? Rug. Here, sir.

Caius. You are John Rugby, and you are Jack Rugby. Come, take-a your rapier, and come after my heel to de court.

Rug. Tis ready, sir, here in the porch. Caius. By my trot, I tarry too long: - Od's me! Qu'ay j'oublie? dere is some simples in my closet dat I vill not for the varld I shall leave hehind. Quick. Ah mel he'll find the young man there, and be mad!

Caius. Odiable, diable! vat is in my closet?-Villanyl larron! [Pulling SIMPLE out.] Rugby, my rapier.

Quick. Good master, be content. Caius. Verefore shall I be content-al Quick. The young man is an honest man. Caius. Vatshalldehonestmandoinmycloset? dereis no honest man datshall come in my closet.

me from Parson Hugh.

Caius. Vell?

Caius. Veni Sim. Ay, forsooth, to desire her to— Quick. Peace, I pray you. Itale. Caius. Peace-a your tongue:—Speak-a your Sim. To desire this honest gentlewoman, your maid, to speak a good word to Mistrest Anne Page for my master, in the way of marriage. Quick. This is all, indeed, la; but I'll ne'er

Sim. No, forsooth: he hath hut a little wee me some paper. Tarry you a little a while. you tell-a me dat I shall have Anne Page for myself?-by gar, I will kill de Jack priest; and I have appointed mine host of de Jar terre to measure our weapon:-by gar, I vill myself have Anne Page.

Quick. Sir, the maid loves you, and all shall be well: we must give folks leave to prate.

What, the good-jer!

Caius. Rugby, come to de court vit me.—By gar, if I have not Anne Page, I shall turn your head out of my door:-follow my heels, Rugby. Exeunt CAIDS and RUGBY.

Quick. You shall have An fool's-head of your own. No, I know Anne's mind for that: never a woman in Windsor knows more of Anne's mind than I do; nor can do more than I do with her, I thank heaven.

Fent. [Within.] Who's within there? ho! Quick. Who's there, I trow? Come near the house, I pray you.

Enter Fenton.

Fent. How now, good woman; how dost thou? Quick. The better that it pleases your good worship to ask.

Fent. What news? How does pretty Mistress Quick. In truth, sir, and she is pretty, and honest, and gentle; and one that is your friend, I can tell you that by the way; I praise heaven [Shall I not lose my suit? for it.

Fent. Shall I do any good, think's thou? Quick. Troth, sir, all is in his hands above: but notwithstanding, Master Fenton, I'll be sworn on a book she loves you:-Have not your worship a wart above your eye?

Fent. Yes, marry, have I; what of that?

Quick. Well, thereby hangs a tale; good faith, it is such another Nan;—but, I detest, an honest maid as ever broke bread. We had an hour's talk of that wart:-I shall never laugh but in that maid's company! But, indeed, she is given too much to allicholly and musing. But for you-Well, go to.

Fent. Well, I shall see her to-day. Hold, there's money for thee; let me have thy voice in my behalf: if thou seest her before me, commend me-

Quick. Will I? i' faith, that we will; and I will tell your worship more of the wart the next e we have confidence; and of other wooers.

Fent. Well, farewell. I am in great haste

Quick. Farewell to your worship.-Truly, an honest gentleman; but Anne loves him not; for I know Anne's mind as well as another does:-Out upon't! what have I forgot? Exit.

ACT II.

Scene I .- Before Page's House

Enter Mrs. PAGE with a letter.

Mrs. Page. What! have I 'scaped love-letters in the holiday time of my beauty, and am I now a subject for them? Let me see: Reads

Ask me no reason why I love you; for though love use reason for his precisian, he admits him not for his counsellor. You are not young; no more am I; go to then, there's sympathy; you are merry; so am I, Ha! ha! then there's more sympathy; you love sack, and so do I. Would you desire better sympathy; Let it suffice thee, Mistress Page, (at the least, if the love of a soldier can suffice,) that I love thee. I will not say, pity me: 'tis not a soldier-like phrase: but I say, love me. By me, Thine own true knight.

By day or night, Or any kind of light, With all his might,

For thee to fight. JOHN FALSTAFF.

What a Herod of Jewry is this?—O wicked, wicked world!-one that is well-nigh worn to pieces with age to show himself a young gallant! What an unweighed behaviour hath this Flemish drunkard picked (with the devil's name) out of my conversation, that he dares in this manner assay me? Why, he hath not been thrice in my company!-What should I say to him?-I was then frugal of my mirth:-heaven forgive me!-Why, I'll exhibit a bill in the parliament . for the putting down of men. How shall I be revenged on him? for revenged I will be, as sure as his guts are made of puddings.

Enter Mrs. Ford.

Mrs. Ford. Mistress Page! trust me, I was going to your house!

Mrs. Page. And, trust me, I was coming to Mrs. Ford. Nay, I'll ne'er believe that; I have to show to the contrary.

Mrs. Page. 'Faith, but you do, in my mind.
Mrs. Ford. Well, I do, then; yet, I say, I could show you to the contrary. O, Mistress Page, give me some counsell

Mrs. Page. What's the matter, woman? Mrs. Ford. O woman, if it were not for one trifling respect. I could come to such honour! Mrs. Page. Hang the trifle, woman; take the What is it?-dispense with trifles;honour. what is it?

Mrs. Ford. If I would but go to hell for an eternal moment, or so, I could be knighted.

Mrs. Page. What? thou liest!—Sir Alice Ford!-These knights will hack; and so thou shouldst not alter the article of thy gentry.

Mrs. Ford. We burn day-light:-here, read, read;-perceive how I might be knighted.shall think the worse of fat men as long as I have an eye to make difference of men's liking. And yet he would not swear; praised women's modesty: and gave such orderly and well-behaved reproof to all uncomeliness, that I would have sworn his disposition would have gone to the truth of his words; but they do no more adhere and keep place together than the hundreth psalm to the tune of Green sleeves. What tempest, I trow, threw this whale, with so many tuns of oil in his belly, ashore at Windsor? How shall I be revenged on him? I think the best way were to entertain him with hope till the wicked fire of lust have melted him in his own grease.-Did you ever hear the like?

Mrs. Page. Letter for letter; but that the name of Page and Ford differs!—To thy great comfort in this mystery of ill opinions, here's the twin-brother of thy letter: but let thine inherit first; for, I protest, mine never shall. I warrant he hath a thousand of these letters, writ with blank space for different names, (sure more,) and these are of the second edition. He will print them out of doubt; for he cares not what he puts into the press when he would put us two. I had rather be a giantess, and lie under Mount Pelion. Well, I will find you twenty lascivious turtles ere one chaste man.

Mrs. Ford. Why, this is the very same; the very hand, the very words. What doth he think of us?

Mrs. Poge. Nay, I know not; it makes me almost ready to wrangle with mine own honesty. I'll entertain myself like one that I am not acquainted withal; for, sure, unless he know some strain in me that I know not myself, he would never have boarded me in this fury.

Mrs. Ford. Boarding, call you it? I'll be sure to keep him above deck.

Mrs. Page. So will I; if he come under my natches, I'll never to sea again. Let's be revenged on him: let's appoint him a meeting: give him a show of comfort in his suit; and lead him on with a fine baited delay, till he hath pawned his horses to mine host of the Garter.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, I will consent to act any vil-lany against him that may not sully the chariness of our honesty. O, that my husband saw this letter! it would give eternal food to his jealousy.

Mrs. Page. Why, look where he comes; and my good man too; he's as far from jealousy as I am from giving him cause; and that, I hope, is an unmeasurable distance.

Mrs. Ford. You are the happier woman. Mrs. Page. Let's consult together against this greasy knight: Come hither. [They retire.

Enter FORD, PISTOL, PAGE, and NYM.

Ford. Well, I hope it be not so.

Pist. Hope is a curtail dog in some affairs: Sir John affects thy wife.

Ford. Why, sir, my wife is not young.

Pist. He woos both high and low, both rich and poor, Both young and old, one with another, Ford;

He loves thy gally-mawfry; Ford, perpend.

Ford. Love my wife? [go thou, Pist. With liver burning hot. Prevent, or Like Sir Actaeon he, with Ring-wood at thy O, odious is the name. heels:-

Pord. What name, sir? Pist. The horn, I say. Farewell. Take heed; have open eye; for thieves do foot by night: do sing.-Take heed, ere summer comes, or cuckoo birds Away, Sir Corporal Nym.——

Believe it, Page; he speaks sense.

Exit PISTOL. Ford. I will be patient; I will find out this. Nym. And this is true [to PAGE]. I like not the hnmour of lying. He hath wronged me in some humours; I should have borne the humoured letter to her; but I have a sword, and it shall bite upon my necessity. He loves your wife; there's the short and the long. My name is Corporal Nym; I speak, and I avouch. 'Tis true:—my name is Nym, and Falstaff loves your wife.—Adieul I love not the humour of bread and cheese; and there's the humour of Adieu. Exit NYM.

Poge. The humour of it, quothal here's a fellow frights humour ont of his wits

Ford. I will seek out Falstaff. ling rogue. Poge. I never heard such a drawling, affectFord. If I do find it, well.

Page. I will not believe such a Cataian though the priest of the town commended him for a true man.

Ford. 'Twas a good sensible fellow. Well.

Mrs. Poge. Whither go von. George?-Hark

Mrs. Ford. How now, sweet Frank? why art thou melancholy?

Ford. I melancholy! I am not melancholy .-Get you home; go.

Mrs. Ford. 'Faith, thou hast some crotchets in thy head now.-Will you go, Mistress Page? Mrs. Poge. Have with you.—You'll come to dinner, George? Look, who comes youder: she shall be our messenger to this paltry knight. Aside to Mrs. FORD.

Enter Mrs. QUICKLY.

Mrs. Ford. Trust me, I thought on her: she'll fit it. [Anne?

Mrs. Page. You are come to see my daughter Quick. Ay, forsooth; and, I pray, how does good Mistress Anne?

Mrs. Poge. Go in with us and see; we have an hour's talk with you.

Exeunt Mrs. PAGE, Mrs. FORD, and Mrs. QUICKLY.

Ford. You heard what this knave told me;

did you not?

Page. Yes; and you heard what the other told me?

Ford. Do you think there is truth in them? Page. Hang 'em slaves; I do not think the knight would offer it: but these that accuse him in his intent towards our wives are a yoke of his discarded men: very rogues, now they be out of service.

Ford. Were they his men?

Poge. Marry, were they.

Ford. I like it never the better for that .-Does he lie at the Garter?

Poge. Ay, marry, does he. If he should intend this voyage towards my wife, I would turn her loose to him; and what he gets of her more than sbarp words, let it lie on my head.

Ford. I do not misdoubt my wife; but I would be loath to turn them together. may be too confident: I would have nothing lie on my head: I cannot be thus satisfied.

Page. Look where my ranting host of the Garter comes: there is either liquor in his pate or money in his purse when he looks so merrily-How now, mine host?

Enter Host and Shallow.

·Host. How now, bully-rook! thou'rt a gentleman: cavalero-justice, I say.

Shal. I follow, mine host, I follow.—Good even, and twenty, good Master Pagel Master Page, will you go with ns? we have sport in Host. Tell him, cavalero-justice; tell him, bully-rook.

Shol. Sir, there is a fray to be fought between Sir Hugh the Welsh priest and Caius the French doctor. [with yon. Ford, Good mine host o' the Garter, a word

48

Host. What say'st thou, bully-rook?

(They go aside. Shal. Will you [to PAGE] go with us to behold it? My merry host hath had t e measuring of their weapons; and, I think, he hath appointed them contrary places: for, believe me, I hear the parson is no jester. Hark, I will tell you what our sport shall be.

Host. Hast thou no suit against my knight, my guest-cavalier.

Ford. None, I protest: but I'll give you a pottle of burnt sack to give me recourse to him, and tell him my name is Brook; only for a jest.

Host. My hand, bully: thou shalt have egress and regress; said I well? and thy name shall be Brook: it is a merry knight.--Will you go on, hearts?

Shal. Have with you, mine nost.

Page. I have heard the Frenchman hath good skill in his rapier.

Shal. Tut, sir, I could have told you more. In these times you stand on distance, your passes, stoccadoes, and I know not what: 'tis the heart, Master Page: 'tis here, 'tis here. I have seen the time with my long sword I would have made you four tall fellows skip like rats.

Host. Here, boys, here, here! shall we wag? Page. Have with you:-I had rather hear them scold than fight.

[Exeunt HOST, SHAL., and PAGE Ford. Though Page bea secure fool, and stands so firmly on his wife's frailty, yet I cannot put off my opinion so easily. She was in his company at Page's house; and what they made there I know not. Well, I will look further into 't: and I have a disguise to sound Falstaff: if I find her honest, I lose not my labour; if she be otherwise, 'tis labour well hestowed. Exit.

Scene II.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Falstaff and Pistol.

Fal. I will not lend thee a penny.

Pist. Why, then the world's mine oyster,

Which I with sword will open.

I will retort the sum in equipage.

Fal. Not a penny. I have been content, sir, you should lay my countenance to pawn: I have grated upon my good friends for three reprieves | terms; and in such wine and sugar of the best, for you and your coach-fellow, Nym; or else you | had looked through the grate, like a geminy of an's heart; and, I warrant you, they could never baboons. I am damned in hell for swearing to gentlemen my friends you were good soldiers and tall fellows: and when Mistress Bridget lost the handle of her fan, I took't upon mine [fifteen pence? honour thou hadst it not.

Fal. Reason, you rogue, reason. Think'st thou I'll endanger my soul gratis? At a word, I warrant you, all is one with her. hang no more about me, I am no gibbet for you:—go.—A short knife and a throng;—to your manor of Pickthatch, go.—You'll not bear a letter for me, yourogue!—You stand upon your honour!—Why, thou unconfinable baseness, it is as much as I can do to keep the terms of my honour precise. I, I, I myself sometimes, leaving the fear of heaven on the left hand, and hiding mine honour in my necessity, am fain to shuffle, to hedge, and to lurch; and yet you rogue, will, ensconce your | Master Ford, her husband, will be from home-phrases, and your bold-beating oaths, under the shelter of your honour! You will not do it,

Pist. I do relent. What wouldst thou more

Enter ROBIN.

Rob. Sir, here's a woman would speak with you.

Fal. Let her approach.

Enter Mrs. Ouickly.

Quick. Give your worship good-morrow. Fal. Good-morrow, good wife. Quick. Not so, an't please your worship.

Fal. Good maid, then.

Quick. I'll be sworn; as my mother was, the first hour I was born.

Fal. I do believe the swearer. What with me? Quick Shall I vouchsafe your worship a word or two?

Fal. Two thousand, fair woman: and I'll vouchsafe thee the hearing.

Quick. There is one, Mistress Ford, sir;-I pray, come a little nearer this ways:-I myself dwell with Master Doctor Caius.

Fal. Well, on: Mistress Ford, you say,-Quick. Your worship says very true: I pray your worship come a little nearer this ways.

Fal. I warrant thee nobody hears:-mine own people, mine own people.

Ouick. Are they so? Heaven bless them, and make them his servants!

Fal. Well: Mistress Ford;—what of her? Quick. Why, sir, she's a good creature. Lord, lord! your worship's a wanton. Well, heaven, forgive you, and all of us, I pray!

Fal. Mistress Ford; -come, Mistress Ford,-Quick. Marry, this is the short and the long of it; you have brought her into such a canaries as 'tis wonderful. The best courtier of them all, when the court lay at Windsor, could never have brought her to such a canary. Yet there has been knights, and lords, and gentlemen, with their coaches: I warrant you, coach after coach, letter after letter, gift after gift; smelling so sweetly, (all musk) and so rushling, I warrant you, in silk and gold; and in such alligant and the fairest, that would have won any womget an eye-wink of her.—I had myself twenty angels given me this morning; but I defy all angels, (in any such sort, as they say,) but in the way of honesty:—and, I warrant you, they could never get her so much as sip on a cup with Pist. Didst thou not share? hadst thou not the proudest of them all: and yet there has been eams, nay, which is more, pensioners; but, I

Fal. But what says she to me? be brief, my good she Mercury.

Quick. Marry, she hath received your letter; for the which she thank's you a thousand times; and she gives you to notify that her husband will be absence from his house between ten and eleven.

Fal. Ten and eleven?

Quick. Ay, forsooth; and then you may come and see the picture, she says, that you wot of;rags, your cat-a-mountain looks, your red lattice | Alast the sweet woman leads an ill life with him: he's a very jealous man: she leads a very frampold life with him, good beart.

Fal. Ten and eleven. Woman, commend me to her; I will not fail her.

Quick. Why, you say well: but I have another messenger to your worship. Mistress Page hath her hearty commendations to you too; -and let me tell you in your ear, she's as fartuous a civil, modest wife, and one (I tell you) that will not miss you morning nor even-ing prayer, as any is in Windsor, whose er be the other: and she bade me tell your worship that her husband is seldom from home; but she hopes there will come a time. I never knew a woman so dote upon a man; surely I think you have charms, la; yes, in truth.

Fal. Not I. I assure thee; setting the attraction of my good parts aside, I have no other charms. Quick. Blessing on your beart for 'tl

Fal. But, I pray thee, tell me this: has Ford's wife and Page's wife nequainted each other how they love me?

Ouick. That were a jest indeed!—they have not so little grace. I hope:-that were a trick indeed! But Mistress Page would desire you to send her your little page, of all loves: her hus-band has a maryellous infection to the little page: and, truly, Master Page is an honest man. Never a wife in Windsor leads a better life than she does; do what she will, say what she will, take all, pay all, go to bed when she list, rise when she list, all is as she will; and, truly, she deserves it: for if there be a kind woman in Windsor, she is one. You must send her your page; no remedy

Fal. Why, I will.

Quick. Nay, but do so then: and, look you, he may come and go between you both; and in any case have a nay-word that you may know one another's mind, and the boy never need to understand any thing; for 'tis not good that children should know any wickedness: old folks you know, have discretion, as they say, and know the world.

Fal. Fare thee well: commend me to them both: there's my purse; I am yet thy debtor. Boy, go along with this woman.-This news distracts me!

Enter BARDOLPH.

Bard. Sir John, there's one Master Brook below would fain speak with you, and be acquainted with you; and hath sent your worship a morning's draught of sack.

Fal. Brook is his name?

Bard. Ay, sir.
Fal. Call him in; [Exit BARDOLPH.] Such Brooks are welcome to me that o'erflow such Fal. And you, sir. Would you speak with Ford. I make bold to press with so little preparation upon you.

Fal. You're welcome: what's your will? Exit BARDOLPH. Give us leave, drawer. Ford. Sir, I am a gentleman that have spent much; my name is Brook.

Fal. Good Master Brook, I desire more acquaintance of yon.

Ford. Good Sir John, I sne for yours: not to charge you; for I must let you understand I think myself in better plight for a lender than you are: the which has something emboldened me to this unseasoned intrusion: for they say if money go before, all ways do lie open.

Fal. Money is a good soldier, sir, and will Ford. Troth, and I have a beg of money here troubles me; if you will help me to bear it, Sir John, take all or half for easing me of the carriage.

Fal. Sir, I know not how I may deserve to your porter. [the hearing. be your porter. Ford. I will tell you, sir, if you will give me Fal. Speak, good Master Brook; I shall be glad to be your servant.

Ford. Sir, I hear you are a scholar,-I will be brief with you,and you have been a man long known to me, though I had never so good means as desire to make myself acquainted with you. I shall discover a thing to you, wherein I must very much lay open mine own imperfection: but, good Sir John, as you have one eye upon my follies, as you hear them unfolded, turn another into the register of your own; that I may pass with a reproof the easier, sith you yourself know how easy it is to be such an offender.

Fal. Very well, sir; proceed.

Ford. There is a gentlewoman in this town, her husband's name is Ford.

Fal. Well, sir.
Ford. I have long loved ber, and I protest to you bestowed much on her; followed her with a doting observance; engrossed opportunities to meet her; fee'd every slight occasion that could but niggardly give me sight of her; not only bought many presents to give her, but have given largely to many to know what she would have given: briefly, I have pursued her as love hath pursued me; which hath been on the wing of all occasions. But whatsoever I have merited, either in my mind or in my means, meed, I am sure, I have received none; unless experience be a jewel; that I have purchased at an infinite rate; and that hath taught me to say this:

Love like a shadow flies, when substance love pursues;

Pursuing that that flies, and flying what pursues.

Fal. Have you received no promise of satisfaction at her hands?

Ford. Never. [pose? Fal. Have you importuned her to such a pur-Ford. Never.

Fal. Of what quality was your love, then?

Ford. Like a fair house built upon another man's ground; so that I have lost my edifice by mistaking the place where I erected it.

Fal. To what purpose have you unfolded this

Ford. When I have told you that, I have told you all. Some say that though she appear honest to me, yet in other places she enlargeth her mirth so far that there is shrewd construction made of her. Now, Sir John, here is the heart of my purpose. You are a gentleman of excellent breeding, admirable discourse, of great admittance, authentic in your place and person, generally allowed for your many war-like, court-like, and learned preparations.

Fal. O, sir!

Ford. Believe it, for you know it:-There is money; spend it, spend it; spend more; spend all I have; only give me so much of your time in exchange of it as to lay an amiable siege to the honesty of this Ford's wife; use your art of wooing, win her to consent to you; if any man may, you may as soon as any.

Fal. Would it apply well to the vehemency of your affection, that I should win what you would enjoy? Methinks you prescribe to yourself very preposterously.

Ford. O, understand my drift! She dwells so securely on the excellency of her honour that the folly of my soul dares not present itself; she is too bright to be looked against. Now, could I come to her with any detection in my hand, my desires had instance and argument to commend themselves; I could drive her then from the ward of her purity, her reputation, her marriage vow, and a thousand other her defences, which now are too strongly embattled against

e. What say you to 't, Sir John?
Fal. Master Brook, I will first make bold with your money; next, give me your hand: and last, as I am a gentleman, you shall, if you will, enjoy Ford's wife.

Ford. O good sir!

Fal. Master Brook, I say you shall.

Ford. Want no money, Sir John, you shall want none.

Fal. Want no Mistress Ford, Master Brook, you shall want none. I shall be with her (I may tell you) by her own appointment: even as you came in to me her assistant, or go-between, parted from me: I say, I shall be with her between ten and eleven; for at that time the jealous rascally knave, her husband, will be forth. Come you to me at night; you shall know how I speed.

Ford. I am blest in your acquaintance. Do you know Ford, sir?

Fal. Hang him, poor cuckoldly knavel I know him not:-yet I wrong him to call him poor; they say the jealous wittolly knave hath masses of money; for the which his wife seems to me well-favoured. I will use her as the key of the cuckoldly rogue's coffer; and there's my harvest-home.

Ford. I would you knew Ford, sir; that you might avoid him if you saw him.

Fal. Hang him, mechanical salt-butterroguel will stare him out of his wits; I will awe him rith my cudgel: it shall hang like a meteor o'er know, I will predominate o'er the peasant, and thou shalt lie with his wife.—Come to me soon at night:—Ford's a knave, and I will aggravate his stile: thou, Master Brook, shalt know him for a knave and cuckold:—come to me soon at night. Exil.

Ford, What a damned Epicurean rascal is this!—My heart is ready to crack with impa-tience.—Who says this is improvident jealousy? My wife hath sent to him, the hour is fixed, the match is made. Would any man have thought this?—See the hell of having a false woman! my bed shall be abused, my coffers ransacked, my reputation gnawn at; and I shall not only receive this villanous wrong, but stand under the adoption of abominable terms, and by him that does me this wrong. Terms! names!—— well; yet they are devils 'additions, the names of fiends: but cuckold I wittol-cuckold I the devilhimself hath not such a name. Page is an ass, a secure ass! he will trusthis wife; he will not be jealous! I will rather trust a Fleming with my butter, Parson Hugh the Welshman with my cheese, an Irishman with my aqua-vitae bottle, or a thief to walk my ambling gelding, than my wife with herself: then she plots, then she ruminates, then she devises: and what they think in their hearts they may effect, they will break their hearts but they will effect. Heaven be praised for my jealousy!-Eleven o'clock the hour:-I will prevent this, detect my wife, be revenged on Falstaff, and laugh at Page. I will about it; better three hours too soon than a minute too late. Fie, fie, fie, cuckold! cuckold! cuckold! Exit.

Scene III .- Windsor Park.

Enter Caius and Rugby.

Caius. Jack Rugby!

Rug. Sir?

Caius. Vat is de clock, Jack?

Rug. 'Tis past the hour, sir, that Sir Hugh promised to meet.

Caius. By gar, he has save his soul, dat he is no come; he has pray his Pible vell, dat he is no come: by gar, Jack Rugby, he is dead already, if he be come.

Rug. He is wise, sir; he knew your worship would kill him if he came.

Caius. By gar, de herring is no dead, so as I vill kill him. Take your rapier, Jack; I vili tell you how I vill kill him.

Rug. Alas, sir, I cannot fence. Caius. Villany, take your rapier. Rug. Forbear; here's company.

Enter Host, Shallow, Slender, and Page

Host. Bless thee, bully doctor.

Shal. Save you, Master Doctor Caius. Page. Now, good master doctor!

Slen. Give you good morrow, sir.

Caius. Vat be all you, one, two, tree, four, come for?

'Host. To see thee fight, to see thee foin, to see thee traverse, to see thee here, to see thee there; to see thee pass thy punto, thy stock, thy reverse, thy distance, thy montant. Host. Thou art a Castilian King Urinal!

Hector of Greece, my boy!

Caius. I pray you, bear vitness that me have stay six, or seven, two, tree hours for him, and he is no come.

Shal. He is the wiser man, master doctor: he is a curer of souls, and you a curer of bodies; if you should fight, you go against the hair of your professions; is it not true, Master Page?

Page. Master Shallow, you have yourself been a great fighter, though now a man of peace. Shal. Bodikins, Master Page, though I now be old, and of the peace, if I see a sword out my finger itches to make one: though we are justices, and doctors, and churchmen, Master Page, we have some salt of our youth in us; we are the sons of women, Master Page. Page. 'Tis true, Master Shallow.

Shal. It will he found so, Master Page. Master Doctor Caius, I am come to fetch you home. I am sworn of the peace; you have showed your-self a wise physician, and Sir Hugh hath shown himself a wise and patient churchman: you must go with me, master doctor.

Host. Pardon, guest justice:-A word, Monsienr Muck-water.

Caius. Muck-vater! vat is dat?

Host. Muck-water, in our English tongue, is valour, bully.

Caius. By gar, then I have as much muckvater as de Englishman:—Scurvy jack-dog priest! by gar, me vill cut his ears.

Host. He will clapperclaw thee tightly, bully.

Caius. Clapper-de-clawl vat is dat?

Host. That is, he will make thee amends.

Caius. By gar, me do look he shall clapper-de-claw me; for, by gar, me vill have it.

Host. And I will provoke him to 't, or let him 'wag.

Caius. Me tank you for dat.

Host. And, moreover, hully,—Bnt first, master guest, and Master Page, and eke Cavalero Slender, go you through the town to Frog-Aside to them. more.

Page. Sir Hugh is there, is he?

Host. He is there: see what humour he is in; and I will hring the doctor about by the fields. Will it do well?

Shal. We will do it.

Caius. By gar, me vill kill de priest: for he speak for a jack-an-ape to Anne Page.

Host. Let him die; but first sheathe thy impatience; throw cold water on thy choler; go about the fields with me through Frogmore; I will bring thee where Mistress Anne Page is, at a farm-house, a-feasting; and thou shalt woo Cryed game, said I well?

Caius. By gar, me tank you for dat: by gar, I love you; and I shall procure-a you de good guest, de earl, de knight, de lords, de gentlemen, my patients.

Host. For the which I will he thy adversary towards Anne Page; said I well?

Caius. By gar, 'tis good: vell said.

Host. Let us wag, then. Caius. Come to my heels, Jack Rughy. Exeunt.

ACT IIL

Scene I .- A Field near Frogmore.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans and Simple.

Era. I pray you now, good Master Slender's serving-man, and friend Simple hy your name, which way have you looked for Master Caius, that calls himself Doctor of Physick?

Sim. Marry, sir, the city-ward, the park-ward, every way; old Windsor way, and every way hut the town way. [also look that way.

Eva. I most fehemently desire you, you will

Sim. I will, sir.

Eva. 'Pless my soul! how full of cholers I am, and trempling of mind!—I shall he glad if he have deceived me:-how melancholies I am!-I will knog his urinals above his knave's costard when I have good opportunities for the 'ork---'pless my soul! Sings.

> To shallow——

Mercy on mel I have a great disposition to cry.

Melodious birds siog madrigals-Wheo as I sat io Pabylon-And a thousand vagram posies.
To shallow——

Sim. Yonder he is, coming this way, Sir Hugh. Eva. He's welcome:

To shallow rivers, to whose falls-

Heaven prosper the right!-What weapons is he?

Sim. No weapons, sir. There comes my master, Master Shallow, and another gentleman, from Frogmore, over the stile, this way. Eva. Pray you, give me my gown; or else keep it in your arms.

Enter Page, Shallow, and Slender.

Shal. How now, master parson? Good-morrow, good Sir Hugh. Keep a gamester from the dice, and a good student from his book, and it is wondorful.

Sien. Ah, sweet Anne Page! Page. Save yon, good Sir Hngh!

Eva. 'Pless you from his mercy sake, all of you! Shal. What the sword and the word! Do you study them both, master parson?

Page. And yonthful still, in your doublet and hose, this raw rheumatic day?

Eva. There is reasons and causes for it.

Page. We are come to you to do a good office, master parson.

Eva. Fery well: What is it?

Page. Yonder is a most reverend gentleman, who, belike having received wrong by some person, is at most odds with his own gravity and patience that ever you saw.

Shal. I have lived fourscore years and upward; I never heard a man of his place, gravity, and learning, so wide of his own respect.

Eva. What is he?

Page. I think you know him: Master Doctor Caius, the renowned French physician.

Eva. Got's will, and his passion of my heart! I had as lief you would tell me of a mess of porridge.

Page. Why? Eva. He has no more knowledge in Hibocrates and Galen, - and he is a knave besides; a cowardly knave, as you would desires to be acquainted withal.

Page. I warrant you he's the man should fight with him.

Sien. O, sweet Anne Pagel Shal. It appears so, by his weapons.—Keep them asunder; -here comes Doctor Caius.

Enter Host, Caius, and Rugby.

Page. Nay, good master parson, keep in your weapon.

Shal. So do you, good master doctor.

Host. Disarm them, and let them question; let them keep their limbs whole and hack our English.

Caius. I pray you, let-a me speak a word vit Verefore vill you not meet-a me? your ear.

Eva. Pray you use your patience: in good time.

dog, John ape.

Eva. Pray you, let us not be laughing-stogs to other men's humours; I desire you in friendship, and I will one way or another make you amends:-I will knog your urinals about your knave's cogscomb, for missing your meetings and appointments.

Caius. Diable!-Jack Rugby,-mine de Jarterre, have 1 not stay for him to kill him, have I not, at de place I did appoint?

Eva. As I am a Christian soul, now, look you, this is the place appointed. I'll be judgment by mine host of the Garter.

Host. Peace, I say, Gallia and Gaul, French and Welsh; soul-curer and body-curer.

Caius. Ay, dat is very good! excellent!

Host. Peace, I say; hear mine host of the Garter. Am I politic? am I subtle? am I a Machiavel? Shall I lose my doctor? no; he gives me the potions and the motions. Shall I lose my parson? my priest? my Sir Hugh? no; he gives me the proverbs and the no-verbs. Give me thy hand, terrestrial; so:-Give me thy hand, celestial, so.—Boys of art, I have violent proceedings all my neighbours shall deceived you both; I have directed you to wrong cry aim. Shal. Trust me, a mad host:-Follow gentlemen, follow.

Slen. O. sweet Anne Page!

Exeunt Shal., Slen., Page, and Host. Caius. Hai do I perceive dat? have you make-a de sot of us? ha, hai

Eva. This is well; he has made us his vloutingstog,—I desire you that we may be friends; and let us knog our prains together, to be revenge on this same scall, scurvy, cogging companion, the host of the Garter.

Caius. By gar, vit all my heart; he promise to bring me vere is Anne Page; by gar, he deceive me too.

Eva. Well, I will smite his noddles:-Pray you, follow. Exeunt.

Scene IL-The Street in Windsor.

Enter Mrs. PAGE and ROBIN.

Mrs. Page. Nay, keep your way, little gallant; you were wont to be a follower, but now you are a leader. Whether had you rather lead mine eyes or eye your master's heels?

Rob. I had rather, forsooth, go before you like a man than follow him like a dwarf.

Mrs. Page. O you are a flattering boy; now, I see, you'll be a courtier.

Enter Ford.

Ford. Well met, Mistress Page. Whither go yon? sbe at home? Mrs. Page. Truly, sir, to see your wife. Is Ford. Ay; and as idle as she may hang together, for want of company: I think, if your husbands were dead, you two would marry.

Mrs. Page. Be sure of that, -two other husbands. [cock?

Ford. Where had you this pretty weather-Mrs. Page. I cannot tell what the dickens his name is my husband had him off: Caius. By gar, you are de coward, de Jack do you call your knight's name, sirrahl

Rob. Sir John Falstaff.
Ford. Sir John Falstaff!
Mrs. Page. He, he; I can never hit on's name. There is such a league between my good man and he!-Is your wife at home indeed?

Ford. Indeed she is.

Mrs. Page. By your leave, sir;—I am sick till I see her. Exeunt Mrs. PAGE and ROBIN.
Ford. Has Page any brains? hath he any eyes? hath he any thinking? Sure, they sleep: he hath no use of them. Why, this boy will carr a letter twenty miles as easy as a cannon will shoot pointblank twelve score. He pieces out his wife's inclination; he gives her folly motion and advantage: and now she's going to my wife, and Falstaff's boy with her. A man may hear this shower sing in the windl-and Falstaff's boy with her!-Good plots!-they are laid; and our revolted wives share damnation together. Well; I will take him, then torture my wife, pluck the borrowed veil of modesty from the so seeming Mistress Page, divulge Page himself this than mocked; for it is as positive as the earth is firm that Falstaff is there. I will go. ter Page, Shallow, Slender, Hos Sir Hugh Evans, Caius, and Rugby. SHALLOW, SLENDER, HOST.

Shal., Page, &c. Well met, Master Ford.
Ford. Trust me, a good linot: I have good cheer at home; and, I pray you, all go with me.
Shal. I must excuse myself, Master Ford.

Slen. And so must I, sir; we have appointed to dine with Mistress Anne, and I would not break with her for more money than I'll speak of.

Shal. We have lingered about a match between Anne Page and my cousin Slender, and this day we shall have our answer. Page. Slen. I hope I have your good will, father Page. You have, Master Slender; I stand wholly for you:-but my wife, master doctor, is for you altogether.

Caius. Ay, by gar; and de maid is love a-me; my nursh-a Quickly tell me so mush.

Host. What say you to young Master Fenton? he capers, he dances, he has eyes of youth, he writes verses, he speaks holiday, he smells April and May; he will carry 't, he will carry 't;

'tis in his buttons; he will carry 't.

Page. Not by my consent, I promise yon. The gentleman is of no having: he kept company with the wild Prince and Poins; he is of too high a region, he knows too much. No; he shall not knit a knot in his fortunes with the finger of my substance: if he take her, let him take her simply; the wealth I have waits on my consent, and my consent goes not that way.

Ford. I beseech you, heartily, some of you go home with me to dinner: besides your cheer, you shall have sport; I will show you a monster.-Master doctor, you shall go;-so shall you, Master Page; -and you, Sir Hngh.

Shal. Well, fare you well:—we shall have the freer wooing at Master Page's.

Exeunt SHAL, and SLEN. Caius. Go home, John Rugby; I come anon.

Exit RUGBY. I will to my Host. Earewell, my hearts, honest knight Falstaff, and drink canary with him. Exit HOST.

Ford. [Aside.] I think I shall drink in pipewine first with him; I'll make him dance.

Will you go, gentles?

All. Have with you, to see this monster.

Scene III .- A Room in Ford's House.

Enter Mrs. FORD and Mrs. PAGE.

Mrs. Ford. What, John! what, Robert! Mrs. Page. Quickly, quickly: Is the hnckhasket-

Mrs. Ford. I warrant:-What, Robin, I say.

Enter Servants, with a basket.

Mrs. Page. Come, come, come. Mrs. Ford. Here, set it down.

Mrs. Page. Give your men the charge; we must he brief.

Mrs. Ford. Marry, as I told you hefore, John, and Robert, be ready here hard by in the hrewhouse; and when I suddenly call you, come forth, and, without any pause or staggering, take this basket on your shoulders: that done, trudge with it in all haste, and carry it among the whitsters in Datchet mead, and there empty it in the muddy ditch, close by the Thames side.

Mrs. Page. You will do it?

Mrs. Ford. I have told them over and over; they lack no direction. Begone, and come when Exeunt Servents. yon are called.

Mrs. Page. Here comes little Robin.

Enter Robin.

Mrs. Ford. How now, my eyas-musket?

what news with you?

Rob. My master, Sir John, is come in at your hack-door, Mistress Ford, and requests your company. [been true to us?

Mrs. Page. You little Jack-a-lent, have you tattling woman.-

Rob. Ay, I'll he sworn. My master knows not of your being here; and hath threatened to put me into everlasting liberty, if I tell you of it; for he swears he'll turn me away.

Mrs. Page. Thou'rt a good boy; this secrecy of thine shall he a tailor to thee, and shall make thee a new doublet and hose. - I'll go hide me. Mrs. Ford. Do so .- Go tell thy master I am alone. Mrs. Page, remember you your cue.

Exit ROBIN. Mrs. Page. I warrant thee; if I do not act it, hiss me. Exit MRS. PAGE.

Mrs. Ford. Go to then; we'll use this unwholesome humidity, this gross watery pum-pion;—we'll teach him to know turtles from jays.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Have I caught thee, my heavenly jewel? Why, now let me die, for I have lived long enough; this is the period of my ambition: O this blessed hour!

Mrs. Ford. O sweet Sir John! Fal. Mistress Ford, I cannot cog, I cannot prate. Mrs. Ford. Now shall I sin in my wish. I would thy husband were dead; I'll speak it hefore the hest lord, I would make thee my lady. Mrs. Ford. I your lady, Sir John! alas, I should he a pitiful lady.

Fal. Let the court of France show me such another; I see how thine eye would emulete the diamond: thou hast the right arched hent of the hrow, that hecomes the ship-tire, the tire-val-iant, or any tire of Venetian admittance.

Mrs. Ford. A plain kerchief, Sir John: my hrows become nothing else; northat well neither.

Fal. Thou art a traitor to say so: thou wouldst make an absointe courtier; and the firm fixture of thy foot would give an excellent motion to thy gait, in a semi-circled farthingale. I see what thou wert, if fortune thy foe were not; nature is thy friend. Come, thon canst not hide it. Mrs. Ford. Believe me, there's no such thing in me.

Fal. What made me love thee? let that persuade thee, there's something extraordinary in thee. Come, I cannot cog, and say thou art this and that, like a many of these lisping hawthorn buds that come like women in men's apparel, and smell like Buckler's-bury in simple-time; I cannot: but I love thee; none but thee; and thou deservest it.

Mrs. Ford. Do not betray me, sir; I fear yon love Mrs. Page.

Fal. Thou mightst as well say I love to walk hy the counter-gate; which is as hateful to me as the reek of a lime-kiln.

Mrs. Ford. Wel, heaven knows how I love you; and you shall one day find it.

Fal. Keep in that mind; I'll deserve it. Mrs. Ford. Nay, I must tell you, so you do, or else I could not be in that mind.

Rob. [Within.] Mistress Ford, Mistress Ford!

here's Mrs. Page at the door, sweating, and blowing, and looking wildly, and would needs speak with you presently.

Fal. She shall not see me; I will ensconce me behind the arras.

Mrs. Ford. Pray you, do so: she's a very [FALSTAFF hides himself.

Enter Mrs. PAGE and ROBIN.

What's the matter? how now?

Mrs. Page. O Mistress Ford, what have you ne? You're shamed, you are overthrown, you are undone for ever.

Mrs. Fard. What's the matter, good Mistress Page?

Mrs. Page. O well-a-day, Mistress Ford! having an honest man to your husband, to give , him such cause of suspicion!

Mrs. Ford. What cause of suspicion?

Mrs. Page. What cause of suspicion!-out upon you! how am I mistook in you?

Mrs. Ford. Why, alas! what's the matter? Mrs. Page. Your husband's coming hither, woman, with all the officers in Windsor, to search for a gentleman, that, he says, is here now in the house, by your consent, to take an ill advantage of his absence: you are undone

Mrs. Fard. Speak louder .- [Aside.]-'Tis not so, I hope.

Mrs. Page. Pray heaven it be not so, that you have such a man here; but 'tis more certain your husband's coming with haif Windsor at his heels, to search for such a one. I come before to tell you; if you know yourself clear, why, I am glad of it; but if you have a friend here convey, convey him out. Be not amazed: call all your senses to you; defend your reputation, or bid farewell to your good life for ever.

Mrs. Fard. What shall I do?-There is a gentleman, my dear friend; and I fear not mine own shame so much as his peril: I had rather than a thousand pounds he were out of the house.

Mrs. Page. For shame, never stand you had rather, and you had rather; your husband's here at hand, bethink you of some conveyance: in the house you cannot hide him.-O, how have you deceived me!-Look, here is a basket; he be of any reasonable stature, he may creep in here; and throw foul linen upon him, as if it were going to bucking: or, it is whiting-time, send him by your two men to Datchet mead.

Mrs. Fard. He's too big to go in there.

What shall I do?

Re-enter Falstaff.

Fal. Let me see't, let me see't! O let me see't! I'll in, I'll in; follow your friend's counsel:-I'll in.

Mrs. Page. What! Sir John Falstaff! Are these your letters, knight?

Fal. I love thee, and none but thee; help me away: let me creep in here; I'll never-

> [He goes into the basket; they caver him with foul linen.

Mrs. Page. Help to cover your master, boy. Call your men. Mistress Ford:—You dissembling knight!

Mrs. Ford. What, John! Robert! John! [Exit ROBIN. Re-enter Servents.] Go take up these clothes here, quickly; where's the cowl-staff? look, how you drumble: carry them to the laundress in Datchet mead; quickly, come.

Enter FORD, PAGE, CAIUS, and Sir HUGH EVANS.

Fard. Pray you, come near: if I suspect without cause, why, then make sport at me, then let me be your jest; I deserve it .-- How now? whither bear you this?

Serv. To the laundress, forsooth.

Mrs. Ford. Why, what have you to do whither they bear it? You were best meddle with buck-washing.

Ford. Buck? I would I could wash myself of the buck! Buck, buck, buck? Ay, buck; I warrant you, buck; and of the season too; It shall appear. [Exeunt Servants with the basket.] Gentlemen, I have dreamed to-night; I'll tell you my dream. Here, here, here be my keys: ascend my chambers, search, seek, find out: I'll warrant we'll unkennel the fox:-Let me stop this way first:—so, now uncape.

you wrong yourself too much.

Fard. True, Master Page.-Up, gentlemen; you shall see sport anon: follow me, gentle-Eva. This is fery fantastical humours and jealousies.

Caius. By gar, 'tis no de fashion of France: it is not jealous in France.

Page. Nay, follow him, gentlemen; see the issue of his search. [Exeunt Evans, Page, and Caius. Mrs. Page. Is there not a double excellency in this? Mrs. Ford. I know not which pleases me better, that my husband is deceived, or Sir John.

Mrs. Page. What a taking was he in when your husband asked who was in the basket!

Mrs. Fard. I am half afraid he will have need of washing; so throwing him into the water will do him a benefit.

Mrs. Page. Hang him, dishonest rascal! I would all of the same strain were in the same distress.

Mrs. Ford. I think my husband hath some special suspicion of Falstaff's being here; for I never saw him so gross in his jealousy till

Mrs. Page. I will lay a plot to try that: and we will yet have more tricks with Falstaff: his dissolute disease will scarce obey this medicine.

Mrs. Fard. Shall we send that foolish carrion, Mrs. Quickly, to him, and excuse his throwing into the water; and give him another hope, to betray him to another punishment?

Mrs. Page. We'll do it; let him be sent for to-morrow eight o'clock, to have amends.

Re-enter FORD, PAGE, CAIUS, and Sir HUGH. EVANS.

Fard. I cannot find him: maybe the knave bragged of that he could not compass.

Mrs. Page. Heard you that?

Mrs. Fard. Ay, ay, peace:—You use me well, Master Ford, do you?

Fard. Ay, I do so. [your thoughts! Mrs. Ford. Heaven make you better than Master Ford. Ford. Amen.

Mrs. Page. You do yourself mighty wrong, Ford. Ay, ay; I must bear it.

Eva. If there be any pody in the house, and in the chambers, and in the coffers, and in the presses heaven forgive my sins at the day of judgment!

Caius. By gar, nor I too; dere is no-bodies. Page. Fie, fie, Master Ford! are you not a shamed? What spirit, what devil suggests this imagination? I would not have your distemper in this kind for the wealth of Windsor Castle.

Ford. Tis my fault, Master Page: I suffer for it. Eva. You suffer for a pad conscience: your wife is as honest a 'omans as I will desires among five thousand, and five hundred too.

Caius. By gar, I see 'tis an honest woman.
Ford. Well;—I promised you a dinner:—
Come, come, walk in the park: I pray you, pardon me; I will here after make known to you why I have done this .- Come, wife; -come, Mistress Page; I pray you, pardon me; pray heartily, pardon me.

Page. Let's go in, gentlemen; but, trust me, we'll mock him. I do invite you to-morrow morning to my house to breakfast; after, we'll a-birding together; I have a fine hawk for the bush. Shall it be so?

Ford. Any thing. [company. Eva. If there is one, I shall make two in the [company. Caius. If there he one or two, I shall make-a de turd.

Eva. In your teeth: for shame. Ford. Pray you go, Master Page.

Eva. I pray you now, remembrance to-morrow on the lousy knave, mine host.

Caius. Dat is good; hy gar, vit all my heart.

Eva. A lousy knave; to have his gibes and his mockeries. Exeunt.

Scene IV .- A Room in Page's House.

Enter Fenton and Mrs. Anne Page.

Fent. I see, I cannot get thy father's love; Therefore, no more turn me to him, sweet Nan. Anne. Alas! how then?

Why, thou must he thyself. Fent. He doth object I am too great of birth; And that, my state being gall'd with my expense, I seek to heal it only by his wealth. Besides these, other hars he lays before me,-My riots past, my wild societies; And tells me 'tis a thing impossible I should love thee but as a property.

Anne. Maybe he tells you true? [come! Fent. No; heaven so speed me in my time to Albeit, I will confess, thy father's wealth Was the first motive that I woo'd thee, Anne: Yet, wooing thee, I found thee of more value Than stamps in gold, or snms in sealed bags; And 'tis the very riches of thyself That now I aim at.

Anne. Gentle Master Fenton. Yet seek my father's love; still seek it, sir: If opportunity and humblest suit Cannot attain it, why then.—Hark you hither.

They converse apart.

Enfer SHALLOW, SLENDER, and Mrs. QUICKLY.

Shal. Break their talk, Mistress Quickly; my kinsman sball speak for himself.

'slid, Slen. I'll make a shaft or a bolt on't; tis hut venturing.

Shal. Be not dismayed. Slen. No; she shall not dismay me. I care not for that,-hut that I am afeard.

Quick. Hark ye: Master Slender would speak a word with you. [choice. Anne. I come to him. This is my father's Quick. And how does good Master Fenton? Pray you, a word with you.

Shal. She's coming; to her, coz. O hoy, thou hadst a father!

Slen. I had a father, Mistress Anne-my uncle can tell you good jests of him:-Pray you. uncle, tell Mistress Anne the jest, how my father stole two geese out of a pen, good uncle.

Shal. Mistress Anne, my cousin loves you. Slen. Ay, that I do; as well as I love any woman in Gloucestershire.

Shal. He will maintain you like a gentle-Slen. Ay, that I will, come cut and long-tail, under the degree of a 'squire.

Shal. He will make you a hundred and fifty pounds jointure. for himself.

Anne. Good Master Shallow, let him woo Shal. Marry, I thank you for it; I thank you for that good comfort. She calls yon, coz; I'll leave you.

Anne. Now, Master Slender. Slen. Now, good Mistress Anne.

Anne. What is your will?

Slen. My will? 'od's heartlings, that's a pretty jest indeed! I ne'er made my will yet, I thank heaven; I am not sncb a sickly creature, I give heaven praise. you with me

Anne. I mean, Master Slender, what would Slen. Truly, for mine own part I would little or nothing with you. Your father and my uncle have made motions: if it he my luck, so: if not, happy man be his dole! They can tell you how things go better than I can. You may ask your father; here be comes.

Why, how now! what does Master Fenton here? You wrong me, sir, thus still to haunt my house: I told you, sir, my daughter is disposed of.

Fent. Nay, Master Page, he not impatient. Mrs. Page. Good Master Fenton, come not to my child.

Page. She is no match for you.

Fent. Sir, will you hear me?

Page. No, good Master Fenton. Come, Master Shallow; come, son Slender, in:-Fenton.

Knowing my mind, you wrong me, Master [Exeunt PAGE, SHAL., and SLEN.

Quick. Speak to Mrs. Page Fent. Good Mistress Page, for that I love your daughter In such a righteous fashion as I do, Perforce, against all checks, rebukes, and man-

Anne. Good mother, do not marry me to yond fool. [better hushand.

Mrs. Page. I mean it not; I seek you a Quick. That's my Master, Master Doctor. Anne. Alas! I had rather he set quick i' the earth.

And howled to death with turnips.

Mrs. Page. Come, trouble not yourself. Good Master Fenton,

I will not be your friend, nor enemy: My daughter will I question how she loves you, And as I find her, so am I affected; Till then, farewell, sir: She must needs go in;

Her father will be angry.
[Exeunt Mrs. PAGE and Anne. Fent. Farewell, gentle mistress; farewell,

Quick. This is my doing, now:—Nay, said I, will you cast away your child on a fool, and a physician? Look on Master Fenton:-this [to-night

Fent. I thank thee; and I pray thee, once Give my sweet Nan this ring. There's for thy pains.

[Exit Quick. Now heaven send thee good fortune! A kind heart he hath: a woman would run through fire and water for such a kind heart. But yet I would my master had Mistress Anne: or I would Master Slender had her: or, in sooth, I would Master Fenton had her: I will do what I can for them all three; for so I have promised, and I'll be as good as my word; but he sent me word to stay within: I like his money speciously for Master Fenton. of another errand to Sir John Falstaff from my What a beast am I to slack two mistresses.

Scene V .-- A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Bardolph, I say,-

Bard. Here, sir.

Fal. Go fetch me a quart of sack; put a toast in 't. [Exit BARD.] Have I lived to be carried in a basket, like a barrow of butcher's offel; and to be thrown into the Thames? Well, if I be served such another trick, I'll have my brains ta'en out and butter'd, and give them to a dog for a new year's gift. The rogues slighted me into the river with as little remorse as they would have drowned a bitch's blind puppies, fifteen i' the litter: and you may know by my size that I have a kind of alacrity in sinking; if the bottom were as deep as hell I should down. I had been drowned but that the shore was shelvy and shallow: a death that I abhor; for the water swells a man; and what a thing should I have been when I had been swelled! I should have been a mountain of mummy.

Re-enter BARDOLPH, with the wine.

Bord. Here's Mistress Quickly, sir, to speak with you.

Fal. Come, let me pour in some sack to the Thames water; for my belly's as cold as if I had swallowed snow-balls for pills to cool the reins. Call her in.

Bard. Come in, woman.

Enter Mrs. QUICKLY.

Quick. By your leave; I cry you mercy. Give your worship good-morrow.

me a pottle of sack finely.

Bard. With eggs, sir?

Fal. Simple of itself; I'll no pullet-sperm in my brewage. - [Exit Bardolph.] -- How now?

Quick. Marry, sir, I come to your worship from Mistress Ford.

Fal. Mistress Ford! I have had ford enough: I was thrown into the ford: I have my belly full of ford.

Quick. Alas the day! good heart, that was not her fault: she does so take on with her men: they mistook their erection. [woman's promise.

Fal. So did I mine, to build upon a foolish Ouick. Well, she laments, sir, for it, that it would yearn your heart to see it. Her husband goes this morning a-birding; she desires you once more to come to her between eight and nine; I must carry her word quickly: she'll make you amends, I warrant you.
Fal. Well, I will visit her. Tell

Tell her so; and bid her think what a man is: let her consider his frailty, and then judge of my merit.

Quick. I will tell her. Fal. Do so. Between nine and ten, say'st Quick. Eight and nine, sir.
Fal. Well, begone: I will not miss her.

Quick. Peace be with you, sir. Exit. Fal. I marvel I hear not of Master Brook: Well, I must well. O, here he comes.

Enter FORD.

Ford. Bless you, sirl

Fal. Now, Master Brook? you come to know what hath passed between me and Ford's wife.

Ford. That, indeed, Sir John, is my business. Fal. Master Brook, I will not lie to you; I was at her house the hour she appointed me.

Ford. And how sped you, sir?
Fal. Very Ill-favouredly, Master Brook.
Ford. How so, sir? Did she change her determination?

Fal. No, Master Brook; but the peaking cornuto her husband, Master Brook, dwelling in a continual 'larum of jealousy, comes me in the instant of our encounter, after we had embraced, kissed, protested, and, as it were, spoke the prologue of our comedy; and at his heels a rabble of his companions, thither provoked and instigated by his distemper, and forsooth, to search his house for his wife's love.

Ford. What! while you were there? Fal. While I was there. [not find you:

Ford. And did he search for you and could Fal. You shall hear. As good luck would have it, comes in one Mistress Page; gives intelligence of Ford's approach; and, by her invention and Ford's wife's distraction, they conveyed me into a buck-basket.

Ford. A buck-basket!

Fal. By the Lord, a buck-basket: rammed me in with foul shirts and smocks, socks, foul stockings, and greasy napkins; that, Master Brook, there was the rankest compound of villanous smell that ever offended nostril.

Ford. And how long lay you there? Fal. Nay, you shall hear, Master Brook, what I have suffered to bring this woman to evil for your good. Being thus crammed in the basket, Fal. Take away these chalices. Go, brew acouple of Ford's knaves, his hinds, were called forth by their mistress to carry me in the name of foul clothes to Datchet-lane: they took me on their shoulders; met the jealous knave their master in the door; who asked them once or twice what they had in their basket: I quaked for fear lest the lunatic knave would have searched it; but fate, ordaining he should be a cuckold, held his hand. Well: on went he for a leave to play. search, and away went I for foul clothes. But mark the sequel, Master Brook; I suffered the pangs of three several deaths: first, an intolerable fright to be detected with n jealous rotten bell-wether: next, to be compassed, like a good bilbo, in the circumference of a peck, hilt to point, heel to head: and then, to be stopped in, like a strong distillation, with stinking clothes that fretted in their own grease: think of that, a man of my kidney,—think of that: that am as subject to heat as butter; a man of continual dissolution and thaw; it was a miracle to 'scape suffocation. And in the height of this bath, when I was more than half-stewed in grease, like a Dutch dish, to be thrown into the Thames, and cooled, glowing hot, in that surge, like a horse-shoe; think of that,—hissing hot,— think of that, Master Brook.

Ford. In good sadness sir, I am sorry that for my sake you have suffered all this. My suit, then, is desperate; you'll undertake her no more.

Fal. Master Brook, I will be thrown into Etna, as I have been into Thames, ere I will leave her thus. Her husband is this morning gone a-birding: I have received from her another embassy of meeting; 'twixt eight and nine is the hour, Master Brook.

Ford. 'Tis past eight already, sir.

Fal. Is it? I will then address me to my appointment. Come to me at your convenient leisure, and you shall know how I speed; and the conclusion shall be crowned with your en-joying her. Adieu. You shall have her, Mas-ter Brook; Master Brook, you shall cuckold Ford. Exit.

Ford. Hum! hal is this a vision? is this a dream? do I sleep? Master Ford, awake; awake, Master Ford; there's a hole made in your best coat, Master Ford. This 'tis to be married! this 'tis to have linen and buck-baskets!-Well, I will proclaim myself what I am: I will now take ! the lecher; he is at my house: he cannot 'scape | me; 'tis impossible he should; he cannot creep into a halfpenny purse nor into a pepper box; but, lest the devil that guides him should aid him, I will search impossible places. Though what I am I cannot avoid, yet to be what I would not shall not make me tame; if I have horns to make one mad, let the proverb go with me, I'll be horn mad. Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I .- The Street.

Enfer Mrs. PAGE, Mrs. QUICKLY, and WILLIAM

Mrs. Page. Is he at Master Ford's already, think'st thon?

Quick. Sure he is by this; or will be presently; but truly he is very courageous mad about his throwing into the water. Mistress Ford desires you to come suddenly.

Mrs. Page. I'll be with her by and by; I'll but bring my young man here to school. Look, where his master comes; 'tis a playing day, I see.

Enfer Sir Hugh Evans.

How now, Sir Hugh? no school to-day?

Eva. No: Master Slender is let the boys -

Quick. Blessing of his heart!

Mrs. Page. Sir Hugb, my husband says my son profits nothing in the world at his book; I pray you ask him some questions in his accidence.

Eva. Come hitber, William; hold up your head; come.

Mrs. Page. Come on, sirrah: hold up your . head; answer your master; be not afraid.

Eva. William.howmanynumbersisinnouns? Will. Two.

Quick. Truly, I thought there had been one number more; because they say od's nouns. Eva. Peace your tattlings. What is fair, William?

Will. Pulcher.

Ouick. Polecats there are fairer things than polecats, sure.

Eva. You are a very simplicity, 'oman; I What is lapis, William? pray you, peace. Will. A stone.

Eva. And what is a stone, William?

Will. A pebble. Eva. No, it is lapis: I pray you remember in your prain.

Will. Lapis.

Eva. That is good, William. What is he, William, that does lend articles?

Will. Articles are borrowed of the pronoun; and be thus declined, Singulariter, nominativo, hic, hace, hoc.

Eva. Nominativo, hig, hag, hog;—pray you, mark: genitivo, hujus. Well, what is your accusative case?

Will. Accusativo, hinc.

Eva. I pray you, have your remembrance, aild. Accusativo, hing, hang, hog. [rant you. Quick. Hang hog is Latin for bacon, I war-

Will. O-vocativo, O.
Eva. Remember, William, focative is caret.
Quick. And that's a good root.
Eva. 'Oman, forbear.

Mrs. Page. Peace.

Eva. What is your genitive case plural, William?

Will. Genitive case?

Eva. Ay. Will, Genitive,—horum, harum, horum. Quick. 'Vengeance of Jenny's case! fie on her!-never name her, child, if she be a whore. Eva. For shame, 'oman.

Quick. You do ill to teach the child such words: he teaches him to hick and to hack, which they'll do fast enough of themselves, and to call horum: fie upon you!

Eva. 'Oman, art thou lunatics? hast thon no understandings for thy cases, and the numbers of the genders? Thou art as foolish Christian creatures as I would desires

Mrs. Page. Pr'ythee, hold thy peace. Eva. Show me now, William, some declensions of your pronouns.

Will. Forsooth, I have forgot.

Eva. It is ki, kae, cod; if you forget your kies, your kaes, and your cods, you must be preeches. Go your ways and play, go.

Mrs. Page. He is a hetter scholar than I thought he was.

Eva. He is a good sprag memory.

Mrs. Page. Adieu, good Sir Hugh. [Exit Sir Hugh.] Get you home, boy.—Come, we stay too long. [Exeunt.

Scene II .- A Room in Ford's House.

Enter Falstaff and Mrs. Ford.

Fal. Mistress Ford, your sorrow hath eaten up my sufferance: I see you are obsequious in your love, and I profess requital to a hair's breadth; not only, Mistress Ford, in the simple office of love, but in all the accoutrement, complement, and ceremony of it. But are you sure of your husband now?

Mrs. Ford. He is a-birding, sweet Sir John. Mrs. Page. [Within.] What hoa, gossip

Ford, what hoa!

Mrs. Ford. Step into the chamber, Sir John. Exit FALSTAFF.

Enter Mrs. PAGE.

Mrs. Page. How now, sweetheart? who's at home beside yourself?

Mrs. Ford. Why, none but mine own people. Mrs. Page. Indeed?

Mrs. Ford. No, certainly; -- Speak louder. Aside.

Mrs. Page. Truly I am so glad you have nobody here.

Mrs. Ford. Why?

Mrs. Page. Why, woman, your husband is in his old lunes again: he so takes on yonder with my husband; so rails against all married man- | beat her. kind: so curses all Eve's daughters, of what complexion soever; and so buffets himself on the forehead, crying Peer-oul, peer-oul! that any madness I ever yet beheld seemed but tameness, civility, and patience, to this his distemper heis in now: I am glad the fat knight is not here. Mrs. Ford. Why? does he talk of him?

Mrs. Page. Of none but him; and swears he was carried out, the last time he searched for him, in a basket: protests to my husband he is now here; and hath drawn him and the rest of their company from their sport to make another experiment of his suspicion; but I am glad the knight is not here; now he shall see his own foolery.

Mrs. Ford. How near is he, Mistress Page? Mrs. Page. Hard by; at street end; he will be here anon.

Mrs. Ford. I am undone!—The knight is Mrs. Page. Why, then, you are utterly ashamed, and he's but a dead man. What a utterly woman are you!-Away with him, away with him; better shame than murder.

Mrs. Ford. Which way should he go? How should I bestow him? Shall I put him into i the basket again?

Re-enter Falstaff. -

Fal. No, I'll come no more i' the basket.

May I not go out ere he come?

Mrs. Page. Alas! three of Master Ford's brothers watch the door with pistols, that i none shall issue out: otherwise you might slip away ere he came. But what make you here?

Fal. What shall I do?-I'll creep up into the chimney.

Mrs.Ford.Theretheyalways used to discharge their birding pieces. Creep into the kiln-hole.

Fal. Where is it? Mrs. Ford. He will seek there, on my word. Neither press, coffer, chest, trunk, well, vault, but he hath an abstract for the remembrance of such places, and goes to them by his note. There is no hiding you in the house. Fal. Pil go out then.

Mrs. Page. If you go out in your own semblance, you die, Sir John. Unless you go out disguised,

Mrs. Ford. How might we disguise him? Mrs. Page. Alas the day, I know not. There is no woman's gown big enough for him; otherwise he might put on a hat, a muffler, and a kerchief, and so escape.

Fal. Good hearts, devise something: any extremity rather than a mischief.

Mrs. Ford. My maid's aunt, the fat woman of Brentford, has a gown above.

Mrs. Page. On my word, it will serve him; she's as hig as he is: and there's her thrommed hat, and her muffle too. Run up, Sir John.

Mrs. Ford. Go, go, sweet Sir John. Mistress

Page and I will look some linen for your head. Mrs. Page. Quick, quick; we'll come dress you straight; put on the gown the while. Exit FALSTAFF.

Mrs. Ford. I would my hushand would meet him in this shape: he cannot abide the old woman of Brentford; he swears she's a witch, forbade her my house, and hath threatened to

Mrs. Page. Heavenguide him to thy husband's cudgel; and the devil guide his cudgel afterwards! Mrs. Ford. But is my husband coming?

Mrs. Page. Ay, in good sadness is he; and he talks of the basket too, howsoever he hath had intelligence

Mrs. Ford. We'll try that; for I'll appoint my men to carry the basket again to meet him at the door with it as they did last time.

Mrs. Page. Nay, but he'll be here presently. let's go dress him like the witch of Brentford.

Mrs. Ford. I'll first direct my men what they shall do with the basket. Go up, I'll hring linen for him straight. Mrs. Page. Hang him, dishonest varieti we cannot misuse him enough.

We'll leave a proof, by that which we will do, Wives may be merry and yet honest too: We do not act that often jest and laugh; 'Tis old but true, Still swine eat all the draff Exit.

Re-enter Mrs. FORD, with two Servants.

Mrs. Ford. Go, sirs, take the basket again on your shoulders: your master is hard at door; if he bid you set it down, obey him: quickly, Exit. despatch.

I Serv. Come, come, take it up. 2 Serv. Pray heaven it be not full of the much lead. knight again.

r Serv. I hope not; I had as lief bear so Enter FORD, PAGE, SHALLOW, CAIUS, and Sir HUGH EVANS.

Ford. Ay, but if it prove true, Master Page, indeed.

have you any way then to unfool me again? -Set down the basket, villain: - Somebody call my wife .- You, youth in a basket, come out here!-O, you panderly rascals! there's a knot, a gin, a pack, a conspiracy against me. Now shall the devil be shamed. What! wife, I say! come, come forth; behold what honest clothes you send forth to bleaching.

Page. Why, this passes! Master Ford, you are not to go loose any longer; you must be pinioned.

Eva. Why, this is lunatics! this is mad as a mad dog! Shal. Indeed, Master Ford, this is not well:

Enter Mrs. FORD.

Ford. So say I too, sir.—Come hither, Mistress Ford; Mistress Ford, the honest woman, the modest wife, the virtuous creature, that bath the jealous fool to her husband!-I suspect without cause, mistress, do I?

Mrs. Ford. Heaven be my witness, you do, if you suspect me in any dishonesty.

Ford. Well said, brazen-face; hold it out .-

Come forth, sirrah.
[Pulls the clothes out of the basket. Page. This passes! clothes alone. Mrs. Ford. Are you not ashamed? Let the Ford. I shall find you anon. Eva. 'Tis unreasonable! Will you take up your wife's clothes? Come away. Ford. Empty the basket, I say. Mrs. Ford. Wby, man, why,— Ford. Master Page, as I am a man, there was one conveyed out of my house yesterday in this basket. Why may not he be there again? In my house I am sure he is: my intelligence is true: my jealousy is reasonable. Pluck me out all the linen.

Mrs. Ford. If you find a man there he shall die a flea's death.

Page. Here's no man. Shal. By my fidelity, this is not well, Master

Ford; this wrongs you.

Eva. Master Ford, you must pray, and not follow the imaginations of your own heart: this is jealousies.

Ford. Well, he's not here I seek for.

Page. No, nor no where else but in your brain.

Ford. Help to search my house this one time: if I find not what I seek, show no colour for my extremity; let me for ever be your table sport; let them say of me. As jealous as Ford. that searched a bollow walnut for his wife's leman. Satisfy me once more; once more search with me

Mrs. Ford. What, hoa, Mistress Page! come you and the old woman down; my husband will come into the chamber.

Ford. Old woman! What old woman's that? Mrs. Ford. Why, it is my maid's aunt of Brentford.

Ford. A witch, a quean, an old cozening quean! Have I not forbid her my bouse? She comes of errands, does she? We are simple men; we do not know what's brought to pass under the profession of fortune telling. Enter FALSTAFF in women's clothes, led by Mrs. PAGE.

Mrs. Page. Come, Mother Prat, come; give me your hand.

-Out of my deor, Ford. I'll prat her:you witch, [beats him] you rag, you baggage, you polecat, you ronyon! out! out! I'll conjure you, I'll fortune-tell you. Exit FALSTAFF.

Mrs. Page. Are you not ashamed? I think you have killed the poor woman.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, he will do it:—'Tis a goodly credit for you.

Ford. Hang her, witch!

Eva. By yea and no, I think the 'oman is a witch indeed: I like not when a'oman has agrest peard; I spy a great peard under her muffler.

Ford. Will you follow, gentlemen? I be-seech you follow; see but the issue of my jealousy: if I cry out thus upon no trail, never trust me when I open again.

Come, gentlemen.

Exeunt PAGE, FORD, SHAL., and EVANS. Mrs. Page. Trust me, he beat him most pitifully.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, by the mass, that he did not; he beat him most unpitifully methought. Mrs. Page. I'll have the cudgel hallowed and hung o'er the altar; it hath done meritorious service.

Mrs. Ford. What think you? May we, with the warrant of womanhood and the witness of a good conscience, pursue him with any further revenge?

Mrs. Page. The spirit of wantonness is, sure, scared out of him; if the devil have him not in fee-simple, with fine and recovery, he will never I think, in the way of waste, attempt us again.

Mrs. Ford. Shall we tell our husbands how we have served him?

Mrs. Page. Yes, by all mesns; if it be but to scrape the figures out of your husband's brains. If they can find in their hearts the poor unvirtuous fat knight shall be any further afflicted, we two will still be the ministers.

Airs. Ford. I'll warrant they'll have him publicly shamed: and methinks there would be no period to the jest should he not be publicly shamed.

Mrs. Page. Come, to the forge with it then, shape it: I would not have things cool. Excurt.

Scene III .- A Room in the Gerter Inn.

Enter HOST and BARDOLPH.

Bard. Sir, the Germans desire to have three of your horses: the duke himself will be tomorrow accourt, and they are going to meet him.

Host. What duke should that be comes so secretly? I hear not of him in the court. Let me speak with the gentlemen: they speak English.

Bard. Ay, sir; I'll call them to you. Host. They shall have my horses; but I'll away my other guests: they must come off; PII; And rattles in their hands; upon a sudden. sauce them. Come. Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Room in FORD'S House. Enler Page, Ford, Mis. Page, Mis. Ford, and Sir Hugh Evans.

Eva. 'Tis one of the pest discretions of a 'oman as ever I did look upon.

Page. And did he send you both these letters at an instant?

Mrs. Page. Within a quarter of an hour. Ford. Pardon me, wife. Henceforth, do what thou wilt;

I rather will suspect the sun with cold Than thee with wantonness: now doth thy honour stand, In him that was of late an heretic,

As firm as faith.

'Tis well, 'tis well; no more. Page. Be not as extreme in submission As in offence;

But let our plot go forward: let our wives Yet once again, to make us public sport,

Appoint a meeting with this old fat fellow Where we may take him and disgrace him for it. Ford. There is no better way than that they spoke of.

Page. How! to send him word they'll meet him in the park at midnight; fie, fie; he'll never come.

Eve. 100 Sey no may be the series an old rivers; and has been grievously peaten as an old 'omen; methinks there should be terrors in him that he should not come; methicks his flesh is punished, he shall have no desires.

Page. So think I too. (when he comes, Mrs. Ford. Devise but how you'll use him Andlet us two devise to bring him thither.

Mrs. Page. There is an old tale goes, that

Herne the hunter, Sometime a keeper here in Windsor forest, Doth all the winter time, at still midnight, Walk round about an oak, with great raggid homs; And there he blasts the tree, and takes the cattle ! And makes milch-kine yield blood, and shakes Potent at court; he, none but he, shall have her,

And burn him with their tapers.

Mrs. Page. The truth being known. We'll all present ourselves, dis-horn the spirit, And mock him home to Windsor.

Ford. The children must Be practised well to this or they'll ne'er do 't.

Eva. I will teach the children their behavicurs; and I will be like a jack-an-apes also, to burn the knight with my taber.

SCENE Y.—A Room in the Garler Inn. Enter Host and SIMPLE.

Host. What wouldst thou have, boor? what, thick-skin? speak, breathe, discuss; brief, short, quick, snap.

Sim. Marry, sir, I come to speak with Sir John Falstaff from Master Slender.

Host. There's his chamber, his house, his castle, his standing-bed and truckle-bed; 'tis read. [come, painted about with the story of the Prodigal, Page. Well, let it not be doubted but he'll fresh and new. Go, knock and call; he'll speak painted about with the story of the Prodigal, I say.

Sim. There's an old woman, a fat woman, Mrs. Page. That likewise have we thought gone up into his chamber; I'll be so bold as stay, sir, till she come down; I come to speak with her, indeed.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. There was, mine host, an old fat woman even now with me; but she's gone.

Sim. Pray you, sir, was't not the wise woman of Brentford?

Fol. Ay, marry was it, muscle-shell. What would you with her?

Sim. My master, sir, my Master Slender, sent I to her, seeing her go through the streets, to know, sir, whether one Nym, sir, that beguiled him of a chain had the chain or no.

Fol. I spake with the old woman about it.

Sim. And what says she, I pray, sir?

Fal. Marry, she says that the very same man that beguiled Master Slender of his chain cozened him of it.

Sim: I would I could have spoken with the woman herself; I had other things to have spoken with her too from him.

Fol. What are they? let us know.

Host. Ay, come; quick.

Sim. I may not conceal them, sir. Fol. Conceal them, or thou diest.

Sim. Why, sir, they were nothing but about Mistress Anne Page; to know if it were my master's fortune to have her or no.

Fal. 'Tis, 'tis his fortune.

Sim. What, sir?
Fai. To have her,—or no. Go; say the woman told me so.

Sim. May I be so bold to say so, sir?

Fol. Ay, Sir Tike; who more bold?

Sim. I thank your worship: I shall make my master glad with these tidings. [Ex. SIMPLE.

Host. Thou art clerkly, thou art clerkly, Sir John. Was there a wise woman with thee?

Fal. Ay, that there was, mine host; one that hath taught me more wit than ever I learned before in my life: and I paid nothing for it neither, but was paid for my learning.

Enter BARDOLPH.

Bord. Out, alas, sir! cozenage! mere cozenage! Host. Where be my horses? speak well of them, varietto. Bord. Run away with the cozeners: for so soon as I came beyond Eton they threw me off from behind one of them in a slough of mire;

and set spurs and away, like three German devils, three Doctor Faustuses.

Host. They are gone but to meet the duke, villain: do not say they be fled; Germans are honest men.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans.

Eva. Where is mine host?

Host. What is the matter, sir?

Evo. Have a care of your entertainments: there is a friend of mine come to town tells me there is three couzin germans that has cozened all the hosts of Readings, of Maidenhead, of Colebrook, of horses and money. Coius. Vere is mine Host de Jorterre?

Host. Here, master doctor, in perplexity and doubtful dilemma.

Caius. I cannot tell vat is dat: but it is tella me dat you make grand preparation for a duke de Jormony: by my trot dere is no duke dat de court is know to come; I tell you for good-vill: adieu.

the other, and sothey shall be both bestowed! I have suffered more for their sakes, more than the villanous inconstancy of man's disposition is able to bear.

Quick. And have not they suffered? Yes, I warrant; speciously one of them; Mistress Ford, good heart, is beaten black and blue, that you cannot see a white spot about her.

Fal. What tell'st thon me of black and blue? I was beaten myself into all the colours of the rainbow; and I was like to be apprehended for the witch of Brentford; but that my admirable dexerity of wit, my counterfeiting the action of an old woman, delivered me, the knave constable had set me i' the stocks, i' the common stocks, for a witch.

Quick. Sir, let me speak with you in your chamber: you shall hear how things go; and, I warrant, to your content. Here is a letter will say somewhat. Good hearts, what ado here is to bring you together! Sure, one of you does not serve heaven well, that you are so crossed

Sir.

Row, Sir, Her mother, ever strong against that match, And firm for Doctor Caius, hath appointed That he shall likewise shuffle her away While other sports are tasking of their minds, And at the deanery, where a priest attends, Straight marry her: to this her mother's plot She, seemingly obedient, likewise hath Mede promise to the doctor:—Now thusit rests; Her father means she shall be all in white; And in that habit, when Slender sees his time To take her by the hand and bid her go, She shall go with him: her mother hathintended, The better to denote her to the doctor,-For they must all be mask'd and vizarded, That, quaint in green, she shall be loose enrobed, With ribands pendant, flaring 'bout her head; And when the doctor spies his vantage ripe, To pinch her by the hand, and, on that token,

The maid hath given consent to go with him.

Host. Which means she to deceive? father or mother?

Fent. Both, my good host, to go along with me:

And here it rests,—that you'll procure the vicar To stay for me at church, 'twirt twelve and one, And, in the lawful name of marrying, To give our hearts united ceremony. [vicar:

Host. Well, husband your device; I'll to the Bring you the maid, you shall not lack a priest. Fent. So shall I evermore be bound to thee; Besides, I'll make a present recompense.

Scene L.-A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter FALSTAFF and Mrs. QUICELY.

Fal. Prythee, no more prattling:—go.— I'll hold. This is the third time; I hope good luck lies in odd numbers. Away, go; they say there is divinity in odd numbers, either in nativity, chance, or death.—Away.

Quick. I'll provide you a chain: and I'll do what I can to get you a pair of horns.

Fal. Away, I say; time wears: hold up your head, and mince. [Exit Mrs. QUICKLY.

Enter FORD.

How now, Master Brook? Master Brook, the matter will be known to-night or never. Be you in the Park about midnight, at Herne's oak, and yon shall see wonders.

oak, and you shall see wonders.

Ford. Went you not to her yesterday, sir, as you told me you had appointed.

Fal. I went to her, Master Brook, as you see, like a poor old man; but I came from her, Master Brook, like a poor old woman. That same knave, Ford her husband, hath the finest mad devil of jealousy in him, Master Brook, that ever governed frenzy. I will tell you. He beat me grievously, in the shape of a woman; for in the shape of man, Master Brook, I fear not Goliath with a weaver's beam; because I know also life is a shuttle. I am in haste; go along with me; I'll tell you all, Master Brook. Since I plucked geese, played truent, and whipped top, I knew not what it was to be beaten till lately. Follow me: I'll tell you strange things of this knave Ford, on whom to-night I will be revenged, and I will deliver his wife into your hand .-Follow. Strange things in hand, Master Brook! follow. Exeunt.

SCENE II .- Windsor Park.

Enter PAGE, SHALLOW and SLENDER.

Page. Come, come; we'll conch i' the castleditch till we see the light of our fairies.—Remember, son Slender, my daughter.

Slen. Ay, forsooth; I have spoke with her, and we have a nay-word how to know one another; I come to her in white and cry mum; she cries budget; and by that we know one another.

Shal. That's good too: but what needs either your mum or her budget? the white will decipher her well enough.—It hath struck ten o'clock.

Page. The night is dark; light and spirits will become it well. Hearen prosper our sport! No man means evil but the devil, and we shall know him by his horns. Let's away; follow me.

[Executed]

Scene III.—The Street in Windsor. Enter Mrs. Page, Mrs. Ford, and Dr. Caius.

Mrs. Page. Master doctor, my daughter is in green: when you see your time, take her by the hand, away with her to the deanery, and dispatch it quickly. Go before into the park; we two must go together.

Coius. I know vat I have to do; adieu. Mrs. Page. Fare you well, sir. [Exit. CAIUS.] My husband will not rejoice so much at the abuse of Falstaff as he will chafe at the doctor's marrying my daughter: but 'tis no matter: better a little chiding than a great deal of heart-break.

Mrs. Ford. Where is Nan now, and her troop of fairies? and the Welsh devil, Hugh?
Mrs. Page. They are all couched in a pit hard by Herne's oak, with obscured lights; which, at the very instant of Falstaff's and our meeting, they will at once display to the night.

Mrs. Ford. That cannot choose but amaze him.

Mrs. Page. If he be not amazed he will be mocked; if he be amazed he will every way be mocked.

Mrs. Ford. We'll betray him finely.
Mrs. Page. Against such lewdsters and their lechery,

Those that betray them do no treachery.

Mrs. Ford. The hour draws on. To the Excunt. oak, to the oak!

Scene IV .- Windsor Park.

Enter Sir HUGH EVANS, and Fairies.

Eva. Trib, trib, fairies; come; and remember your parts: be pold, I pray you; follow me into the pit; and when I give the watch-'ords, do as I mid you. Come, come; trib, trib. Exeunt.

Scene V .- Another part of the Park. Enler FALSTAFF disguised, with a buck's heed on.

Fal. The Windsor cell hath struck twelve; the minute draws on. Now the hot-blooded : Raise up the organs of her fantasy, gods assist me:-Remember, Jove, thou wast | Sleep she as sound as careless infancy; a bull for thy Europa; love set on thy horns.

Mrs. Page. Alas! what noise?
Mrs. Ford Heaven forgive our sins!
Fal. What should this be?
Mrs. Ford Away, away. [They Away, away. They run of. Mrs. Page.

Fcl. I think the devil will not have me damned lest the oil that is in me should set hell on fire; he would never else cross me thus.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans, like a satur; Mirs. QUICKLY and PISTOL; ANNE PAGE, as the Fairy Queen, attended by her brother and others, dressed like fairies, with waxen tapers on their heads.

Quick. Fairies, black, gray, green and white, You moonshine revellers and shades of night, You orphan-heirs of fixed destiny, Attend your office and your quality. Crier Hobgoblin, make the fairy o-yes.

A noise of hunting is made All the fairies run away. FALSTAFF within. pulls off his buck's head and rises.

Enter PAGE, FORD, Mrs. PAGE, and Mrs. FORD. They lay hold on him.

Page. Nay, do not fly: I think we have watch'd you now:

Will none but Herne the bunter serve your turn? Mrs. Page. I pray you come; hold up the jest no higher:-

Now, good sir John, how like you Windsor wives? See you these, husband? do not these fair yokes Become the forest better than the town?

Ford. Now, sir, who's a cuckold now?-Master Brook, Falstaff's a knave, a cuckoldly knave; here are his horns, Master Brook: and, Master Brook he hath enjoyed nothing of Ford's but his buck-basket, his cudgel, and twenty pounds of money; which must be paid to Master Brook; his horses are arrested for it, a posset to-night at my house; where I will de-Master Brook.

Mrs. Ford. Sir John, we have had ill luck; we could never meet. I will never take you for my love again, but I will always count you my deer.

Fal. I do begin to perceive that I am made | Caius' wife.

an ass.

Ford. Ay, and an ox too; both the proofs are extant.

Fal. And these are not fairies? I was three or four times in the thought they were not fairies: and yet the guiltiness of my mind, the sudden surprise of my powers, drove the gross-' ness of the foppery into a received belief, in desoite of the teeth of all rhyme and reason, that they were fairies. See now how wit may be made a Jack-a-lent when 'tis upon ill employment.

Eva. Sir John Falstaff, serve Got and leave your desires, and fairies will not pinse you.

Ford. Well said, fairy Hugh.

Eva. And leave you your jealousies too, I pray you.

Ford. I will never mistrust my wife again, till thou art able to woo her in good English.

Fal. Have I laid my brain in the sun, and dried it, that it wants matter to prevent so gross o'er-reaching as this? Am I ridden with a Welsh goat too? Shall I have a coxcomb of frize? 'Tis time I were choked with a piece of 1rize? toasted cheese.

Eva. Seese is not good to give putter; your

Fal. Seese and putter! have I lived to stand at the taunt of one that makes fritters of English? This is enough to be the decay of lust | see but marry boys? and late-walking through the realm.

Mrs. Page. Why, Sir John, do you think though we would have thrust virtue out of our hearts by the head and shoulders, and have given ourselves without scruple to hell, that ever the devil could have made you our delight?

Ford. What! a hodge-pudding? a bag of flax? Mrs. Page. A puffed man?
Page. Old, cold, withered, and of intolerable entrails? Ford. And one that is as slanderous as Satan?

Page. And as poor as Job? Ford. And as wicked as his wife?

Eva. And given to fornications, and to taverns, and sack, and wine, and metheglins, and to drinkings, and swearings, and starings. pribbles, and prabbles?

Fal. Well, I am your theme: you have the start of me; I am dejected; I am not able to answer the Welsh flannel: ignorance itself is a plummet o'er me; use me as you will.

Ford. Marry, sir, we'll bring you to Windsor, to one Master Brook, that you have cozened of money, to whom you should have been a pander: over and above that you have suffered, I think, to repay that money will be a biting affliction.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, husband, let that go to make amends:

Forgive that sum, and so we'll all be friends. Ford. Well, here's my hand; all's forgiven at last.

Page. Yet be cheerful, knight: thou shalt eat sire thee to laugh at my wife, that now laughs at thee. Tell her Master Slender bath married her daughter.

Mrs. Page. Doctors doubt that: if Anne Page be my daughter, she is by this Doctor Aside.

Enter SLENDER.

Sien. Who-ho! ho! father Page!

Page. Son! how now? how now, son? have you dispatched?

Slen. Dispatched!-I'll make the best in Gloucestershire know on't; would I were hanged, la, else.

Page. Of what, son?

Sien. I came yonder at Eton to marry Mistress Anne Page, and she's a great lubberly boy. If it had not been i' the church I would have swinged him, or he should have swinged If I did not think it had been Anne Page, would I might never stir, and 'tis a postmaster's boy.

Page. Upon my life then you took the wrong. Sien. What need you tell me that? I think so, when I took a boy for a girl. If I had been married to him, for all he was in woman's apparel, I would not have had him.

Page. Why, this is your own folly. Did not I tell you how you should know my daughter by her garments?

Slen. I went to her in white and cried mum, and she cried budget, as Anne and I had appointed; and yet it was not Anne, but a postmaster's boy.

Master Slender, cannot you Eva. Jeshu!

Page. Oh, Iam vexed at heart: what shall Ido?

Mrs. Page. Good George, he not angry: I knew of your purpose; turned my daughter into green; and, indeed, she is now with the doctor | And this deceit loses the name of craft, at the deanery, and there married.

Enter CAIUS.

Caius. Vere is Mistress Page? By gar, I un paisan, by gar, a hoy; it is not Anne Page: In love, the heavens themselves do guide the by gar, I am cozened.

Mrs. Page. Why, did you take her in green? Coius. Ay, by gar, and 'tis a boy: by gar, I'll raise all Windsor. [Exit Calus. Ford. This is strange. Who hath got the right Anne?

Page. My heart misgives me:-here comes Master Fenton.

Enter FENTON and ANNE PAGE.

How now, Master Fenton?

Anne. Pardon, good father! good my mother, not with Master Slender?

Mrs. Page. Why went you not with master doctor, maid?

Fent. You do amaze her: Hear the truth of it. Where there was no proportion held in love. The truth is, she and I, long since contracted,

Are now so sure that nothing can dissolve us. The offence is holy that she hath committed: Of disobedience, or unduteous title: Since therein she doth evitate and shun A thousand irreligious cursed hours, Which forced marriage would have brought upon Ford. Stand not amazed: here is no remedy:-

Money buys lands, and wives are sold by fate. Fol. I am glad, though you have ta'en a special stand to strike at me, that your arrow hath glanced.

What cannot be eschewed must be embraced. Fal. When night dogs run all sorts of deer are chased.

Era. I will dance and est plums at your wedding.

Miss. Page. Well, I will muse no further:-Master Fenton, pardon!

Page. Now, Mistress, how chance you went: Heaven give you many, many merry days!— Good husband, let us every one go home,

And laugh this sport o'er by a country fire; Sir John and all. Ford. Let it he so:-Sir John,

You would have married her most shamefully, To Master Brook you yet shall hold your word; For he, to-night, shall lie with Mistress Ford. Excunt.

SCENE, -A City in ILLYRIA; and the Sea-coast near it.

ACT I.

Scene I.—An Apartment in the Duke's Palace.

Enter DUKE, CURIO, Lords: Musicians attending.

Duke. If music be the food of love, play on, Give me excess of it; that, surfeiting, The appetite may sicken and so die.-That strain again;—it had a dying fall; O, it came o'er my ear like the sweet sound, That breathes upon a bank of violets. Stealing, and giving odour .- Enough; no more: 'Tis not so sweet now as it was before. O spirit of love, how quick and fresh art thou! That, notwithstanding thy capacity Receiveth as the sea, nought enters there, Of what validity and pitch soever, But falls into abatement and low price Even in a minute' so full of shapes is fancy, That it alone is high-fantastical.

Cur. Will you go hunt, my lord? Duke.

The hart. Duke. Why, so I do, the noblest that I have: O, when mine eyes did see Olivia first, Methought she purg'd the air of pestilence; That instant was I turn'd into a hart; And my desires, like fell and cruel hounds, E'er since pursue me.-How now? what news from her?

Servants to OLIVIA.

Lords, Priests, Sailors, Officers, Musicians,

Enter VALENTINE.

Val. So please my lord, I might not be ad-

But from her handmaid do return this answer: The element itself, till seven years' heat, Shall not behold her face at ample view; But, like a cloistress, she will veiled walk, And water once a-day her chamber round With eye-offending brine: all this to season A brother's deadlove, which she would keep fresh And lasting in her sad remembrance. [frame, Duke. O, she that hath a heart of that fine To pay this debt of love but to a brother,

What, Curio? How will she love when the rich golden shaft

Hath kill'd the flock of all affections else That live in herl when liver, hrain, and heart, These sov'reign thrones, are all supplied and fill'd.

Her sweet perfections,-with one self kingl-Away hefore me to sweet heds of flowers: Love-thoughts lie rich when canopied with bowers. Exeunt.

Scene II .- The Sea-coast.

Enter VIOLA, Captain, and Sailors.

Vio. What country, friends, is this? Illyria, lady. Cab.

Vio. And what should I do in Illyria? My brother he is in Elysium.

Perchance he is not drown'd:-What think you, sailors? [sav'd.

For saying so, there's gold: Mine own escape unfoldeth to my hope, Whereto thy speech serves for authority,

The like of him. Know'st thou this country? Cap. Ay, madam, well; for I was bred and horn

Not three hours' travel from this very place.

Vio. Who governs here? A noble duke, in nature Cap.

As in his name.

Vio. What is his name? Cap.

Vio. Orsinol I have heard my father name him.

He was a hachelor then.

Cap. And so is now, Or was so very late: for hut a month Ago I went from hence; and then 'twas fresh In murmur,-as you know, what great ones da, The less will prattle of,—that he did seek The love of fair Olivia.

Vio. What's she?

Cap. A virtuous maid, the daughter of a count That died some twelvemonth since; then leaving her

In the protection of his son, her hrother, Who shortly also died: far whose dear love, They say, she hath abjured the company And sight of men.

Vio. O that I served that ladyl And might not be delivered to the world, Till I had made mine own occasion mellow What my estate is.

Cap. That were hard to compass: Because she will admit no kind of suit,

No, not the duke's.

Vio. There is a fair hehaviour in thee, captain; And though that nature with a heauteous wall Doth oft close in pollution, yet of thee

I will helieve thou hast a mind that suita With this thy fair and outward character. I pray thee, and I'll pay thee hounteously, Conceal me what I am; and he my aid For such disguise as, haply, shall become The form of my intent. I'll serve this duke: Thou shalt present me as an eunuch to him; It may he worth thy pains; for I can sing, And speak to him in many sorts of music That will allow me very worth his service. What else may hap to time I will commit; Only shape thou thy silence to my wit.

Cap. Be you his eunuch and your mute I'll he; When my tongue hlahs, then let mine eyes not see l Vio. I thank thee. Lead me on.

Scene III .- A Room in Olivia's House.

Enter Six Toby Belch and Maria.

Sir To. What a plague means my niece, to take the death of her hrother thus? I am sure care's an enemy to life.

Mar. By my troth, Sir Tohy, you must come in earlier o'nights; your cousin, my lady, takes great exceptions to your ill hours.

Sir Ta. Why, let her except, hefore excepted. Mar. Ay, hut you must canfine yourself within the modest limits of order.

Sir To. Confine? I'll confine myself no finer than I am: these clothes are good enough to drink in, and so he these hoots too; an they he not, let them hang themselves in their own straps.

Mar. That quaffing and drinking will undo you: I heard my lady talk of it yesterday; and of a foolish knight that you brought in one night here to he her wooer.

Sir To. Who? Sir Andrew Ague-cheek? Mar. Ay, he.

Sir To. He's as tall a man as any's in Illyria.

Mar. What's that to the purpose? Sir To. Why, he has three thousand ducats a-year. Mar. Ay, but he'll have hut a year in all these ducats; he's a very fool, and a prodigal. Sir To. Fye, that you'll say so! he plays o' the viol-de-gamho, and speaks three or four languages word for word without hook, and hath all the good gifts of nature.

Mar. He hath, indeed,-almost natural: for, hesides that he's a fool, he's a great quarreller; and, but that he hath the gift of a coward to allay the gust he hath in quarrelling, 'tis thought among the prudent he would quickly have the gift of a grave.

Sir To. By this hand, they are scoundrels and substractors that say so of him. Who are they? Mar. They that add, moreover, he's drunk - nightly in your company.

Sir To. With drinking healths to my niece; I'll drink to her as long as there is a passage in my threat and drink in Illyria. He's a coward and a coystril that will not drink to my niece till his hrains turn a' the toe like a parish-top. What, wench? Castiliano-vulgo! for here cames Sir Andrew Ague-face.

Enter Sir Andrew Ague-Cheek.

Sir And. Sir Tohy Belch! how now, Sir Tohy Belch?

Sir To. Sweet Sir Andrew?

Sir And. Bless you, fair shrew.

Mar. And you too, sir.
Sir To. Accost, Sir Andrew, accost.
Sir And. What's that?
Sir To. My niece's chamber-maid.

Sir And. Good Mistress Accost, I desire hetter acquaintance.

Mar. My name is Mary, sir.

Sir And. Good Mistress Mary Accost,—

Sir To. You mistake, knight: accost is, front her, board her, woo her, assail her.

Sir And. By my troth, I would not undertake her in this company. Is that the meaning of accost?

Mar. Fare you well, gentlemen.

Sir To. An thou let part so, Sir Andrew, would thou mightst never draw sword again.

Sir And. An you part so, mistress, I would I might never draw sword again. Fair lady, do you think you have fools in hand?

Mar. Sir, I have not you hy the hand. Sir And. Marry, hut you shall have; and here's my hand.

Mar. Now, sir, thought is free. I pray you, bring your hand to the buttery-har and let it drink.

Sir And. Wherefore, sweetheart?

your metaphor? Mar. It's dry, sir.

Sir And. Why, I think so; I am not such an ass but I can keep my hand dry. But what's your jest?

Mar. A dry jest, sir.

Sir And. Are you full of them? Mar. Ay, sir; I have them at my fingers' ends: marry, now I let go your hand I am barren. (Exit MARIA.

Sir To. O knight, thou lack'st a cup of canary: When did I see thee so put down?

Sir And. Never in your life, I think; unless you see canary put me down. Methinks sometimes I have no more wit than a Christian or an ordinary man has; hut I am a great eater of beef, and, I believe, that does harm to my wit.

Sir To. No question.

Sir And. An I thought that, I'd forswear it. I'll ride home to-morrow, Sir Tohy.

Sir To. Pourquoy, my dear knight? Sir And. What is pourquoy? do or not do? I would I had hestowed that time in the tongues that I have in fencing, dancing, and hear-bait-O, had I but followed the arts!

Sir To. Then hadst thou had an excellent head of hair. {hair?

Sir And. Why, would that have mended my Sir To. Past question; for thou seest it will not curl by nature.

Sir And. But it becomes me well enough, does't not?

Sir To. Excellent; it hangs like flax on a distaff; and I hope to see a housewife take thee between her legs and spin it off.

Sir And. Faith, I'll home to-morrow, Sir Toby; your niece will not be seen; dr, if she he, it's four to one she'll none of me; the count himself here hard by woos her.

Sir To. She'll none o' the count; she'll not Surprise her with discourse of my dear far match above her degree, neither in estate, It shall become thee well to act my woes; years, nor wit; I have heard her swear it. Tut, | She will attend it better in thy youth there's life in 't, man.

Sir And. I'll stay a month longer. a fellow o' the strangest mind i' the world; I delight in masques and revels sometimes altogether.

Sir To. Art thou good at these kick-shaws. Sir And. As any man in Illyria, whatsoever he he, under the degree of my betters; and yet

I will not compare with an old man. Sir To. What is thy excellence in a galliard.

knight?

Sir And. Faith, I can cut a caper.

Sir To. And I can cut the mutton to 't.

Sir And. And, I think, I have the back-trick simply as strong as any man in Illyria.

Sir To. Wherefore are these things hid? wherefore have these gifts a curtain before them? are they like to take dust, like Mistress Mall's picture? why dost thou not go to church in a galliard and come home in a coranto? My very walk should he a jig; I would not so much as make water hut in a sink-a-pace. What dost thou mean? is it a world to hide virtues in? did think, hy the excellent constitution of thy leg, it was formed under the star of a galliard.

Sir And. Ay, 'tis strong, and it does indifferent well in a flame-coloured stock. Shall we set ahout some revels?

Sir To. What shall we do else? were we not horn under Taurus?

Sir And. Taurus? that's sides and heart. Sir To. No, sir; it is legs and thighs. Let me see thee caper: hat higher: ha, ha!-excellent! Exeunt.

Scene IV .- A Room in the Duke's Palace. Enter VALENTINE, and VIOLA, in man's attire.

Val. If the duke continue these favours towards you, Cesario, you are like to be much advanced; he hath known you but three lays, and already you are no stranger.

Vio. You either fear his humour or my negligence, that you call in question the continuance of his love. Is he inconstant, sir, in his fa-

Val. No, helieve me.

Enter DUKE, CURIO, and Attendants,

Vio. I thank you. Here comes the count. Duke. Who saw Cesario, ho? Vio. On your attendance, my lord; here. Duke. Stand you awhile aloof.—Cesario, Thou know'st no less but all; I have unclasp'd To thee the book even of my secret soul: Therefore, good youth, address thy gait unto her; Be not denied access, stand at her doors, And tell them there thy fixed foot shall grow Till thou have audience.

Sure, my noble lord, Vio.

If she be so abandon'd to her sorrow As it is spoke, she never will admit me. Duke. Be clamorous, and leap all civil hounds,

Rather than make unprofited return.

Vio. Say I do speak with her, my lord.

What then? Duke. O, then unfold the passion of my love, Surprise her with discourse of my dear faith: Than in a nuncio of more grave aspect.

Vio. I think not so, my lord. Duke.

Dear lad, helieve it, For they shall yet belie thy happy years That say thou art a man: Diana's lip Is not more smooth and rubious; thy small pipe Is as the maiden's organ, shrill and sound.

And all is semblative a woman's part. I know thy constellation is right apt For this affair:-Some four or five attend him: All, if you will; for I myself am best

When least in company:-Prosper well in this And thou shalt live as freely as thy lord, To call his fortunes thine.

Vio. I'll do my hest To woo your lady: yet, [aside] a harful strife! Who'er I woo, myself would he his wife.

Scene V .- A Room in Olivia's House. Enter MARIA and CLOWN.

Mar. Nay; either tell me where thou hast heen, or I will not open my lips so wide as a hristle may enter in way of thy excuse: my lady will hang thee for thy absence.

Clo. Let her hang me: he that is well hanged in this world needs to fear no colours.

Mar. Make that good.

Clo. He shall see none to fear.

Mar. A good lenten answer: I can tell thee where that saying was horn, of, I fear no colburs. Clo. Where, good Mistress Mary?

Mar. In the wars; and that may you be hold to say in your foolery.

Clo. Well, God give them wisdom that have it; and those that are fools, let them use their talents.

Mar. Yet you will he hanged for heing so long absent: or, to he turned away; is not that as good as a hanging to you?

Clo Many a good hanging prevents a bad marriage; and for turning away, let summer bear it out.

Mar. You are resolute, then? Clo. Not so neither: hut I am resolved on two points.

Mar. That, if one break, the other will hold;

or, if hoth hreak, your gaskins fall.

Clo. Apt, in good faith; very aptl Well, go thy way; if Sir Tohy would leave drinking, thou wert as witty a picce of Eve's flesh as any in Illyria.

Mar. Peace, you rogue; no more o' that; here comes my lady; make your excuse wisely; you were hest. Exit.

Enter OLIVIA and MALVOLIO.

Clo. Wit, and 't he thy will, put me into good fooling! Those wits that think they have thee, do very oft prove fools; and I, that am sure I lack thee, may pass for a wise man. For what says Quinapalus? Better a witty fool than n foolish wit .--God hiess thee, ladyl

Oli. Take the fool away. Ithe lady. Clo. Do you not hear, fellows? Take away Oli. Go to, you're a dry fool; I'll no more of you: besides, you grow dishonest. Clo. Two faults, madonna, that drink and good counsel will amend: for give the dry fool drink, then is the fool not dry; bid the dishonest man mend himself: if he mend, he is no nothing hut madman. Fie on him! [Exit mend him. Anything that's mended is but patched; virtue that transgresses is but patched with sin; and sin that amends is hut patched with virtue. If that this simple syllogism will serve, so; if it will not, what remedy? As there is no true cuckold but calamity, so heauty's a flower:—the lady hade take away the fool; therefore, I say again, take her away.

Oli. Sir, I bade them take away you. Clo. Misprision in the highest degree!-Lady, Cucullus non facil monachum; that's as much as to say, I wear not moticy in my brain. madonna, give me leave to prove you a fool.

Oli. Can you do it?

Clo. Dexterously, good madonna.

Oli. Make your proof.

Clo. I must eatechise you for it, madonna. Good my mouse of virtue, answer me.

Oli. Well, sir, for want of other idleness, I'll 'bide your proof,

Clo. Good madonna, why mourn'st thou?

Oli. Good fool, for my hrother's death. Clo. I think his soul is in hell, madonna. Oli. I know his soul is in heaven, fool.

Clo. The more fool you, madonna, to mourn for your hrother's soul being in heaven.-Take away the fool, gentlemen.

Oli. What think you of this fool, Malvolio?

doth he not mend?

Mal. Yes; and shall do, till the pangs of death shall shake him. Infirmity, that decays the wise, doth ever make the hetter fool. Clo. God send you, sir, a speedy infirmity, for the hetter increasing your folly! Sir Toby will he sworn that I am no fox; hut he will not pass his word for twopence that you are no fool.

Oli. How say you to that, Malvolio?

Mal. I marvel your ladyship takes delight in such a harren rascal; I saw him put down the other day with an ordinary fool that has no more hrain than a stone. Look you now, he's out of his guard already; unless you laugh and minister occasion to him, he is gagged. I protest, I take these wise men, that crow so at these set kind of fools, no hetter than the fools' zanies.

Oli. O, you are sick of self-love, Malvolio, and taste with a distempered appetite. To he generous, guiltless, and of free disposition, is to take those things for bird-bolts that you deem cannon-hullets. There is no slander in an allowed fool, though he do nothing hut rail; nor no railing in a known discreet man, though he do nothing hut reprove.

Clo. Now mercury endue thee with leasing, for thou speakest well of fools!

Re-enter Maria.

Mar. Madam, there is at the gate a young gentleman much desires to speak with you.

Oli. From the Count Orsino, is it?

Mar. I know not, madam; 'tis a fair young man, and well attended.

[Exit longer dishonest; if he cannot, let the hotcher [MARIA.] Go you, Malvolio; if it he a suit from the count, I am sick, or not at home; what you will to dismiss it. [Exit MALVOLIO.] Now you see, sir, how your fooling grows old, and people dislike it.

Clo. Thou hast spoke for us, madonna, as if thy eldest son should be a fool; whose skull Jove cram with brains, for here he comes, one of thy kin, has a most weak pia mater.

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH.

Oli. By mine honour, half drunk.—What is he at the gate, cousin?

Sir To. A gentleman.

Oli. A gentleman? What gentleman?

Sir To. 'Tis a gentleman here - A plague o' these pickle-herrings!—How now, sot?

Clo. Good Sir Toby,

Oli. Cousin, cousin, how have you come so early by this lethargy?

Sir To. Lechery! I defy lechery. There's one at the gate.

Oli. Ay, marry; what is he?

Sir To. Let him be the devil an he will, I care not: give me faith, say I. Well, it's all Oli. What's a drunken man like, fool?

Clo. Like a drowned man, a fool, and a madman: one draught above heat makes him a fool; the second mads him; and a third drowns him.

Oli. Go thou and seek the coroner, and let him sit o' my coz; for he is in the third degree of drink; he's drowned: go, look after him.

Clo. He is but mad yet, madonna; and the fool shall look to the madman. Exit CLOWN.

Re-enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. Madam, yond young fellow swears he will speak with you. I told him you were sick; he takes on him to understand so much, and therefore comes to speak with you; I told him you were asleep; he seems to have a foreknowledge of that too, and therefore comes to speak with you. What is to be said to him, lady? he's fortified against any denial.

Oli. Tell him, he shall not speak with me. Mal. He has been told so; and he says he'll stand at your door like a sheriff's post, and be the supporter of a bench, but he'll speak with you.

Oli. What kind of man is he? Mal. Why, of mankind. Oli. What manner of man?

Mal. Of very ill manner; he'll speak with you, will you or no.

Oli. Of what personage and years is he? Mal. Not yet old enough for a man, nor young enough for a boy; as a squash is before 'tis a peascod, or a codling, when 'tis almost an apple: 'tis with him e'en standing water, between boy and man. He is very well-favoured, and he speaks very shrewishly; one would think his mothers milk were scarce out of him.

Oli. Let him approach. Call in my gentlewoman.

[Exit. Mal. Gentlewoman, my lady calls.

Re-enler Maria.

Oli. Give me my veil: come, throw it o'er my face; We'll once more hear Orsino's embassy.

Enter VIOLA.

Vio. The honourable lady of the house, Your will? which is she? Oli. Speak to me, I shall answer for her.

Vio. Most radiant, exquisite, and unmatchable beauty,—I pray you, tell me if this be the lady of the house, for I never saw her: I would he loath to cast away my speech; for, besides that it is excellently well penned. I have taken great pains to con it. Good beauties, let me sustain no scorn; I am very comptible, even to the least sinister usage.

Oli. Whence came you, sir?

Vio. I can say little more than I have studied. and that question's out of my part. Good gen. tle one, give me modest assurance, if you be the lady of the house, that I may proceed in my speech.

Oli. Are you a comedian?

Vio. No, my profound heart: and yet, by the very fangs of malice, I swear I am not that I play. Are you the lady of the house Oli. If I do not usurp myself, I am. Are you the lady of the house?

Vio. Most certain, if you are she, you do usurp yourself; for what is yours to bestow is not yours to reserve. But this is from my commission: I will on with my speech in your praise, and then show you the heart of my message.

Oli. Come to what is important in 't: I forgive you the praise.

Vio. Alas, I took great pains to study it, and 'tis poetical,

Oli. It is the more like to be feigned; I pray you keep it in. I heard you were saucy at my gates; and allowed your approach, rather to wonder at you than to hear you. If you be not mad, be gone; if you have reason, be brief: 'tis not that time of moon with me to make one in so skipping a dialogue.

Mar. Will you hoist sail, sir? here lies your Vio. No, good swabber; I am too hull here a little longer.-Some mollification for your giant, sweet lady.

Oli. Tell me your mind. Vio. I am a messenger.

Oli. Sure, you have some hideous matter to deliver, when the courtesy of it is so fearful.

Speak your office.

Vio. It alone concerns your ear. I bring no overture of war, no taxation of homage; I hold the olive in my hand: my words are as full of. peace as matter.

Oli. Yet you began rudely. What are you?

what would you?

Vio. The rudeness that hath appeared in me have I learned from my entertainment. What I am and what I would are as sacred as maidenhead: to your ears, divinity; to any other's, profanation.

Oli. Give us the place alone: we will hear [Exit Maria.] Now, sir, what this divinity.

is your text?

Vio. Most sweet lady,——Oli. A comfortable doctrine, and much may he said of it. Where lies your text?

Vio. In Orsino's bosom.

Oli. In his bosom? In what chapter of his

Vio. To answer by the method, in the first of his heart.

Oli. O, I have read it; it is heresy. Have you no more to say?

Vio. Good madam, let me see your face. Oli. Have you any commission from your lord to negotiate with my face? you are now out of your text: but we will draw the curtain and show you the picture. Look you, sir, such a one as I was this present. Is't not well done? Unveiling. Vio. Excellently done, if God did all.

Oli. 'Tis in grain, sir; 'twill endure wind and weather. white

Vio. 'Tis beauty truly blent, whose red and Nature's own sweet and cunning band laid on: Lady, you are the cruel'st sbe alive, If you will lead these graces to the grave,

And leave the world no copy.

Oli. O, sir, I will not be so bard-bearted; I will give out divers schedules of my beauty. shall be inventoried; and every particle and utensil labelled to my will: as, item, two lips | I'll give him reasons for 't. Hie thee, Malvolio. indifferent red; item, two gray eyes with lids to them; item, one neck, one chin, and so forth. Were you sent hither to praise me? (proud; Vio. I see you what you are: you are too!

But if you were the devil, you are fair. My lord and master loves you. O, such love Could he but recompens'd though you were crown'd

The nonpareil of beauty!

How does he love me? Vio. With adorations, with fertile tears, With groans that thunder love, with sighs of fire.

Oli. Your lord does know my mind, I cannot love him:

Yet I suppose him virtuous, know him nohle, Of great estate, of fresh and stainless youth; In voices well divulged, free, learn'd and valuant, And, in dimension and the shape of nature. A gracious person: hut yet I cannot love him; He might have took his answer long ago.

Vio. If I did love you in my master's flame, With such a suffering, such a deadly life, In your denial I would find no sense,

I would not understand it.

Oli. Why, what would you? Make me a willow cabin at your gate, And call upon my soul within the bouse; Write loyal cantons of contemned love, And sing them loud, even in the dead of night; Holla your name to the reverberate hills, And make the babbling gossip of the air Cry out Olivia! O, you should not rest Between the elements of air and earth, [parentage? But you should pity me.

Oli. You might do much. What is your Vio. Above my forvunes, yet my state is well:

I am a gentleman.

Get you to your lord; I cannot love him: let him send no more; Unless, perchance, you come to me again, To tell me how he takes it. Fare you well: I thank you for your pains: spend this for me.

Vio. I am no fee'd post, lady; keep your purse; My master, not myself, lacks recompense. Love make his beart of flint that you shall love; And let your fervour, like my master's, be Placed in contempt! Fairwell, fair cruelty.

Oli. What is your parentage? Above my fortunes, yet my state is well:

I am a gentlemon.—I'll be sworn thou art:

Thy tongue, thy face, thy limbs, actions, and spirit. isoft! soft! Do give thee fivefold blazon. Not too fast:-

Unless the master were the man.-How now? Even so quickly may one catch the plague? Methinks I feel this youth's perfections With an invisible and subtle stealth

To creep in at mine eyes. Well, let it be .-What, bo, Malvolio!-

Re-enter Malvolio.

Mal. Here, madam, at your service. Oli. Run after that same peevish messenger, The county's man; he left this ring behind him. Would I, or not; tell him I'll none of it. Desire him not to flatter with his lord, Nor hold him up with bopes; I am not for him: If that the youth will come this way to-morrow. Mal. Madam, I will.

Oli. I do I know not what: and fear to find Mine eye too great a flatterer for my mind. Fate, show thy force. Ourselves we do not owe: What is decreed must he; and be this so! [Exit.

ACT II.

Scene I .- The Sea-coast.

Enter Antonio and Sebastian.

Anf. Will you stay no longer? nor will you not that I go with you? Seb. By your patience, no: my stars shine darkly over me; the malignancy of my fate might, perhaps, distemper yours; therefore I shall crave of you your leave that I may bear my evils alone. It were a bad recompense for your love, to lay any of them on you. Ant. Let me yet know of you whither you are bound.

Seb. No, 'sooth, sir; my determinate voyage is mere extravagancy. But I perceive in you so excellent a touch of modesty, that you will not extort from me what I am willing to keep in; therefore it charges me in manners the rather to express myself. You must know of me then, Antonio, my name is Sebastian, which I called Rodorigo; my father was that Sehastian of Messaline whom I know you have beard of: he left behind him myself and a sister, both born in an hour. If the beavens have been pleased, would we bad so ended! but you, sir, altered that; for some bours before you took me from the breach of the sea was my sister drowned.

Ant. Alas the day! Seb. A lady, sir, though it was said she much resembled me, was yet of many accounted beautiful: hut though I could not, with such estimable wonder, overfar believe that, yet thus far I will boldly publish ber,—she bore a mind that envy could not but call fair. She is drowned already, sir, with salt water, though I seem to drown her remembrance again with more.

Ant. Pardon me, sir, your had entertainment. Seb. O, good Antonio, forgive me your trouble. Ant. If you will not murder me for my love, [Exit. I let me be your servant.

Seb. If you will not undo what you have done -that is, kill him whom you have recovereddesire it not. Fare ye well at once; my bosom is full of kindness; and I am yet so near the manners of my mother that, upon the least occasion more, mine eyes will tell tales of me. am bound to the Count Orsino's court: farewell.

Ant. The gentleness of all the gods go with

I have many enemies in Orsino's court, Else would I very shortly see thee there: But come what may, I do adore thee so That danger shall seem sport, and I will go. Exit.

Scene II .- A Street.

Enter VIOLA; MALVOLIO following.

Mal. Were not you even now with the Countess Olivia?

Vio. Even now, sir; on a moderate pace I have since arrived but hither.

Mal. She returns this ring to you, sir; you might have saved me my pains, to have taken it away yourself. She adds moreover, that you should put your lord into a desperate assurance she will none of him: and one thing more; that you be never so hardy to come again in his affairs, unless it be to report your lord's taking of this. Receive it so.

Vio. She took the ring of me: I'll none of it. Mal. Come, sir, you previshly threw it to her; and her will is, it should be so returned. If it be worth stooping for, there it lies in your eye; if not, be it his that finds it. Exit.

Vio. I left no ring with her. What means this lady? Fortune forbid my outside have not charm'd her! She made good view of me; indeed, so much, That, sure methought her eyes had lost her tongue, For she did speak in starts distractedly. She loves me, sure; the cunning of her passion Invites me in this churlish messenger. None of my lord's ring! why, he sent her none. I am the man; -if it be so, -as 'tis,-Poor lady, she were better love a dream. Disguise, I see, thou art a wickedness Wherein the pregnant enemy does much. How easy is it for the proper-false In women's waxen hearts to set their forms! Alas, our frailty is the cause, not we; For, such as we are made of, such we be. How will this fadge? My master loves her dearly.

And I, poor monster, fond as much on him; And she, mistaken, seems to dote on me. What will become of this? As I am man, My state is desperate for my master's love; As I am woman, now alas the day! What thriftless sighs shall poor Olivia breathe? O time, thou must untangle this, not I; It is too hard a knot for me to untie.

SCENE III.—A Room in Olivia's House. Enter Sir Toby BELCH and Sir AndREW AGUE-CHEEK.

Sir To. Approach, Sir Andrew: not to be a-bed after midnight is to be up betimes; and diluculo surgere, thou know'st.

Sir And. Nay; by my troth, I know not: but I know to be up late is to be up late.

Sir To. A false conclusion; I hate it as an unfilled can. To be up after midnight, and to go to bed then is early: so that to go to bed after midnight is to go to bed betimes. Do not our lives consist of the four elements?

Sir And. Faith, so they say; but I think it rather consists of eating and drinking.

Sir To. Thou art a scholar; let us therefore eat and drink.-Marian, I say!-

Enter CLOWN.

Sir And. Here comes the fool, i' faith. Clo. How now, my hearts? Did you never see the picture of we three? [catch.

Sir. To. Welcome, ass. Now let's have a
Sir And. By my troth, the fool has an excellent breast. I had rather than forty shillings I had such a leg; and so sweet a breath to sing as the fool has. In sooth, thou wast in very gracious fooling last night when thou spokest of Pigrogromitus, of the Vapians passing the equinoctial of Queubus; 'twas very good, i' faith.

I sent thee sixpence for thy leman. Hadst it?

Clo. I did impeticos thy gratillity: for Malvolio's nose is no whipstock. My lady has a white hand, and the Myrmidons are no bottleale houses.

Sir And. Excellent! Why, this is the best fooling, when all is done. Now, a song.

Sir To. Come on; there is sixpence for you: let's have a song.

Sir And. There's a testril of me too: if one knight give a——

Clo. Would you have a love-song, or a song of good life?

Sir To. A love-song, a love-song. Sir And. Ay, ay; I care not for good life.

SONG.

O, mistress mine, where are you roaming?
O stay and hear; your true love's coming,
That can sing both high and low: Clo. Trip no further, pretty sweeting; Journeys end in lovers' meeting, Every wise man's son doth know.

Sir And. Excellent good, P faith. Sir To. Good, good.

What is love? 'tis not hereafter; Present mirth hath present laughter; What's to come is still unsure: In delay there lies no plenty; Then come kiss me, sweet and twenty, Youth's a stuff will not endure.

Sir And. A mellifluous voice, as I am true knight.

Sir To. A contagious breath. Sir And. Very sweet and contagious, i' faith. Sir To. To hear by the nose, it is dulcet in contagion. But shall we make the welkin dance indeed? Shall we rouse the night-owl in a catch that will draw three souls ont of one weaver? shall we do that? Sir And. An you love me, let's do 't: I am dog at a catch.

Clo. By 'r lady, sir, and some dogs will catch well.

Sir And. Most certain: let our catch he. Thou knave

Clo. Hold thy peace, thou knove, knight? I shall he constrained in 't to call thee knave, knight.

Sir And. 'Tis not the first time I have constrained one to call me knnve. Begin, fool; it hegins Hold thy pcoce.

Clo. I shall never begin if I hold my peace. Sir And. Good, i' faith! Come begin.

They sing a cotch. Enter MARIA

Mar. What n caterwauling do you keep here! If my lady have not called up her steward, Mal-volio, and bid him turn you out of doors, never trust me.

Sir To. My lady's n Cataian, we are politi-cians; Malvolio's a Peg-a-Ramsay, and Three Am not I consanguineous? merry men we be. am I not of her blood? Tilly-valley, lady! There dwelt o man in Babylon, lady, lady.

Singing. Clo. Beshrew me, the knight's in admirable fooling. Sir And. Ay, he does well enough if he be disposed, and so do I too; he does it with a better grace, hut I do it more natural.

Sir To. O, the twelfth doy of December,-|Singing.

Mar. For the love o' God, peace.

Enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. My masters, are you mad? or what are you? Have you no wit, manners, nor honesty, hut to gabble like tinkers at this time of night? Do ye make an ale-house of my lady's house, that ye squeak out your coziers' catches without any mitigation or remorse of voice? Is there no respect of place, persons, nor time, in you?

Sir To. We did keep time, siz, in our tches. Sneck up!

catches.

Mal. Sir Tohy, I must be round with you. My lady hade me tell you that though she harbours you as her kinsman she's nothing nilled to your disorders. If you can separate yourself and your misdemeanours, you are welcome to the house; if not, an it would please you to take leave of her, she is very willing to hid you farewell.

Sir To. Farewell, deor heart, since I must needs be gone.

Mol. Nay, good Sir Tohy. Clo. His eyes do show his doys are olmost Mal. Is 't even so?

Sir To. But I will never die. Clo. Sir Tohy, there you lie.

Mal. This is much credit to you.

Sir To. Shall I bid him go? [Singing.

What an if you do? Clo.

Sir To. Shall I bid him go and spare not?

Clo. O no, no, no, no, you dare not.

Sir To. Out o' tune? sir, ye lie.—Art any more than a steward? Dost thou think, hecause thou art virtuous, there shall be no more cakes and ale?

Clo. Yes, hy Saint Anne; and ginger shall he hot i' the mouth too.

Sir To. Thou'rt i' the right .- Go, sir, rub your chain with crumhs:-A stoop of wine, Maria!

Mal. Mistress Mary, if you prized my lady's favour at anything more than contempt, you would not give means for this uncivil rule; she shall know of it, by this hand. Exit. Mar. Go shake your ears.

Sir And. 'Twere as good a deed as to drink when a man's a-hungry, to challenge him to the field, and then to break promise with him and make a fool of him.

Sir To. Do 't, knight; I'll write thee a challenge; or I'll deliver thy indignation to him hy word of mouth.

Mor. Sweet Sir Tohy, he patient for to-night; since the youth of the count's was to-day with my lady she is much out of quiet. For Monsieur Malvolio, let me alone with him: if I do not gull him into n nayword, and make him a common recreation, do not think I have wit enough to lie straight in my hed. I know I can do it. Sir To. Possessus, possessus; tellus something of him.

Mar. Marry, sir, sometimes he is a kind of Puritan.

Sir And. O, if I thought that, I'd heat him like a dog.
Sir To. What, for heing a Puritan? thy exquisite reason, dear knight?

Sir And. I have no exquisite reason for 't.

hut I have reason good enough. Mar. The devil a Puritan that he is, or anything constantly hut a time pleaser: an affection'd ass that cons state without hook and utters it hy great swarths; the hest persuaded of himself, so crammed, as he thinks, with excellences, that it is his ground of faith that all that look on him love him; and on that vice in him will my revenge find notable cause to work. Sir To. What wilt thou do?

Mar. I will drop in his way some obscure epistles of love; wherein, hy the colour of his heard, the shape of his leg, the manner of his gait, the expressure of his eye, forehead, and complexion, he shall find himself most feelingly personated. I can write very like mylady, your niece: on a forgotten matter we can hardly make distinction of our hands.

Sir To. Excellent! I smell a device.
Sir And. I have 't in my nose too.
Sir To. He shall think, by the letters that thou wilt drop, that they come from my niece, and that she is in love with him. Mar. My purpose is, indeed, a horse of that

Sir And. And your horse now would make him an ass.

Mor. Ass, I doubt not.

Sir And. O'twill he admirable.

Mor. Sport royal, I warrant you. I know my physic will work with him. I will plant you two, and let the fool make a third, where he shall find the letter: observe his construction of it. For this night, to hed, and dream on the event. Farewell.

Sir To. Good-night, Penthesilea.

Sir And. Before me, she's a good wench.

Sir To. She's a beagle, true bred, and one that ndores me. What o' that?

Sir And. I was adored once too.

Sir To. Let's to hed, knight.—Thou hadst need send for more money.

Sir. And. If I cannot recover your niece. I am a foul way out.

Sir To. Send for money, knight; if thou hast her not i' the end, call me Cut.

Sir And. If I do not, never trust me; take it how you will.

Sir To. Come, come; I'll go burn some sack; 'tis too late to go to bed now: come. knight; come, knight. Exeunt.

SCENE IV .- A Room in the DUKE'S Palace.

Enter DUKE, VIOLA, CURIO, and others.

Duke. Give me some music:-Now, good morrow, friends:

Now, good Cesario, but that piece of song, That old and antique song we heard last night; Methought it did relieve my passion much; More than light airs and recollected terms Of these most brisk and giddy-paced times:-Come, but one verse.

Cur. He is not here, so please your lordship, that should sing it.

Duke. Who was it?

Cur. Feste, the jester, my lord; a fool that the Lady Olivia's father took much delight in: he is about the house.

Duke. Seek him out, and play the tune the while. [Exit CURIO.—Music. Come hither boy. If ever thou shalt love,

In the sweet pangs of it remember me: For, such as I am, all true lovers are; Unstaid and skittish in all motions else. Save in the constant image of the creature That is belov'd .- How dost thou like this tune?

Vio. It gives a very echo to the seat

Where Love is throned.

Duke. Thou dost speak masterly: My life upon 't, young though thou art, thine eye Hath stayed upon some favour that it loves; Hath it not, boy?

Vio. A little, by your favour. Duke. What kind of woman is 't? Vio. Of your complexion. Duke. She is not worth thee, then. years, i' faith?

Vio. About your years, my lord.

Duke. Too old, by heaven. Let still the woman take

An elder than herself; so wears she to him, So sways she level in her husband's heart. For, boy, however we do praise ourselves, Our fancies are more giddy and unfirm, More longing, wavering, sooner lost and worn Than women's are.

Vio. I think it well, my lord. Duke. Then let thy love be younger than thy-

Or thy affection cannot hold the bent: For women are as roses, whose fair flower, Being once displayed, doth fall that very hour.

Vio. And so they are: alas, that they are so; To die even when they to perfection grow!

Re-enter Curio and Clown.

Duke. O fellow, come, the song we had last | Between that love a woman can bear me night:

Mark it, Cesario; it is old and plain: The spinsters and the knitters in the sun, And the free maids, that weave their thread with bones,

Do use to chant it: it is silly sooth. And dallies with the innocence of love Like the old age.

Clo. Are you ready, sir? Duke. Ay; pr'ythee, sing.

Music.

SONG.

Clo. Come away, come away, death. And in sad cypress let me be laid;
Fly away, fly away, breath;
I am slain by a fair cruel maid.
My shroud of white, stuck all with yew, O prepare it; My part of death no one so true Did share it.

> Not a flower, not a flower sweet. On my black coffin let there be strown: Not a friend, not a friend greet My poor corpse where my bones shall be thrown A thousand thousand sighs to save, Lay me, O, where Sad true lover never find my grave,

To weep there.

Duke. There's for thy pains. Isir. Clo. No pains, sir; I take pleasure in singing, Duke. I'll pay thy pleasure, then.

Clo. Truly, sir, and pleasure will be paid one time or another.

Duke. Give me now leave to leave thee. Clo. Now, the melancholy god protect thee; and the tailor make thy doublet of changeable taffata, for thy mind is a very opal!— I would have men of such constancy put to sea, that their business might be everything, and their intent everywhere; for that's it that always makes a good voyage of nothing.—Farewell.
[Exit Clown.

Duke. Let all the rest give place. Exeunt CURIO and Attendants. Once more, Cesario,

Get thee to yon same sovereign cruelty: Tell her my love, more noble than the world, Prizes not quantity of dirty lands; The parts that fortune hath bestow'd upon her Tell her, I hold as giddily as fortune; But 'tis that miracle and queen of gems

That Nature pranks her in attracts my soul. Vio. But if she cannot love yon, sir? Duke. I cannot be so answer'd.

'Sooth, but you must. Say that some lady, as perhaps there is, Hath for your love as great a pang of heart As you have for Olivia: you cannot love her; You tell her so. Must she not then be answer'd?

Duke. There is no woman's sides Can bide the beating of so strong a passion As love doth give my heart: no woman's heart So big to hold so much; they lack retention. Alas, their love may be called appetite,-No motion of the liver, but the palate,-That suffer surfeit, cloyment, and revolt; But mine is all as hungry as the sea, And can digest as much: make no compare And that I owe Olivia.

Ay, but I know, Duke. What dost thou know? Vio. Too well what love women to men may owe.

In faith, they are as true of heart as we. My father had a daughter loved a man, As it might he, perhaps were I a woman. I should your lordship.

Duke. And what's her history? Vio. A blank, my lord. She never told her love. But let concealment, like a worm; i' the hud. Feedonher damask cheek: she pined in thought;

And, with a green and yellow melancholy. She sat like patience on a monument,

Was not this love, indeed? Smiling at grief. We men may say more, swear more; hut, indeed, Our shows are more than will; for still we prove Much in our vows, but little in our love.

Duke. But died thy sister of her love, my hoy? Vio. I am all the daughters of my father's house.

· And all the brothers too; -- and yet I know not. Sir. shall I to this lady? Ay, that's the theme. Duke.

To her in haste: give her this jewel; say My love can give no place, hide no denay. Exeunt.

Scene V .- Olivia's Garden.

Enter Sir Toby Belch, Sir Andrew Ague-CHEEK, and Fabian.

Sir To. Come thy ways, Signior Fabian. Fob. Nay, I'll come; if I lose a scruple of this sport let me be boiled to death with melancholy.

Sir To. Wouldst thou not be glad to have the niggardly rascally sheep-biter come by some notable shame? Fab. I would exult, man: you know he brought me out o' favour with my lady about a bear-haiting here. - Sir To. To anger him we'll have the bear again; and we will fool him black and blue:-Shall we not, Sir Andrew?

Sir And. An we do not, it is pity of our lives.

Enter MARIA.

Sir To. Here comes the little villain:-How now, my nettle of India?

Mar. Get ye all three into the box-tree: Malvolio's coming down this walk; he has heen yonder i' the sun, practising behaviour to his own shadow this half-hour: ohserve him, for the love of mockery; for I know this letter will make a contemplative idiot of him. the name of jesting! [The men hide themselves.] Lie thou there; [throws down a letter] for here comes the trout that must be caught with tickling.

Exit Maria.

Enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. 'Tis but fortune; all is fortune. Maria once told me she did affect me: and I have heard herself come thus near, that, should she fancy, it should be one of my complexion. sides, she uses me with a more exalted respect than anyone else that follows her. should I think on't? What

Sir To. Here's an overweening rogue!

Fcb. O, peace! Contemplation makes a rare turkey-cock of him; how he jets under his advanced plumes!

Sir And. 'Slight, I could so beat the rogue:-Sir To. Peace, I say.

Mal. To be Count Malvolio:-Sir To. Ah, roguel

Sir And. Pistol him, pistol him. Sir To. Peace, peace.

Mal. There is example for 't; the lady of the Strachy married the yeoman of the wardrohe. Sir And. Fie on him, Jezehel!

Fab. O, peacel now he's deeply in; look how imagination blows him.

Mal. Having been three months married to her, sitting in my state,-Sir To. O for a stone-how to hit him in the Mal. Calling my officers about me in my branched velvet gown; having come from a day-hed, where I have left Olivia sleeping.

Sir To. Fire and hrimstone 1

Fab. O, peace, peace.
Mal. And then to have the humour of state: and after a demure travel of regard,—telling them I know my place as I would they should do theirs,-to ask for my kinsman Toby.

Sir To. Bolts and shackles!

Fab. O, peace, peace, peacel now, now.
Mal. Seven of my people, with an ohedient start, make out for him: I frown the while; and perchance, wind up my watch, or play with some rich jewel. Toby approaches; court'sies there to me:

Sir To. Shall this fellow live?

Fab. Though our silence be drawn from us with cars, yet peace.

Mol. I extend my hand to him thus, quenching my familiar smile with an austere regard of control:

Sir To. And does not Toby take you a blow

o' the lips then?

Mal. Saying, Cousin Toby, my fortunes hoving cost me on your niece, give me this prerogative of speech: Sir To. What, what?

Mol. You must amend your drunkenness. Sir To. Out, scahl lof our plot.

Fob. Nay, patience, or we break the sinew Mal. Besides, you waste the treasure of your time with a foolish knight; Sir And. That's me, I warrant you.

Mal. One Sir Andrew:

Sir And. I knew 'twas I; for many do call me fool.

Mal. What employment have we here? [Taking up the letter.

Fab. Now is the woodcock near the gin.

Sir To. O, peacel and the spirit of humours intimate reading aloud to him!

Mal. By my life, this is my lady's hand: these be her very C's, her U's, and her T's; and thus makes she her great P's. It is in contempt of question, her hand.

Sir And. Her C's, her U's, and her T's.

Why that?

Mal. [reads.] To the unknown beloved, this, and my good wishes: her very phrases!-Byyour leave, wax.—Soft!—and the impressure her Lucrece, with which she uses to seal: 'tis my lady. To whom should this he?

Fob. This wins him, liver and all. Mal. [reods.] Jore knows I love,

But who? Lips do not more, No man must know.

No man must know. what follows? the this, that my lady loves me. She did commend numbers altered!-No man must know:-If this should be thee, Malvolio?

Sir To. Marry, hang thee, brock!

Mal. I may command where I adore: But silence, like a Lucrece knife, With bloodless stroke my heart doth gore; M, O, A, I, doln eway my life.

Fab. A fustian riddle!

Sir To. Excellent wench, say I.

Mal. M, O, A, I, doth sway my life.—Ray, but first let me see, let me see, let me see.

Sir To. And with what wing the stannyel checks at it!

Mal. I may command where I adore. Why, she may command me: I serve her, she is my lady. Why, this is evident to any formal capacity. There is no obstruction in this;—And the end,—What should that alphabetical position portend? If I could make that resemble something in me, -Softly! -M, O, A, I.-

Sir To. O, ay! make up that:—he is now at a cold scent.

Fab. Sowter will cry upon't for all this, though it be as rank as a fox.

Mal. M,—Malvolio;—M,—why, that begins my name.

Fab. Did I not say he would work it out? he cur is excellent at faults. Mal. M,—But then there is no consonancy in the sequel; that suffers under probation:

A should follow, but O does. Fab. And O shall end, I hope. [him cry O. Sir to. Ay, or I'll cudgel him, and make him

Mal. And then I comes behind.

Fab. Ay, an you had an eye behind you, you might see more detraction at your heels than fortunes before you.

Mal. M, O, A, I;—This simulation is not as the former:—and yet, to crush this a little, it would bow to me, for every one of these letters are in my name. Soft; here follows prose.-If this fall into thy hand, revolve. In my stars I am above thee; but be not afraid of greatness. Some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them. Thy fates open their hands; let thy blood and spirit embrace them. And, to inure thyself to what thou art like to be, cast thy humble slough and appear fresh. Be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants: let thy tongue tang arguments of stale; put thyself into the trick of singularity: She thus advises thee that sighs for thee. Remember who commended thy yellow stockings, and wished to see thee ever cross-I say, remember. Go to; thou art gartered. made, if thou desirest to be so; if not, let me see thee a steward still, the fellow of servants, and not worthy to touch fortune's fingers. Farewell. She that would alter services with thee,

The fortunate unhappy. Daylight and champian discovers not more: this is open. I will be proud, I will read politic authors, I will baffle Sir Toby, I will wash off gross acquaintance, I will be point-de-vice, the very man. I do not now fool myself to let imagination jade me; for every reason excites to loutward!

my yellow stockings of late, she did praise my leg being cross-gartered; and in this she manifests herself to my love, and, with a kind of injunction, drives me to these habits of her liking. I thank my stars I am happy. I will be strange, stout, in yellow stockings, and crossgartered, even with the swiftness of putting on. Jove and my stars be praised!—Here is yet a postscript. Thou canst not choose but know who I am. If thou entertainest my love, let it appear in thy smiling; thy smiles become thee it first let me see,—let me see,—let me see. | well: therefore in my presence still smile, dear Fab. What a dish of poison hath she dressed my sweet, I prythee. Jove, I thank thee.—I will smile: I will do everything that thou wilt

Fab. I will not give my part of this sport for a pension of thousands to be paid from the Sophy. Sir To. I could marry this wench for this device:

Sir And. So could I too. Sir To. And ask no other dowry with her but such another jest.

Enter MARIA.

Sir And. Nor I neither.

Fab. Here comes my noble gull-catcher. Sir To. Wilt thou set thy foot o' my neck:

Sir And. Or o' mine either?
Sir To. Shall I play my freedom at traytrip, and become thy bond-slave?

Sir And. I' faith, or I either. Sir To. Why, thou hast put him in such a dream, that, when the image of it leaves him, he must run mad.

Mar. Nay, but say true; does it work upon

Sir To. Like equa-vitae with a midwife.

Mar. If you will then see the fruits of the sport, mark his first approach before my lady he will come to her in yellow stockings, and 'tis a colour she abhors; and cross-gartered, a fashion she detests; and he will smile upon her, which will now be so unsuitable to her disposition, being addicted to a melancholy as she is, that it cannot but turn him into a notable contempt: if you will see it, follow me.

Sir To. To the gates of Tartar, thou most excellent devil of wit!

Sir And. I'll make one too. (Exeunt.

ACT III.

Scene I.—Olivia's Garden.

Enter VIOLA, and CLOWN with a tabor.

Vio. Save thee, friend, and thy music. Dost thou live by thy tabor?

Clo. No, sir, I live by the church.

Vio. Art thou a churchman? Clo. No such matter, sir; I do live by the church; for I do live at my house, and my house doth stand by the church.

Vio. So thou mayst say, the king lies by a beggar, if a beggar dwell near him; or the church stands by thy tabor, if thy tabor stand by the church. Clo. You have said, sir.—To see this age!— A sentence is but a cheveril glove to a good wit. How quickly the wrong side may be turned

Vio. Nay, that's certain; they that dally nicely with words may quickly make them wanton. Clo. I would, therefore, my sister had had no name, sir.
Vio. Why, man?

Clo. Why, sir, her name's a word; and to daily with that word might make my sister wanton. But indeed, words are very rascals, since bonds disgraced them.

Vio. Thy reason, man? Clo. Troth, sir, I can yield you none without words; and words are grown so false, I am loath to prove reason with them.

Vio. I warrant, thou art a merry fellow, and carest for nothing.

Clo. Not so, sir, I do care for something: but in my conscience, sir, I do not care for you; if that be to care for nothing, sir, I would it would make you invisible.

Vio. Art not thou the Lady Olivia's fool?

Clo. No, indeed, sir; the Lady Olivia has no folly: she will keep no fool, sir, till she be married; and fools are as like husbands as pilcbards are to herrings, the husband's the bigger; I am, indeed, not her fool, but her corrupter of words.

Vio. I saw thee late at the Count Orsino's. Clo. Foolery, sir, does walk about the orb like the sun; it shines everywhere. I would be sorry, sir, but the fool should be as oft with your master as with my mistress: I think I saw your wisdom there.

Vio. Nay, an thou pass upon me, I'll no more with thee. Hold, there's expenses for thee. Clo. Now Jove, in his next commodity of hair, send thee a beard!

Vio. By my troth, I'll tell thee, I am almost sick for one; though I would not have it grow Is thy lady within? on my chin.

Clo. Would not a pair of these have bred, sir? Vio. Yes, being kept together and put to use. Clo. I would play Lord Pandarus of Phrygia, Vio. I would play Lott raines of the Stroilus.

Vio. I understand you, sir; 'tis well begged.
Clo. The matter, I hope, is not great, sir, begging but a beggar. Cressida was a beggar. My lady is within, sir. I will construe to them whence you come; who you are and what you would are out of my welkin: I might say element; but the word is overworn. [Exit. Vio. This fellow's wise enough to play the fool;

And, to do that well, craves a kind of wit:

He must observe their mood on whom he jests, The quality of persons, and the time; And, like the haggard, check at every feather This is a practice

That comes before his eye. As full of labour as a wise man's art: For folly, that he wisely shows, is fit;

But wise men, folly-fallen, quite taint their wit.

Sir To. Save you, gentleman.

Vio. And you, sir.

Sir And. Dieu vous garde, monsieur. Vio. Et vous aussi: uotre serviteur.

Sir And. I hope sir, you are; and I am yours. Sir To. Will you encounter the house? my niece is desirous you should enter if your trade be to her.

Vio. I am bound to your mece, sir: I mean, she is the list of my voyage.

Sir To. Taste your legs, sir; put them to motion.

Vio. My legs do better understand me, sir, than I understand what you mean by bidding me taste my legs.

Sir To. I mean to go, sir, to enter.

Vio. I will answer you with gait and entrance: but we are prevented.

Enler Olivia and Maria.

Most excellent accomplished lady, the heavens rain odours on you.

Sir And. That youth's a rare courtier! Rain odours! well.

Oli. O, by your leave, I pray you; I bade you never speak again of him: But, would you undertake another suit, I had rather near you.

Dear lady,

Oli. Give me leave, I beseech yon: I did send, After the last enchantment you did here, A ring in chase of you; so did I abuse Myself, my servant, and, I fear me, you: Under your hard construction must I sit: To force that on you, in a sbameful cunning, Which you knew none of yours. What might Oli. Why, then, methinks 'tis time to smile O world, how apt the poor are to be proud! If one should be a prey, how much the better To fall before the lion than the wolf!

Clock strikes.

The clock upbraids me with the waste of time.-Be not afraid, good youth, I will not have you: And yet, when wit and youth is come to harvest.

Your wife is like to reap a proper man.

There lies your way due-west.

Oli. O what a deal of scorn looks beautiful In the contempt and anger of his lip! A murd'rous guilt shows not itself more soon Than love that would seem hid: love's night is noon.

Cesario, by the roses of the spring, By maidhood, honour, truth, and everything, I love thee so that, maugre all thy pride, Nor wit, nor reason, can my passion hide: Do not extort thy reasons from this clause, For, that I woo, thou therefore hast no cause: But, rather, reason thus with reason fetter: Love sought is good, but given unsought is better.

Vio. By innocence I swear, and by my youth. I have one heart, one bosom, and one truth. And that no woman has; nor never none Shall mistress be of it, save I alone. And so adieu, good madam: never more Will I my master's tears to you deplore.

Andrew. Sir And. Marry, I saw your niece do more favours to the count's serving man than ever she bestowed upon me; I saw't i' the orchard.

Sir To. Did she see thee the while, old boy?

Sir And. As plain as I see you now.

Fab. This was a great argument of love in her toward you.

Sir And. 'Slight! will you make an ass o' me? Fab. I will prove it legitimate, sir, upon the oaths of judgment and reason.

Sir To. And they have been grand jurymen since before Noah was a sailor.

Fab. She did show favour to the youth in your sight only to exasperate you, to awake your dormouse valour, to put fire in your heart and brimstone in your liver. You should then have accosted her; and with some excellent jests, fire- is.

new from the mint, you should have banged the youth into dumbness. This was looked for at your hand, and this was baulked: the double gilt of this opportunity you let time wash off, and you are now sailed into the north of my lady's opinion; where you will hang like an icicle on a Dutchman's beard, unless you do redeem it by some laudable attempt, either of valour or policy.

Sir And. And 't be any way, it must be with valour: for policy I hate; I had as lief be a Brownist as a politician.

Sir To. Why, then, build me thy fortunes upon the basis of valour. Challenge me the count's youth to fight with him; hurt him in eleven places; my niece shall take note of it: and assure thyself there is no love-broker in the world can more prevail in man's commendation with woman than report of valour.

Fab. There is no way but this, Sir Andrew. Sir And. Will either of you bear me a challenge to him?

Sir To. Go. write it in a martial hand; be curst and brief; it is no matter how witty, so it be eloquent and full of invention; taunt him with the licence of ink: if thou thou'st him some thrice, it shall not be amiss; and as many lies as will lie in thy sheet of paper, although the sheet were big enough for the bed of Ware in England, set 'em down; go about it. Let there be gall enough in thy ink; though thou write with a goose-pen, no matter. About it. Sir And. Where shall I find you?

Sir To. We'll call thee at the cubiculo. Go. [Exit Sir Andrew.

Fab. This is a dear manikin to you, Sir Toby. Sir To. I have been dear to him, lad, some two thousand strong, or so.

Fab. We shall have a rare letter from him:

but you'll not deliver it.

Sir To. Never trust me then; and by all means stir on the youth to an answer. I think oxen and wainropes cannot hale them together. For Andrew, if he were opened, and you find so much blood in his liver as will clog the foot of a flea, I'll eat the rest of the anatomy.

Fab. And his opposite, the youth, bears in his visage no great presage of cruelty.

Enter MARIA.

Sir To. Look where the youngest wren of nine comes.

Mar. If you desire the spleen, and will laugh yourselves into stitches, follow me: you gull, Malvolio, is turned heathen, a very renegado; for there is no Christian, that means to be saved by believing rightly, can ever believe such impossible passages of grossness. He's in yellow

Osr. Your lordship is right welcome back to Denmark.

Ham. I humbly thank you, sir.—Dost know this water-fly?

Hor. No, my good lord.

Ham. Thy state is the more gracious; for 'tis a vice to know him. He hath much land, and fertile: let a beast be lord of beasts, and his crib shall stand at the king's mess: 'tis a chough; but, as I say, spacious in the possession of dirt.

Iago. What say'st thou, noble heart?
Rod. What will I do, thinkest thou?
Iogo. Why, go to bed and sleep.
Rod. I will incontinently drown myself.

logo. If thou dost, I shall never love theceter. Why, thou silly gentleman! Rod. It is silliness to live when to live is torment; and then have we a prescription to die when death is our physician.

Jogo. O villanous! I have looked upon the world for four times seven years; and since I could distinguish betwirt a benefit and an injury, I never found a man that knew how to love himself. Ere I would say I would drown myself for the love of a Guinea-hen, I would change my humanity with a baboon.

Rod. What should I do? I confess it is my shame to be so fond; but it is not in my virtue to amend it.

logo. Virtuel a figl 'tis in ourselves that we are thus or thus. Our bodies are gardens, to the which our wills are gardeners; so that if we will plant nettles or sow lettuce, set hyssop and weed up thyme, supply it with one gender of berbs or distract it with many, either to have it sterile with idleness or manured with industry; why, the power and corrigible authority of this lies in our wills. most preposterous conclusions: but we have reason to cool our raging motions, our carnel stings, our unbitted lusts; whereof I take this, that you call love, to be a sect or scion.

Rod. It cannot be.

logo. It is merely a lust of the blood and a permission of the will. Come, be a man: drown thyself! drown cats and blind puppies. I have professed me thy friend, and I confess me knit to thy deserving with cables of perdurable toughness; I could never better stead thee than now. Put money in thy purse; follow thou the wars; defeat thy favour with an usurped heard; I say, put money in thy purse. It cannot be that Desdemons should long continue her love to the Moor,-put money in thy purse, -nor he his to her: it was a violent commencement, and thon shalt see an answerable sequestration; -- put hut money in thy purse. -- These Moors are changeable in their wills;—fill thy purse with money: the food that to him now is as luscious as locusts shall be to him shortly as hitter as coloquintida. She must change for youth: when she is sated with his body she will find the error of her choice: she must have change, she must therefore put money in thy purse.—If thou wilt needs damn thyself, do it a more delicate way than drowning. Make all the money thou canst: if sanctimony and a frail vow betwirt an erring barbarian and a supersubtle Venetian be not too hard for my wits and all the tribe of hell, thou shalt enjoy ber; therefore make money. A pox of drowning thyselfl it is clean out of the way; seek thou rather to be hanged in compassing thy joy than to be drowned and go without ber.

Rod. Wilt thou be fast to my bopes if I depend on the issue?

logo. Thou art sure of me:-go, make money:-I bave told thee often, and I re-tell thee again and again, I bate the Moor: my cause is hearted; thine hath no less reason. Let us be conjunctive in our revenge against him: if thou canst cuckold him, thou dost thyself a pleasure, me a sport. There are many events in the womb of time which will be delivered. Traverse; go; provide thy money. We will have more of this to-morrow. Adieu.

Rod. Where shall we meet i' the morning?

logo. At my lodging.
Rod. I'll be with thee betimes. [Roderigo? lago. Go to; farewell. Do you hear,

Rod. What say you?

lago. No more of drowning, do you hear? Rod. I am changed: I'll go sell all my land.

lago. Thus do I ever make my fool my purse; For I mine own gain'd knowledge should profane

I hate the Moor; And it is thought abroad that 'twixt my sheets He has done my office: I know not if't be true; But I, for mere suspicion in that kind, Will do as if for surety. He holds me well; Cassio's a proper man: let me see now;

Osr. I thank your lordship, 'tis very hot. Ham. No, believe me, itis very cold; the wind is northerly.

Osr. It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed. Ham. Methinks it is very sultry and hot for my complexion.

Ost. Exceedingly, my lord; it is very sultry,—as't were,—I cannot tell how.—But, my lord, his majesty bade me signify to you that he has laid a great wager on your head. Sir, this is the matter,

Ham. I beseech you, remember,-

HAMLET moves him to put on his hat. Osr. Nay, in good faith; for mine ease, in od faith. Sir, here is newly come to court good faith. Laertes; believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent differences, of very soft society and great showing: indeed, to speak feelingly of him, he is the card or calendar of gentry, for you shall find in him the continent of what part a gentleman would see.

Ham. Sir, his definement suffers no perdition in you;-though, I know, to divide him inventorially would dizzy the arithmetic of memory, and it but yaw neither, in respect of his quick sail. But, in the verity of extolment, I take him to be a soul of great article; and his infusion of such dearth and rareness as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror; and who else would trace him, his umbrage, nothing more. [him. Osr. Your lordship speaks most infallibly of

Ham. The concernancy, sir? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath?

Ost. Sir?

Hor. Is't not possible to understand in other tongue? You will do't sir, really. another tongue?

Ham. What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

Osr. Of Laertes?

Hor. His purse is empty already; all's golden words are spent. Ham. Of him, sir.

Osr. I know, you are not ignorant,— Ham. I would you did, sir; yet, in faith, if you did, it would not much approve me. -Well, sir.

Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is,-

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but to know a man well were to know himself.

Osr. I mean, sir, for his weapon; but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his meed he's unfellowed.

Ham. What's his weepon?

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons: but, wen. Osr. The king, sir, hath wagered with him That's two of his weapons: but, well. six Barbary horses: against the which he has imponed, as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers, and so: three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hilts, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Hor. I knew you must be edified by the you are not fit. margent ere you had done.

Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more german to the matter if we could carry cannon by our sides: I would it might be hangers till then. But, on: six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal conceited carriages; that's the French bet against the Danish: why is this imponed, as you call it?

Osr. The king, sir, hath laid, that in a dozen passes between you and him he shall not exceed you three hits: he hath laid on twelve for nine; and it would come to immediate trial if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How if I answer no?

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall: if it please his majesty, it is the breathing time of day with me: let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing, and the king hold his purpose, I will win for him if I can; if not, I will gain nothing but my shame and the odd hits.

Osr. Shall I re-deliver you e'en so? Ham. To this effect, sir; after what flourish your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship. Yours, yours. |Exit OSRIC.|-He does well to commend it himself; there are no tongues else for's turn. lon his head.

Hor. This lapwing runs away with the shell Ham. He did comply with his dug before he sucked it. Thus has he,-and many more of the same bery, that I know the drossy age dotes on,-only got the tune of the time, and outward habit of encounter; a kind of yesty collection, which carries them through and through the most fanned and winnowed opinions; and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commended him to you by young Osric, who brings back to him that you attend him in the hall: he sends to know if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purposes; they follow the king's pleasure: if his fitness speaks, mine is ready; now or whensoever, provided I be so able as now.

Lord. The king and queen and all are coming

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The queen desires you to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes before you fall to play.

Ham. She well instructs me. [Exit Lord. Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so; since he went into France I have been in continual practice: I shall win at the odds. But thou wouldst not think how ill all's here about my heart: but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my lord,-

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a kind of gain-giving as would perhaps trouble a captain. Left in the conduct of the bold Iago;

Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts A se'nnight's speed .- Great Jove, Othello guard,

And swell his sail with thine own powerful That he may bless this bay with his tall ship, Make love's quick pants in Desdemona's arms, Give renew'd fire to our extincted spirits And bring all Cyprus comfort1-O, behold, Enter Desdemona, Emilia, Iago, Rode-RIGO, and Attendants.

The riches of the ship is come on shore! Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees. Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven, Before, behind thee, and on every hand,

If it be now, 'tis not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all: since no man has anght of what he leaves, what is't to leave betimes?

Enter King, Queen, Laertes, Lords, Osric, and Attendants with foils, &c.

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me.

The KING puts LAERTES'S hand into HAMLET'S.

Ham. Give me your pardon, sir: I have done Lon Mioue:

But pardon't, as you are a gentleman. This presence knows, and you must needs have heard.

How I am punish'd with sore distraction.

What I have done,

That might your nature, honour, and exception Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness. Was't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes?

Hamlet:

If Hamlet from himself be ta'en away, And when he's not himself does wrong Laertes, Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it. Who does it, then? His madness: if't be so. Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong'd; His madness is poor Hamlet's enemy. Sir, in this audience, Let my disclaiming from a purpos'd evil Free me so far in your most generous thoughts That I have shot mine arrow o'er the house And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfied in nature, Whose motive, in this case, should stir me most To my revenge: but in my terms of honour I stand aloof; and will no reconcilement Till by some elder masters of known honour I have a voice and precedent of peace To keep my name ungor'd. But till that time I do receive your offer'd love like love, And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely; And will this brother's wager frankly play.-Give us the foils; come on.

Come, one for me. Laer. Ham. Pil be your foil, Laertes; in mine ignorance Your skill shall, like a star in the darkest night,

Your same, Stick fiery off indeed.
You mock me, sir.

Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give them the foils, young Osric. Cousin Hamlet.

You know the wager? Very well, my lord; Ham.Your grace hath laid the odds o' the weaker side. King. I do not fear it; I have seen you both; But since he's better'd, we have therefore odds. Lagr. This is too heavy, let me see another. Hom. This likes me well. These foils have all a length? [They prepare to play. Osr. Ay, my good lord.

King. Set me the stoups of wine upon that table,

If Hamlet give the first or, second hit, Or quit in answer of the third exchange Let all the battlements their ordnance fire; The king shall drink to Hamlet's better breath; And in the cup an union shall he throw Richer than that which four successive kings In Denmark's crown have worn. Give me the cups;

And let the kettle to the trumpet speak, The trumpet to the cannoneer without, The cannons to the heavens, the heavens to earth,

Now the king drinks to Hamlet .- Come, begin;

And you, the judges, bear a wary eye.

Ham. Come on, sir.

Loet. Come, my lord.

(They play. Ham.

One. Laer. No: Ham. Jadgment. Osr. A hit, a very palpable hit.

Well;--again. Laet. King. Stay, give me a drink.—Hamlet, this pearl is thine;

Here's to thy health.

Trumpets sound, and rannon shot off within.

Give him the cup. awhile .-Ham. I'll play this bout first; set it by Come.—Another hit; what say you? They play.

Leer. A touch, a touch, I do confess.

King. Our son shall win. He's fat, and scant of breath.-Oucen. Here, Hamlet, take my napkin, rub thy brows:

The queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet. Hom. Good madam! Gertrude, do not drink. King.

Queen. I will, my lord; I pray you, pardon

King. [Aside.] It is the poison'd cup; it is too Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam; by and Oucen. Come, let me wipe thy face.

Laer. My lord, I'll hit him now. King. I do not think't. Lacr. [Aside.] And yet 'tis almost 'gainst my conscience.

Ham. Come, for the third, Laertes: you but dally;

I pray you, pass with your best violence: I am afeard you make a wanton of me.

Laer. Say yon so? come on They play. Osr. Nothing, neither way.

Lacr. Have at you now!

[LAER. wounds HAM.; then, in scuffling, they change rapiers, and HAM. wounds LAER. King. Part them; they are incens'd. Ham. Nay, come, again. | The QUEEN falls Look to the queen there, hol Ost.

Hor. They bleed on both sides .- How is it, my lord?

Osr. How is't, Lacrtes?

Lagr. Why, as a woodcock to my own springe, Osric;

I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.

Ham. How does the queen?

Kina. She swoons to see them bleed. Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink,-O my dear Hamlet, The drink, the drink!—I am poison'd. [Dies.

I thank you, valiant Cassio. Des. What tidings can you tell me of my lord?

Cas. He is not yet arriv'd: nor know I aught
Bot that he's well, and will be shortly here.
Des. O, but I fear—How lost you company?

Cas. The great contention of the sea and skies

Parted our fellowship: -but, hark! a sail. [Within.] A sail, a sail! [Guns within.] 2 Gent. They give their greeting to the citadel:

This likewise is a friend.

See for the news .-Exit Gentlemen.

Good ancient, you are welcome:-welcome, TO EMILIA. mistress:~ Let it not gall your patience, good lago. That I extend my manners; 'tis my breeding That gives me this bold show of courtesy.

Kissing her. lago. Sir, would she give you so much of her lips

As of her tongue she oft bestows on me, Yon'd have enough.

Des. Alas, she has no speech. Jago. In faith, too much; I find it still when I have list to sleep: Marry, before your ladyship, I grant, She puts her tongue a little in her heart, And chides with thinking.

Emil. You have little cause to say so.
Iago. Come on, come on; you are pictures out of doors, [kitchens.

Bells in your parlours, wild cats in your Saints in your injuries, devils being offended, Players in your housewifery, and housewives in your beds.

Des. O, fie upon thee, slanderer! Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk: You rise to play and go to bed to work. Emil. You shall not write my praise.

No, let me not. lago. Des. What wouldst thou write of me if thou shouldst praise me? lago. O gentle lady, do not put me to't; [harbour? For I am nothing if not critical. Des. Comeon, assay-There's one gone to the Des. Worse and worse.

Emil. How if fair and foolish?

lago. She never yet was foolish that was fair; For even her folly help'd her to an heir.

Des. These are old fond paradoxes to make fools laugh i' the alchonse. What miserable praise hast thou for her that's foul and foolish? lago. There's none so foul, and foolish there-

But does foul pranks which fair and wise ones

Des. O heavy ignorance!-thon praisest the worst best. But what praise couldst thou hestow on a deserving woman indeed,—one that, in the authority of her merit, did justly put on the vouch of very malice itself?

Icgo. She that was ever fair, and never prond; Had tongue at will, and yet was never loud; Hever lack'd gold, and yet went never gay; Fled from her wish, and yet said, Now I may; She that, being anger'd, her revenge heing nigh, Bade her wrong stay and her displeasure fly; She that in wisdom never was so frail To change the cod's head for the salmon's tail; She that could think, and ne'er disclose her mind:

See suitors following, and not look hehind; She was a wight, if ever such wight were.

Des. To do what? [beer. lago. To sockle fools and chronicle small Des. O most lame and impotent conclusion! Do not learn of him, Emilia, though he he thy husband.—How say you, Cassio? is he not a most profane and liberal counsellor?

Cas. He speaks home, madam: you may relish him more in the soldier than in the scholar.

logo. [Aside.] He takes her by the palm: ay, well said, whisper: with as little a web as this will I ensuare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her, do; I will give thee in thine own courtship. You say true; 'tis so, indeed: if such tricks as these strip you out of your lieutenantry, it had been better you had not kissed your three fingers so oft, which now again you are most apt to play the sir in. Very Good; well kiss'd! an excellent courtesy! 'tis so, indeed. Yet again your fingers to your lips? would they were clyster-pipes for your sakel [Trumpet within.]—The Moor! I know his trumpet.

Cas. 'Tis truly so.

Des. Let's meet him, and receive him.

Cas. Lo, where he comes!

Enter OTHELLO and Attendants.

Oth. O my fair warrior!

Des. My dear Othello! Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content To see you here before me. O my soul's joy! If after every tempest come such calms, death! And let the labouring back climb hills of seas Olympus-high, and duck again as low As hell's from heaven! If it were now to die, 'Twere now to he most happy; for, I fear, My soul hath her content so absolute That not another comfort like to this Succeeds in unknown fate.

The heavens forbid nes. But that our loves and comforts should increase Even as our days do grow!

Oth. Amen to that, sweet powers!-I cannot speak enough of this content; It stops me here; it is too much of joy: And this, and this, the greatest discords be (Kissing her.

That e'er our hearts shall make!

Ham. O villany)—Hol let the door be lock'd: Treachery! seek it out. [LAERTES falls. Leer. It is here, Hamlet: Hamlet, thou art slein;

No medicine in the world can do thee good; In thee there is not half an hour of life; The treacherous instrument is in thy hand, Unbated and envenom'd; the foul practice Hath turn'd itself on me; lo, here I lie, Never to rise again: thy mother's poison'd:

I can no more:—the king, the king's to blame.

Ham. The point envenom'd too!—

Then venom to thy work. [Sichs the King.
Osr. and Lords. Treason! treason!

King. O, yet defend me, friends; I am but

Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murderous, damned Dane,

Drink off this potion.—Is thy union here?
Follow my mother.

[KING dies.

Laer. He is justly serr'd;

It is a poison temper'd by himself.— Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet: Mine and my father's death come not upon thee,

Nor thine on me! [Dies. Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee.—

I am dead, Horzito.—Wretched queen, adieu!—You that look pale and tremble at this chance, That art but mutes or audience to this act, Had I but time,—as this fell sergeant, death, Is strict in his arrest,—O, I could tell you,—But let it be.—Horatio, I am dead; Thou liv'st; report me and my cause aright To the unsatisfied.

Hor. Rever believe it: I am more an antique Roman than a Dane,— Here's yet some liquor left.

Ham. As thou'rt a man, Give me the cup; let go; by heaven, I'll have't.

O good Horatio, what a wounded name, Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me!

If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart,
Absent thee from felicity awhile,
And in this hersh world draw thy breath in pain,

To tell my story.—

[March afer off, and shot within. What werlike noise is this?

Ost. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland,

To the ambassadors of England gives This werlike volley.

Ham. O, I die, Horetio;
The potent poison quite o'er-crows my spirit:
I cannot live to hear the news from England;
But I do prophesy the election lights
On Fortinbras: he has my dying voice;
So tell him, with the occurrents, more and less,
Which have solicited.—The rest is silence.
[Dies.

Hor. Now cracks a noble heart.—Goodnight, sweet prince,

And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest! Why does the drum come hither?

March within.

Enter FORTIMERAS, the English Ambassadors, and others.

Fort. Where is this sight?

Hor. What is it

Hor. What is it you would see? If aught of woe or wonder, cease your search. Fort. This quarry cries on havoc.—O proud death.

What feast is toward in thine eternal cell, That thou so many princes at a shot So bloodily hast struck?

I Amb. The sight is dismal; And our effairs from England come too late: The ears are senseless that should give us hearing,

To tell him his commandment is fulfill'd, That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are dead: Where should we have our thanks?

Hor. Not from his mouth, Hed it the ability of life to thank you: He never gave commandment for their death. But since, so jump upon this bloody question,

You from the Polack wars, and you from England,

Are here arriv'd, give order that these bodies High on a stage be placed to the view; And let me speak to the yet unknowing world How these things came about: so shall you hear Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts; Of accidental judgments, casual slaughters; Of deeths put on by cunning and fore'd cause; And, in this upshot, purposes mistook Fall'n on the inventors' heads: all this can I Truly deliver.

Fort. Let us haste to hear it,
And call the noblest to the audience.
For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune:
I have some rights of memory in this kingdom, [me.

Which now to claim my vantage doth invite Hor. Of that I shall have also cause to speak, And from his mouth whose voice will draw on

more:

But let this same be presently perform'd, Even while men's minds are wild: lest more mischance

On plots and errors happen.

Fort. Let four captains
Bear Hamlet like a soldier to the stage;
For he was likely, had he been put on,
To here provid most royally: and, for his passage,

The soldier's music and the rites of war Speak loudly for him.—

Take up the bodies.—Such a sight as this Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss.
Go, bid the soldiers shoot. [A decd march.
[Exeunt, bearing off the dead bodies; after which a peal of ordnance is shot off.

lago [Aside.] O, you are well tun'd nowl foul thoughts. But I'll set down the pegs that make this music, As honest as I am.

Oth. Come, let us to the castle. News, friends; our wars are done, the Turks are drown'd.

How does my old acquaintance of this isle? Honey, you shall be well desir'd in Cyprus; I have found great love amongst them. O my sweet,

I prattle out of fashion, and I dote In mine own comforts.-I pr'ythee, good Iago, Go to the bay, and disembark my coffers: Bring thou the master to the citadel: He is a good one, and his worthiness [mona, Does challenge much respect.—Come, Desde-Once more well met at Cyprus.

Exeunt OTH., DES., and Attend. lago. Do thou meet me presently at the har-Come hither. If thou be'st valiant,as, they say, base men being in love have then a nobility in their natures more than is native to them,—list me. The lieutenant to-night watches on the court of guard: first, I must tell thee this-Desdemona is directly in love with him.

Rod. With him! why, 'tis not possible.

lago. Lay thy finger thus, and let thy soul be instructed. Mark me with what violence she first loved the Moor, but for bragging, and telling her fantastical lies: and will she love him still for prating? let not thy discreet heart think it. Her eye must be fed; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil? When the blood is made dull with the act of sport, there should be,—again to inflame it, and to give satiety a fresh appetite, -loveliness in favour; sympathy in years, manners, and beauties; all which the Moor is defective in: now, for want of these required conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abused, begin to heave the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor; very nature will instruct her in it, and Now, sir, compel her to some second choice. this granted,—as it is a most pregnant and unforced position,—who stands so eminently in the degree of this fortune as Cassio does? a knave very voluble; no further conscionable than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compassing of his salt and most hidden loose affection? why. none; why, none: a slippery and subtle knave; a finder of occasions; that has an eye can stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advan-tage never present itself: a devilish knave! besides, the knave is handsome, young, and hath all those requisites in him that folly and green minds look after: a pestilent complete knave; and the woman hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her; she is full of most blessed condition.

lago. Blessed fig's end! the wine she drinks is made of grapes: if she had been blessed, she would never have loved the Moor: blessed pudding! Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of his hand? didst not mark that?

Rod. Yes, that I did; but that was but courtesy.

lago. Lechery, by this hand; an index and obscure prologue to the history of lust and valiant general, that, upon certain tidings now

They met so near with their lips that their breaths embraced together. Villanous thoughts, Roderigo! when these mutualities so marshal the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, the incorpish!-But, sir, be you porate conclusion: ruled by me: I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to-night; for the command, I'll lay't upon you: Cassio knows you not:—I'll not be far from you: do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or tainting his discipline, or from what other course you please, which the time shall more favourably minister.

Rod. Well.

lago. Sir, he is rash, and very sudden in choler, and haply with his truncheon may strike at you: provoke him that he may; for even out of that will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny, whose qualification shall come into no true taste again but by the displanting of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires by the means I shall then have to prefer them; and the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity.

Rod. I will do this, if I can bring it to any opportunity.

lago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the citadel: I must fetch his necessaries ashore. Farewell. Rod. Adieu. Exil.

lago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it:

That she loves him, 'tis apt, and of great credit: The Moor,—howbeit that I endure him not,-Is of a constant, loving, noble nature; And, I dare think, he'll prove to Desdemona A most dear husband. Now, I do love her too: Not out of absolute lust,—though, peradventure, I stand accountant for as great a sin,-But partly led to diet my revenge, For that I do suspect the lusty Moor Hath loap'd into my seat: the thought whereof Doth, like a poisonous mineral, gnaw my inwards: And nothing can or shall content my soul Till I am even'd with him, wife for wife; Or, failing so, yet that I put the Moor At least into a jealousy so strong That judgment cannot cure. Which thing to do, If this poor trash of Venice, whom I trash For his quick hunting, stand the putting on, I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip; Abuse him to the Moor in the rank garb,-For I fear Cassio with my night-cap too; Make the Moor thank me, love me, and reward me For making him egregiously an ass, And practising upon his peace and quiet Even to madness. 'Tis here, but yet confus'd: Knavery's plain face is never seen till us'd. Exil.

SCENE I .- VENICE. A Street. Enter Roderigo and Lago.

Rod. Never tell me; I take it much unkindly That thou, Iago, who hast had my purse As if the strings were thine, shouldst know of this .-

Icgo. 'Sblood, but you will not hear me:-If ever I did dream of such a matter, Abhor me.

. Rod. Thou told'st me thou didst hold him in thy hate.

lago. Despise me if I do not. Three great ones of the city,

All offices are open; and there is full liberty of feasting from this present hour of five till the bell have told eleven. Heaven bless the isle of Cyprus and our noble general Othellol [Exeunt.

SCENE III .- A Holl in the Castle.

Enter Othello, Despenona, Cassio, and Attendants.

Oth. Good Michael, look you to the guard to-night:

Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop, Not to out-sport discretion.

Cas. Ingo hath direction what to do; But, notwithstanding, with my personal eye Will I look to't.

Oth. Iago is most honest.

Michael, good-night: to-morrow with your earliest

Let me have speech with you.—Come, my dear love,— [To DESDEMONA.
The purchase made, the fruits are to ensue;
That profit's yet to come 'tween me and you.—

Exeunt OTH., Des., and Attend.

Enter IAGO.

Good-night.

Cas. Welcome, Iago; we must to the watch. Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant; 'its not yet ten o' the clock. Our general cast us thus early for the love of his Desdemona; who let us not therefore blame: he hath not yet made wanton the night with her; and she is sport for Jove.

Cas. She's a most exquisite lady.

logo. And, I'll warrant her, full of game. Cas. Indeed, she is a most fresh and delicate creature.

Togo. What an eye she has! methinks it sounds a parley to provocation. [modest. Cas. An inviting eye; and yet methinks right logo. And when she speaks, is it not an alarm of love?

Cos. She is, indeed, perfection.

lago. Well, happiness to their sheetsl Come, lieutenant. I have a stoup of wine; and here without are a brace of Cyprus gallants that would fain have a measure to the health of black Othello.

Cas. Not to-night, good Iago: I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking: I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment.

lago. O, they are our friends; but one cup:

I'll drink for you.

Cas. I have drunk but one cup to-night, and that was craftily qualified too, and, behold, what innovation it makes here: I am unfortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakness with any more.

lago. What, man! 'tis a night of revels: the gallants desire it.

Cas. Where are they? [them in. logo. Here at the door; I pray you, call Cas. I'll do't; but it dislikes me. [Exit. logo. If I can fasten but one cup upon him, With that which he hath drunk to-night already,

He'll be as full of quarrel and offence
As my young mistress' dog. Now, my sick fool Roderigo, lout,

Whom love hath turn'd almost the wrong side To Desdemona hath to-night carous'd Potationa pottle deep; and he's to watch: Three lads of Cyprus,—noble swelling spirits, That hold their honours in a wary distance, The very elements of this warlike isle,—Nave I target to support the support of the support of

The very elements of this warlike isle,—
Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups,
And they watch too. Now, 'mongst this flock of drunkards.

Am I to put our Cassio in some action
That may offend the isle: —but here they come:
It consequence do but approve my dream,
My boat sails freely, both with wind and stream.

Re-enter Cassio, with him Montano and Gentlemen, followed by Servant with wine.

Cas. 'Fore heaven, they have given me a rouse already.

Mon. Good faith, a little one; not past a pint, as I am a soldier.

Iago. Some wine, ho!

And let me the canakio clink, clink; [Sings. And let me the canakin clink:
A soldier's a man;
O, man's life's but a span;
Why, then, let a soldeir drink.

Some wine, boys.

Cas. Fore heaven, an excellent song.

Icgo. I learned it in England, where, indeed, they are most potent in potting: your Dane, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander.

—Drink, ho!—are nothing to your English.

Cas. Is your Englishman so expert in his drinking?

Icgo. Why, he drinks you, with facility, your Dane dead drunk; he sweats not to over-throw your Almain; he gives your Hollander a vomit ere the next pottle can be filled.

Cas. To the health of our general!

Mon. I am for it, lieutenant; and I'll do you justice.

logo. O sweet England!

King Stephen was and a worthy peer, ISings. His breeches cost him but a crown; He held them sirpence all too dear, With that he call'd the tailor lown. He was a wight of high renown.
And thou art but of low degree:
Tis pride that pulls the country down;
Then take thine auld clock about thee.

Some wine, ho!

Cas. Why, this is a more exquisite song than the other.

Iago. Will you hear it again?
Cas. No; for I hold him to be unworthy of

Cas. No; for I hold him to be unworthy of his place that does those things.—Well, heaven's above all; and there be souls must be saved, and there be souls must not be saved. Iago. It's true, good lieutenant. He, in good time, must his lieutenant be, And I, God bless the mark! his Moorship's ancient. This hangman.

Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been lago. Why, there's no remedy; 'tis the curse of service,

Preferment goes by letter and affection,
And not by old gradation, where each second Stood heir to the first. Now, sir be judge yourself Whether I in any just term am affin'd

To love the Moor.

Rod. I would not follow him, then.

Iago. O, sir, content you;
I follow him to serve my turn upon him:
We cannot all be masters, nor all masters
Cannot be truly follow'd. You shall mark
Many a duteous and knee-crooking knave
That, doting on his own obsequious bondage,
Wears out his time, much like his master's ass,
For naught but provender; and when he's old,

cashier'd:
Whip me such honest knaves. Others there are
Who, trimm'd in forms and visages of duty,
Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves;
And, throwing but shows of service on their lords.

Do well thrive by them, and when they have lin'd their coats,

Do themselves homage: these fellows have some soul;

And such a one do I profess myself. For, sir,

It is as sure as you are Roderigo,
Were I the Moor I would not be Iago:
In following him I follow but myself;
Heaven is my judge, not I for love and duty,
But seeming so for my peculiar end:
For when my outward action doth demonstrate
The native act and figure of my heart
In compliment extern, 'tis not long after

But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve For daws to peck at: I am not what I am. Rod. What a full fortune does the thick lips owe,

If he can carry't thus!

Iago.

Call up her father.

Rouse him:—make after him, poison his delight,

Proclaim him in the streets; incense her kinsmen,

And, though he in a fertile climate dwell,
Plague him with flies: though that his joy be joy,

Yet throw such changes of vexation on't

As it may lose some colour: [aloud. Rod. Here is her father's house: I'll call Iago. Do; with like timorous accent and dire yell

As when, by night and negligence, the fire
Is spied in populous cities. [tio, ho]

Rod. What, ho, Brabantio! Signior Brab. Iago. Awakel what, ho, Brabantio! thieved thieves! [bags

Look to your house, your daughter, and your Thieves! thieves!

Bra. What is the reason of this terrible summons?

What is the matter there?

Rod. Signior, is all your family within? logo. Are your doors locked?

Bra. Why, wherefore ask you this?
Iago. Zounds, sir, you're robb'd; for shame,

Your heart is burst, you have lost half your

Your heart is burst, you have lost half your Even now, now, very now, an old black ram Is tupping your white ewe. Arise, arise; Awake the snorting citizens with the bell, Or else the devil will make a grandsire of you: Arise, I say.

Bra. What, have you lost your wits?
Rod. Most reverend signior, do you know my voice?

Bra. Not I; what are you? Rod. My name is Roderigo.

Bra. The worser welcome:

I have charg'd thee not to haunt about my doors;

In honest plainness thou hast heard me say My daughter is not for thee; and now, in madness,

Being full of supper and distempering draughts, Upon malicious bravery dost thou come To start my quiet.

Rod. Sir, sir, sir,-

Bra. But thou must needs be sure, My spirit and my place have in them power To make this bitter to thee.

Rod. Patience, good sir.

Bra. What tell'st thou me of robbing? this is Venice;

My house is not a grange.

Rod. Most grave Brabantio.

Rod. Most grave Brabantio, In simple and pure soul I come to you.

lago. Zounds, sir, you are one of those that will not serve God if the devil bid you. Because we come to do you service, and you think we are ruffians, you'll have your daughter covered with a Barbary horse; you'll have your nephews neigh to you; you'll have coursers for cousins and gennets for germans.

Bra. What profane wretch art thou?

Iago. I am one, sir, that comes to tell you your daughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two backs.

Bra. Thou art a villain.

Iago. You are—a senator.

Bra. This thou shalt answer; I know thee,

Roderigo. (seech you.

Roderigo.

Rod. Sir, I will answer anything. But I beli't be your pleasure and most wise consent,—
As partly I find it is,—that your fair daughter,
At this odd-even and dull watch o' the night,
Transported with no worse nor better guard
But with a knave of common hire, a gondolier,
To the gross clasps of a lastivious Moor,—
If this be known to you, and your allowance,
We then have done you bold and saucy wrongs;
But if you know not this, my manners tell me.
We have your wrong rebuke. Do not believe
That, from the sense of all civility,
I thus would play and triffe with your reverence:
Your daughter,—if you have not given her

leave,—
I say again, hath made a gross revolt;
Tying her duty, beauty, wit, and fortunes
In an extravagant and wheeling stranger [self:
Of here and everywhere. Straight satisfy your-

Cas. For mine own part,—no offence to the neral, nor any man of quality,—I hope to be ved.

Iago. And so do I too, lieutenant.

Cas. Ay, but, by your leave, not before me; e lieutenant is to be saved before the ancient. et's have no more of this; let's to our affairs. Forgive us our sins!—Gentlemen, let's look our business. Do not think, gentlemen, I n drunk: this is my ancient;—this is my ght hand, and this is my left hand:—I am t drunk now; I can stand well enough, and leak well enough.

All. Excellent well.

Cas. Why, very well, then: you must not ink, then, that I am drunk. [Exit. Mon. To the platform, masters; come, let'a the watch. [before;—

lago. You see this fellow that is gone e is a soldier fit to stand by Cæsar and give direction: and do but see his vice;

lis to his virtue a just equinor, he one as long as the other: 'tis pity of him. fear the trust Othello puts him in, n some odd time of his infirmity, 'ill shake this island.

Mon. But is he often thus?

Iago. 'Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep:
e'll watch the horologe a double set

Re-enter Cassio, driving in Roderigo.

Cas. You reguel you rescall
Mon. What's the matter, lieutenant?
Cas. A knave teach me my duty!
'Il beat the knave into a twiggen bottle.
Rod. Beat me!

Cas. Dost thou prate, rogue?

Mon. [Striking RODERIGO.

May, good lieutenant;
[Staying him.

Cas. Let me go, sir,

1' I'll knock you o'er the mazard.

Mon come you're drunk

Mon. Come, come, you're drunk.
Cas. Drunk!
Iago. Away, I say! go out, and cry a mutiny!
[Aside to ROD., who goes out.

Vay, good lieutenant,-alas, gentlemen;-

Help, hol — Lieutenant, — sir, — Montano, — sir:—

Help, masters!—Here's a goodly watch indeed!

{Bell rings.}

Who's that which rings the bell?—Diablo, ho!
The town will rise: God's will, lieutenant, hold;
You will be sham'd forever.

Re-enter OTHELLO and Attendants.

Oth. What is the matter here? Mon. Zounds, I bleed still; I am hurt to the death.

Oth. Hold, for your lives! [—gentlemen,—Iago. Hold, ho! lieutenant,—sir,—Montano, Have you forgot all sense of place and duty? Hold! the general speaks to you; hold, for shame! [this?

Oth. Why, how now, ho! from whence ariseth Are we turn'd Turks, and to ourselves do that Which Heaven hath forbid the Ottomites? For Christian shame, put by this barbarous brawl:

He that stirs next to carve for his own rage
Holds his soul light; he dies upon his motion.—
Silence that dreadful bell! it frights the isle
From her propriety.—What is the matter, masters?—

Honest Iago, that look'd dead with grieving, Speak, who began this? on thy love, I charge thee. [even now, lago. I do not know;—friends all but now.

In quarter, and in terms like bride and groom Divesting them for bed; and then, but now,— As if some planet had unwitted men,— Swords out, and tilting one at other's bresst In opposition bloody. I cannot speak Any beginning to this peevish odds; And would in action glorious I had lost Those legs that brought me to a part of it!

Oth. How comes it Michael, you are thus forgot?

Cas. I pray you, pardon me; I cannot speak.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont to be civil;

The gravity and stillness of your youth
The world hath noted, and your name is great
In mouths of wisest censure: what's the matter,
That you unlace your reputation thus,
And spend your rich opinion for the name
Of a night-brawler? give me answer to it.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger: Your officer, Iago, can inform you,— While I spare speech, which something now offends me,—

Of all that I do know: nor know I aught
By me that's said or done amiss this night.
Unless self-charity be sometimes a vice,
And to defend ourselves it be a sin
When violence assails us.

Oth. Now, by heaven, My blood begins my safer guides to rule; And passion, having my best judgment collied. Assays to lead the way. If I once stir, Or do but lift this arm, the best of you Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know How this foul rout began, who set it on; And he that is approved in this offence, Though he had twinn; d with me, both at a birth Shall lose me.—What! in a town of war

If she he in her chamber or your house Let loose on me the justice of the state

For thus deluding you. Strike on the tinder, ho! BTO. Give me a taper!-call up all my people!-

This accident is not unlike my dream: Belief of it oppresses me already.

Light, I say! light! Exit from above. Farewell; for I must leave you; lago. It seems not meet nor wholesome to my place To he produc'd, -as if I stay I shall,-Against the Moor: for I do know the state. However this may gall him with some check, Cannot with safety cast him; for he's emhark'd With such loud reason to the Cyprus wars, Which even now stand in act, -that, for their souls, Another of his fathom they have none To lead their husiness: in which regard, Though I do hate him as I do hell pains, Yet, for necessity of present life, I must show ont a flag and sign of love, Which is indeed hut sign. That you shall surely find him.

Lead to the Sagittary the raised search; And there will I he with him. So, farewell. Exit.

Enter below, BRABANTIO, and Servants with torches.

Bra. It is too true an evil: gone she is; And what's to come of my despised time Is naught hut hitterness. - Now, Roderigo. Where didst thou see her?-O unhappy girll-With the Moor, say'st thou?-Who would he

By what you see them act.-Are there not charms

By which the property of youth and maidhood May he ahused? Have you not read, Roderigo,

Bra. Call up my hrother.-O, would you had had her!-

Some one way some another. - Do you know Where we may apprehend her and the Moor? Rod. I think I can discover him, if you please

To get good guard, and go along with me. Bra. Pray you, lead on. At every house I'll call;

I may command at most.—Get weapons, ho! And raise some special officers of night.-On, good Roderigo:-I'll deserve your pains. Exeuni.

Scene II .- Venice. Another Street.

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and Attendants with torches.

logo. Though in the trade of war I have slain men.

Yet do I hold it very stuff of the conscience To do no contriv'd murder: I lack iniquity Sometimes to do me service: nine or ten times I had thought to have yerk'd him here under the ribs.

Oth. 'Tis hetter as it is Iago.

Nay, hut he prated, And spoke such scurvy and provoking terms Against your honour,

That, with the little godliness I have, I did full hard forhear him. But, I pray you, sir, Are you fast married? Be assured of this, That the magnifico is much heloved; And hath, in his effect, a voice potential As double as the duke's: he will divorce you; Or put upon you what restraint and grievance The law,—with all his might to enforce it on,— Will give him cable.

Oth. Let him do his spite: My services which I have done the signiory Shall out-tongue his complaints. 'Tis yet to know.

Which, when I know that boasting is an honour, I shall promulgate, -I fetch my life and being From men of royal seige; and my demerits May speak unbonneted to as proud a fortune As this that I have reach'd: for know, Iago, But that I love the gentle Desdemona, I would not my unhoused free condition Put into circumscription and confine For the sea's worth. But, look! what lights come yond? lago. Those are the raised father and his friends:

You were hest go in,

Oth. Not I; I must be found: My parts, my title, and my perfect soul Shall manifest me rightly. Is it they? lago. By Janus, I think no.

Enter Cassio and certain Officers with torches.

Oth. The servants of the duke and my lieutenant.-The goodness of the night upon you, friends! What is the news?

The duke does greet you, general; Cas. And he requires your haste-post-haste appearance

Even on the instant.

Oth. What is the matter, think you? Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine:

It is a husiness of some heat: the galleys Have sent a dozen sequent messengers This very night at one another's heels; And many of the consul's, rais'd and met Are at the duke's already: you have heen hotly call'd for;

When, heing not at your lodging to he found, The senate hath sent about three several quests To search you out.

'Tis well I am found hy you. Oth. I will hut spend a word here in the house

And go with you. Ancient, what makes he here? Cas. Iago. Faith, he to-night hath hoarded a land carack:

If it prove lawful prize, he's made for ever.

Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear. To manage private and domestic quarrel, In night, and on the court and guard of safety! Tis monstrous.—Iago, who began't?
Mon. If partially affin'd, or leagu'd in office,

Thou dost deliver more or less than truth.

Thou art no soldier.

Touch me not so near: lago. I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth

Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio: Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth Shall nothing wrong him.—Thus it is, general. Montano and myself being in speech, There comes a fellow crying out for help; And Cassio following him with determin'd sword,

To execute upon him. Sir, this gentleman Steps in to Cassio, and entreats his pause: Myself the crying fellow did pursue, Lest by his clamour,—as it so fell out,— The town might fall in fright: he, swift of foot, Outran my purpose; and I return'd the rather For that I heard the clink and fall of swords, And Cassio high in oath; which till-to-night I ne'er might say before. When I came back, For this was brief,—I found them close together At blow and thrust; even as again they were When you yourself did part them. More of this matter cannot I report; But men are men; the best sometimes forget: -

Though Cassio did some little wrong to him,-As men in rage strike those that wish them best, Yet surely Cassio, I believe, receiv'd

From him that fled some strange indignity Which patience could not pass.

I know, Iago, Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter, Making it light to Cassio. Cassio, I love thee; But never more be officer of mine.

Re-enter Despemona, attended. Look, if my gentle love be not rais'd up!-I'll make thee an example.

What's the matter? Des. Oth. All's well now, sweeting; come away to bed.

Sir, for your hurts, myself will be your surgeon: Lead him off. [To MONTANO, who is led off. Iago, look with care about the town, And silence those whom this vile brawl distracted .-Come, Desdemona: 'tis the soldier's life To have their balmy slumbers wak'd with strife.

(Exeunt all but IAGO and CASSIO. logo. What, are you hurt, lieutenant? Cas. Ay, past all surgery.

logo. Marry, heaven forbidl

Cas. Reputation, reputation, reputation OO, I have lost my reputation! I have lost the immortal part of myself, and what remains is bestial.-My reputation, Iago, my reputation!

logo. As I am an honest man, I thought you had received some bodily wound; there is more sense in that than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving: you have lost no reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser. What, mant there are lieutenant; I must to the watch.

ways to recover the general again: you are but now, east in his mood, a punishment more in policy than in malice; even so as one would beat his offenceless dog to affright an imperious lion: sue to him again, and he is yours.

Cas. I will rather sue to be despised than to deceive so good a commander with so slight, so drunken, and so indiscreet an officer. Drunk? and speak parrot? and squabble? swagger? swear? and discourse fustian with one's own shadow?-O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee devill lago. What was he that you followed with your sword? What had he done to you?

Cas. I know not. logo. Is't possible?

Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly; a quarrel, but nothing wherefore.-O God, that men should put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains! that we should, with joy, pleasance, revel, and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!

lago. Why, but you are now well enough:

how come you thus recovered?

Cas. It hath pleased the devil drunkenness to give place to the devil wrath: one unperfectness shows me another, to make me frankly despise myself.

logo. Come, you are too severe a moraler: as the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, I could heartily wish this had not befallen; but, since it is as it is, mend it for your own good.

Cas. I will ask him for my place again,—he shall tell me I am a drunkard! Had I as many mouths as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast! O strange!-Every inordinate cup is unbless'd, and the ingredient is a devil.

lago. Come, come, good wine is a good familiar creature if it be well used: exclaim no more against it. And, good lieutenant, I think you think I love you.

Cos. I have well approved it, sir. - I drunkt lago. You, or any man living, may be drunk at a time, man. I'll tell you what you shall do. Our general's wife is now the general; -I may say so in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and denotement of her parts and graces: -confess yourself freely to her; importune her help to put you in your place again: she is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed a disposition, she holds it a vice in her goodness not to do more than she is requested: this broken joint between you and her husband entreat her to splinter; and, my fortunes against any lay worth naming, this crack of your love shall grow stronger than it was before.

Cas. You advise me well.

Iago. I protest, in the sincerity of love and honest kindness.

Cas. I think it freely; and betimes in the morning I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me: I am desperate of my fortunes if they check me here.

Japo. You are in the right. Good-night.

Cas. I do not understand. He's married. Cas. To who?

Re-enter OTHELLO

Iago. Marry, to-Come, captain, will you go? Have with you. Cas. Here comes another troop to seek for Iago. It is Brabantio.—General, be advis'd; He comes to bad intent.

Enter Brabantio, Roderigo, and Officers with torches and weapons.

Holla! stand there! Rod. Signior, it is the Moor, Bra. Down with him, thief!

[They draw on both sides. lago. You, Roderigo! come, sir, I am for you. Oth. Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them .-Good signior, you shall more command with

Than with your weapons.

Bra. O thou foul thief, where hast thou stow'd my daughter? Damn'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted her; For I'll refer me to all things of sense, If she in chains of magic were not bound, Whether a maid so tender, fair, and happy, So opposite to marriage that she shunn'd The wealthy curled darlings of our nation, Would ever have, to incur a general mock, Run from her guardage to the sooty bosom Of such a thing as thou,—to fear, not to delight. Judge me the world, if 'fis not gross in sense That thou hast practis d on her with foul

Abus'd her delicate youth with drugs or minerals

That weaken motion:-Pil have't disputed on; 'Tis probable, and palpable to thinking. I therefore apprehend and do attach thee For an abuser of the world, a practiser Of arts inhibited and out of warrant .-Lay hold upon him: if he do resist, Subdue him at his peril.

Hold your hands, Both you of my inclining and the rest: Were it my cue to fight, I should have known it Without a prompter.—Where will you that I go To answer this your charge?

To prison; till fit time Bra. Of law and course of direct session

Call thee to answer.

What if I do obey? How may the duke be therewith satisfied, Whose messengers are here about my side. Upon some present business of the state, To bring me to him.

'Tis true, most worthy signior; I Off. The duke's in council, and your noble self,

I am sure, is sent for.

How! the duke in council! In this time of the night!—Bring him away: Mine's not an idle cause: the duke himself, Or any of my brothers of the state, Cannot but feel this wrong as 'twere their own; For if such actions may have passage free, Bond-slaves and pagans shall our statesmen be. Exeunt.

Scene III. - VENICE. A Council-chamber.

The DUKE and Senators sitting at a table: Officers attending.

Duke. There is no composition in these news That gives them credit, Indeed, they are disproportion'd; ı Sen. My letters say a hundred and seven galleys.

Duke. And mine a hundred and forty. And mine two hundred: But though they jump not on a just account,-As in these cases, where the aim reports, 'Tis oft with difference, -yet do they all confirm A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.

Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgment:

I do not so secure me in the error, But the main article I do approve In fearful sense.

Sailor. [Within.] What, hol what. hol what, hol

I Off. A messenger from the galleys.

Enter a Sailor.

Now,-what's the business? Duke.Sail. The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes;

So was I bid report here to the state

By Signior Angelo.

Duke. How say you by this change? 1 Sen. This cannot be. By no assay of reason: 'tis a pageant When we consider To keep us in false gaze. The importancy of Cyprus to the Turk; And let ourselves again be understood That, as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes, So may he with more facile question bear it, For that it stands not in such warlike brace, But altogether lacks the abilities That Rhodes is dress'd in: if we make thought We must not think the Turk is so unskilful To leave that latest which concerns him first; Neglecting an attempt of ease and gain

To wake and wage a danger profitless. Duke. Nay, in all confidence, he's not for Rhodes.

I Off. Here is more news.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The Ottomites, reverend and gracious, Steering with due course toward the isle of Rhodes,

Have there injointed them with an after fleet. I Sen. Ay, so I thought.-How many, as you guess? Mess. Of thirty sail: and now do they re-

Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance

Their purposes toward Cyprus. - Signior Mon-Your trusty and most valiant servitor, With his free duty recommends you thus,

And prays you to believe him.

Duke. Tis certain, then, for Cyprus.—

Marcus Luccicos, is not he in town?

1 Sen. He's now in Florence. Duke. Write from us to him; post-post-haste [Moor. despatch. r Sen. Here comes Brabantio and the valiant

Cas. Good-night, honest Iago. Exit. lago. And what's he, then, that says I play the villain?

When this advice is free I give and honest, Probal to thinking, and, indeed, the course To win the Moor again? For 'tis most easy The inclining Desdemona to subdue In any honest suit: she's fram'd as fruitful As the free elements. And then for her To win the Moor, -were't to renounce his baptism,

All seals and symbols of redeemed sin,-His soul is so enfetter'd to her love That she may make, unmake, do what she list, Even as her appetite shall play the god With this weak function. How am I, then, a villain

To counsel Cassio to this parallel course, Divinity of hell! Directly to his good? When devils will their blackest sins put on, They do suggest at first with heavenly shows, As I do now: for whiles this honest fool Plies Desdemona to repair his fortunes, And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor, I'll pour this pestilence into his ear, That she repeals him for her body's lust; And hy how much she strives to do him good She shall undo her credit with the Moor. So will I turn her virtue into pitch; And out of her own goodness make the net That shall enmesh them all.

Enter Roderigo.

How now, Roderigo! Rod. I do follow here in the chase, not like a hound that hunts, but one that fills up the cry. My money is almost spent; I have been to-night exceedingly well cudgelled; and think the issue will be-I shall have so much experience for my pains: and so, with no money at all, and a little more wit, return again to Venice.

Iago. How poor are they that have not patience!

What wound did ever heal but by degrees? Thou know'st we work by wit, and not by witchcraft:

And wit depends on dilatory time. Does't not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee, And thou, by that small hurt, hast cashier'd

Cassio; Though other things grow fair against the sun, Yet fruits that blossom first will first be ripe Content thyself awhile.—By the mass, 'tis morning;

Pleasure and action make the hours seem short.

Retire thee; go where thou art billeted: Away, I say; thou shalt know more hereafter: Nay, get thee gone. [Exit ROD.]-Two things are to be done,~

My wife must move for Cassio to her mistress; Pil set her on;

Myself the while to draw the Moor apart, And bring him jump when he may Cassio find Soliciting his wife. Ay, that's the way: Dull not device by coldness and delay.

ACT III.

Scene I .- Cyprus. Before the Castle.

Enter Cassio and some Musicians.

Cas. Masters, play here,-I will content your pains, Something that's brief; and bid good-morrow. general. Music.

Enter Clown.

Clo. Why, masters, have your instruments been in Naples, that they speak i' the nose

I Mus. How, sir, how!

Clo. Are these, I pray you, wind instruments?

I Mus. Ay, marry, are they. sir. Clo. O, thereby hangs a tale.

I Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, sir?

Clo. Marry, sir, by many a wind instrument that I know. But, masters, here's money for you: and the general so likes your music that he desires you, for love's sake, to make no more noise with it.

1 Mus. Well, sir, we will not.

Clo. If you have any music that may not be heard, to't again: but, as they say, to hear music the general does not greatly care.

1 Mus. We have none such, sir,

Clo. Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away: go; vanish into air; away. [Exit Musicians.

Cas. Dost thou hear, mine honest friend? Clo. No, I hear not your honest friend; I hear you

Cas. Prythee, keep up thy quillets. There's a poor piece of gold for thee: if the gentlewoman that attends the general's wife be stirring, tell her there's one Cassio entreats her a little favour of speech: wilt thou do this?

Clo. She is stirring, sir; if she will stir hither I shall seem to notify unto her.

[Exit Clown. Cas. Do, good my friend.

Enter IAGO.

In happy time, lago. Iago. You have not been a-bed, then? Cas. Why no; the day had broke Before we parted. I have made bold, Iago, To send into your wife: my suit to her Is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona Procure me some access.

I'll send her to you presently; And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor Out of the way, that your converse and business

May be more free.

Cas. I humbly thank you for't. [Exit IAGO. I never knew

A Florentine more kind and honest.

· Enter EMILIA.

Emil. Good-morrow, good lieutenant: I am SOTTY For your displeasure: but all will soon be well. The general and his wife are talking of it; And she speaks for you stoutly; the Moor replies [Exit.] That he you hurt is of great fame in Cyprus, Enter Brabantio, Othello, Iago, Roderigo, and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you

Against the general enemy Ottoman.—
I did not see you; welcome, gentle signior;

[To Brabantio.]
We lack'd your connsel and your help to-night.
Bra. So did I yours. Good your grace, pardon me;

Neither my place, nor aught I heard of business Hath rais'd me from my bed; nor doth the general care

Take hold on me; for my particular grief Is of so flood-gate and o'erbearing nature That it engluts and swallows other sorrows, And it is still itself.

Duke. Why, what's the matter?

Bro. My daughter! O, my daughter!

Duke and Senators. Dead?

Bra. Ay, to me;

She is abus'd, stol'n from me, and corrupted By spells and medicines bought of mountebanks:

For nature so preposterously to err, Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense, Sans witchcraft could not. (ceeding,

Bra. Humbly I thank your grace. How I did thrive Here is the man, this Moor; whom now, it And she in mine. seems, Duke. Say it, Company of the state of the seems,

Your special mandate for the state affairs Hath hither brought.

Duke and Senators. We are very sorry for't.
Duke. What, in your own part, can you say to this?
[To Othello.

Bra. Nothing, but this is so. [iors, Oth. Most potent, grave, and reverend sign-My very noble and approved good masters,—That I have ta'en away this old man's daughter, It is most true; true, I have married her: The very head and front of my offending Hath this extent, no more. Rude am I in my speech,

And little bless'd with the soft phrase of peace; For since these arms of mine had seven years' oith. (us'd

pith, [us'd]
Till now some nine moons wasted, they have
Their dearest action in the tented field;
And little of this great world can I speak,
More than pertains to feats of broil and battle;
And therefore little shall I grace my cause
In speaking for myself. Yet, by your gracious
patience,

I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver Of my whole course of love; what drugs, what charms,

What conjuration, and what mighty magic,— For such proceeding I am charg'd withal,— I won his daughter.

Bra. A maiden never bold: Of spirit so still and quiet that her motion Blush'd at herself; and she,—in spite of nature, Of years, of country, credit, everything,—
To fall in love with what she fear'd to look on!
It is a judgment maim'd and most imperfect
That will confess perfection so could err
Against all rules of nature; and must be driven
To find out practices of cunning hell,
Why this should be. I therefore vouch again
That with some mixtures powerful o'er the blood.

Or with some dram conjur'd to this effect, He wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this is no proof; Without more wider and more overt test Than these thin habits and poor likelihoods Of modern seeming do prefer against him.

I Sen. But, Othello, speak; Did you by indirect or forced courses Subdue and poison this young maid's affections?

Or came it by request, and such fair question As soul to soul affordeth?

Oth.

I do beseech you, Send for the lady to the Sagittary, And let her speak of me before her father If you do find me foul in her report, The trust, the office I do hold of you, Not only take away, but let your sentence Even fall upon my life.

Duke. Fetch Desdemona hither.

Oth. Ancient, conduct them; you best know the place.—

[Excunt IAGO and Attendants.
And, till she come, as truly as to heaven
I do confess the vices of my blood,
So justly to your grave ears I'll present
How I did thrive in this fair lady's love,
And she in mine.

Duke. Say it, Othello.

Oth. Her father lov'd me; oft invited me;
Still question'd me the story of my life,
From year to year,—the battles, sieges, fortunes,

That I have pass'd.
I ran it through, even from my boyish days
To the very moment that he bade me tell it:
Wherein I spake of most disastrous chances,

Of moving accidents by flood and field; Of hairbreadth scapes i' the imminent deadly breach;

Of being taken by the insolent foe, And sold to slavery; of my redemption thence, and portance in my travel's history; rerein of antres wast and deserts idle, Rough quarries, rocks, and hills whose heads touch heaven,

It was my hint to speak,—such was the process;
And of the Cannibals that each other eat,
The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads
Do grow beneath their shoulders. This to hear
Would Desdemona seriously incline:
But still the house affairs would draw her

thence;
Which ever as she could with haste despatch,
She'd come again, and with a greedy ear
Devour up my discourse: which I observing,
Took once a pliant hour; and found good means
To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart
That I would all my pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by parcels she had something heard,
But not intentively: I did consent;

And great affinity, and that, in wholesome wisdom he loves von. He might not but refuse you; but be protests And needs no other suitor but his likings

To take the saf'st occasion by the front To bring you in again.

Cas. Yet, I beseech you, If you think fit, or that it may be done,-Give me advantage of some brief discourse

With Desdemona alone. Emil.Pray you, come in: I will bestow you where you shall have time To speak your bosom freely.

I am much bound to you. Cas. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—CYPRUS. A Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and Gentlemen. Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the pilot;

And hy him do my duties to the senate: That done, I will be walking on the works; Repair there to me Well, my good lord, I'll do't. Iago:

Oth. This fortification, gentlemen, -shall we see't?

Gent. We'll wait upon your lordship. Exeunt.

SCENE III .- CYPRUS. The Garden of the Castle.

Enter DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and EMILIA.

Des. Be thou assur'd, good Cassio, I will do All my abilities in thy hehalf. my abilities in thy hehalf. [my husband Emil. Good madam, do: I warrant it grieves

As if the case were his. Idoubt, Cassio,

Des. O, that's an honest fellow.—Do not
But I will have my lord and you again

As friendly as you were. Cas. Bounteous madam,

Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio, He's never anything but your true servant.

Des. I know't,—I thank you. You do love my lord: [assur'd You have known him long; and he you well He shall in strangeness stand no further off Than in a politic distance.

Ay, but, lady, That policy may either last so long, Or feed upon such nice and waterish diet, Or breed itself so out of circumstance, That, I being absent, and my place supplied, My general will forget my love and service.

Des. Do not doubt that; before Emilia here

I give thee warrant of thy place: assure thee, If I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it To the last article: my lord shall never rest; I'll watch him tame, and talk him out of patience; His bed shall seem a school, his board a shrift; I'll intermingle everything he does With Cassio's suit: therefore be merry, Cassio; For thy solicitor shall rather die For thy souther savery.

Than give thy cause away.

Madam, here comes

My lord.

Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave. Why, stay, And hear me speak.

Cas. Madam, not now: I am very ill at ease, Unfit for mine own purposes. Des. Well, do your discretion.

Exit CASSIO.

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO.

lago. Ha! I like not that. Oth. What dost thou say? | what. lago. Nothing, my lord: or if-I know not Oth. Was not that Cassio parted from my wife? Ithink it Ingo. Cassio, my lord! No, sure, I cannot That he would steal away so guilty-like, Seeing you coming.

Oth. do believe 'twas be.

Des. How now, my lord! I have been talking with a suitor here, A man that languishes in your displeasure.

Oth. Who is't you mean? [lord, Des. Why. your lieutenant, Cassio. Good my If I have any grace or power to move you, His present reconciliation take

For if be be not one that truly loves you, That errs in ignorance, and not in cunning, I have no judgment in an bonest face: I pr'ythee, call him back.

Oth.

Went he hence now? Des. Ay, sooth; so humbled That be bath left part of his grief with me, To suffer with him. Good love, call him back.

Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemon; some other time. Des. But shall't he shortly?

Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you. Des. Shall't be to-night at supper?

Oth. No, not to-night. Des. To-morrow dinner, then? Oth. I shall not dine at home;

I meet the captains at the citadel. Des. Why, then, to-morrow night; or Tuesday mom: Imom: On Tuesday noon, or night; on Wednesday I pr'ythee, name the time; but let it not Exceed three days: in faith, he's penitent; And yet his trespess, in our common reason,-

Save that, they say, the wars must make examples Out of the best,—is not almost a rault To incur a private check. When shall he come?

Tell me, Othello: I wonder in my soul What you would ask me that I should deny, Or stand so mammering on. What! Michael Cassio, itime. That came a-wooing with you; and so many a

When I have spoke of you dispraisingly, Hath ta'en your part; to have so much to do To bring him in! Trust me, I could do much. Oth. Pr'ythee, no more; let him come when he will:

I will deny thee nothing. Why, this is not a boon;

'Tis as I should entreat you wear your gloves. Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you warm, Or sue to you to do a peculiar profit To your own person: nay, when I have a suit Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed. It shall be full of poiso and difficult weight.

And fearful to be granted.

And often did beguile her of her tears. When I did speak of some distressful stroke That my youth suffer'd. My story being done, She gave me for my pains a world of sighs: She swore,—in faith, 'twas strange, 'twas passing strange;

'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful:
She wish'd she had not heard it; yet she wish'd
That heaven had made her such a man: she thank'd me;

And bade me, if I had a friend that lov'd her,
I should but teach him how to tell my story,
And that would woo her. Upon this hint I spake:

She lov'd me for the dangers I had pass'd; And I lov'd her that she did pity them. This only is the witchcraft I have us'd:— Here comes the lady; let her witness it.

Enter DESDEMONA, IAGO, and Attendants.

Duke. I think this tale would win my daughter too.—

Good Brabantio,
Take up this mangled matter at the best.
Men do their broken weapons rather use
Than their bare hands.

Bia. I pray you, hear her speak: If she confess that she was half the wooer, Destruction on my head if my bad blame Light on the man!—Come hither, gentle mistress:

Do you perceive in all this noble company Where most you owe obedience?

Des. My noble father I do perceive here a divided duty:
To you I am bound for life and education;
My life and education both do learn me
How to respect you; you are the lord of duty,—
I am hitherto your daughter: but here's my husband;

And so much duty as my mother show'd To you, preferring you before her father, So much I challenge that I may profess Due to the Moor, my lord.

Bra. God be with you!—I have done.— Please it your grace, on to the state affairs: I had rather to adopt a child than get it.— Come hither, Moor:

I here do give thee that with all my heart, Which, but thou hast already, with all my heart I would keep from thee.—For your sake, jewel, I am glad at soul I have no other child; For thy escape would teach me tyranny,

To hang closs on them.—I have done, my lord.

Duke. Let me speak like yourself; and lay a sentence,

Which, as a grise or step, may help these lovers Into your favour.

When remedies are past, the griefs are ended By seeing the worst, which late on hopes depended.

To mourn a mischief that is past and gone
Is the next way to draw new mischief on.
What cannot be preserv'd when fortune takes,
Patience her injury a mockery makes.
The robb'd that smiles steals something from the thief;

He robs himself that spends a bootless grief.

Bra. So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile;
We lose it not so long as we can smile;

He bears the sentence well that nothing bears But the free comfort which from thence he hears:

But he bears both the sentence and the sorrow That, to pay grief, must of poor patience borrow. These sentences, to sugar or to gall, Being strong on both sides, are equivocal:

But words are words. I never not did here.

But words are words; I never yet did hear
That the bruis'd heart was pierced through the ear.—
istate.

I humbly beseech you, proceed to the affairs of Duke. The Turk with a most mighty preparation makes for Cyprus.—Othello, the fortitude of the place is best known to you; and though we have there a substitute of most allowed sufficiency, yet opinion, a sovereign mistress of effects, throws a more safer voice on you: you must therefore be content to sluber the gloss of your new fortunes with this more stubborn and boisterous expedition.

more stubborn and boisterous expedition.

Oth. The tyrant custom, most grave seenators, Hath made the fiinty and steel couch of war My thrice-driven bed of down: I do agnize A natural and prompt alacrity I find in hardness; and do undertake These present wars against the Ottomites. Most humbly, therefore, bending to your state, I crave fit disposition for my wife; Due reference of place and exhibition; With such accommodation and besort As levels with her breeding.

Duke. If you please, Be't at her father's.

Bra. I'll not have it so. Oth. Nor I.

Des. Nor I; I would not there reside, To put my father in impatient thoughts, By being in his eye. Most gracious duke, To my unfolding lend a gracious ear; And let me find a charter in your voice To assist my simpleness.

To assist my simpleness.

Duke. What would you, Desdemona?

Des. That I did love the Moor to live with him.

My downright violence and scorn of fortunes May trumpet to the world: my heart's subdu'd Even to the very quality of my lord: I saw Othello's visage in his mind; And to his honours and his valiant parts Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate. So that, dear lords, if I be left behind, A moth of peace, and he go to the war, The rites for which I love him are bereft me, And I a heavy interim shall support By his dear absence. Let me go with him.

Oth. Let her have your voices.
Vouch with me, heaven, I therefore beg it not.
To please the palate of my appetite;
Nor to comply with heat,—the young affects
In me defunct,—and proper satisfaction;
But to be free and bounteous to her mind:
And heaven defend your good souls, that you think

I will your serious and great business scant For she is with me: no, when light-wing'd

Of feather'd Cupid seel with wanton dullness My speculative and offic'd instruments, That my disports corrupt and taint my business, Let housewives make a skillet of my helm,

Oth. I will deny thee nothing: Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this, To leave me but a little to myself.

Des. Shall I deny you? no: farewell, my lord. Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona: I'll come to thee straight. you;

Des. Emilia, come, -Be as your fancies teach Whate'er you be, I am obedient.

Exit with EMILIA. Oth. Excellent wretch! Perdition catch my

But I do love thee! and when I love thee not Chaos is come again.

logo. My noble lord,

Oth. What dost thou say, lago? logo. Did Michael Cassio, when you woo'd my lady,

Know of your love? [thou ask? Oth. He did, from first to last: why dost lago. But for a satisfaction of my thought; No further harm.

Why of thy thought, Iago? Oth. · lago. I did not think he had been acquainted with her. Oth. O, yes; and went between us very oft. logo. Indeed!

Oth. Indeed! ay, indeed: -discern'st thou aught in that?

is he not honest?

logo. Honest, my lord!

Oth. Honest! ay, honest. Iago. My lord, for aught I know.

Oth. What dost thou think?

Iago. Think, my lordl Olh. Think, my lord!

By heaven, he echoes me, As if there were some monster in his thought Too hideous to be shown.—Thou dost mean Ithat, something:

I heard thee say even now,—thou lik'dst not When Cassio left my wife: what didst not like? And when I told thee he was of my counsel In my whole course of wooing, thou criedst, lgether, Indeed! And didst contract and purse thy brow to-As if thou then hadst shut up in thy brain Some horrible conceit: if thou dost love me, show me thy thought.

lago. My lord, you know I love you.

I think thou dost; Oth. And,-for I know thou'rt full of love and honesty, ibreath.

And weigh'st thy words before thou giv'st them Therefore these stops of thine fright me the

For such things in a false disloyal knave Are tricks of custom; but in a man that's just They're close delations, working from the heart, That passion cannot rule.

logo. For Michael Cassio, I dare be sworn I think that he is honest.

Oth. I think so too.

Men should be what they seem; Or those that be not, would they might seem none!

Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem. Why, then, Ioao.

I think Cassio's an honest man.

Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this: I pr'ythee, speak to me as to thy thinkings, As thou dost ruminate; and give thy worst of thoughts

The worst of words.

logo. Good my lord, pardon me: Though I am bound to every act of duty, I am not bound to that all slaves are free to. Utter my thoughts? Why, say they are vile and false,-

As where's that palace whereunto foul things Sometimes intrude not? who has a breast so pure

But some uncleanly apprehensions

Keep leets and law-days, and in session sit With meditations lawful? [Iago [lago, Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend, If thou but thinkest him wrong'd, and mak'st his ear A stranger to thy thoughts.

logo. I do beseech you,-Though I perchance am vicious in my guess, As, I confess, it is my nature's plague

To spy into abuses, and of my jealousy Shape faults that are not,—that your wisdom From one that so imperfectly conceits,

Would take no notice; nor build yourself a trouble

Out of his scattering and unsure observance:-It were not for your quiet nor your good. Nor for my manhood, honesty, or wisdom, To let you know my thoughts.

Oth. What dost thou mean? lago. Good name in man and woman, dear my lord, Is the immediate jewel of their souls: Who steals my purse steals trash; 'tis something, nothing; [thousands; ine, 'tis his, and has been slave to 'Twas mine, But he that filches from me my good name Robs me of that which not enriches him, And makes me poor indeed.

Oth. By heaven, I'll know thy thoughts. logo. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand;

Nor shall not, whilst 'tis in my custody.

Oth. Hal O, beware, my lord, of jealousy; Iaao. It is the green-ey'd monster which doth mock. The meat it feeds on: that cuckold lives in bliss Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger; But, O, what damned minutes tells he o'er Who dotes, yet doubts, suspects, yet strongly enough; Oth. O misery! Jago. Poor and content is rich, and rich But riches fineless is as poor as winter To him that ever fears he shall be poor: Good heaven, the souls of all my tribe defend From jealousy!

Why, why is this? Oth. Think'st thou I'd make a life of jealonsy, To follow still the changes of the moon

With fresh suspicions? No; to be once in

Is once to be resolved: exchange me fo. a goat When I shall turn the business of my soul To such exsufflicate and blown surmises, Matching thy inference. 'Tis not to make me jealous,

To say my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,

loves!

SCENE III .- A Street.

Enter Antonio and Sebastian.

Seb. I would not by my will have troubled

Bnt, since you make your pleasure of your pains,

I will no further chide you.

Ant. I could not stay behind you; my desire, More sharp than filed steel, did spur me forth; And not all love to see you,—though so much, As might have drawn one to a longer voyage, But jealousy what might befall your travel, Being skilless in these parts; which to a stranger, Unguided and unfriended, often prove Rough and unhospitable. My willing love, The rather by these arguments of fear, Set forth in your pursuit.

My kind Antonio, I can no other answer make but thanks, And thanks, and ever thanks. Often good turns Are shuffled off with such uncurrent pay; But were my worth, as is my conscience, firm, What's to do? You should find better dealing. Shall we go see the reliques of this town?

Ant. To-morrow, sir; best, first, go see your lodging.

Seb. I am not weary, and 'tis long to night; I pray you, let us satisfy our eyes With the memorials and the things of fame That do renown this city.

Would you'd pardon me: Ant. I do not without danger walk these streets: Once, in a sea-fight, 'gainst the count his galleys, I did some service; of such note, indeed, That were I ta'en here, it would scarce be answered. [people.]

Seb. Belike you slew great number of his Ant. The offence is not of such a bloody nature

Albeit the quality of the time and quarrel Might well have given us bloody argument. It might have since been answered in repaying . What we took from them; which, for traffic's sake Most of our city did: only myself stood out: For which, if I be lapsed in this place, I shall pay dear.

Do not then walk too open. Seb. Ant. It doth not fit me. Hold, sir, here's my purse;

In the south suburbs, at the Elephant, Is best to lodge: I will bespeak our diet Whiles you beguile the time and feed your knowledge me.

With viewing of the town; there shall you have

Seb. Why I your purse? [toy Ant. Haply your eye shall light upon some

You have desire to purchase; and your store, I think, is not for idle markets, sir.

Seb. I'll be your purse-bearer, and leave you for an hour.

Ant. To the Elephant.— Seb.

I do remember. Exeunt.

Scene IV .- OLIVIA'S Garden.

come;

How shall I feast him? what bestow on him? For youth is bought more oft than begged or borrowed.

I speak too loud.

Where is Malvolio?—he is sad and civil, And suits well for a servant with my fortunes;— Where is Malvolio?

He's coming, madam: Ματ.

But in strange manner. He is sure possessed. Oli. Why, what's the matter? does he rave? Mar. No, madam.

He does nothing but smile: your ladyship Were best have guard about you if he come; For, sure, the man is tainted in his wits.

Oli. Go call him hither.—I'm as mad as he If sad and merry madness equal be.—

Enter Malvolio.

How now, Malvolio?

Mal. Sweet lady, ho, ho.

[Smiles fantastically.

Oli. Smil'st thou? I sent for thee upon a sad occasion.

Mal. Sad, lady? I could be sad: this does make some obstruction in the blood, this cross-gartering. But what of that; if it please the eye of one, it is with me as the very true sonnet is: Pleose one and please all.

Oli. Why, how dost thou, man? what is the matter with thee?

Mal. Not black in my mind, though yellow in my legs. It did come to his hands, and commands shall be executed. I think we do know the sweet Roman hand.

Oli. Wilt thou go to bed, Malvolio?
Mal. To bed? ay, sweetheart; and Pil come to thee.

Oli. God comfort thee! Why dost thou smile on, and kiss thy hand so off?

Mar. How do you, Malvolio?

Mal. At your request? Yes; nightingales answer daws.

Mar. Why appear you with this ridiculous boldness before my lady?

Mal. Be not afraid of greatness:- 'twas well writ.

Oli. What meanest thou by that, Malvolio? Mol. Some are born great,— Oli. Ha?

Mol. Some achieve greatness,— Oli. What say'st thou?

Mal. And some have greatness thrust upon them.

Oli. Heaven restore thee!

Mal. Remember who commended thy yellow stockings;

Oli. Thy yellow stockings? Mol. And wished to see thee cross-gartered.

Oli. Cross-gartered?

Mol. Go to: thou art made, if thou desirest to be so:

Oli. Am I made?

Mal. If not, let me see thee a servant still. Oli. Why, this is very midsummer madness.

Enter Servant.

Scene IV.—Olivia s Garden.

Enter Olivia and Maria.

Ser. Madam, the young gentleman of the Count Orsino's is returned; I could hardly Oli. I have sent after him. He says he'll entreat him back; he attends your ladyship's pleasure.

[Exil Servant.] Oli. I'll come to him. Good Maria, let this fellow be looked to. Where's my cousin Toby? Let some of my people have a special care of him; I would not have him miscarry for the half of my dowry.

Exeunt OLIVIA and MARIA. Mal. Oh, hol do you come near me now? no worse than Sir Toby to look to me? This con- I curs directly with the letter: she sends him on purpose that I may appear stubborn to him; for she incites me to that in the letter. Cast thy humble slough, says she; be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants,—let thy tongue tang with arguments of state,—put thyself into the trick of singularity; -and, consequently, sets down the manner how; as, a sad face, a reverend carriage, a slow tongue, in the habit of some sir of note, and so forth. I have limed her; but it is Jove's doing, and Jove make me thankfull And, when she went away now, Let this fellow be looked to: Fellow! not Malvolio, nor after my degree, but fellow. Why, everything adheres together; that no dram of a scruple, no scruple of a scruple, no obstacle, no incredulous or unsafe circumstance,—What can be said? Nothing, that can be, can come between me and the full prospect of my hopes. Well, Jove, not I, is the doer of this, and he is to be thanked.

Re-ente Maria with Sir Toby Belch and FABIAN.

Sir To. Which way is he, in the name of sanctity? If all the devils of hell be drawn in little, and Legion himself possessed him, yet I'll speak to him.

Fab. Here he is, here he is:—How is 't with you, sir? how is 't with you, man?

· Mal. Go off; I discard you; let me enjoy my private; go off.

Mar. Lo, how hollow the fiend speaks within him! did not I tell you?-Sir Toby, my lady prays you to have a care of him.

Mal. Ah, ah! does she so?

Sir To. Go to, go to; peace, peace, we must deal gently with him; let me alone. How do you, Malvolio? how is't with you? What, man, defy the devil: consider, he's an enemy to mankind.

Mal. Do you know what you say?

Mar. La you, an you speak ill of the devil, how he takes it at heart! Pray God he be not be witched.

Fab. Carry his water to the wise woman.

Mar. Marry, and it shall be done to-morrow morning, if I live. My lady would not lose him for more than I'll say.

Mal. How now, mistress?

Mar. O lord!

Sir To. Pr'ythee, hold thy peace; this is not the way. Do you not see you move him? let me alone with him.

Fab. No way but gentleness; gently, gently: the fiend is rough, and will not be roughly used. Sir To. Why, how now, my bawock? how dost thou, chuck. Mal. Sir?

Sir To. Ay, Biddy, come with me. What, man! 'tis not for gravity to play at cherry-pit with Satan. Hang him, foul collier!

Mar. Get him to say his prayers; good Sir Toby, get him to pray.

Mal. My prayers, minx?

Mar. No, I warrant you, he will not hear of godliness.

Mal. Go, hang yourselves all you are idle shallow things: I am not of your element; you shall know more hereafter.

Sir To. Is 't possible?

Fab. If this were played upon the stage now, I could condemn it as an improbable fiction. Sir To. His very genius hath taken the in-fection of the device, man.

Mar. Nay, pursue him now; lest the device take air and taint. Fab. Why, we shall make him mad indeed.

Mar. The house will be the quieter. Sir To. Come, we'll have him in a dark room and bound. My niece is already in the belief that he is mad; we may carry it thus, for our pleasure and his penance, till our very pastime, tired out of breath, prompt us to have mercy on him: at which time we will bring the device to the bar, and crown thee for a finder of mad-

Enter Sir Andrew Ague-cheek.

Fab. More matter for a May morning. Sir And. Here's the challenge, read it: 1 warrant there's vinegar and pepper in 't.

But see, but see.

men.

Fab. Is 't so saucy?
Sir And. Ay is it, I warrant him; do but read. Sir To. Give me. [Reads.] Youth, whatsoever thou art, thou art but a scurvy fellow.

Fab. Good and valiant.

Sir To. Wonder not, nor admire not in thy mind, why I do call thee so, for I will show thee no reason for 'l.

Fab. A good note: that keeps you from the blow of the law.

Sir To. Thou comest to the Lady Olivia, and in my sight she uses thee kindly: but thou liest in thy throat; that is not the matter I challenge thee for.

Fab. Very brief, and exceeding good sense-Sir To. I will waylay thee going home; where if it be thy chance to kill me,-

Fab. Good.

Sir To. Thou killest me like a rogue and a villain.

Fab. Still you keep o' the windy side of the law. Good.

Sir To. Fare thee well; and God have mercy upon one of our souls! He may have mercy upon mine; but my hope is better, and so look to thyself. Thy friend, as thou usest him, and thy sworn enemy, ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.

Sir To. If this letter move him not, his legs cannot: I'll give 't him.

Mar. You may have very fit occasion for 't; he is now in some commerce with my lady, and will by and by depart.

Sir To. Go Sir Andrew; scout me for him at the corner of the orchard, like a bum-bailiff; so soon as ever thou seest him, draw; and, as thou drawest, swear horrible; for it comes to pass oft that a terrible oath, with a swaggering accent sharply twanged off, gives manhood more approbation than ever proof itself would have earned him. Away.

Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances well; Where virtue is, these are more virtuous: Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw The smallest fear or doubt of her revolt; For she had eyes, and chose me. No, lago; I'll see hefore I doubt; when I doubt, prove; And, on the proof, there is no more but this, Away at once with love or jealousy! freason lago. I am glad of it; for now I shall have To show the love and duty that I hear you With franker spirit: therefore, as I am hound, Receive it from me:- I speak not yet of proof. Look to your wife; observe her well with Cassio;

Wear your eye thus, not jealous nor secure: I would not have your free and noble nature, Out of self-bounty, be abus'd; look to't: I know our country disposition well; In Venice they do let heaven see the pranks They dare not show their husbands; their hest conscience

. Is not to leave undone, but keep unknown. Oth. Dost thou say so? [you;

lago. She did deceive her father, marrying And when she seemed to shake and lear your looks,

She lov'd them most.

And so she did. Oth. Why, go to, then; lago. She that, so young, could give out such a seeming.

To seal her father's eyes up close as oak,-He thought 'twas witchcraft, -But I am much to hlame;

I humbly do beseech you of your pardon For too much loving you.

I am bound to thee for ever. Oth. logo. I see this bath a little dash'd your spirits.

Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.

Trust me, I fear it has.

I hope you will consider what is spoke Comes from my love; but I do see you're mov'd: -

I am to pray you not to strain my speech To grosser issues nor to larger reach Than to suspicion.

Oth. I will not.

Should you do so, my lord, lago. My speech should fall into such vile success Which my thoughts aim'd not. Cassio's my worthy friend:-

My lord, I see you're mov'd.

Oth. No, not much mov'd:

I do not think but Desdemona's honest. Iago. Long live she sol and long live you self, to think so!

Oth. And yet, how nature erring from it-logo. Ay, there's the point:—as,—to be bold with you, Not to affect many proposed matches Of her own clime, complexion, and degree, Whereto we see in all things nature tends, Fohl one may smell in such a will most rank, Foul disproportion, thoughts unnatural:-But pardon me: I do not in position Distinctly speak of her; though I may fear Her will, recoiling to her better judgment, May fall to match you with her country forms, And happily repent.

Oth. Farewell, farewell! If more thou dost perceive, let me know more; Set on thy wife to observe: leave me, lago. lago. My lord, I take my leave. [Going. Oth. Why did I marry?-This honest creatlunfolds. ure doubtless Sees and knows more, much more, than he lago. [Returning.] My lord, I would I might entrest your honour

To scan this thing no further; leave it to time: Although 'tis fit that Cassio have his place,-For, sure, he fills it up with great ability, --Yet, if you please to hold him off awhile, You shall by that perceive him and his means: Note if your lady strain his entertainment With any strong or vehement importunity; Much will be seen in that. In the meantime Let me he thought too busy in my fears, -As worthy cause I have to fear I am,-And hold her free, I do beseeth your honour, Oth. Fear not my government. lago. I once more take my leave. [E Oth. This fellow's of exceeding honesty, (Exit. And knows all qualities, with a learned spirit, Of human dealings. If I do prove her haggard, Through that her iesses were my dear heartstrings, I'd whistle her off, and let her down the wind To prey at fortune. Haply, for I am black, And have not those soft parts of conversation That chamberers have; or, for I am declin'd Into the vale of years, -- yet that's not much, --She's gone; I am abus'd; and my relief Must be to loathe her. O curse of marriage, That we can call these delicate creatures ours, And not their appetites! I had rather be a toad, And live upon the vapour of a dungeon, Than keep a corner in the thing I love For others' uses. Yet 'tis the plague of great ones:

Prerogativ'd are they less than the base; 'Tis destiny unshumable, like death: Even then this forked plague is fated to us When we do quicken. Desdemona comes If she we false, O, then heaven mocks itself!-I'll not believe't.

Re-enter Desdemona and Emilia.

How now, my dear Othelio! Des. Your dinner, and the generous islanders By you invited, do attend your presence. Oth. I am to blame.

Why do you speak so faintly? Des.

Are you not well?

Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here. Des. Faith, that's with watching; 'twill away again:

Let me but hind it hard, within this hour

It will be well. Your napkin is too little; Oth. [He puts the handkerchief from him, and she drops it.

Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you. Des. I am very sorry that you are not well. Exeunt OTH. and DES.

Emil. I am glad I have found this nakpin: This was her first remembrance from the Moor: My warward husband hath a hundred times Woo'd me to steal it; but she so loves the token,-

Des. All's one .- Good faith, how foolish are our minds!-

If I do die before thee, pr'ythee, shroud me In one of those same sheets.

Emil. Come, come, you talk. Des. My mother hath a maid call'd Barbara: She was in love; and he she lov'd prov'd mad, And did forsake her: she had a song of willow; An old thing 'twas, but it express'd her fortune, And she died singing it: that song to-night Will not go from my mind; I have much to do, But to hang my head all at one side,

And sing it like poor Barbara .- Pr'ythee, despatch.

Emil: Shall I go fetch your nightgown? No, unpin me here .-Des. This Lodovico is a proper man.

Emil. A very handsome man

He speaks well. Emil. I know a lady in Venice would have walked barefoot to Palestine for a touch of his nether lip.

Des. The poor toul sat sighing by a sycamore [Sings.

Sing all a green willow;
Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee, Sing willow, willow, willow:

The fresh streams ran by her, and murmur'd her moans

. Sing willow, willow, willow; Her sait tears fell from her and soften'd the stones;-

Lay by these:--

Sing willow, willow, willow:-Sings.

Pr'vihee, hie thee; he'll come anon:-

Sing all a green willow must be my garland. (Sings.

Let nobody blame him; his scorn I approve, Nay, that's not next.-Hark! who is't that knocks?

Emil. It's the wind.

I call'd my love false love; but what said Des. [Sings. he then?

Sing willow, willow; willow:
If I court mo women, you'll couch with mo men.—

So, get thee gone; good-night. Mine eyes do itch;

Doth that bode weeping?

'Tis neither here nor there. Emil. Des. I have heard it said so .- O, these men, these men!-

Dost thou in conscience think, -tell me, Emilia,-

That there be women do abuse their husbands In such gross kind?

There be some such, no question. Emil. Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. Why, would not you?

Des. No, by this heavenly lightl Emil. Nor I neither by this heavenly light; [world? I might do't as well i' the dark.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the Emil. The world's a huge thing: it is a great price

For a small vice:

Des.

Emil. In troth, I think I should; and undo't when I had done. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring, nor for measures of lawn, nor for gowns, petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition; but for the whole world, why, who would not make her husband a cuckold to make him a monarch? I should venture purgatory for't.

Des. Besbrew me, if I would do such a wrong for the whole world.

Emil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong i' the world; and having the world for your labour, 'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right.

Des. I do not think there is any such woman. Emil. Yes, a dozen; and as many to the vantage as would store the world they play'd for.

But I do think it is their husbands' faults Il wives do fall: say that they slack their duties, And pour our treasures into foreign laps: Or else break out in peevish jealousies, Throwing restraint upon us; or say they strike Or scant our former having in despite; Why, we have galls; and though we have some grace, Yet have we some revenge. Let husbands

know

Their wives have sense like them: they see and smell. And have their palates both for sweet and sour, As husbands have. What is it that they do When they change us for others? Is it sport? I think it is: and doth affection breed it? I think it doth: is't frailty that thus errs? It is so too. And have not we affections, Desires for sport, and frailty, as men have? Then let them use us well: else let them know

The ills we do their ills instruct us to. Des. Good-night, good-night: heaven such usage send,

Not to pick bad from bad, but by bad mend! Excunt.

ACT V.

Scene I-Cyprus. A Street.

Enter IAGO and RODERIGO.

Iago. Here, stand behind this bulk; straight will he come:

Wear thy good rapier bare, and put it home: Quick, quick; fear nothing; I'll be at thy elbow:

It makes us or it mars us; think on that, And fix most firm thy resolution.

Rod. Be near at hand; I may miscarry in't. lago. Here, at thy hand: be bold, and take thy stand. [Retires to a little distance.

Rod. I have no great devotion to the deed; And yet he hath given me satisfying reasons:-'Tis but a man gone.—Forth, my sword; he [Goes to his stand. dies. Iago. I have rubb'd this young quat almost (Cassio to the sense,

Now, whether he kill And he grows angry. Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other, Every way makes my gain: live Roderigo, He calls me to a restitution large In troth, I think thou wouldst not. Of gold and jewels that I bobb'd from him

For he conjur'd her she should ever keep it.-That she reserves it evermore about her To kiss and talk to. I'll have the work ta'en out,

And give't lago: What he'll do with it heaven knows, not I; I nothing but to please his fantasy.

Re-enter LAGO.

lago. How now! what do you here alone? Emil. Do not you chide; I have a thing for lago. A thing for mel—it is a common thing.

Emil. Hal

lago. To have a foolish wife. [now

Emil. O, is that all? What will you give me For that same handkerchief?

What handkerchies? Emil. What handkerchief!

Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona; That which so often you did hid me steal. lago. Hast stol'n it from her?

Emil. No, faith; she let it drop by negligence. And, to the advantage, I, being here, took't up. Look, here it is.

A good wench; give it me. lago. Emil. What will you do with't, that you have been so earnest

To have me filch it?

Iago. Why, what's that to you? Snatching it.

Emil. If it be not for some purpose of import, Give't me again: poor lady, she'll run mad When she shall lack it.

lago. Be it acknown on't; I have use for Exit EMILIA. Go, leave me. I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin, And let him find it. Trifles light as air Are to the jealous confirmations strong As proofs of holy writ: this may do something. The Moor already changes with my poison: Dangerous conceits are in their natures poisons, Which at the first are scarce found to distaste, But, with a little act upon the blood, Burn like the mines of sulphur,-I did say dragora, Look, where he comes! Not poppy, nor man-Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world, Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep Which thou ow'dst yesterday.

Re-enter OTHELLO.

Oth. Ha! ha! false to me? lago. Why, how now, generall no more of that. Ithe rack:-

Oth. Avaunt! be gone! thou hast set me on I swear 'tis hetter to be much abus'd Than but to know't a little.

How now, my lord! Iago. Oth. What sense had I of her stol'n hours of lust?

I saw it not, thought it not, it harm!d not me: I slept the next night well, was free and merry; I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips: He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stol'n, Let him not know't, and he's not robb'd at all.

lago. I am sorry to hear this. Oth. I had been happy if the general camp, Pioneers and all, had tasted her sweet body,

So I had nothing known. O, now, for ever Farewell the tranquil mind! farewell content! Farewell the plumed troop and the big wars That make ambition virtue! O, farewell! Farewell the neighing steed and the shrill trump,

The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife. The royal banner, and all quality, Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war! And, O you mortal engines, whose rude throats The immortal Jove's dread clamours counterfeit.

Farewell! Othello's occupation 's gone!

Iago. Is't possible, my lord?—
Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love a whore,- [Taking him by the throat. Be sure of it; give me the ocular proof; Or, by the worth of mine eternal soul, Thou hadst been better have been horn a dog Than answer my wak'd wrath!

lago. Is't come to this? Oth. Make me to see't; or, at the least, so prove it

That the prohation bear no hinge nor loop To hang a doubt on; or woe upon thy life!

lago. My noble lord,— Oth. If thou dost slander her and torture me, Never pray more: abandon all remorse: On horror's head horrors accumulate; Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth amaz'd: For nothing canst thou to damnation add Greater than that.

O gracel O heaven forgive me! Are you a man? have you a soul or sense?-God b' wi' you; take mine office .- O wretched fool,

That liv'st to make thine honesty a vice!-O monstrous world! Take note, take note, O world,

To be direct and honest is not safe .-I thank you for this profit; and from hence I'll love no friend, sith love breeds such offence.

Oth. Nay, stay: - thou shouldst he honest. lago. I should be wise; for honesty's a fool, And loses that it works for.

By the world, Oth. I think my wife be honest, and think she is not; I think that thou art just, and think thou art [fresh

I'll have some proof: her name, that was as As Dian's visage, is now hegrim'd and black As mine own face.—If there he cords or knives, Poison, or fire, or suffocating streams, I'll not endure't.-Would I were satisfied!

lago. I see, sir, you are eaten up with passion: I do repent me that I put it to you. You would be satisfied:

Would! nay, I will. Oth. Iago. And may: but how? how satisfied, my lord?

Would you, the supervisor, grossly gape on,-Behold her tupp'd?

Death and damnation! O! lago. It were a tedious difficulty, I think, To bring them to that prospect: damn them, then, If ever mortal eyes do see them bolster More than their own! What then? how then? As gifts to Desdemons: It must not be: if Cassio do remain, He hath a daily beauty in his life That makes me ugly; and, besides, the Moor May unfold me to him; there stand I in much penil: No, he must die.—But, so, I hear him coming.

Enter Cassio.

Rod. I know his gait, 'tis he .- Villain, thou diest!

(Rushes out, and makes a pass at CASSIO. Cas. That thrust had been mine enemy indeed.

But that my coat is better than thou know'st: I will make proof of thine.

Draws, and wounds RODERIGO. O, I am slain! [IAGO rushes from his post, cuts CASSIO behind in the leg, and exit.

Cas. I am maim'd for ever .- Help, ho! murderl murderl IFalls.

Enter OTHELLO at a distance.

Oth. The voice of Cassio:-Iago keeps his word.

Rod. O, villain that I am!

Oth. It is even so. Cas. O, help, ho! light! a surgeon!

Oth. 'Tis he:- O brave lago, honest and just,

That hath such noble sense of thy friend's wrong!

Thou teachest me, -minion, your dear lies dead, And your unbless'd fate hies.—Strumpet, I come! (blotted; Forth of my heart those charms, thine eyes, are Thy bed, lust-stain'd, shall with lust's blood be spotted. Exit. Enter Lodovico and Gratiano at a distance Cas. What, hol no watch? no passage? murder! murder! (direful. Gra. 'Tis some mischance; the voice is very

Cas. O, helpl Lod. Harki

Rod. O wretched villain! [night: Lod. Two or three groan:—it is a heavy These may be counterfeits: let's think't unsafe To come in to the cry without more help.

Rod. Nobody come? then shall I bleed to death.

Lod. Harkl

Gra. Here's one comes in his shirt, with light and weapons.

Re-enter IAGO with a light.

lago. Who's there? whose noise is this dat cries on murder?

Lod. We do not know. Iago. Did not you hear a ch? Cas. Here, here! for heaven's sake, help hell lago. What's the matter?

Gra. This is Othello's ancient, as I take it. Lod. The same indeed; a very valiant fellow.

lago. What are you here that cry so grievously?

Cas. Ingo? O, I am spoil'd, undone by villains!

Give me some help. done this? Jago. O me, lieutenant! what villains have Cas. I think that one of them is hereabout, And cannot make away.

O treacherous villains! Iago. What are you there? come in, and give some

(To LODOVICO and GRATIANO. help. Rod. O, help me herel

Cas. That's one of them. O murderous slave! O villain! Iago.

(Stabs Roderigo Rod. O damn'd Iago! O inhuman dog! lago. Kill men i' the dark!-Where he these bloody thieves?-How silent is this town!-Hol murder! murder!-

What may you be? are you of good or evil? Lod. As you shall prove us, praise us.

Iago. Signior Lodovico?

Lod. He, sir. Iago. I cry you mercy. Here's Cassio hurt by villains.

Gra. Cassio! lago. How is't, brother? Cas. My leg is cut into.

Marry, heaven forbidl-. Iago. Light, gentlemen:-I'll bind it with my shirt.

Enfer Blanca.

Bian. What is the matter, ho? who is't that cried?

lago. Who is't that cried! Bian. O my dear Cassio! my sweet Cassio! --

O Cassio, Cassio, Cassio! lago. O notable strumpet!-Cassio, may you AOR; suspect

Who they should be that have thus mangled Cas. No.

Gra. I am sorry to find you thus: I have been to seek you.

lago. Lend me a garter: -so. -O, for a chair, Cassiol To bear him easily hencel . Bian. Alas, he faints!-O Cassio, Cassio, lago. Gentlemen all, I do suspect this trash

To be a party in this injury.-Patience awhile, good Cassio.—Come, come; Lend me a light.—Know we this face or no? Alas, my friend and my dear countryman.

Roderigo? no:—yes, sure; O heaven! Roderigo. Gra. What, of Venice?

lago. Even he, sir: did you know him? Know himl av. Gra. I cry you gentle Iago. Signior Gratiano?

[ners, pardon: These bloody accidents must excuse my man-That so neglected you. -

I am glad to see you. Gra. lago. How do you, Cassio?-O, a chair, a chair!

Gra. Roderigo Iago. He, he, 'tis he.-O, that's well said; [A chair brought in--the chair:-

Some good man bear him carefully from hence; I'll fetch the general's surgeon.-For you, {To BIANCA. mistress, Save you your labour. - He that lies slain here, Cassio, Was my dear friend: what malice was between What shall I say? Where's satisfaction? It is impossible you should see this, Were they as prime as goats, as hot as monkeys, As salt as wolves in pride, and fools as gross As ignorance made drunk. But yet, I say, If imputation and strong circumstances,-Which lead directly to the door of truth,-Will give you satisfaction, you may have't.

Oth. Give me a living reason she's disloyal. lago. I do not like the office: But, sith I am enter'd in this cause so far,-Prick'd to it by foolish honesty and love,-I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately;

And, being troubled with a raging tooth,

I could not sleep. There are a kind of men so loose of soul That in their sleeps will mutter their affairs: One of this kind is Cassio: In sleep I heard him say, Sweet Desdemona, Let us be wary, let us hide our loves;

And then sir, would he gripe and wring my hand.

Cry, O sweet creature! and then kiss me hard, As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots, That grew upon my lips: then laid his leg Over my thigh, and sigh'd, and kiss'd; and then Cried, Cursed fate that gave thee to the Moor! Oth, O monstrous! monstrous!

Nay, this was but a dream. Oth. But this denoted a foregone conclusion: 'Tis a shrewd doubt, though it be hut a dream. lago. And this may help to thicken other proofs

That do demonstrate thinly.

Oth. I'll tear her all to pieces. lago. Nay, but be wise: yet we see nothing done:

She may be honest yet. Tell me but this, Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief Spotted with strawberries in your wife's hand?

Oth. I gave her such a one; 'twas my first gift. [chief, lago. I know not that: but such a handker-

I am sure it was your wife's, --did I to-day See Cassio wipe his beard with. If it be that,-Oth.

lago. If it be that, or any that was hers, It speaks against her with the other proofs. Oth. O, that the slave had forty thousand lives,-One is too poor, too weak for my revenge!

Now do I see 'tis true.-Look here, Iago; All my fond love thus do I blow to heaven: Tis gone.-

Arise, black vengeance, from the hollow hell! Yield up, O love, thy crown and hearted throne To tyrannous hate! swell, bosom, with thy fraught,

For 'tis aspics' tongues!

lago. Yet be content.

Oth. O, blood, Iago, blood! lago. Patience, I say; your mind perhaps may change. Oth. Never, Iago. Like to the Pontic sea, Whose icy current and compulsive course Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on To the Propontic and the Hellespont; Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace, Even so my bloody inoughts, was a substitute of the Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble love, Be call'd to him. Till that a capable and wide revenge

Swallow them up.-Now, by youd marble heaven,

In the due reverence of a sacred vow [Kneels. I here engage my words.

Do not rise yet .- [Kneels. Witness, you ever-hurning lights above, You elements that clip us round about,-Witness that here lago doth give no The execution of his wit, hands, heart, To wrong'd Othello's service! Let him command,

And to obey shall be in me remorse. What bloody business ever.

Oth. I greet thy love, Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance bounteous,

And will upon the instant put thee to't: Within these three days let me hear thee say That Cassio's not alive. [request: lago. My friend is dead; 'tis done at your

But let her live.

Oth. Damn her, lewd minx! O, damn her! Come, go with me apart; I will withdraw To furnish me with some swift means of death For the fair devil. Now art thou my lieutenant. lago. I am your own forever.

Scene IV .- CYPRUS. Before the Castle.

Enter DESDEMONA, EMILIA, and Clown.

Des. Do you know, sirrah, where Lieutenant Cassio lies?

Clo. I dare not say he lies anywhere. Des. Why, man? Clo. He's a soldier; and for one to say a soldier lies is stabbing. Des. Go to: where lodges he? Clo. To tell you where he lodges is to tell you where I lie. Des Can anything be made of this?

Clo. I know not where he lodges; and for me to devise a lodging, and say he lies here or he lies there were to lie in mine own throat.

Des. Can you inquire him out, and be edified by report?

Clo. I will estechize the world for him; that is, make questions, and by them answer.

Des. Seek him, bid him come hither: tell him I have moved my lord on his behalf, and hope all will be well.

Clo. To do this is within the compass of men's wit: and therefore I will attempt the Exit. doing it.

Des. Where should I lose that handkerchief, Emilia?

Emil. I know rot, madam. Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my Full of crussiones: and, but my noble Moor Is true of mind, and made of no such baseness As jealous creatures are, it were enough As jeasous accuration of thinking.

To put him to ill thinking.

Is he not jeasous?

Des. Who; he? I think the sun where he was born

Drew all such humours from him.

Look, where he comes. Emil. Des. I will not leave him now till Cassio

Then heaven

Cas. None in the world; nor do I know the And love thee after.-One more, and that's man

Ingo. [To BIAN.] What, look you pale?-O, bear him ont o' the air.— [CAS. and ROD. are borne off.

Stay you, good gentlemen .- Look you pale, mistress?-Do you perceive the gastness of her eye?-

Nay, if you stare, we shall hear more anon.— Behold her well; I pray you, look upon her: Do you see, gentlemen? nay, guiltiness will speak

. Though tongues were out of use.

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. 'Las, what's the matter? what's the matter, husband? lago. Cassio hath here been set on in the dark By Roderigo, and fellows that are 'scap'd: He's almost slain, and Roderigo dead.

Emil. Alas, good gentlement alas, [thee, Emilia. Cassiol lago. This is the fruit of whoring.-Pr'y-Go know of Cassio where he supp'd to-night. What, do you shake at that?

Bian. He supp'd at my house; but I there fore shake not.

lago. O, did he so? I charge you, go with me. Emil. Fie, fie upon thee, strumpet! Bian. I am no strumpet; but of life as honest

As you that thus abuse me. Emil. As II fohl fie upon thee! lago. Kind gentlemen, let's go see poor

Cassio dress'd .-

Come, mistress, you must tell's another tale.— Emilia, run you to the citadel, And tell my lord and lady what hath happ'd.— Will you go on afore?—[Aside.] This is the night

That either makes me or fordoes me quite. Exeunt.

Thou gar'st to Cassio.

ENE II.—CYPRUS. A Bedchamber in the Des. No, by my life and soult Castle: DESDEMONA in bed asleep; a light Send for the man and ask him. Scene II .- Cyprus. A Bedchamber in The burning.

Enter OTHELLO.

Oth. It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul, Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars!— It is the cause.—Yet Pll not shed her blood; Nor scar that whiter skin of hers than snow, And smooth as monumental alabaster.

[Takes off his sword. Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men. Put out the light, and then put out the light: If I quench thee, thon flaming minister, I can again thy former light restore, slight, Should I repent me:—but once put on thy Thou cunning'st pattern of excelling nature, I know not where is that Promethean heat That can thy light relume. When I have pluck'd thy rose,
I cannot give it vital growth again,

It needs must wither:--I'll smell it on the I saw the handkerchief. {Kissing her. tree. O balmy breath, that dost almost persuade Justice to break her sword!—One more, one Let him confess a truth. lthee, more.-

Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill !

the last:

So sweet was ne'er so fatal. I must weep, But they are cruel tears: this sorrow's heavenly; It strikes where it doth love. - She wakes.

Des. Who's there? Othello? Oth. Ay, Desdemons. Des. Will you come to bed, my lord? Oth. Have you pray'd to-night, Desdemons?

Des. Ay, my lord. Oth. If you bethink yourself of any crime

Unreconcil'd as yet to heaven and grace, Solicit for it straight.

Des. Alack, my lord, what may you mean by Oth. Well, do it, and be brief; I will walk by:

I would not kill thy unprepared spirit; No,-heaven forfend!-I would not kill thy Des. Talk you of killing? Oth. Ay, I do.

Des. Have mercy on mel

Oth. Amen, with all my heart! Des. If you say so, I hope you will not kill me. Oth. Hum! Des. And yet I fear you; for you are fatal When your eyes roll so: why I should fear I know not, fear. Since guiltiness I know not; but yet I feel I

Oth. Think on thy sins.

Des. They are loves I bear to you. Oth. Ay, and for that thou diest. [loving .-Des. That death's unnatural that kills for Alas, why gnaw you so your nether lip? Some bloody passion shakes your very frame: These are portents; but yet I hope, I hope,

They do not point on me. Peace, and be still! Oth. Des. I will so. What's the matter? Oth. That handkerchief which I so lov'd and gave thee.

Sweet soul, take heed, Oth. Take heed of perjury; thou'rt on thy death-bed. Des. Ay, but not yet to die.

Oth. Yes, presently: Therefore confess thee freely of thy sin; For to deny each article with oath Cannot remove nor choke the strong conception That I do group withal. Thou art to die. Des. Then, Lord have mercy on me!

I say, amen. Des. And have you mercy tool-I never did Offend you in my life; never lov'd Cassio But with such general warranty of heaven

As I might love: I never gave him token. Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in's hand.

O perjur'd woman' thou dost stone my heart, And mak'st me call what I intend to do A murder, which I thought a sacrifice:

He found it, then; Des. I never gave it him:-send for him hither;

He hath confess'd. Oth.

Des. What, my lord?

Enter OTHELLO.

How is't with you, my lord? Oth. Well, my Well, my good lady.—[Aside.] O, hardness to dissemble!—

How do you, Desdemons?

Des. Well, my good lord.

Oth. Give me your hand: this hand is moist, my lady. Sorrow.

Des. It yet hath felt no age nor known no Oth. This argues fruitfulness and liberal heart: quires

Hot, hot, and moist: this hand of yours re-A sequester from liberty, fasting and prayer, Much castigation, exercise devout; For here's a young and sweating devil here That commonly rebels. 'Tis a good hand,

A frank one.

Des. You may indeed say so;

For 'twas that hand that gave away my heart. Oth. A liberal hand: the hearts of old gave hands;

But our new heraldry is hands, not hearts.

Des. I cannot speak of this. Come now, your promise.

Oth. What promise, chuck?

Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with vou. ime:

Oth. I have a salt and sorry rheum offends Lend me thy handkerchief.

Here, my lord.

Oth. That which I gave you. Des. I have it not about me.

Oth. Not?

No, indeed, my lord. Des. Oth. That is a fault.

That handkerchief

Did an Egyptian to my mother give: She was a charmer, and could almost read

The thoughts of people: she told her, while father she kept it, 'Twould make her amiable, and subdue my Entirely to her love; but if she lost it,

Or made a gift of it, my father's eye

Should hold her loathed, and his spirits should hunt

After new fancies: she, dying, gave it me; And bid me, when my fate would have me wive, To give it her. I did so: and take heed on't; Make it a darling like your precious eye; To lose't or give't away were such perdition

As nothing else could match.

Is't possible? Des. Oth. 'Tis true: there's magic in the web of it: A sibyl, that had number'd in the world The sun to course two hundred compasses, In her prophetic fury sew'd the work; The worms were hallow'd that did breed the And it was dy'd in mummy which the skilful Conserv'd of maidens hearts.

Indeed! is't true? Des. Oth. Most veritable; therefore look to't well. Des. Then would to God that I had never seen't!

Oth. Hal wherefore? Des. Why do you speak so startingly and [the way?

Oth. Is't lost? is't gone? speak, is it out of Des. Heaven bless usl Say you? -Oth.

Des. It is not lost; but what an if it were? Oth. Howl

Des. I say, it is not lost.

Oth. Fetch't, let me see't. Des. Why, so I can, sir, but I will not now. This is a trick to put me from my suit: Pray you, let Cassio be receiv'd again.

Oth. Fetch me the handkerchief: my mind misgives.

Des. Come, come;

You'll never meet a more sufficient man.

Oth. The handkerchief! Des.

I pray, talk me of Cassio. Oth. The handkerchief! Des. A man that all his time

Hath founded his good fortunes on your love, Shar'd dangers with you,-

The handkerchief! Des. In sooth, you are to blame.

Oth. Away!

Ent. Emil. Is not this man jealous? Des. I ne'er saw this before.

Sure there's some wonder in this handkerchief: I am most unhappy in the loss of it.

Emil. 'Tis not a year or two shows us a man: They are all but stomachs, and we all but food: They eat us hungerly, and when they are full. They belch us .- Look you, - Cassio and my busband.

Enter Cassio and Lago.

lago. There is no other way; 'tis she must do't:

And, lo, the happiness! go and importune her. . Des. How now, good Cassio! what's the news with you?

Cas. Madam, my former suit: I do beseech

That by your virtuous means I may again Exist, and be a member of his love, Whom I, with all the office of my heart, Entirely honour: I would not be delay'd. If my offence be of such mortal kind That nor my service past, nor present sorrows, Nor purpos'd merit in futurity, Can ransom me into his love again, But to know so must be my benefit;

So shall I clothe me in a forc'd content, And shut myself up in some other course, To fortune's alms.

Alas, thrice-gentle Cassiol Des. My advocation is not now in tune; My lord is not my lord; nor should I know him, Were he in favour as in humour alter'd. So help me every spirit sanctified,

As I have spoken for you all my best, And stood within the hlank of his displeasure For my free speech! You must awhile be patient:

What I can do I will; and more I will Than for myself I dare: let that suffice you.

Iago. Is my lord angry? He went hence but now, Emil.

And certainly is strange unquietness. Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen the cannon, When it hath blown his ranks into the gir, And, like the devil, from his very arm Puff'd his own brother; -- and can he be angry?

Oth. That he hath us'd thee. Des. How? unlawfully? Oth. Des. He will not say so.

No, his mouth is stopp'd; Honest Iago hath ta'en order for't. [dead? Des. O, my fear interprets?—What, is he Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge

Had stomach for them all.

Des. Alas, he is betray'd, and I undone! Oth. Out, strumpet! Weep'st thou for him to my face?

Des. O, banish me, my lord, but kill me not! Oth. Down, strumpet! Des. Kill me to-morrow; let me live to-night!

Oth. Nay, if you strive,-

Des. But half an hour! Oth. Being done, there is no pause.

Des. But while I say one prayer!
Oth. It is too late. |Sm Smothers her. Emil. [Within.] My lord, my lord! what, hol my lord, my lord!

Oth. What noise is this?--Not dead? not yet quite dead? . I that am cruel am yet merciful;

I would not have thee linger in thy pain:-

Emil. [Within.] What, ho! my lord, my Who's there? Oth.

Emil. [Within.] O, good my lord, I would speak a word with you! [dead .-Oth. Yes:-'tis Emilia:-by and by.-She's

'Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio's death; The noise was high.—Hal no more moving? Still as the grave.—Shall she come in?—Were't good? -

I think she stirs again: no.-What's best to If she come in she'll sure speak to my wife: My wife! my wife! what wife? I have no wife. O, insupportable! O heavy hour!

Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse Of sun and moon, and that the affrighted globe Should yawn at alteration.

Emil. [Within.] I do beseech you

That I may speak with you, O, good my lord! Oth. I had forgot thee: O, come in, Emilia:-Soft,—by and by:—let me the curtains draw.-[Unlocks the door. Where art thou?

Enter EMILIA.

What's the matter with thee now? Emil. O, my good lord, yonder's foul murders done!

Oth. What, now?

Emil. But now, my lord.

Oth. It is the very error of the moon; She comes more nearer earth than she was wont, [Venetian And makes men mad.

Emil. Cassio, my lord, hath kill'd a young

Call'd Roderigo.

Roderigo kill'dl Oth.

And Cassio kill'd! No, Cassio is not kill'd. Emil.

Oth. Not Cassio kill'd! then murder's out of tune,

And sweet revenge grows harsh. Des. O, falsely falsely murder'd!

Emil. Alas, what cry is that?

Oth. That! what? Voice.~ Emil. Out and alast that was my lady's Helpi help, hol help!—O lady, speak again!

Sweet Desdemona! O sweet mistress, speak!

Des. A guiltless death I die.

Emil. O, who hath done this deed?

Des. Nobody; I myself. Farewell:

Commend me to my kind lord: O, farewell!

Dies. Oth. Why, how should she be murder'd? . Emil. Alas, who knows? Oth. You heard her say herself it was not I. Emil. She said so: I must needs report the truth.

Oth. She's, like a liar, gone to burning hell: 'Twas I that kill'd her.

Emil. O, the more angel she, And you the blacker devil!

Oth. She turn'd to folly, and she was a whore. Emil. Thou dost belie her, and thou art a devil.

Oth. She was false as water,

Thou art rash as fire, to say Emil. That she was false: O, she was heavenly true! Oth. Cassio did tup her; ask thy husband

O, I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell. But that I did proceed upon just grounds To this extremity. Thy husband knew it all.

Emil. My husband! Oth. Thy husband.

Emil. That she was false to wedlock?

Oth. Ay, with Cassio. Nay, had she been true, If heaven would make me such another world

Of one entire and perfect chrysolité, I'd not have sold her for it.

Emil. My husband! Oth. Ay, 'twas he that told me first An honest man he is, and hates the slime That sticks to filthy deeds.

Emil. My husband! Oth. What needs this iterance, woman? I

(with love!-say thy husband.

Emil. O mistress, villany hath made mocks My husband say, that she was false!

He, woman; I say thy husband: dost understand the word?

My friend, thy husband, honest, honest lago.

Emil. If he say so, may his pernicious soul
Rot half a grain a day! he lies to the heart; She was to fond of her most filthy bargain.

Olh. Ha! Emil. Do thy worst:

This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven Than thou wast worthy her.

Peace, you were best Oth. Emil. Thou hast not half that power to do me harm As I have to be hurt. O gull! O dolt! As ignorant as dirt! thou hast done a deed,-I care not for thy sword; Pll make thee known, Though I lost twenty lives.—Helpl help, hol [murder] helo! The Moor hath kill'd my mistress! murderl

Enter Montano, Gratiano, and Iago.

Mon. What is the matter?-How now, generall

Something of moment, then: I will go meet him:

There's matter in't indeed if he be angry. Des. I pr'ythee, do so. [Exit IAGO.] Something, sure, of state,-Either from Venice, or some unhatch'd practice Made demonstrable here in Cyprus to him, Hath puddled his clear spirit, and in such cases Men's natures wrangle with inferior things. Though great ones are their object. :02

For let our finger ache, and it endues Our other healthful members even to that sense Of pain: nay, we must think men are not gods, Nor of them look for such observancy As fits the bridal.—Beshrew me much, Emilia, I was, -unhandsome warrior as I am,-Arraigning his unkindness with my soul;

But now I find I had suborn'd the witness. And he's indicted falsely. lyou think. Emil. Pray heaven it be state matters, as And no conception nor no jealous toy Concerning you.

Des. Alas the day, I never gave him cause! Emil. But jealous souls will not be answer'd

They are not ever jealous for the cause. But jealous for they are jealous: 'tis a monster Begot upon itself, born on itself. Des. HeavenkeepthatmonsterfromOthello's

Emil. Lady, amen. fahour: Des. I will go seek him .- Cassio, walk here-If I do find him fit, I'll move your suit,

And seek to effect it to my uttermost. Cus. I humbly thank your ladyship. [Exeunt DESDEMONA and EMILIA.

Enter Blanca.

Bian. Save you, friend Cassion Cos. What make you from home? How is it with you, my most fair Bianca? I' faith, sweet love, I was coming to your house. Bion. And I was going to your lodging, Cassio.

What, keep a week away? seven days and nights?

Eight score eight hours? and lovers' absent

More tedious than the dial eight score times? O weary reckoning!

Pardon me, Bianca: Cas. I have this while with leaden thoughts been press'd: But I shall in a more continuate time Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca, [Giving her DESDEMONA'S handkerchief.

Take me this work out. O Cassio, whence came this?

This is some token from a newer friend: To the felt absence now I feel a cause:

Is't come to this? Well, well. Cas. Go to, woman! Throw your vile guesses in the devil's teeth, From whence you have them. You are jealous

DOW That this is from some mistress, some remembrance:

No, in good troth, Bianca. Bion.

Why, whose is it?

Cas. I know not neither: I found it in my chamber.

I like the work well: ere it be demanded,-As like enough it will,-I'd have it copied:

Take it, and do't; and leave me for this time.

Bian. Leave you! wherefore?

Cas. I do attend here on the general; And think it no addition, nor my wish,

To have him see me woman'd. Bian. Why, I pray you?

Cas. Not that I love you not. Bian. But that you do not love me. I pray you, bring me on the way a little;

And say if I shall see you soon at night. Cas. 'Tis but a little way that I can bring

For I attend here: but I'll see you soon, Bian. 'Tis very good; I must be circumstanc'd. Exeunt.

ACT IV.

Scene I .- Cyprus. Before the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO.

Iago. Will you think so? Oth. Think so, Iago? Jago. What,

To kiss in private?

Oth. An unauthoriz'd kiss. lago. Or to be naked with ber friend in bed An hour or more, not meaning any harm? Oth. Naked in bed, Iago, and not meao harm!

It is hypocrisy against the devil: They that mean virtuously, and yet do so, . The devil their virtue tempts, and they tempt heaven. Iago. So they do nothing, 'tis a venial slip:

But if I give my wife a handkerchief,-Oth. What then? [being hers, lago. Why, then, 'tis hers, my lord: and,

She may, I think, bestow't on any man.

Oth. She is protectress of her honour too: May she give that?

logo. Her honour is an essence that's not They have it very oft that have it not:

But, for the handkerchief,-Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have Thou said'st,-O, it comes o'er my memory

As doth the raven o'er the infected house, Boding to all, - he had my handkerchief. Iago. Ay, what of that?

That's not so good now. Oth. Iogo. If I had said I had seen him do you wrong? Or heard him say, -as knaves be such abroad, Who having, hy their own importunate suit. Or voluntary dotage of some mistress.

Convinced or supplied them, cannot choose But they must blab,-

Hath he said anything? Oth. lago. He hath, my lord; but be you well assur'd.

No more than he'll unswear.

What hath he said? Oth. logo. Faith, that he did .-- I know not what he did.

Oth, What? what?

Iago. Lie,-

Oth. With her? With her, on her; what you will. Iago. Oth. Lie with her! lie on her!-We say lie on her when they belie her.-Lie with her! that's fulsome.—Handkerchief,—confessions,—handkerchief!—To confess, and be hanged for his labour-first to be hanged, and then to confess.—I tremble at it. Nature would not invest herself in such shadowing passion without some instruction. It is not words that shake me thus:--pishi--noses, ears, and lips. -Is't possible?-Confess,-handkerchief!-O devil!-[Falls in a trance.

lago. Work on, [caught; My medicine, work! Thus credulous fools are And many worthy and chaste dames even thus All guiltless, meet reproach.—What, hol my lord!

My lord, I say! Othello!

Enter Cassio.

How now, Cassio!

Cas. What's the matter?
Iago. My lord is fallen into an epilepsy:
This is his second fit; he had one yesterday.
Cas. Rub him about the temples.

Iago. No, forbear;
The lethargy must have his quiet course:
If not, he foams at mouth, and by and by Breaks out to savage madness. Look, he stirs:
Do you withdraw yourself a little while,
He will recover straight: when he is gone,
I would on great occasion speak with you.

[Exit Cassio.

How is it, general? have you not hurt your head?

Oth. Dost thou mock me?

Iago. I mock you! no, by heaven. Would you would bear your fortune like a man! Oth. A horned man's monster and a beast. Iago. There's many a beast, then, in a populous city.

And many a civil monster.

Oth. Did he confess it?

Tago. Good sir, be a man; Think every bearded fellow that's but yok'd May draw with you: there's millions now alive That nightly lie in those unproper beds Which they dare swear peculiar: your case is better.

O, 'tis the spite of hell, the fiend's arch-mock,
To lip a wanton in a secure couch,
And to suppose her chaste! No, let me know;
And knowing what I am, I know what she shall be.

Oth. O, thou art wise; 'tis certain.

lago. Stand you awhile apart; Confine yourself but in a patient list. Igrief,—Whilst you were here o'erwhelmed with your A passion most unsuiting such a man,—Cassio came hither: I shifted him away, And laid good 'scuse upon your eestasy; Bade him anon return, and here speak with me; The which he promis'd. Do but encave your-

And mark the fleers, the gibes, and notable That dwell in every region of his face;
For I will make him tell the tale anew,—

He hath, and is again to cope your wife: I say, but mark his gesture. Marry, patience; Or I shall say you are all in all in spleen, And nothing of a man.

Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago? I will be found most cunning in my patience; But,—dost thou hear?—most bloody.

Iago. That's not amiss:
But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw?
[OTHELLO withdraws.
Now will I question Cassio of Bianca.

A housewife that, by selling her desires,
Buys herself bread and clothes: it is a creature
That dotes on Cassio,—as 'tis the strumpet's plague

To beguile many and be beguil'd by one:—
He, when he hears of her, cannot refrain
From the excess of laughter:—here he comes:—
As he shall smile Othello shall go mad;
And his unbookish jealousy must construe
Poor Cassio's smiles, gestures, and light behaviour

Quite in the wrong.

Re-enter Cassio.

How do you now, lieutenant? Cas. The worser that you give me the addition

Whose want even kills me. [on't. Iago. Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure Now, if this suit lay in Bianca's power, [Speaking lower.]

How quickly should you speed!

Cas.

Alas, poor caitifil
Oth. [Aside.] Look, how he laughs alreadyl lago. I never knew woman love man so.
Cas. Alas, poor rogue! I think, i' faith,
she loves me.

Oth. [Aside.] Now he denies it, faintly and laughs it out.

lago. Do you hear, Cassio?

Oth. [Aside.] Now he importunes him To tell it o'er:—go to; well said, well said.

Iago. She gives it out that you shall marry her:

Do you intend it?

Cas. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. [Aside.] Do you triumph, Roman? do you triumph?

Cas. I marry her!—what, a customer! I

Cas. I marry her!—what, a customer! I prythee, bear some charity to my wit; do not think it so unwholesome:—ha, ha, ha!

Oth. [Aside.] So, so, so, so: they laugh that win. [marry her.

Iago. Faith, the cry goes that you shall Cas. Pr'ythee, say true.

Iago. I am a very villain else.

Oth. [Aside.] Have you scored me? Well. Cas. This is the monkey's own giving out: she is persuaded I will marry her, out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promise.

Oth. [Aside.] Iago beckons me; now he begins his story.

Cas. She was here even now; she haunts me in every place. I was the other day talking on the sea-bank with certain Venetians, and thither comes the bauble, and falls thus about my neck,— Oth. [Aside.] Crying, O dear Cassio! as it

Where, how, now oft, how long ago, and when were: his gesture imports it.

O the pernicious caitiff!-

Who can control his fate? 'tis not so now.—
Be not afraid though you do see me weapon'd;
Here is my journey's end, here is my butt,
And very sea-mark of my utmost sail.
Do you go back dismay'd? 'tis a lost fear;
Man but a rush against Othello's breast,
And he retires:—where should Othello go?—
Now, how dost thou look now? O ill-starr'd wench!

Pale as thy smock! when we shall meet at

Pale as thy smock! when we shall meet at This look of thine will hurl my soul from heaven And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my

Even like thy chastity.—
O.cursed, cursed slave!—Whip me, ye devils,
From the possession of this heavenly sight!
Blow me about in winds! roast me in sulphur!
Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire!—
O Desdemon! dead, Desdemon! dead! O!

Enter LODOVICO, MONTANO, CASSIO, carried in a chair, and Officers, with IAGO prisoner.

Lod. Where is this rash and most unfortunate man?

Oth. That's he that was Othello;—here I am. Lod. Where is that viper? bring the villain forth.

Oth. O look down towards his feet,—but that's a fable.—

If that thou be'st a devil, I cannot kill thee.

[Wounds IAGO. Lod. Wrench his sword from him.

Iago. I bleed, sir; but not kill'd.

Oth. I am not sorry neither: I'd have thee live:

For, in my sense, 'tis happiness to die.

Lod. O thou Othello, that wert once so good,
Fall'n in the practice of a damned slave,

What shall be said to thee?

Oth.

An honourable murderer, if you will;

For naught I did in hate, but all in honour.

Lod. This wretch hath part confess'd his villany:

Did you and he consent in Cassio's death?

Cas. Dear general, I never gave you cause.
Oth. I do believe it, and I ask your pardon.
Will you, I pray, demand that demi-devil
Why he hath thus ensnar'd my soul and body?
Iago. Demand me nothing: what you know, you know: From this time forth I never will speak word.

Lod. What, not to pray?
Gra. Torments will ope your lips.

Oth. Well, thou dost best. [fall'n, Lod. Sir, you shall understand what hath be-Which, as I think, you know not. Here is a

Found in the pocket of the slain Roderigo; And here another: the one of them imports The death of Cassio to be undertook By Roderigo.

Oth. O villain!

Cas. Most heathenish and most gross!
Lod. Now here's another discontented paper,
Found in his pocket too; and this, it seems,
Roderigo meant to have sent this damned
villain;

But that, belike, Iago in the interim Came in and satisfied him.

How came you, Cassio, by that handkerchief That was my wife's?

Cas.

I found it in my chamber:
And he himself confess'd but even now
That there he dropp'd it for a special purpose

That there he dropp'd it for a special purpose Which wrought to his desire.

Oth.

O fool! fool!

Cas. There is besides in Roderigo's letter,— How he upbraids Iago that he made him Brave me upon the watch; whereon it came That I was cast: and even but now he spake, After long seeming dead,—Iago hurt him, Iago set him on.

Lod. You must forsake this room, and go with us:

Your power and your command is taken off, And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this slave,—
If there be any cunning cruelty
That can torment him much and hold him long,
It shall be his. You shall close prisoner rest
Till that the nature of your fault be known
To the Venetian state.—Come, bring away.
Oth. Soft you; a word or two before you go,
I have done the state some service, and they know't;—

No more of that.—I pray you, in your letters,
When you shall theso unlucky deeds relate,
Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate,
Nor set down aught in malice: then must you

Nor set down aught in malice: then must you speak

Of one that lov'd not wisely, but too well;

Of one not easily jealous, but, being wrought.

Or one not easily jealous, but, being wrought, Perplex'd in the extreme; of one whose hand, Like the base Judean, threw a pearl away Richer than all his tribe; of one whose subdu'd eyes,

Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees
Their medicinal gum. Set you down this;
And say, besides,—that in Aleppo once,
Where a malignant and a turban'd Turk
Beat a Venetian and traduc'd the state,
I took by the throat the circumcised dog,
And smote him—thus. [Stabs himself.

Lod. O bloody period!

Gra. All that's spoke is marr'd.

Oth. I kiss'd thee ere I kill'd thee:—no way but this, [Falling upon DESDEMONA.

Killing myself, to die upon a kiss. [Dies.]

Cas. This did I fear, but thought he had no weapon;

For he was great of heart.

Lod. [To IAGO.]

O Spartan dog,

Lod. [70 IAGO.]
More fell than anguish, hunger, or the seal
Look on the tragic loading of this bed;
This is thy work:—the object poisons sight;
Let it be hid.—Gratiano, keep the house,
And seize upon the fortunes of the Moor,
For they succeed on you.—To you, lord.
governor,

Remains the censure of this hellish villain; The time, the place, the torture,—O, enforce Myself will straight aboard; and to the state This heavy act with heavy heart relate.

Exe unt.

Cas. So hales, and lolls, and weeps upon me: so hales, and pulls me:—ha, ha, hal

Oth. [Aside.] Now he tells how she plucked him to my chamber. O, I see that nose of yours, hut not that dog I shall throw it to.

Cas. Well, I must leave her company. lago. Before mel look where she comes. Cos. 'Tis such another fitchewl marry, a perfumed one.

Enter BIANCA.

What do you mean by this haunting of me? Bion. Let the devil and his dam baunt you! What did you mean hy that same handkerchief you gave me even now? I was a fine fool to I must take out the work?-A likely piece of work that you should find it in your chamber, and not know who left it there! This is some minx's token, and I must take out the work? There,-give it your hohhy-horse: wheresoever you had it, I'll take out no work how now!

Cas. How now, my sweet Biancal how now! Oth. [Aside.] By heaven, that should he my logo. After her, after her. Cos. Faith, I must; she'll rail in the street

Iago. Will you sup there?
Cas. Faith, I intend so.
Iago. Well. I may chance to see you; for I would very fain speak with you.

Cas. Prythee, come; will you?

(Exit CASSIO. lago. Go to; say no more. Oth. [Coming forward] How shall I murder him, Iago? [vice? Iago. Did you perceive how he laughed at his Oth. O Iago!

lago. And did you see the handkerchief?

Oth. Was that mine?

logo. Yours, hy this hand: and to see how he prizes the foolish woman your wife! she gave it him, and he bath given it his whore.

Oth. I would have him nine years a-killing. -A fine woman! a fair woman! a sweet woman!

lago. Nay, you must forget that.

Oth. Ay, let her rot, and perish, and be damned to-night; for she shall not live: no, my heart is turned to stone; I strike it, and it hurts my hand.-O, the world hath not a sweeter creature: she might lie by an emperor's side, and command him tasks.

lago. Nay, that's not your way.

Oth. Hang her! I do hut say what she is:so delicate with her needle!—an admirable musician! O, she will sing the savageness out of a hear!—Of so high and plenteous wit and invention!-

lago. She's the worse for all this.

Oth. O, a thousand thousand times:—and then of so gentle a condition!

Iago. Ay, too gentle.

Oth. Nay, that's certain:—but yet the pity of it. Iago! O Iago, the pity of it, Iago!

lago. If you are so fond over her iniquity, give her patent to offend; for, if it touch not you, it comes near nobody.

Oth. I will chop her into messes .- Cuckold me!

Iago. O, 'tis foul in her. Oth. With mine officerl lago. That's fouler.

Oth. Get me some poison, Iago; this night. I'll not expostulate with her, lest her hody and heauty unprovide my mind again:-this night, Iago.

lago. Do it not with poison; strangle her in her bed, even the hed she hath contaminated. Oth. Good, good: the justice of it pleases:

lago. And for Cassio, -let me be his undertaker: you shall bear more by midnight.

Oth. Excellent good. [A trumpet within.] What trumpet is that same? lago. Something from Venice, sure. 'Tis Lodovico

Come from the duke: and, see, your wife is with him.

Enter Lodovico, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Lod. Save yon, worthy general!

Oth. With all my heart, sir. Oth. Lod. The duke and senators of Venice greet Gives him a packet.

Oth. I kiss the instrument of their pleasures. Opens the packet and reads.

Des. And what's the news, good cousin Lodovico?

lago. I am very glad to see you, signior;

Welcome to Cyprus. (Cassio? Lod. I thank you. How does Lieutenant lago. Lives, sir. my lord Des. Cousin, there's fall'n between him and

An unkind hreach: hut you shall make all well. Oth. Are you sure of that?

Des. My lord? Oth. [Reads.] This fail you not to do as you Lod. He did not call; he's husy in the paper. Is there division 'twixt my lord and Cassio?

Des. A most unhappy one: I would do much To atone them, for the love I hear to Cassio.

Oth. Fire and hrimstone! Des. My lord?

Are you wise? Oth. Des. What, is he angry?

May he the letter mov'd him; Lod. For, as I think, they do command him home, Deputing Cassio in his government.

Des. Trust me, I am glad on't.

Indeed! Oth. My lord? Des.

Oth. I am glad to see you mad.

Why, sweet Othelio,-Des. Striking her. Oth. Devil! I have not deservid this.

Des. Lod. My lord, this would not he heliev'd in Venice, Though I should swear I saw't: 'tis very much:

Make her amends; she weeps. O devil, devill Oth.

If that the earth could teem with woman's tears, Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile .-Out of my sight!

Des. I will not stay to offend you. Lod. Truly, an ohedient lady;—

I do heseech your lordship, call her hack.

TO THE

RIGHT HONOURABLE,

I know not how I shall offend in dedicating my unpolished lines to your lordship, nor how the world will eensure me for choosing so strong a prop to support so weak a burthen: only if your honour seem but pleased, I account myself highly praised, and vow to take advantage of all idle hours till I have honoured you with some graver labour. But if the first heir of my invention prove deformed, I shall be sorry it had so noble a godfather, and never after ear so barren a land, for fear it yield me still so bad a harvest. I leave it to your honourable survey, and your honour to your heart's content; which I wish may always answer your own wish, and the world's bopeful expectation.

Your Honour's in all duty,
WILLIAM SHARESPEARE.

Even as the sun with purple-colour'd face Had ta'en his last leave of the weeping morn, Rose-cheek'd Adonis hied him to the chase; Hunting be lov'd, but love he laugb'd to scorn; Sick-thoughted Venus makes amain unto him, And like a bold-fac'd suitor 'gins to woo him.

'Thrice fairer than myself,' thus she began,
'The field's chief flower, sweet above compare,
Stain to all nympbs, more lovely than a man,
More white and red than doves or roses are:
Nature that made thee, with herself at strife,
Saith that the world hath ending with thy life.

Vouchsafe, thou wonder, to alight thy steed, And rein his proud head to the saddle-bow; If thou wilt deign this favour, for thy meed A thousand honey-necrets shalt thou know:
Here come and sit, where never serpent hisses,
And being set I'll smother thee with kisses;

"And yet not cloy thy lips with loath'd satiety, But rather famish them amid their plenty, Making them red and pale with fresh varnety, Ten hisses short as ooe, one long as twenty: A summer's day will seem an hour but short. Being wasted in such time-beguiling sport."

With this she seizeth on his sweating palm,
The precedent of pith and livelthood,
And, trembling in ber passion, calls it balm,
Earth's sovereign salve to do a goddess good:
Being so enrag'd, desire doth lend her force,
Courageously to pluck him from his horse.

Oth. Mistressi Des. My lord? Oth. What would you with her, sir? Lod. Who, I my lord? Oth. Ay; you did wish that I would make her turn: Sir, she can turn, and turn, and yet go on, And turn again; and she can weep, sir, weep; And she's ohedient, as you say, -- ohedient, -Very ohedient .-- Proceed you in your tears. Concerning this, sir, -O well-painted passion! I am commanded home. -- Get you away: I'll send for you anon .- Sir, I ohey the mandate,_ And will return to Venice.-Hence, avauntl (Exit DESDEMONA. Am I the motive of these tears, my lord? If haply you my father do suspect An instrument of this your calling back, [him,

Lay not your hlame on me: if you have lost-

Why, I have lost him too. Had it pleas'd heaven To try me with affliction; had they rain'd All kinds of sores and shames on my bare head; Steep'd me in poverty to the very lips; Given to captivity me and my utmost hopes; I should have found in some place of my soul A drop of patience: but, alas, to make me The fixed figure of the time, for scorn To point his slow and moving finger at!-Yet could I bear that too; well, very well: But there, where I have garner'd up my heart;

Where either I must live, or bear no life,-The fountain from the which my current runs, Or else dries up; to be oiscarded thence!

Or keep it as a cistern for foul toads there, Over one arm the lusty courser's rein, Under her other was the tender boy, Who blush'd and poured in a full disdain, With leaden appetite, unapt to toy; She red and hot as coals of glowing fire, He red for shame, hut frosty in desire.

The studded bridle on a ragged bough Nimhly ahe fastens; (O how quick is love!) The steed is stalled up, and even now To tie the rider she hegins to prove: Backward she push'd him, as she would be thrust, And govern'd him in strength, though not in lust.

So soon was she along, as he was down, Each leaning on their elhows and their hips: Now doth she stroke his cheek, now doth he frown,

And 'gins to chide, but soon she stops his lips;

And kissing speaks, with lustful language hroken,

'If thou wilt chide, thy lips shall never open.'

He burns with bashful shame; she with her tears Doth quench the maiden burning of his cheeks: Then with her windy sighs, and golden hairs, To fan and hlow them dry again she seeks:

He saith she is immodest, hlames her 'miss; What follows more she murders with a kiss.

Even as an empty eagle, sharp hy fast, Tires with her beak on feathers, flesh, and bone Shaking her wings, devouring all in haste, Till either gorge be stuff'd, or prey be gone; Even so she kiss'd his brow, his cheek, his chin, And where she ends she doth anew begin.

Forc'd to content, but never to obey,
Panting he lies, and hreatheth in her face;
She feedeth on the steam, as on a prey,
And calls it heavenly moisture, air of grace,
Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of flowers,
So they were dew'd with such distilling

Look how a bird lies tangled in a net, So fastened in her arms Adonis lies; Pure shame and aw'd resistance made him fret, Which bred more beauty in his angry eyes; Rain added to a river that is rank.

Rain added to a river that is rank, Perforce will force it overflow the bank.

Still she entreats, and prettily entreats,
For to a pretty ear she tunes her tale;
Still is he sullen, still he low'rs and frets,
'Twixt crimson shame, and anger ashy pale;
Being red, she loves him best; and being white,
Her best is better'd with a more delight.

Look how he can, she cannot choose but love; And by her fair immortal hand she swears From his soft bosom never to remove, Till he take truce with her contending tears. Which long have rain'd, making her cheeks all wet;

And one sweet kiss shall pay this countless

Upon this promise did he raise his chin, Like a dive-dapper peering through a wave, Who, heing look'd on, ducka as quickly in; So offers he to give what she did crave; But when her lips were ready for his pay, He winks, and turns his lips another way.

Never did passenger in summer'a heat [turn: 5] More thirst for drink, than she for this good of Her help she sees, hut help she cannot get; She bathes in water, yet her fire must burn:

She bathes in water, yet her fire must burn:
'O, pity,' 'gan she cry, 'flint-hearted hoy!
'Tis but a kiss I heg; why art thou coy?

'I have been woo'd, as I entreat thee now,
Even by the stern and direful god of war,
Whose sinewy neck in hattle ne'er did bow,
Who conquers where he comes, in every jar,
Yet hath he heen my captive and my slave,
And begg'd for that which thou unask'd shalt have.

Over my altars hath he hung his lance, His hatter'd shield, his uncontrolled crest, And for my sake hath learn'd to sport and dance, To toy, to wanton, dally, smile, and jest; Scorning his churlish drum and ensign red, Making my arms his field, his tent my bed.

'Thus he that overrul'd I oversway'd, Leading him prisoner in a red-rose chain: Strong-temper'd steel his stronger strength' ohey'd,

Yet was he servile to my coy disdain.

O, be not proud, nor brag not of thy might!

For mastering her that foil'd the god of fight!

Touch but my lips with those fair lips of thine, (Though mine be not so fair, yet are they red.) The kiss shall he thine own as well as mine:—What seest thou in the ground? hold up thy head:

Look in mine eyeballs, there thy beauty lies:" Then why not lips on lips, since eyes in eyes?"

Art thou asham'd to kiss? then wink again, And I will wink, so shall the day seem night: Love keeps his revels where there are but twain; Be hold to play, our sport is not in sight:

These hlue-vein'd violets whereon we lean Never can blah, nor know not what we mean.

'The tender spring upon thy tempting lip Shows thee unripe; yet mayst thou well be tasted;

Make use of time, let not advantage slip; Beauty within itself should not be wasted: Fairflowers that are not gather d in their prime Rot and consume themselves in little time.

Were I hard-favour'd, foul, or wrinkled-old, Ill-nurtur'd, crooked, churlish, harsh in voice, O'er-worn, despised, rhenmatic, and cold, Thick-sighted, harren, lean, and lacking juice,

Then mightst thou pause, for then I were not for thee;

But having no defects, why dost abhor me?

'Thou canst not see one wrinkle in my brow; Mine eyes are grey, and bright, and quick in turning; Patience, thou young and rose-lipp'd cheruhin,- Ay, there, look grim as hell!

Des. I hope my noble lord esteems me honest.

Oth: O, ay; as summer flies are in the shamhles, That ouicken even with blowing. O thou weed, Who art so lovely fair, and smell'st so sweet. That the sense aches at thee, -would thou had'st ne'er heen born! Des. Alas, what ignorant sin have I committed?

Oth. Was this fair paper, this most goodly hook,

Made to write whore upon? What committed! Committed!—O thou public commoner! I should make very forges of my cheeks, That would to cinders hurn up modesty, Did I hut speak thy deeds.—What committed! Heaven stops the nose at it, and the moon winks: The hawdy wind, that kisses all it meets, Is hush'd within the hollow mine of earth. And will not hear it. - What committed! -Impudent strumpet!

By heaven, you do me wrong. Des. Oth. Are not you a strumpet?

Des. No, as I am a Christian: If to preserve this vessel for my lord From any other foul unlawful touch

Be not to he a strumpet, I am none. . Oth What, not a whore?

Des. No, as I shall he sav'd.

o Oth. Is't possible? Des. O. heaven forgive us!

' Oth. I cry you mercy, then: I took you for that cunning whore of Venice That married with Othello.—You, mistress, That have the office opposite to Saint Peter, And keep the gate of hell!

logo. You are a fool; go to. Alas, Iago, Des. What shall I do to win my lord again?

Good friend, go to him; for, by this light of heaven,

I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel:-If e'er my will did trespass 'gainst his love, Either in discourse of thought or actual deed; Or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense, Delighted them in any other form; And ever will, - though he do shake me off

My beauty as the spring doth yearly grow, My flesh is soft and plump, my marrow hurning; My smooth moist hand, were it with thy hand felt.

Would in thy palm dissolve, or seem to melt.

Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear, Or, like a fairy, trip upon the green, Or, like a nymph, with long dishevell'd hair, Dance on the sands, and yet no footing seen:

Love is a spirit all compact of fire,

Not gross to sink, but light, and will asoire.

'Witness this primrose bank whereon I lie!
These forceless flowers like sturdy trees support me;

Two strengthless doves will draw me through the sky,

From morn to night, even where I list to sport me:

Is love so light, sweet hoy, and may it be That thou shouldst think it heavy unto thee?

'Is thine own heart to thine own face affected? Can thy right hand seize love upon thy left? Then woo thyself, he of thyself rejected, Steal thine own freedom, and complain on theft. Narcissus so himself himself forsook, And died to kiss his shadow in the brook.

'Torches are made to light, jewels to wear, Dainties to taste, fresh beauty for the use, Herbs for their smell, and sappy plants to bear; Things growing to themselves are growth's abuse:

Seeds spring from seeds, and beauty breedeth beauty,

Thou wast begot,—to get it is thy duty.

'Upon the earth's increase why shouldst thou feed,
Unless the earth with thy increase be fed?
By law of Nature thou art bound to breed,
That thine may live, when thou thyself art dead;
And so in spite of death thou dost survive,

By this the love-sick queen began to sweat, For, where they lay, the shadow had forsook them.

In that thy likeness still is left alive.

And Titan, 'tired in the mid-day heat,
With burning eye did hotly overlook them;
Wishing Adonis had his team to guide,
So he were like him, and by Venus' side.

And now Adonis, with a lazy spright, And with a heavy, dark, disliking eye, His lowering brows o'erwhelming his fair sight, Like misty vapours when they blot the sky,

Souring his cheeks, cries, 'Fie, no more of love!

The sun doth burn my face; I must remove.'

'Ah me,' quoth Venus, 'young, and so unkind! What bare excuses mak'st thou to begone! I'll sigh celestial breath, whose gentle wind Shall cool the heat of this descending sun; I'll make a shadow for thee of my hairs; If they burn too, I'll quench them with my tears.

'The sun that shines from heaven shines but warm.

And lo, I lie between that sun and thee:
The heat I have from hence doth little harm,
Thine eye darts forth the fire that hurneth me:
And were I not immortal, life were done,
Between this heavenly and earthly sun.

'Art thou obdurate, flinty, hard as steel, Nay, more than flint, for stone at rain relenteth? Art thou a woman's son, and canst not feel What 'tis to love? how want of love tormenteth? O had thy mother borne so hard a mind,

O had thy mother borne so hard a mind, She had not brought forth thee, but died unkind.

'What am I, that thou shouldst contemn me this? Or what great danger dwells upon my suit? What were thy lips the worse for one poor kiss; Speak, fair; but speak fair words, or else be muto: Give me one kiss, I'll give it thee again, And one for interest, if thou wilt have twain.

'Fie, lifeless picture, cold and senseless stone, Well-painted idol, image dull and dead, Statue contenting but the eye alone, Thing like a man, but of no woman bred; Thou art no man, though of a man's complexion,

For men will kiss even by their own direction.'

This said, impatience chokes her pleading

tongue,
And swelling passion doth provoke a pause;
Red cheeks and fiery eyes blaze forth her wrong;
Being judge in love, she cannot right her cause:
And now she weeps, and now she fain would
speak,

And now her sobs do her intendments break.

Sometimes she shakes her head, and then his hand,

Now gazeth she on him, now on the ground; Sometimes her arms infold him like a band; She would, he will not in her arms be bound; Andwhen from thence he struggles to be gone, She locks her lily fingers one in one.

'Fondling,' she saith, 'since I have hemm'd thee here,

Within the circuit of this ivory pale,
I'll be a park, and thou shalt be my deer;
Feed where thou wilt, on mountain or in dale:
Graze on my lips; and if those hills be dry,
Stray lower, where the pleasant fountains lie.

'Within this limit is relief enough, Sweet bottom-grass, and high delightful plain, Round rising hillocks, brakes obscure and rough, To shelter thee from tempest and from rain; Then be my deer, since I am such a park; No dog shall rouse thee, tho' a thousand bark.'

At this Adonis smiles as in disdain,
That in each cheek appears a pretty dimple:
Love made those hollows, if himself were slain,,
He might be buried in a tomb so simple;
Foreknowing well if there he came to lie,
Why there Love liv'd an there he could notdie.

ACT IV.

To beggarly divorcement,—love him dearly, Comfort forswear mel Unkindness may do much;

And his unkindness may defeat my life, But never taint my love. I cannot say whore,-It does abhor me now I speak the word; To do the act that might the addition earn, Not the world's mass of vanity could make me.

lago. I pray you, be content; 'tis but his humour:

The business of the state does him offence, And he does chide with you.

If 'twere no other,- lago. It is but so, I warrant.

Enter Roderigo.

How now, Roderigo!

Rod. I do not find that thou dealest justly with me.

Iago. What in the contrary?
Rod. Every day thou daffest me with some device, Iago; and rather, as it seems to me now, keepest from me all conveniency than suppliest me with the least advantage of hope. I will, indeed, no longer endure it; nor am I yet persuaded to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suffered.

Iago. Will you hear me, Roderigo?
Rod. Faith, I have heard too much; for your words and performances are no kin together.

Ingo. You change me most unjustly.

Rod. With naught but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means. The jewels you have had from me to deliver to Desdemona would half have corrupted a votarist: you have told - me she hath received them, and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquaintance; but I find none.

Iago. Well; go to; very well. Rod. Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man; nor 'tis not very well: nay, I think it is scurvy, and begin to find myself fobbed in it.

lago. Very well.
Rod. I tell you 'tis not very well. make myself known to Desdemona: if she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit, and repent my unlawful solicitation; if not, assure yourself I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now.

Rod. Ay, and said nothing but what I protest intendment of doing.

lago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee; and even from this instant do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Roderigo: thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but yet, I protest, I have dealt most directly in thy affair.

Rod. It hath not appeared.

Iago. I grant, indeed, it hath not appeared; and your suspicion is not without wit and judg-But, Roderigo, if thou hast that in thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever,-I mean purpose, courage, and valour, this night show it: if thou the next night following enjoy not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery, and devise engines for my life.

Rod. Well, what is it? is it within reason and compass?

Iago. Sir, there is a special commission come from Venice to depute Cassio in Othello's place. Rod. Is that true? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.

lago. O, no; he goes into Mauritania, and takes away with him the fair Desdemona. unless his ahode be lingered here by some accident: wherein none can be so determinate as the removing of Cassio.

Rod. How do you mean removing of him?
Iago. Why, hy making him uncapable of Othello's place,—knocking out his brains.

Rod. And that you would have me to do? Iago. Ay, if you dare do yourself a profit and a right. He sups to-night with a harlotry, and thither will I go to him:-he knows not yet of his honourable fortune. If you will watch his going thence,—which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one,—you may take him at your pleasure: I will he near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me; I will show you such a necessity in his death that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high suppertime, and the night grows to waste: about it.

Rod. I will hear further reason for this. lago. And you shall be satisfied.

Scene III .-- Cyprus. Another Room in the Castle.

Enter Othello, Lodovico, Desdemona, EMILIA, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no further.

Oth. O, pardon me; 'twill do me good to Lod. Madam, good-night; I humbly thank your ladyship.

Des. Your honour is most welcome. Will you walk, sir?-Oth.

-Desdemona,-Des. My lord?

Oth. Get you to bed on the instant; I will be returned forthwith: dismiss your attendant there: look't be done.

Des. I will, my lord.

Exeunt OTH., LOD., and Attendants. Emil. How goes it now? he looks gentler than he did.

Des. He says he will return incontinent: He hath commanded me to go to bed, And bade me to dismiss you.

Dismiss me! Emil.Des. It was his bidding; therefore, good

We must not now displease him. Emil. I would you had never seen him!

Des. So would not I: my love doth so ap-(frowns. prove him,

That even his stubbornness, his cheeks, his Pr'ythee, unpin me, have grace and favour in on the bed. them.

Emil. I have laid those sheets you hade me

These lovely caves, these round enchanting pits,

Open'd their mouths to swallow Venus' liking: Being mad hefore, how doth she now for wits? Struck dead at first, what needs a second striking?

Poor queen of love, in thine own law forlorn, To love a cheek that smiles at thee in scorn!

Now which way shall she turn? what shall she say?

Her words are done, her woes the more increas-

The time is spent, her object will away, And from her twining arms doth urge releasing: 'Pity'--she cries,--'some favour--some re---morse--'

Away he springs, and hasteth to his house.

But lo, from forth a copse that neighbours hy, A hreeding jennet, lusty, young, and proud, Adonis' trampling courser doth espy, And forth she rushes, snorts, and neighs aloud:

The strong-neck'd steed, being tied unto a tree,

Breaketh his rein, and to her straight goes he.

Imperiously he leaps, he neighs, he bounds, And now his woven girth he hreaks asunder; The bearing earth with his hard hoof he wounds, Whose hollow womb resounds like heaven's thunder:

The iron bit he crushes 'tween his teeth, Controlling what he was controlled with.

His ears up-prick'd; his braided hanging mane Upon his compass'd crest now stand on end; His nostrils drink the air, and forth again, As from a furnace, vapours doth he send: His eye, which scornfully glisters like fire, Shows his hot courage and his high desire.

Sometimes he trots, as if he told the steps, With gentle majesty, and modest pride; Anon he rears upright, curvets, and leaps, As who should say, lo! thus my strength is tried:

And this I do to captivate the eye - Of the fair breeder that is standing by.

What recketh he his rider's angry stir, His flattering 'holla,' or his 'Stand, I say'? What cares he now for curh, or pricking spur? For rich caparisons, or trapping gay?

He sees his love, and nothing else he sees, Nor nothing else with his proud sight agrees.

Look, when a painter would surpass the life, In limning out a well-proportion'd steed, His art with nature's workmanship at strife, As if the dead the living should exceed; So did this horse excel a common one,

So did this horse excel a common one, In shape, in courage, colour, pace, and bone.

Round-hoof'd, short-jointed, fetlocks shag and long, [wide, Broad hreast, full eye, small head, and nostril High crest, short ears, straight legs, and passing strong,

Thin mane, thick tail, broad buttock, tender hide:

Look what a horse should have, he did not lack,

Save a proud rider on so proud a back.

Sometime ne scuds far off, and there he stares; Anon he starts at stirring of a feather; To hid the wind a hase he now prepares, And whe'r he run or fly, they knew not whether; For thro' his mane and tail the high wind sings,

Fanning the hairs, who wave like featner'd wings.

He looks upon his love and neighs unto her; She answers him as if she knew his mind: Being proud, as females are, to see him woo her, She puts on outward strangeness, seem unkind; Spurns at his love, and scorns the heat he feels, Beating his kind emhracements with her heels.

Then, like a melancholy malecontent,
He vails his tail, that, like a falling plume,
Cool-shadow to his melting buttock lent;
He stamps, and bites the poor flies in his fume:
His love, perceiving how he is enrag'd,

Grew kinder, and his fury was assuag'd.

His testy master goeth about to take him; When lo, the unback'd breeder, full of fear, Jealous of catching, swiftly doth forsake him, With her the horse, and left Adonis there: As they were mad unto the wood they hie them, Out-stripping crows that strive to over-fly them.

All swoln with chasing, down Adonis sits, , , Banning his boisterous and unruly beast; And now the happy season once more fits, That love-sick Love by pleading may he blest; For lovers say the heart hath treble wrong, When it is barr'd the aidance of the tongue.

An oven that is stopp'd, or river stay'd, Burneth more hotly, swelleth with more rage: So of concealed sorrow may be said; Free vent of words love's fire doth assuage;

But when the heart's attorney once is mute, The client breaks, as desperate in his suit.

He sees her coming, and hegins to glow, Even as a dying coal revives with wind, And with his bonnet hides his angry brow; Looks on the dull earth with disturbed mind, Taking no notice that she is so nigh,

For all askaunce he holds her in his eye.

O what a sight it was, wistly to view
How she came stealing to the wayward boyl
To note the fighting conflict of her hue!
How white and red each other did destroy!
But now her cheek was pale, and hy and hy
It flash'd forth fire, as lightning from the sky.

Now was she just before him as he sat, And like a lowly lover down she kneels; With one fair hand she heaveth up his hat, Her other tender hand his fair cheek feels: His tenderer cheek receives her soft hand's

Sir To. There's no remedy, sir; he will fight with you for his oath sake: marry, he hath better bethought nim of his quarrel, and he finds that now scarce to be worth talking of: therefore draw, for the supportance of his vow; he protests he will not hurt you.

Vio. Pray God defend me! A little thing would make me tell them how much I lack of a man.

[Aside.

Fab. Give ground if you see him furious. Sir To. Come, Sir Andrew, there's no remedy; the gentleman will, for his honour's sake, have one bout with you: he cannot by the duello avoid it; but he has promised me, as he is a gentleman and a soldier, he will not hurt

you. Come on: to 't.
Sir And. Pray God, he keep his oath.

[Draws.

Enter ANTONIO.

Vio. I do assure you 'tis against my will.
[Draws.
Ant. Put up your sword:—If this young gentleman Have done offence, I take the fault on me;

If you offend him I for him defy you.

[Drawing. Sir To. You, sir? why, what are you?

Ant. One, sir, that for his love dares yet do more Than you have heard him brag to you he will. Sir To. Nay, if you be an undertaker I am for you. [Draws.

Enter two Officers.

Fab. O good Sir Toby, hold; here come the officers.

Sir To. I'll be with you anon.

Vio. Pray, sir, put up your sword, if you please. [To Sir Andrew.

Sir And. Marry, will I, sir; and, for that I promised you, I'll be as good as my word. He will bear you easily and reins well.

will bear you easily and reins well.

1 Off. This is the man; do thy office.

2 Off. Antonio, I arrest thee at the suit
Of Count Orsino.

Ant. You do mistake me, sir.

1 Off. No, sir, no jot; I know your favour well [head.—

Though now you have no sea-cap on your Take him away; he knows I know him well.

Ant. I must obey.—This comes from seeking yon;

But there's no remedy; I shall answer it.
What will you do? Now my necessity [me Makes me to ask you for my purse. It grieves Much more for what I cannot do for you Sir And. An' I fan what befalls myself. You stand amazed; ut be of comfort.

Sir And. 'Slid Sir To. Do, of draw thy sword. Sir And. An' Fab. Come, le ut be of comfort.

2 Off. Come, sir, away. [money. Ant. I must entreat of you some of that Vio. What money, sir?

For the fair kindness you have showed me here, And part being prompted by your present trouble,

Out of my lean and low ability [much;
I'll lend you something; my having is not
I'll make division of my present with you:
Hold, there is half my coffer.

Ant. Will you deny me now? Is 't possible that my deserts to you Can lack persuasion? Do not tempt my misery Lest that it make me so unsound a man As to upbraid you with those kindnesses That I have done for you.

Vio.

I know of none,

Nor know I you by voice or any feature:

I hate ingratitude more in a man

Than lying, vainness, babbling, drunkenness,

Or any taint of vice whose strong corruption

Inhabits our frail blood.

Ant.

O heavens themselves!

2 Off. Come, sir, I pray you go.

Ani. Let me speak a little. This youth that you see here
I snatched one half out of the jaws of death,
Relieved him with such sanctity of love,—
And to his image, which methought did promise
Most venerable worth, did I devotion.

I Off. What's that to us? The time goes by; away.

Ant. But O how vile an idol proves this god!
Thou hast, Sebastian, done good feature shame.
In nature there's no blemish but the mind;
None can be call'd deform'd but the unkind:
Virtue is beauty; but the beauteous-evil
Are empty trunks o'erflourish'd by the devil.

ar off. The man grows mad; away with him.

Come, come, sir.

Ant. Lead me on.

[Exeunt Officers with Antonio.

Vio. Methinks his words do from such passion fly

That he believes himself; so do not I.
Prove true, imagination; O prove true,
That I, dear brother, be now ta'en for you!
Sir To. Come hither, knight; come hither, Fabian; we'll whisper o'er a couple or two of most sage saws.

Vio. He named Sebastian; I my brother know Yet living in my glass; even such and so In favour was my brother; and he went Still in this fashion, colour, ornament, For him I imitate. O, if it prove, Tempests are kind, and salt waves fresh in love!

Sir To. A very dishonest paltry boy, and more a coward than a hare: his dishonesty appears in leaving his friend here in necessity, and denying him; and for his cowardship, ask Fabian.

Fab. A coward, a most devout coward, religious in it. [him.

Sir And. 'Slid, I'll after him again and beat Sir To. Do, cuff him soundly, but never Sir And. An' I do not,— [Exit. Fab. Come, let's see the event.

Sir To. I dare lay any money 'twill be nothing yet.

ACT IV.

Scene I.—The Street before Olivia's House.

Enter SEBASTIAN and CLOWN.

Clo. Will.you make me believe that I am not sent for you?

Seb. Go to, go to, thou art a foolish fellow;
Let me be clear of thee.

O what a war of looks was then between them! Her eyes, petitioners, to his eyes suing: His eyes saw her eyes as they had not seen them; Her eyes woo'd still, his eyes disdain'd the wooing:

And all this dumb play bad his acts made plain With tears, which, chorus-like, her eyes did rain.

Full gently now she takes him by the hand, A lily prison'd in a gaol of snow, Or ivory in an alabaster band; So white a friend engirts so white a foe:

This beauteous combat, wilful and unwilling, Show'd like two silver doves that sit a-billing.

Once more the engine of her thoughts began: O fairest mover on this mortal round, Would thou wert as I am, and I a man, My heart all whole as thine, thy heart my wound; For one sweet look thy help I would assure thee,

Though nothing but my body's bane would cure thee.'

'Give me my hand,' saith he, 'why dost thou feel it?'

'Give me my heart,' saith she, 'and thou shalt have it:

O give it me lest thy hard heart do steel it, And being steel'd, soft sighs can never grave it; Then love's deep groans I never shall regard, Because Adonis' heart hath made mine bard.

For shame,' he cries, 'let go, and let me go; My day's delight is past, my horse is gone, And 't is your fault I am bereft him so; I pray you hence, and leave me here alone:

For all my mind, my thought, my busy care, Is how to get my palirey from the mare.'

Thus she replies: 'Thy palfrey, as he should, Welcomes the warm approach of sweet desire. Affection is a coal that must be cool'd; Else, suffer'd, it will set the heart on fire:
The sea hath bounds, but deep desire hath

Therefore no marvel though thy horse be gone.

'How like a jade he stood, tied to the tree, Servilely master'd with a leathern rein! But when he saw his love, his youth's fair fee, He held such petty bondage in disdain; Throwing the base thong from his bending crest, Enfranchising his mouth, his back, his breast.

'Who sees his true love in her naked bed, Teaching the sheets a whiter hue than white, But, when his glutton eye so full hath fed, His other agents aim at like delight?

Who is so faint that dare not be so bold To touch the fire, the weather being cold?

'Let me excuse thy courser, gentle boy;
And learn of him, I heartily beseech thee,
To take advantage on presented joy; [thee.
Though I were dumb, yet his proceedings teach
O learn to love; the lesson is but place
And, once made perfect, never lost again.'

'I know not love,' quoth he, 'nor will not know it,

Unless it be a boar, and then I chase it:
'Tis much to borrow, and I will not owe it;
My love to love is love but to disgrace it;
For I have heard it is a life in death,
That laughs, and weeps, and all but with a breath.

'Who wears a garment shapeless and unfinish'd?
Who plucks the bud before one leaf put forth?
If springing things be any jot diminish'd,
They wither in their prime, prove nothing worth:

The cold that's back'd and burthen'd being young

Loseth his pride, and never waxeth strong.

'You hurt my hand with wringing; let us part, And leave this idle theme, this bootless chat: Remove your siege from my unyielding heart; To love's alarm it will not ope the gate.

Dismiss your vows, your feigned tears, your flattery:

For where a heart is hard, they make no battery.'

'What! canst thou talk,' quoth she, 'bast thon a tongue?

O would thou badst not, or I had no hearing! Thy mermaid's voice hath done me double wrong;

I had my load before, now press'd with bearing: Melodious discord, heavenly tune harsh sounding, [wounding, Ear's deep-sweet music, and heart's deep-sore

'Had I no eyes, but ears, my ears would love That inward beauty and invisible: Or, were I deaf, thy outward parts would move Each part in me that were but sensible: Though neither eyes nor ears, to hear nor see,

Yet should I be in love, by touching thee.

'Say that the sense of feeling were bereft me, And that I could not see, nor hear, nor touch, And nothing but the very smell were left me, Yet would my love to thee be still as much;
For from the still'tory of thy face excelling Comes breath perfum'd, that breedeth love by smelling.

'But O, what banquet wert thou to the taste, Being nurse and feeder of the other four! Would they not wisb the feast might ever last, And bid Suspicion double-lock the door? Lest Jealousy, that sour unwelcome guest, Sbould, by his stealing in, disturb the feast'

Once more the ruby-colonr'd portal open'd, Which to his speech did honey passage yield; Like a red morn, that ever yet betoken'd Wreck to the seamen, tempest to the field, Sorrow to shepherds, woe unto the birds, Gusts and foul flaws to herdmen and to herds.

This ill presage advisedly she marketh: Even as the wind is hush'd before it raineth, Or as the wolf doth grin before it barketh, Or as the berry breaks before it staineth, or like the deadly bullet of a gun, His meaning struck her ere his words begun.

He stories to her ears her hushand's fame, Won in the fields of fruitful Italy; And decks with praises Collatine's high name. Made glorious hy his manly chivalry With hruised arms and wreaths of victory; Her joy with heav'd-up hand she doth express. And, wordless, so greets heaven for his success.

Far from the purpose of his coming thither He makes excuses for his heing there. No cloudy show of stormy hlustering weather Doth yet in his fair welkin once appear; Till sable Night, mother of Dread and Fear, Upon the world dim darkness doth display, And in her vaulty prison stows the day.

For then is Tarquin brought unto his hed, Intending weariness with heavy spright; For, after supper, long he questioned With modest Lucrece, and wore out the night: Now leaden slumber with life's strength doth fight;

And every one to rest themselves hetake, Save thieves, and cares, and troubled minds, that wake.

As one of which hoth Tarquin lie revolving The sundry dangers of his will's obtaining; Yet ever to obtain his will resolving, [staining: Though weak-built hopes persuade him to ab-Despair to gain doth traffic oft for gaining;

And when great treasure is the meed propos'd, Though death be adjunct, there's no death suppos'd.

Those that much covet are with gain so fond That what they have not, that which they possess They scatter and unloose it from their bond, And so, by hoping more, they have but less; Or, gaining more, the profit of excess

Is but to surfeit, and such griefs sustain, That they prove bankrupt in this poor-rich gain.

The aim of all is but to nurse the life With honour, wealth, and ease, in waning age; And in this aim there is such thwarting strife, That one for all, or all for one we gage; As life for honour in fell hattles' rage;

Honour for wealth; and oft that wealth doth The death of all, and all together lost.

So that in vent'ring ill we leave to he The things we are, for that which we expect; And this amhitious foul infirmity, In having much, torments us with defect Of that we have: so then we do neglect

The thing we have, and, all for want of wit, Make something nothing, by augmenting it.

Such hazard now must doting Tarquin make, Pawning his honour to ohtain his lust; And for himself himself he must forsake: Then where is truth if there he no self-trust? When shall we think to find a stranger just,

When he himself himself confounds, hetrays To slanderous tongues, and wretched hateful days?

Now stole upon the time the dead of night, When heavy sleep had clos'd up mortal eyes;

No comfortable star did lend his light, [cries; No noise hut owls' and wolves' death-boding Now serves the season that they may surprise The silly lambs; pure thoughts are dead and still, While lust and murder wake to stain and kill.

And now this lustful lord leap'd from his hed, Throwing his mantle rudely o'er his arm; Is madly toss'd between desire and dread; Th' one sweetly flatters, th' other fearcth harm; But honest Fear, hewitch'd with lust's foul charm,

Doth too too oft hetake him to retire, Beaten away hy brain-sick rude Desire.

His falchion on a flint he softly smiteth, That from the cold stone sparks of fire do fly, Whereat a waxen torch forthwith he lighteth, Which must be lode-star to his lustful eye; And to the flame thus speaks advisedly:

'As from this cold flint I enforc'd this fire. So Lucrece must I force to my desire.'

Here pale with fear he doth premeditate The dangers of his loathsome enterprise, And in his inward mind he doth debate What following sorrow may on this arise; Then looking scornfully, he doth despise His naked armour of still-slaughter'd lust,

And justly thus controls his thoughts unjust.

Fair torch, hurn out thy light, and lend it not To darken her whose light excelleth thine! And die, unhallow'd thoughts, hefore you blot With your uncleanness that which is divine! Offer pure incense to so pure a shrine:

Let fair humanity abhor the deed That spots and stains love's modest snow-white

O shame to knighthood and to shining arms! O foul dishonour to my household's grave! O impious act, including all foul harms! A martial man to be soft fancy's slave; True valour still a true respect should have;

Then my digression is so vile, so hase, That it will live engraven in my face.

Yea, though I die, the scandal will survive, And be an eyesore in my golden coat; Some loathsome dash the herald will contrive, To cipher me how fondly I did dote; That my posterity, sham'd with the note, Shall curse my hones, and hold it for no sin To wish that I their father had not heen.

What win I if I gain the thing I seek? A dream, a hreath, a froth of fleeting joy: Who huys a minute's mirth to wail a week? Or sells eternity to get a toy? For one sweet grape who will the vine destroy?

Or what fond beggar, but to touch the crown, Would with the sceptre straight be strucken down?

If Collatinus dream of my intent Will he not wake, and in a desperate rage Post hither, this vile purpose to prevent? This siege that hath engirt his marriage, This hlur to youth, this sorrow to the sage, This dying virtue, this surviving shame,

Whose crime will bear an ever-during blame?

And at his look she flatly falleth down,
For looks kill love, and love by looks reviveth:
A smile recures the wounding of a frown,
But blessed bankrupt, that by love so thriveth!
The silly boy, believing she is dead, [red;
Claps her pale cheek, till clapping makes it

And all-amaz'd brake off his late intent, For sharply he did think to reprehend her, Which cunning love did wittily prevent: Fair fall the wit that can so well defend her! ...For on the grass she lies as she were slain, Till his breath breatheth life in her again.

He wrings her nose, he strikes her on the cheeks, He bends her fingers, holds her pulses hard; He chafes her lips, a thousand ways he seeks To mend the hurt that his unkindness marr'd; He kisses her; and she, by her good will, Will never rise so he will kiss her still.

The night of sorrow now is turn'd to day:
Her two blue windows faintly she upheaveth,
Like the fair sun, when in his fresh array
He cheers the morn, and all the world relieveth:
And as the bright sun glorifies the sky,
So is her face illumin'd with her eye:

Whose beams upon his hairless face are fix'd, As if from thence they borrow'd all their shine. Were never four such lamps together mix'd, Had not his clouded with his brows' repine;
But hers, which thro' the crystal tears gave light, Shone like the moon in water seen by night.

'O, where am I?' quoth she, 'in earth or heaven,
Or in the ocean drench'd, or in the fire?

What hour is this? or morn, or weary even?
Do I delight to die, or life desire?
But now I liv'd, and life was death's annoy;
But now I died, and death was lively joy.

'O thou didst kill me;—kill me once again:
Thy eyes' shrewd tutor, that hard heart of thine,
Hath taught them scornful tricks, and such disdain [mine;

That they have murder'd this poor heart of And these mine eyes, true leaders to their

But for thy piteous lips no more had seen.

'Long may they kiss each other, for this cure!
O never let their crimson liveries wear!
And as they last, their verdure still endure,
To drive infection from the dangerous year!
That the star-gazers, having writ on death,
May say the plague is banished by thy breath.

'Pure lips, sweet seals in my soft lip imprinted, What bargains may I make, still to be sealing? To sell myself I can be well contented, So thou wilt buy, and pay, and use good deal-

Which purchase if thou make, for fear of slips, Set thy seal-manual on my wax-red lips.

'A thousand kisses buys my heart from me; And pay them at thy leisure, one by one. What is ten hundred touches unto thee?
Are they not quickly told, and quickly gone?
Say, for non-payment that the debt should double,
Is twenty hundred kisses such a trouble?

'Fair queen,' quoth he, 'if any love you owe

Measure my strangeness with my unripe years; Before I know myself seek not to know me; No fisher but the ungrown fry forbears: The mellow plum doth fall, the green sticks

Or being early pluck'd is sour to taste.

'Look, the world's comforter, with weary gait, His day's hot task hath ended in the west: The owl, night's herald, shrieks,—'tis very late; The sheep are gone to fold, birds to their nest; And coal-black clouds that shadow heaven's light

Do summon us to part, and bid good night.

'Now let me say "good night," and so say you;
If you will say so, you shall have a kiss.'
'Good night,' quoth she; and, ere he says
'adieu,'

The honey fee of parting tender'd is:

Her arms do lend his neck a sweet embrace;
Incorporate then they seem; face grows to face.

Till, breathless, he disjoin'd, and backward drew

The heavenly moisture, that sweet coral mouth, Whose precious taste her thirsty lips well knew, Whereon they surfeit, yet complain on drouth: He with her plenty press'd, she faint with dearth.

(Their lips together glued,) fall to the earth.

Now quick Desire hath caught the yielding prey, And glutton-like she feeds, yet never filleth; Her lips are conquerors, his lips obey, Paying what ransom the insulter willeth; Whose vulture thought doth pitch the price

That she will draw his lips' rich treasure dry.

And having felt the sweetness of the spoil, With blindfold fury she begins to forage; Her face doth reek and smoke, her blood doth boil.

And careless lust stirs up a desperate courage; Planting oblivion, beating reason back, Forgetting shame's pure blush, and honour's wrack.

Hot, faint, and weary, with her hard embracing, Like a wild bird being tam'd with too much handling,

Or as the fleet-foot roe that's tir'd with chasing,
Or like the froward infant still'd with dandling,
He now obeys, and now no more resisteth,
While she takes all she can, not all she listeth.

What wax so frozen but dissolves with temper-

And yields at last to every light impression?
Things out of hope are compass'd oft with venturing,

O what excuse can my invention make
When thou shalt charge me with so black a deed?
Will not my tongue be mute, my frail joints shake?

Mineeyesforego their light, my false heart bleed? The guin being great, the fear doth still exceed; And extreme fear can neither fight nor fly, But, coward-like, with trembling terror die.

'Had Collatinus kill'd my son or sire,
Or lain in ambush to betray my life,
Or were he not my dear friend, this desire
Might have excuse to work upon his wife;
As in revenge or quittal of such strife:
But as he is my kinsman, my dear friend.
The shame and fault finds no excuse nor end.

'Shameful it is;—ay, if the fact be known:
Hateful it is;—there is no hate in loving;
I'll beg her love;—but she is not her own;
The worst is but denial, and reproving:
My will is strong, past reason's weak removing.
Who fears a sentence or an old man's saw
Shall by a painted cloth be kept in awe.'

Thus, graceless, holds he disputation
'Tween frozen conscience and hot-burning will,
And with good thoughts makes dispensation,
Urging the worser sense for vantage still;
Which in a moment doth confound and kill
All pure effects and doth so far proceed,
That what is vile shows like a virtuous deed.

Quoth he, 'She took me kindly by the hand, And gaz'd for tidings in my eager eyes, Fearing some hard news from the warlike band Where her beloved Collatinus lies.

O how her fear did make her colour rise!
First red as roses that on lawn we lay,
Then white as lawn, the roses took away.

And how her hand, in my hand being lock'd, Forc'd it to tremble with her loyal fear; Which struck her sad, and then it faster rock'd, Until her husband's welfare she did hear; Whereat she smiled with so sweet a cheer, That had Narcissus seen her as she stood, Self-love had never drown'd him in the flood.

Why hunt I then for colour or excuses?
All orators are dumb when beauty pleadeth;
Poor wretches have remorse in poor abuses;
Love thrives not in the heart that shadows
dreadeth:

Affection is my captain, and he leadeth; And when his gaudy banner is display'd, The coward fights, and will not be dismay'd.

'Then, childish fear, avaunt! debating, die! Respect and reason wait on wrinkled age! My heart shall never countermand mine eye; Sad pause and deep regard beseem the sage; My part is youth, and beats these from the stage:

Desire my pilot is, beauty my prize; Then who fears sinking where such treasure lies?

As corn o'ergrown by weeds, so heedful fear Is almost chok'd by unresisted lust. Away he steals with opening, listening ear, Full of foul hope, and full of fond mistrust; Both which, as servitors to the unjust,

So cross him with their opposite persuasion, That now he vows a league, and now invasion.

Within his thought her heavenly image sits, And in the selfsame seat sits Collatine: That eye which looks on her confounds his wits: That eye with him beholds, as more divine, Unto a view so false will not incline;

But with a pure appeal seeks to the heave

But with a pure appeal seeks to the heart, Which once corrupted takes the worser part;

And therein heartens up his servile powers, Who, flatter'd by their leader's jocund show, Stuff up his lust, as minutes fill up hours; And as their captain, so their pride doth grow, Paying more slavish tribute than they owe.

By reprodute desire thus madly led

By reprobate desire thus madly led, The Roman lord marcheth to Lucrece' bed.

The locks between her chamber and his will, Each one by him enforc'd retires his ward; But as they open they all rate his ill, Which drives the creeping thief to some regard, The threshold grates the door to have him heard; Night-wand'ring weasels shriek to see him there;

They fright him, yet he still pursues his fear.

As each unwilling portal yields him way, Through little vents and crannies of the place The wind wars with his torch, to make him stay,

And blows the smoke of it into his face, Extinguishing his conduct in this case; But his hot heart, which fond desire doth scorch,

Puffs forth another wind that fires the torch:

And being lighted, by the light he spies
Lucretia's glove, wherein her needle sticks;
He takes it from the rushes where it lies,
And griping it, the neeld his finger pricks:
As who should say this glove to wanton tricks
Is not inur'd; return again in haste;
Thouseestour mistress' ornaments are chaste

But all these poor forbiddings could not stay him;

He in the worst sense construes their denial: The doors, the wind, the glove that diddelay him,

He takes for accidental things of trial;
Or as those bars which stop the hourly dial,
Who with a lingering stay his course doth let,
Till every minute pays the hour his debt.

'So, so,' quoth he, 'these lets attend the time, Like little frosts that sometime threat the spring To add a more rejoicing to the prime, And give the sneaped birds more cause to sing. Pain pays the income of each precious thing; Huge rocks, high winds, strong pirates, shelves and sands, The merchant fears, ere rich at home he lands.

Now is he come under the chamber door That shuts him from the heaven of his thought, Chieflyinlove, whose leave exceeds commission: Affection faints not like a pale-fac'd coward,

When he did frown, O, had she then gave over, Such nectar from his lips she had not suck'd. Foul words and frowns must not repel a lover; What though the rose have prickles, yet 'tis plnck'd:

Were beauty under twenty locks kept fast, Yet love breaks through, and picks them all at last.

For pity now she can no more detain him: The poor fool prays her that he may depart: She is resolv'd no longer to restrain him; Bids him farewell, and look well to her heart. The which, by Cupid's bow she doth protest,

He carries thence incaged in his breast. 'Sweet boy,' she says, 'this night I'll waste in SOTTOW. For my sick heart commands mine eyes to watch. Tellme, love's master, shall we meet to-morrow? Say, shall we? shall we? wilt thou make the match?

He tells her, no; to-morrow he intends To hunt the boar with certain of his friends.

'The boar!' quoth she, whereat a sudden pale, Like lawn being spread upon the blushing rose, Usurps her cheeks; she trembles at his tale, And on his neck her yoking arms she throws: She sinketh down, still hanging by his neck, He on her belly falls, she on her back.

Now is she in the very lists of love, Her champion mounted for the hot encounter: All is imaginary she doth prove, He will not manage her, although he mount her; That worse than Tantalus' is her annov. To clip Elysium, and to lack her joy.

Even as poor birds, deceiv'd with painted grapes, Do surfeit by the eye, and pine the maw, Even so she languisheth in her mishaps, As those poor birds that helpless berries saw: The warm effects which she in him finds missing,

She seeks to kindle with continual kissing.

But all in vain; good queeu, it will not be: She hath assay'd as much as may be prov'd; Her pleading hath deserv'd a greater fee; She's Love, she loves, and yet she is not lov'd. 'Fie, fie,' he says, 'you crush me; let me go; You have no reason to withhold me so.

'Thou hadst beeu gone,' quoth she, 'sweet boy, boar. ere this, But that thou told'st me thou wouldst hunt the O be advis'd! thou know'st not what it is With javelin's point a churlish swine to gore, Whose tushes never sheath'd he whetteth still, Like to a mortal butcher, bent to kill.

'On his bow-back he hath a battle set Of bristly pikes, that ever threat his foes; His eyes like glowworms shine when he doth fret:

But then wooes best when most his choice is froward.

His snout digs sepulchres where'er he goes;
Being mov'd, he strikes whate'er is in his way, And whom he strikes his cruel tushes slav.

> His brawny sides, with hairy bristles arm'd, Are better proof than thy spear's point can enter

His short thick neck cannot be easily harm'd; Being ireful on the lion he will venture:

The thorny brambles and embracing bushes, As fearful of him, part; through whom he michec.

'Alas, he nought esteems that face of thine. To which Love's eyes pay tributary gazes; Nor thy soft hands, sweet lips, and crystal eyne, Whose full perfection all the world amazes; But having thee at vantage, (wondrons dread!)

Would root these beanties as he roots the mead.

O, let him keep his loathsome cabin still! Beanty hath nonght to do with such foul fiends: Come not within his danger by thy will:

They that thrive well take counsel of their friends. When thou didst name the boar, not to dissemble, Tble. I fear'd thy fortune, and my joints did trem-

'Didst thou not mark my face? Was it not white?

Saw'st thou not signs of fear lurk in miue eye? Grew I not faint? And fell I not downright? Within my bosom, whereou thon dost lie,

My boding heart pants, beats, and takes no rest,

But, like an earthquake, shakes thee on my breast.

'For where Love reigns, disturbing Jealousy Doth call himself Affection's sentinel; Gives false alarms, suggesteth mutiny And in a peaceful hour doth cry, "kill, kill;"
Distempering gentle Love in his desire, As air and water do abate the fire.

This sour informer, this bate-breeding spy, This canker that eats up love's tender spring, This carry-tale, dissentions Jealousy, That sometime true news, sometime false doth bring,

Knocks at my heart, and whispers in mine ear, That if I love thee I thy death should fear:

And, more than so, presenteth to mine eye The picture of an angry-chafing boar, Under whose sharp fangs on his back doth lie An image like thyself, all stain'd with gore; Whose blood upon the fresh flowers being shed Doth make them droop with grief, and hang

O, had they in that darksome prison died,
Then had they seen the period of their ill!
Then Collatine again by Lucrece' side
In his clear bed might have reposed still:
But they must ope, this blessed league to kill;
And holy-thoughted Lucrece to their sight
Must sell her joy, her life, her world's delight.

Her filly hand her rosy cheek lies under, Cozening the pillow of a lawful kiss; Who therefore angry, seems to part in sunder, Swelling on either side to want his bliss; Between whose hills her head entombed is:

Where, like a virtuons monument, she lies, To be admir'd of lewd unhallow'd eyes.

Without the bed her other fair hand was, On the green coverlet; whose perfect white Show'd like an April daisy on the grass, With pearly sweat, resembling dew of night. Her eyes, like manigolds, had sheath'd their light, And canopied in darkness sweetly lay,

Till t bey might open to adorn the day.

Her hair, like golden threads, play'd with ber breath;

O modest wantons! wanton modesty! Showing life's triumph in the map of death, And death's dim look in life's mortality: Each in ber sleep themselves so beautify,

As if between them twain there were no strife, But that life liv'd in death, and death in life.

Her breasts, like ivory globes circled with blue, A pair of maiden worlds unconquered, Save of their lord no bearing yoke they knew, And him by oath they truly honoured. These worlds in Tarquin new ambition bred:

Who like a foul usurper went about From this fair throne to heave the owner

What could he see but mightily he noted?
What did he note but strongly he desir'd?
What be beheld on that he firmly doted,
And in his will his wilful eye he tir'd.
With more than admiration he admir'd
Her azure veins, her alabaster skin,
Her coral lips, her snow-white dimpled chin.

As the grim lion fawneth o'er his prey, Sharp hunger by the conquest satisfied, So o'er this sleeping soul doth Tarquin stay, His rage of lust by gazing qualified; Slack'd, not suppress'd; for standing by her side,

His eye, which late this mntiny restrains, Unto a greater uproar tempts his veins:

And they, like struggling slaves for pillage fighting,

Obdurate vassals, fell exploits effecting, In bloody death and ravishment delighting, Nor children's tears, nor mother's groans respecting,

Swell in their pride, the onset still expecting:
Anon his beating heart, alarum striking,
Gives the hot charge, and bids them do their liking.

His drumming heart cheers up his burning eye, His eye commends the leading to his hand; His hand, as proud of such a dignity, [stand Smoking with pride, march'd on to make his On her bare breast, the beart of all her land; Whose ranks of blue veins, as his hand did scale.

They, mustering to the quiet cabinet Where their dear governess and lady lies, Do tell her she is dreadfully beset, And fright her with confusion of their cries: She, much amaz'd, breaks ope her lock'd-up eves.

Who, peeping forth this tumult to behold,

I prophesy thy death, my living sorrow, If thou encounter with the boar to-morrow.

'Bnt if thou needs will hunt, be rul'd by me;
Uncouple at the timorous flying hare,
Or at the fox, which lives by subtilty,
Or at the roe, which no encounter dare:
Pursue these fearful creatures o'er the downs,
And on thy well-breath'd horse keep with thy hounds.

'And when thou hast on foot the purblind hare, Mark the poor wretch, to overshoot his troubles, How he outruns the wind, and with what care He cranks and crosses, with a thousand doubles:

The many musits through the which he goes Are like a labyrinth to amaze his foes.

'Sometime he runs among a flock of sheep,
To make the cunning hounds mistake their smell,

And sometime where earth-delving conies keep,
To stop the loud pursuers in their yell;
And sometime sorteth with a herd of deer;
Danger deviseth shifts; wit waits on fear:

'For there his smell with others being mingled, The hot scent-snuffing hounds are driven to doubt,

Ceasing their clamorous cry till they have singled With much ado the cold fault cleanly out;
Then do they spend their mouths: Echo replies,

As if another chase were in the skies.

By this, poor Wat, far off upon a hill, Stands on his hinder legs with listening ear, To hearken if his foes pursue him still; Anon their loud alarums he doth hear; And now his grief may be compared well To one sore sick that hears the passing bell.

'Then shalt thou see the dew-bedabbled wretch Turn, and return, indenting with the way; Each envious briar his weary legs doth scratch, Each shadow makes him stop, each murmur stay: For misery is trodden on by many, And being low never reliev'd by any.

'Lie quietly, and hear a little more;
Nay, do not struggle, for thou shalt not rise:
To make thee hate the hunting of the boar,
Unlike myself thou hear'st me moralize,
Applying this to that, and so to so;
For love can comment upon every woe.

'Where did I leave?'—'No matter where,'

And now 'tis dark, and going I shall fall.'

'Now of this dark night I perceive the reason: Cynthia for shame obscures her silver shine, Till forging nature be condemn'd of treason, For stealing moulds from heaven that were divine,

Wherein she fram'd thee in high heaven's To shame the sun by day, and her by night.

'And therefore hath she brib'd the Destinies, To cross the curious workmanship of nature, To mingle beauty with infirmities, And pure perfection with impure defeature;

Making it subject to the tyranny Of mad mischances and much misery;

'As burning fevers, agues pale and faint, Life-poisoning pestilence, and frenzies wood, The marrow-eating sickness, whose attaint Disorder breeds by heating of the blood: Surfeits, imposthumes, grief, and damn'd

But in one minute's fight brings beauty under:
Both favour, savour, hue, and qualities,
Whereat the impartial gener late did wonder,

'Therefore despite of fruitless chastity,
Love-lacking vestals, and self-loving nuns,
That on the earth would breed a scarcity
And barren dearth of daughters and of sons,
Be prodigal: the lamp that burns by night
Dries up his oil to lend the world his light.

'Nay, then,' quoth Adon, 'you will fall again

'If love have lent you twenty thousand tongues,
And every tongue more moving than your own,
Bewitching like the wanton mermaid's songs,
Yet from mine ear the tempting tune is blown;
For know, my heart stands armed in mine ear,
And will not let a false sound enter there;

Lest the deceiving harmony should run Into the quiet closure of my breast; And then my little heart were quite undone, Imagine her as one in dead of night From forth dull sleep by dreadful fancy waking, That thinks she hath beheld some ghastly sprite, Whose grim aspect sets every joint a shaking; What terror 'tis! but she, in worser taking, From sleep disturbed, heedfully doth view The sight which makes supposed terror true.

Wrapp'd and confounded in a thousand fears, Like to a new-kill'd bird she trembling lies; She dares not look; yet, winking, there appears Quick-shifting antics, ugly in her eyes: Such shadows are the weak brain's forgeries: Who, angry that the eyes fly from their lights, In darkness daunts them with more dreadful

His hand, that yet remains upon her breast, (Rude ram, to batter such an ivory wall!) May feel her heart, poor citizen, distress'd, Wounding itself to death, rise up and fall, Beating her bulk, that his hand shakes withal. This moves in him more rage, and lesser pity, To make the breach, and enter this sweet city.

First, like a trumpet, doth his tongue begin To sound a parley to his heartless foe Who o'er the white sheet peers her whiter chin, The reason of this rash alarm to know, Which he by dumb demeanour seeks to show; But she with vehement prayers urgeth still Under what colour he commits this ill.

Thus he replies: 'The colour in thy face (That even for anger makes the lily pale, And the red rose blush at her own disgrace) Shall plead for me, and tell my loving tale: Under that colour am I come to scale Thy never-conquer'd fort: the fault is thine, For those thine eyes betray thee unto mine.

'Thus I forestall thee, if thou mean to chide: Thy beauty hath ensuar'd thee to this night, Where thou with patience must my will abide, My will that marks thee for my earth's delight, Which I to conquer sought with all my might; But as reproof and reason beat it dead,

By the bright beauty was it newly bred.

'I see what crosses my attempt will bring; I know what thorns the growing rose defends; I think the honey guarded with a sting: All this, beforehand, counsel comprehends: But will is deaf, and hears no heedful friends; Only he hath an eye to gaze on beauty, And dotes on what he looks, 'gainst law or duty.

'I have debated, even in my soul, What wrong, what shame, what sorrow I shall breed; But nothing can Affection's course control,

Or stop the headlong fury of his speed. I know repentant tears ensue the deed, Reproach, disdain, and deadly enmity; Yet strive I to embrace mine infamy.

This said, he shakes aloft his Roman blade, Which, like a falcon towering in the skies, Coucheth the fowl below with his wing's shade, I

Whose crooked beak threats if he mount he dies: So under his insulting falchion lies Harmless Lucretia, marking what he tells With trembling fear, as fowl hear falcon's

'Lucrece,' quoth he, 'this night I must enjoy

If thou deny, then force must work my way, For in thy bed I purpose to destroy thee; That done, some worthless slave of thine I'll slay,

To kill thine honour with thy life's decay; And in thy dead arms do I mean to place

Swearing I slewhim, seeing thee embracehim.

'So thy surviving husband shall remain The scornful mark of every open eye; Thy kinsmen hang their heads at this disdain. Thy issue blurr'd with nameless bastardy: And thou, the author of their obloquy, Shalt have thy trespass cited up in rhymes, And sung by children in succeeding times.

But if thou yield I rest tay secret friend: The fault unknown is as a thought unacted; A little harm, done to a great good end, For lawful policy remains enacted The poisonous simple sometimes is compacted In a pure compound; being so applied,

His venom in effect is purified.

Then, for thy husband and thy children's sake Tender my suit: bequeath not to their lot The shame that from them no device can take The blemish that will never be forgot; Worse than a slavish wipe, or birth-hour's blot:

For marks descried in men's nativity Are nature's faults, not their own infamy.

Here with a cockatrice' dead-killing eye He rouseth up himself, and makes a pause; While she, the picture of pure picty, Like a white hind under the grype's sharp claws, Pleads in a wilderness, where are no laws,

To the rough beast that knows no gentle right,

Nor aught obeys but his foul appetite:

But when a black-fac'd cloud the world doth threat,

In his dim mist the aspiring mountains hiding, From earth's dark womb some gentle gust doth get,

Which blows these pitchy vapours from their biding, Hindering their present fall by this dividing;

So his unhallow'd haste her words delays, And moody Pluto winks while Orpheus plays.

Yet, foul night-waking cat, he doth but dally, While in his holdfast foot the weak mouse panteth;

Her sad behaviour feeds his vulture folly, A swallowing gulf that even in plenty wanteth: His ear her prayers admits, but his heart granteth

No penetrable entrance to her plaining:

In his bedchamber to be barr'd of rest.

No, lady, no; my heart longs not to groan,
But soundly sleeps, while now it sleeps alone.

What have you urg'd that I cannot reprove? The path is smooth that leadeth on to danger; I hate not love, but your device in love, That lends embracements unto every stranger. You do it for increase; O strange excuse! When reason is the bawd to lust's abuse.

'Call it not love, for love to heaven is fied,
Since sweating lnst on earth usurp'd his name;
Under whose simple semblance be bath fed
Upon fresh beauty, blotting it with blame;
Which the bottyrant stains, and soon bereaves,

As caterpillars do the tender leaves.

'Love comforteth like sunshine after rain, But lust's effect is tempest after sun; Love's gentle spring doth always fresh remain, Lust's winter comes ere summer half be done. Love surfeits not; lust like a glutton dies: Love is all truth; lust full of forged lies.

'More I could tell, but more I dare not say;
The text is old, the orator too green.
Therefore, in sadness, now I will away;
My face is full of shame, my heart of teen,
Mine ears that to your wanton talk attended,
Do burn themselves for having so offended.'

With this he breaketh from the sweet embrace Of those fair arms which bound him to her breast, lapace;

And homeward through the dark laund runs
Leaves Love upon her back deeply distress'd.
Look how a bright star shooteth from the sky,
So glides he in the night from Venus' eye;

Which after him she darts, as one on shore Gazing upon a late-embarked friend, Till the wild waves will have him seen no more, Whose ridges with the meeting clouds contend; So did the merciless and pitchy night Fold in the object that did feed her sight.

Whereat amaz'd, as one that unaware
Hath dropp'd a precious jewel in the flood,
Or 'stonish'd as night-wanderers often are,
Their light blown out in some mistrustful wood;
Even so confounded in the dark she lay,
Having lost the fair discovery of her way.

And now she beats her heart, whereat it groans, That all the neighbour-caves, as seeming troubled,

Make verbal repetition of her moans; Passion on passion deeply is redoubled: [woe! 'Ah me!' sbe cries, and twenty times, 'woe, And twenty echoes twenty times cry so.

She, marking them, begins a wailing note, And sings extemp rally a woeful ditty; [dote; How love makes young men thrall, and old men How love is wise in folly, foolish witty:

Her heavy anthem still concludes in woe, And still the choir of echoes answer so. Her song was tedious, and outwore the night, For lovers' hours are long, though seeming short: If pleas'd themselves, others, they think, delight In such like circumstance, with such like sport: Their copious stories, oftentimes begun,

End without andience, and are never done.

For who hath she to spend the night withal, But idle sounds resembling perasites, Like shrill-tongued tapsters answering every call.

Soothing the humour of fantastic wits?

She says, 'tis so:' they answer all, 'tis so;'

And would say after her, if she said 'no.'

Lol bere the gentle lark, weary of rest, From his moist cabinet mounts up on high, And wakes the morning, from whose silver breast

The sun ariseth in his majesty;

Who doth the world so glorionsly behold, The cedar-tops and hills seem burnish'd gold.

Venus saintes him with this fair good-morrow:
O thou clear god, and patron of all light,
From whom each lamp and shining star doth borrow

The beauteous influence that makes him bright.
There lives a son, that such'd an earthly mother.

Maylend the elight, as thon dost lend to other.

This said, she hasteth to a myrile grove, Musing the morning is so much o'erworn, And yet she bears no tidings of her love: She hearkens for his bounds, and for his horn: Anon she hears them chant it lustily,

Anon she hears them chant it lustily, And all in haste she coasteth to the cry.

And as she runs, the bushes in the way Some catch her by the neck, some kiss her face,

Some twine about her thigh to make her stay; She wildly breaketh from their strict embrace, Like a milch doe, whose swelling dugs doache, Hasting to feed her fawn, hid in some brake.

By this she hears the hounds are at a bay, Whereat she starts, like one that spies an adder Wreath'd up in fatal folds, just in his way, The fear whereof doth make him shake and shndder:

Even so the timorous yelping of the bounds Appals her senses, and ber spright confounds.

For now she knows it is no gentle chase, But the blant boar, rough bear, or lion proud, Because the cry remaineth in one place, Where fearfully the dogs exclaim alond:

Finding their enemy to be so curst, [first, They all strain court'sy who shall cope him

This dismal cry rings sadly in her ear, Through which it enters to surprise her heart, Who, overcome by doubt and bloodless fear, With cold-pale weakness numbs each feeling part:

Like soldiers, when their captain once doth yield,
They basely fly, and dare not stay the field.

Tears harden lust, though marble wear with raining.

Her pity-pleading eyes are sadly fix'd
In the remorseless winkles of his face;
Her modest eloquence with sighs is mix'd,
Which to her oratory adds more grace.
She puts the period often from his place,
And 'midst the sentence so her accent hreaks,
That twice she doth hegin ere once she

She conjures him hy high almighty Jove, By knighthood, gentry, and sweet friendship's oath,

By her untimely tears, her husband's love, By holy human law, and common troth, By heaven and earth, and all the power of both, That to his borrow'd hed he make retire, And stoop to honour, not to foul desire.

Quoth she, 'Reward not hospitality [tended; With such black payment as thou hast pre-Mud not the fountain that gave drink to thee; Mar not the thing that cannot he amended; End thy ill sim, before thy shoot he ended:

'Have done,' quoth he; 'my uncontrolled tide Turns not, but swells the higher by this let. Small lights are soon blown out, huge fires abide,

And with the wind in greater fury fret:

A thousand spleens bear her a thousand ways; She treads the path that she untreads again; Her more than haste is mated with delays, Like the proceedings of a drunken brain,

Full of respect, yet nought at all respecting, In hand with all things, nought at all effecting.

Here kennell'd in a brake she finds a hound, And asks the weary caitiff for his master; And, there another licking of his wound, 'Gainstvenom'd sores the only sovereign plaster; And here she meets another sadly scowling,

To whom she speaks, and he replies with howling.

Look, how the world's poor people are amaz'd At apparitions, signs, and prodigies, Whereon with fearful eyes they long have gaz'd, Infusing them with dreadful prophecies:

So she at these sad signs draws up her breath, And, sighing it again, exclaims on Death.

'Hard-favour'd tyrant, ugly, meagre, lean, Hatefuldivorce of love,' (thus chides she Death,) 'Grim-grinning ghost, earth's worm, what dost thou mean

To stifle beauty, and to steal his breath, Who when he liv'd, his breath and beauty set Gloss on the rose, smell to the violet?

'If he be dead,—O no, it cannot be, Seeing his beauty, thou shouldst strike at it— O yes, it may; thou hast no eyes to see, But hatefully at random dost thou hit.

Thy mark is feeble age; but thy false dart
Mistakes that aim, and cleaves an infant's heart.

'Hadst thou but bid beware, then he had-spoke, And hearing him thy power had lost his power. The Destinies will curse thee for this stroke; They bid thee crop a weed, thou pluck'st a flower:

Love's golden arrow at him should have fied, And not Death's ebon dart, to strike him dead.

Dost thou drink tears, that thou provok'st

What may a heavy groan advantage thee? Why hast thou cast into eternal sleeping Those eyes that taught all other eyes to see?

nose eyes that taught all other eyes to see?

Now Nature cares not for thy mortal vigour,

Since her best work is ruin'd with thy rigour,

Here overcome, as one full of despair, She vail'd her eyelids, who, like sluices, stopp'd The crystal tide that from her two cheeks fair In the sweet channel of her bosom dropp'd; But through the floodgates, bearles the silver

But through the floodgates breaks the silver rain, And with his strong course opens them again.

O how her eyes and tears did lend and borrow! Her eyes seen in the tears, tears in her eye; Both crystals, where they view'd each other's sorrow, Sorrow, that friendly sighs sought still to dry; But like a stormy day, now wind, now rain, Sighs dry her cheeks, tears make them wet again.

Variable passions throng her constant woe, As striving who should best become her grief; All entertain'd, each passion labours so That every present sorrow seemeth chief, But none is best; then join they all together, Like many clouds consulting for foul weather.

By this, far off she hears some huntsmen hollo: A nurse's song ne'er pleas'd her babe so well: The dire imagination she did follow This sound of hope doth labour to expel;

nis sound of hope doth labour to expel; For now reviving joy bids her rejoice, And flatters her it is Adonis' voice.

Whereat her tears began to turn their tide, Being prison'd in her eye, like pearls in glass; Yet sometimes falls an orient drop beside. Which her cheek melts, as scorning it should pass,

To wash the foul face of the sluttish ground, Who is but drunken when she seemeth drown'd.

O hard-believing love, how strange it seems Not to believe, and yet too credulous! Thy weal and woe are both of them extremes, Despair and hope make thee ridiculous: The one doth flatter thee in thoughts unlikely,

In likely thoughts the other kills thee quickly.

Now she unweaves the web that she hath wrought;

Adonis lives, and Death is not to blame; It was not she that called him all-to naught: Now she adds honours to his hateful name; She clepes him king of graves, and grave for kings.

Imperious supreme of all mortal things.

'No, no,' quoth she, 'sweet Death, I did but jest;

Yet pardon me, I felt a kind of fear, When as I met the boar, that bloody beast, Which knows no pity, but is still severe;

Then, gentle shadow (truth I must confess),

Yield to my love; if not, enforced hate, Instead of love's coy touch, shall rudely tear

That done, despitefully I mean to bear thee
Unto the base bed of some rascal groom,
To be thy partner in this shameful doom.

This said, he sets the foot upon the light, For light and lust are deadly enemies; Shame folded up in blind concealing night, When most unseen, then most doth tyrannize. The wolf hath seiz'd his prey, the poor lamb

Till with her own white fleece her voice controll'd Entombs her outcry in her lips' sweet fold:

For with the nightly linen that she wears
He pens her piteous clamours in her head;
Cooling his hot face in the chastest tears
That ever modest eyes with sorrow shed.
O, that prone lust should stain so pure a bed!
The spots whereof could weeping purify,
Her tears should drop on them perpetually.

But she hath lost a dearer thing than life, And he hath won what he would lose again. This forced league doth force a further strife, This momentary joy breeds months of pain, This hot desire converts to cold discain: Pure Chastity is rifled of her store, And Lust, the thief, far poorer than before.

Look, as the full-fed hound or gorged hawk, Unapt for tender smell or speedy flight, Make slow pursuit, or altogether balk The prey wherein by nature they delight; So surfeit-taking Tarquin fares this night: His taste delicious, in digestion souring, Devours his will that liv'd by foul devouring.

O deeper sin than bottomless conceit
Can comprehend in still imagination!
Drunken desire must vomit his receipt,
Ere he can see his own abomination.
While lust is in his pride no exclamation
Can curb his heat, or rein his rash desire,
Till, like a jade, self-will himself doth tire.

And then with lank and lean discolour'd cheek, With heavy eye, knit brow, and strengthless nace.

Feeble desire, all recreant, poor, and meek, Like to a bankrupt beggar wails his case: The fiesh being proud, desire doth fight with

For there it revels; and when that decays, The guilty rebel for remission prays.

So fares it with this faultful lord of Rome, Who this accomplishment so hotly chas'd; For now against himself he sounds this doom, That through the length of times he stands disgrac'd:

Besides, his soul's fair temple is defac'd;
To whose weak ruins muster troops of cares,
To ask the spotted princess how she fares.

She says, her subjects with foul insurrection Have batter'd down ber consecrated wall, And by their mortal fault brought in subjection Her immortality, and make her thrall To living death, and pain perpetual;

Which in her prescience she controlled still. But her foresight could not forestall their will.

Even in this thought through the dark night he stealeth,

A captive victor that hath lost in gain; Bearing away the wound that nothing healeth, The scar that will, despite of cure, remain, Leaving this spoil perplex'd in greater pain. She bears the load of lust he left behind

She bears the load of lust he left behind, And he the burthen of a guilty mind.

He like a thievish dog creeps sadly thence; Sbe like a wearied lamb lies panting there; He scowls, and hates himself for his offence; Sbe, desperate, with ber neils herflesh doth tear; He faintly flies, sweating with guilty fear; She stays, exclaiming on the direful night; He runs, and chides his vanish'd, loath'd delight.

He thence departs a heavy convertite; Sbe there remains a hopeless castaway; He in his speed looks for the morning light; She prays she may never behold the day; 'For day,' quoth she, 'night's scapes doth open lay;

And my true eyes have never practis'd how To cloak offences with a cunning brow.

'They think not but that every eye can see The same disgrace which they themselves behold:

And therefore would they still in darkness be, To have their unseen sin remain untold; For they their guilt with weeping will unfold, And grave, like water, that doth eat in steel, Upon my cheeks what helpless shame I feel.

Here she exclaims against repose and rest, And bids her eyes bereafter still be blind. She wakes ber beart by beating on her breast And bids it leap from thence, where it may find Some purer chest, to close so pure a mind.

Frantic with grief thus breathes she forth her spite
Against the unseen secrecy of night:

'O comfort-killing night, image of heil!
Dim register and notary of shame!
Black stage for tragedies and murders fel!
Vast sin-concealing chaos! nurse of blame!
Blind muffled bawd! dark harbour for defame!
Grim cave of death, whispering constitutor,
With close-tongued treason and the ravisher!

'O hateful, vaporous, and foggy night,
Since thou art guilty of my cureless crime,
Muster thy mists to meet the eastern light,
Make war against proportion'd course of time!
Or if thou wilt permit the sun to climb

His wonted beight, yet ere he go to bed, Knit poisonous clouds about his golden head.

'With rotten damps ravish the morning air; Lettheir exhal'dunwholesome breaths make sick The life of purity, the supreme fair, "Tis not my fault: the boar provok'd my tongue

Be wreak'd of him, invisible commander; 'Tis he, foul creature, that hath done thee wrong;

I did but act, he's author of thy slander: Grief hath two tongues, and never woman yet Could rule them both, without ten women's

Thus, hoping that Adonis is alive, Her rash suspect she doth extenuates And that his heauty may the better thrive, With Death she humbly doth insinuate; istories Tells him of trophies, statues, tombs; and His victories, his triumphs, and his glories.

'O Jove,' quoth she, 'how much a fool was I To be of such n weak and silly mind, To wail his death who lives, and must not die, Till mutual overthrow of mortal kind!

For he being dead, with him is beauty slain, And, heauty dead, black chaos comes again.

'Fie, fie, fond love, thou art so full of fear As one with treasure laden, hemm'd with thieves, Trifles, unwitnessed with eye or ear, Thy coward heart with false bethinking grieves." Even at this word she hears a merry horn, Whereat she leaps that was but late forlorn.

As falcon to the lure away she flies; The grass stoops not, she treads on it so light; And in her haste unfortunately spies The foul hoar's conquest on her fair delight; Which seen, her eyes, as murder'd with the view, drew. Like stars asham'd of day, themselves with-

This solemn sympathy poor Venus noteth; Over one shoulder doth she hang her head; Dumhly she passions, franticly she doteth; She thinks he could not die, he is not dead. Her voice is stopp'd, her joints forget to how;

Her eyes are made that they have wept till now.

Upon his hurt she looks so steadfastly, That her sight dazzling makes the wound seem three;

And then she reprehends her mangling eye That makes more gashes where no breach ... should be:

His face seems twain, each several limb is doubled: troubled. For oft the eye mistakes, the hrain being

'My tongue cannot express my grief for one, And yet,' quoth she, 'behold two Adons dead! My sighs are hlown away, my salt tears gone, Mine eyes are turn'd to fire, my heart to lead; Heavy heart's lead melt at mine eyes' red fire!

So shall I die by drops of hot desire.

'Alas, poor world, what treasure hast thou lost! What face remains alive that's worth the viewing? (boast Whose tongue is music now? what canst thou

Of things long since, or anything ensuing? The flowers are sweet, their colours fresh and trim:

But true-sweet heauty liv'd and died with him.

Bonnet nor veil henceforth no creature wear! Nor sun nor wind will ever strive to kiss you: Having no fair to lose, you need not fear The sun doth scorn you, and the wind doth hiss

But when Adonis liv'd, sun and sharp air Lurk'd like two thieves to rob him of his fair;

And therefore would he put his honnet on, Under whose brim the gaudy sun would peep; The wind would blow it off, and, being gone, Play with his locks; then would Adonis weep: And straight, in pity of his tender years

They hoth would strive who first should dry his tears.

'To see his face the lion walk'd along [him: Behind some hedge, because he would not fear To recreate himself, when he hath sung, The tiger would be tame and gently hear him: If he had spoke the wolf would leave his prey, And never fright the silly lamb that day.

When he heheld his shadow in the brook, The fishes spread on it their golden gills; When he was by, the hirds such pleasure took That some would sing, some other in their bills Would bring him mulberries, and ripe-red cherries:

He fed them with his sight, they him with herries.

Ere he arrive his weary noontide prick; And let thy misty vapours march so thick, That in their smoky ranks his smother'd light May set at noon, and make perpetual night.

'Were Tarquin night (as he is hut night's child), The silver-shining queen he would distain; Her twinkling handmaids too, by him defil'd, Through night's black bosom should not peep again;

So should I have copartners in my pain: And fellowship in woe doth won assuage, As palmers' chat makes short their pilgrimage.

'Where now I have no one to blush with me, To cross their arms, and hang their heads with mine,

To mask their brows, and hide their infamy; But I slone alone must sit and pine, Seasoning the earth with showers of silver brine Mingung my talk with tears, my grief with groans,

Poor wasting monuments of lasting monns.

Poor washing monuments of lasting moans.

O night, thou furnese of foul-reeking smok

'O night, thou furnace of foul-reeking smoke, Let not the jealous day behold that face Which underneath thy black all-hiding cloak Immodestly lies martyr'd with disgrace! Keep still possession of thy gloomy place,

That all thy faults which in thy reign are made, May likewise be sepulchred in thy shadel

'Make me not object to the tell-tale day!
The light will show, character'd in my brow,
The story of sweet chastity's decay,
The impious breach of holy wedlock vow:
Yea, the illiterate, that know not how

To 'cipher what is writ in learned books, Will quote my loathsome trespass in my looks.

'The nurse, to still her child, will tell my story, And fright her crying babe with Tarquin's name; The orator, to deck his oratory, Will couple my reproach to Tarquin's shame: Feast-finding minstrels, tuning my defame,

Will tie the hearers to attend each line, How Tarquin wronged me, I Collatine.

'Let my good name, that senseless reputation, For Collatine's dear love he kept unspotted: If that be made a theme for disputation, The branches of another root are rotted, And undeserv'd reproach to him allotted,

That is as clear from this attaint of mine, As I, ere this, was pure to Collatine.

'O unseen shamel invisible disgrace!
O unfelt sorel crest-wounding, private scarl
Reproach is stamp'd in Collatinus' face,
And Tarquin's eye may read the mot afar,
How he in peace is wounded not in war.

How he in peace is wounded, not in war.

Alas, how many bear such shameful blows,
Which not themselves but he that gives them knows!

'If, Collatine, thine honour lay in me, From me by strong assault it is bereft. My honey lost, and I, a drone-like bee, Have no perfection of my summer left, But robb'd and ransack'd by injurious theft:

In thy weak hive n wandering wasp hath crept, (kept. And suck'd the honey which thy chaste hee

'Yet am I guilty of thy honour's wrack,—
Yet for thy honour did I entertain him;
Coming from thee, I could not put him hack,
For it had heen dishonour to disdain him:
Besides of weariness he did complain him,
And talk'd of virtue:—O, unlook'd for evil,
When virtue is profan'd in such a devil!

'Why should the worm intrude the maiden hud? Or hateful cuckoos hatch in sparrows' nests? Or toads infect fair founts with venom mud? Or tyrant folly lurk in gentle breasts? Or kings he hroakers of their own behests?

Or kings he hreakers of their own behests?
But no perfection is so absolute,
That some impurity doth not pollute.

The aged man that coffers up his gold [fits, Is plagued with cramps, and gouts, and painful And scarce hath eyes his treasure to hehold, But like still-pining Tantalus he sits, And uscless harns the harvest of his wits;

Having no other pleasure of his gain But torment that it cannot cure his pain.

'So then he hath it, when he cannot use it, And leaves it to he master'd by his young; Who in their pride do presently abuse it: Their father was too weak, and they too strong, To hold their cursed-blessed fortune long,

The sweets we wish for turn to loathed sours, Even in the moment that we call them ours.

'Unruly blasts wait on the tender spring; Unwholesome weeds take root with precious flowers;

The adder hisses where the sweet birds sing; What virtue hreeds iniquity devours:
We have no good that we can say is ours,
But ill-annexed Opportunity
Or kills his life, or else his quality.

'O Opportunity! thy guilt is great:
'Tis thou that execut'st the traitor's treason;
Thou sett'st the wolf where he the lamb may get;
Whoever plots the sin, thou 'point'st the season;
'Tis thou that spurn'st at right, at law, at reason;
And in thy shady cell, where none may spy
him,

Sits Sin, to seize the souls that wander by him.

'Thou mak'st the vestal violate her oath; Thou blow'st the fire when temperance is than'd; Thou smother'st honesty, thou murther'st troth; Thou foul ahettor! thou notorious bawd! Thou plantest scandal, and displacest laud: Thou ravisher thou traitor, thou false thief.

Thou ravisher, thou traitor, thou false thief, Thy honey turns to gall, thy joy to grief1

'Thy secret pleasure turns to open shame,
Thy private feasting to a public fast;
Thy smoothing titles to a ragged name;
Thy sugar'd tongue to bitter wormwood taste:
Thy violent vanities can never last.
How comes it then, vile Opportunity,

How comes it then, vile Opportunity, Being so bad, such numbers seek for thee? 'But this foul, grim, and urchin-snonted boar, Whose downward eye still looketh for a grave, Ne'er saw the beauteous livery that he wore; Witness the entertainment that he gave:

Witness the entertainment that he gave;
If he did see his face, why then I know
He thought to kiss him, and hath kill'd him so.

"Tis true, 'tis true; thus was Adonis slain;
He ran upon the boar with his sharp spear,
Who did not whet his teeth at him again,
But by a kiss thought to persuade him there;
And nuzzling in his flank the loving swine
Sheath'd, unaware, the tusk in his soft groin.

'Had I been tooth'd like him, I must confess, With kissing him I should have kill'd him first; But he is dead, and never did he bless My youth with his; the more am I accurst.'

With this she falleth in the place she stood, And stains her face with his congealed blood.

She looks upon his lips, and they are pale; She takes him by the hand, and that is cold; She whispers in his ears a heavy tale, As if they heard the woeful words she told:

She lifts the coffer-lids that close his eyes, Where, lo! two lamps, burnt out, in darkness lies:

Two glasses where herself herself beheld A thousand times, and now no more reflect; Their virtue lost, wherein they late excell'd, And every beauty robb'd of his effect:

And every beauty robb'd of his effect:
"Wonder of time," quoth she, 'this is my spite,
That you being dead the day should yet be light.

'Since thou art dead, lo! here I prophesy, Sorrow on love hereafter shall attend; It shall be waited on with jealousy, Find sweet beginning but unsavoury end; Ne'er settled equally, but high or low; [woe. That all love's pleasure shall not match his

'It shall be fickle, false, and full of fraud; Bud and be blasted in a breathing while; The bottom poison, and the top o'erstraw'd With sweets that shall the truest sight beguile: The strongest body shall it make most weak, Strike the wise dumb, and teach the fool to speak.

'It shall be sparing, and too full of riot, Teaching decrepit age to tread the measures; The staring ruffian shall it keep in quiet, Pluck down the rich, enrich the poor with treasures:

It shall be raging mad, and silly mild, Make the young old, the old become a child.

'It shall suspect where is no cause of fear; It shall not fear where it should most mistrust; It shall be merciful, and too severe,

And most deceiving when it seems most just;
Perverse it shall be where it shows most toward.

Put fear to valour, courage to the coward.

'It shall be cause of war and dire events, And set dissension 'twixt the son and sire; Subject and servile to all discontents, As dry combustions matter is to fire;

Sith in his prime death doth my love destroy, They that love best their love shall not enjoy.

By this, the boy that by her side lay kill'd Was melted like a vapour from her sight, And in his blood that on the ground lay spill'd, A purple flower sprungup, chequer'd with white, Resembling well his pale cheeks, and the blood

Which in round drops upon their whiteness stood.

She bows her head, the new-sprung flower to smell,

Comparing it to her Adonis' breath; And says, within her bosom it shall dwell, Since he himself is reft from her by death:

She crops the stalk, and in the breach appears Green dropping sap, which she compares to tears.

'Poor flower,' quoth she, 'this was thy father's guise, (Sweet issue of a more sweet-smelling sire,)

For every little grief to wet his eyes:
To grow unto himself was his desire,
And so 'tis thine; but know, it is as good
To wither in my breast as in his blood.

'Here was thy father's bed, here in my breast; Thou art the next of blood, and 'tis thy right: Lo! in this hollow cradle take thy rest, My throbbing heart shall rock thee day and night:

There shall not be one minute in an hour Wherein I will not hiss my sweet love's flower.

Thus weary of the world, away she hies, And yokes her silver doves; by whose swift aid Their mistress, mounted, through the empty skies

In her light chariot quickly is convey'd,

Holding their course to Paphos, where their queen

Means to immure herself, and not be seen.

'When wilt thou be the humble suppliant's friend,

And hring him where his suit may be obtain'd? When wilt thou sort an hour great strifes to end? Or free that soul which wretchedness hath chain'd?

Give physic to the sick, ease to the pain'd?
The poor, lame, blind, halt, creep, cry out for thee;

But they ne'er meet with Opportunity.

'The patient dies while the physician sleeps; The orphan pines while the oppressor feeds; Justice is feasting while the widow weeps; Advice is sporting while infection breeds; Thou grant'st not time for charitable deeds:

wrath, envy, treason, rape, and murder's rages.
Thy heinous hours wait on them as their pages.

'When truth and virtue have to do with thee, A thousand crosses keep them from thy aid; They huy thy help: hut Sin ne'er gives a fee, He gratis comes; and thou art well appay'd As well to hear as grant what he hath said.

My Collatine would else have come to me When Tarquin did, but he was stay'd be thee.

'Guilty thou art of murder and of theft; Guilty of perjury and subornation; Guilty of treason, forgery, and shift; Guilty of incest, that abomination: An accessary by thine inclination

To all sins past, and all that are to come, From the creation to the general doom.

'Mis-shapen Time, copesmate of ugly night, Swift subtle post, carrier of grisly care, Enter of youth, false slave to false delight, Base watch of woes, sin's packhorse, virtue's

Thou nursest all, and murtherest all that are.

O hear me then, injurious, shifting Timel
Be guilty of my death, since of my crime.

'Why hath thy servant, Opportunity,
Betray'd the hours thou gav'st me to repose?
Cancell'd my fortunes and enchained me
To endless date of never-ending woes?
Time's office is too fine the hate of foes;
To eat up errors by opinion bred,
Not spend the dowry of a lawful bed,

'Time's glory is to calm contending kings,
To unmask falsehood, and bring truth to light,
To stamp the seal of time in aged things,
To wake the morn, and sentinel the night,
To wrong the wronger till he render right;
To ruinate proud buildings with thy hours,
And smear with dust their glittering golden towers:

'To fill with worm-holes stately monuments,
To feed oblivion with decay of things,
To hlot old books, and alter their contents,
To pluck the quills from ancient ravens' wings,
To dry the old oak's sap, and cherish springs;
To spoil antiquities of hammer'd steel,
And turn the giddy round of Fortune's wheel;

'To show the beldame daughters of her daughter, To make the child a man, the man a child, To slay the tiger that doth live by slaughter, To tame the unicorn and lion wild,

To mock the subtle, in themselves beguil'd; To cheer the ploughman within creaseful crops, And waste huge stones with little water-drops.

'Why work'st thou mischief in thy pilgrimage, Unless thou couldst return to make amends? One poor retiring minute in an age Would purchase thee a thousand thousand friends,

Lending him wit that to had debtors lends:

O, this dread night, wouldst thou one hour come back,

I could prevent this storm, and shunthy wrack!

'Thou ceaseless lackey to eternity,
With some mischance cross Tarquinin his flight:
Devise extremes beyond extremity,
To make him curse this cursed crimeful night:
Let ghastly shadows his lewd eyes affright,

And the dire thought of his committed evil Shape every bush a hideous shapeless devil.

'Disturb his hours of rest with restless trances, Afflict him in his hed with bedrid groans; Let there bechance him pitiful mischances, To make him moan, but pity not his moans: Stone him with harden'd hearts, harder than stones;

And let mild women to him lose their mildness, Wilder to him then tigers in their wildness.

'Let him have time to tear his curled hair, Let him have time against himself to rave, Let him have time of Time's help to despair, Let him have time to live a loathed slave, Let him have time a beggar's orts to crave;

And time to see one that hy alms doth live Disdain to him disdained scraps to give.

'Let him have time to see his friends his foes, And merry fools to mock at him resort; Let him have time to mark how slow time goes In time of sorrow, and how swift and short His time of folly and his time of sport:

And ever let his unrecalling crime Have time to wail the abusing of his time.

'O Time, thou tutor both to good and bad, Teach me to curse him that thou taught'st this ill!

At his own shadow let the thief run mad! Himself himself seek every hour to kill! Such wretched hands such wretched blood should suil!

should spill: For who so base would such an office have As slanderous death's-man to so base a slave?

'The baser is he, coming from a king,
To shame his hope with deeds degenerate.
The mightier man, the mightier is the thing
That makes him honour'd, or hegets him hate;
For greatest scandal waits on greatest state.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

RIGHT HONOURABLE HENRY WRIOTHESLY, EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON OF TITCHFIELD.

THE love I dedicate to your Lordship is without end; whereof this pamphlet, without beginning, is but a superfluous moiety. The warrant I have of your honourable disposition, not the worth of my untutored lines, makes it assured of acceptance. What I have done is yours, what I have to do is yours; being part in all I have, devoted yours. Were my worth greater my duty would show greater: meantime, as it is, it is bound to your Lordship, to whom I wish long life, still lengthened with all happiness.

Your Lordship's in all duty.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

THE ARGUMENT

LUCIUS TARQUINIUS (for his excessive pride surnamed Snperbus), after he had caused his own father-in-law, Servius Tullius, to be cruelly murdered, and, contrary to the Roman laws and customs, not requiring or staying for the people's suffrages, had possessed himself of the kingdom, went, accompanied with his sons and other noblemen of Rome, to besiege Ardea. During which siege, the principal men of the army meeting one evening at the tent of Sextus Tarquinius, the king's son, in their discourses after supper, every one commended the virtues of his own wife; among whom, Collatinus extolled the incomparable chastity of his wife Lucretia. In that pleasant humour they all posted to Rome; and intending by their secret and sudden arrival to make trial of that which every one had hefore avouched, only Collatinus finds his wife the wife the principal arrows they made; the other ladies and sudden arrival to make trial of that which every one had before avouched, only Collatinus finds his wife (though it were late in the night) spinning amongst her maids: the other ladies were all found dancing and revelling, or in several disports. Whereupon the noblemen yielded Collatinus the victory, and his wife the fame. At that time Sextus Tarquinius, being inflamed with Lucrece's beauty, yet smothering his passions for the present, departed with the rest back to the camp; from whence he shortly after privily withdrew himself, and was (according to his estate) royally entertained and lodged by Lucrece at Collatium. The same night he treacherously stealeth into her chamber, violently ravished her, and early in the morning speedeth away. Lucrece, in this lamentable plight, hastily despatcheth messengers, one to Rome for her father, another to the camp for Collatine. They came, the one accompanied with Junius Brutus, the other with Publins Valerius; and, finding Lucrece attired in mourning habit, demanded the cause of her sorrow. She, first taking an oath of them for her revenge, revealed the actor and whole manner of his dealing, and withal suddenly stabbed 'The crow may hathe his coal-hlack wings in mire,

And unperceiv'd fly with the fifth away,
But if the like the snow-white swan desire,
The stain upon his silver down will stay.
Poor grooms are sightless night, kings glorious day.

Gnats are unnoted wheresoe'er they fly, But eagles gaz'd upon with every eye.

Out, idle words, servants to shallow fools! Unprofitable sounds, weak arbitrators! Busy yourselves in skill-contending schools, Dehate where leisure serves with dull dehaters; To trembling clients be you mediators:

For me, I force not argument a straw, Since that my case is past the help of law.

In vain I rail at Opportunity,
At Time, at Tarquin, and uncheerful night;
In vain I cavil with my infamy,
In vain I spurn at my confirm'd despite:
This helpless smoke of words doth me no right.
The remedy indeed to do me good,
Is to let forth my foul, defiled hlood.

'Poor hand, why quiver'st thou at this decree?
Honour thyself to rid me of this shame;
For if I die my honour lives in thee,
But if I live thou liv'st in my defame:
Since thou could'st not defend thy loyal dame,
And was afear'd to scratch her wicked foe,
Kill hoth thyself and her for yielding so.'

This said, from her hetumbled couch she starteth, To find some desperate instrument of death: But this no-slaughter-house no tool imparteth, To make more vent for passage of her hreath, Which thronging through her lips so vanisheth As smoke from Ætna, that in air consumes, Or that which from discharged cannon fumes.

'In vain,' quoth she, 'I live, and seek in vain Some happy mean to end a hapless life. I fear'd hy Tarquin's falchion to he slain, Yet for the self-same purpose seek a knife: But when I fear'd I was a loyal wife;

But when I fear'd I was a loyal wife; So am I now:—O no, that cannot he; Of that true type hath Tarquin rifled me.

'Ol that is gone for which I sought to live, And therefore now I need not fear to die. To clear this spot by death, at least I give A badge of fame to slander's livery; A dring life to living infamy;

Poor helpless help, the treasure stolen away, To hurn the guiltless casket where it lay!

Well, well, dear Collatine, thou shalt not know The stained taste of violated troth; I will not wrong thy true affection so To flatter thee with an infringed oath; This hastard graff shall never come to growth: He shall not hoast who did thy stock pollute That thou art doting father of his fruit.

'Nor shall he smile at thee in secret thought, Nor laugh with his companions at thy state; But thou shalt know thy interest was not bought Basely with gold, hut stolen from forth thy gate.

For me, I am the mistress of my fate, And with my trespass never will dispense, Till life to death acquit my forc'd offence.

'I will not poison thee with my attaint,
Nor fold my fault in cleanly-coin'd excuses;
My sahle ground of sin I will not paint,
To hide the truth of this false night's abuses:
My tongue shall utter all; mine eyes like sluices,
As from a mountain-spring that feeds a dale,
Shall gush pure streams to purge my impure tale.'

By this, lamenting Philomel had ended
The well-tun'd warble of her nightly sorrow,
And solemn night with slow-sad gait descended
To ugly hell; when lo, the blushing morrow
Lends light to all fair eyes that light will horrow:
But cloudy Lucrece shames herself to see,
And therefore still in night would cloister'd
he,

Revealing day through every cranny spies, And seems to point her ont where she sits weeping,

To whom scholing speaks: 'O eye of eyes, Why pryest thou through my window? leave thy peeping;

Mock with thy tickling beams eyes that are sleeping:

Brand not my forehead with thy piercing light, For day hath naught to do what's done hy night.'

Thus cavils she with everything she sees:
True grief is fond and testy as a child,
Who wayward once, his mood with nought agrees.

Old woes, not infant sorrows, hear them mild; Continuance tames the one; the other wild, Like an unpractis'd swimmer plunging still With too much lahour drowns for want of skill.

So she, deep-drenched in a sea of care, Holds disputation with each thing she views, And to herself all sorrow doth compare; No object hut her passion's strength renews; And as one shifts, another straight ensues: Sometime her griefisdumb and hath no words; Sometime 'tis mad, and too much talk affords.

The little hirds that tune their morning's joy Make her moans mad with their sweet melody. For mirth doth search the hottom of annoy; Sad souls are slain in merry company; Grief hest is pleas'd with grief's society:

True sorrow then is feelingly suffic'd When with like semblance it is sympathiz'd.

'Tis double deoth to drown in ken of shore; He ten times pines that pines heholding food; To see the slave doth make the wound ache more;

Great grief grieves most at that would do it good; Deep woes roll forward like a gentle flood, Who, heing stopp'd, the hounding hanks o'erflows:

Grief dallied with nor law nor limit knows.

herself. Which done, with one consent they all vowed to root out the whole hated family of the Tarquins; and, hearing the dead body to Rome, Brutus acquainted the people with the doer and manner of the vile deed, with a bitter invective against the tyranny of the king; wherewith the people were so moved, that with one consent and a general acclamation the Tarquins were all exiled, and the state government changed from kings to consuls.

FROM the besieged Ardea all in post, Borne by the trustless wings of false desire, Lust-breathed Tarquin leaves the Roman host,

And to Collatium bears the lightless fire Which, in pale embers hid, lurks to aspire, And girdle with emhracing fiames the waist Of Collatine's fair love, Lucrece the chaste.

Haply that name of chaste unhapp'ly set This bateless edge on his keen appetite; When Collatine unwisely did not let To praise the clear unmatched red and white Which triumph'd in that sky of his delight, Where mortal stars, as bright as heaven's beauties, With pure aspects did him peculiar duties.

For he the night before, in Tarquin's tent, Unlock'd the treasure of his happy state, What priceless wealth the heavens had him lent In the possession of his beauteous mate; Reckoning his fortune at such high-proud rate,

That kings might be espoused to more fame, But king nor peer to such a peerless dame.

O happiness enjoy'd but of a few!
And, if possessed, as soon decay'd and done
As is the morning's silver-melting dew
Against the golden splendour of the sun!
An expir'd date, cancell'd ere well begun:
Honour and beauty, in the owner's arms,
Are weakly fortress'd from a world of harms.

Beauty itself doth of itself persuade The eyes of men without an orator; What needeth then apologies be made To set forth that which is so singular? Or why is Collatine the publisher

Of that rich jewel he should keep unknown From thievish ears, because it is his own?

Perchance his boast of Lucrece' sovereignty Suggested this proud issue of a king; For by our ears our hearts oft tainted be: Perchance that envy of so rich a thing, Braving compare, disdainfully did sting His high-pitch'd thoughts, that meaner men should vaunt, That golden hap which their superiors want.

But some untimely thought did instigate His all-too-timeless speed, if none of those: His honour, his affairs, his friends, his state, Neglected all, with swift intent he goes To quench the coal which in his liver glows.

O rash false heat, wrapp'd in repentant cold,
Thy hasty spring still blasts, and ne'er grows old!

--

When at Collatium this false lord arriv'd, Well was he welcom'd by the Roman dame, Within whose face beauty and virtue striv'd Which of them both should undergrop her fame: When virtue bragg'd, heauty would blush for shame;

When beauty boasted blushes, in despite Virtue would stain that or with silver white.

But heauty, in that white intituled, From Venus' doves doth challenge that fair field: Then virtue claims from beauty beauty's red, Which virtue gave the golden age, to gild Their silver cheeks, and call dit then their shield:

Teaching them thus to use it in the fight,— When shame assail'd, the red should fence the white.

This heraldry in Lucrece' face was seen,
Argued by beauty's red, and virtue's white:
Of either's colour was the other queen,
Proving from world's minority their right:
Yet their ambition makes them still to fight;
The sovereignty of either being so great,
That oft they interchange each other's seat.

This silent war of lilies and of roses Which Tarquin view'd in her fair face's field. In their pure ranks his traitor eye encloses; Where, lest between them both it should be kill'd,

The coward captive vanquished doth yield To those two armies that would let him go, Rather than triumph in so false a foe.

Nowthinks he that her husband's shallow tongue (The niggard prodigal that prais'd her so) In that high task hath done her heauty wrong, Which far exceeds his barren skill to show:
Therefore that praise which Collatine doth owe, Enchanted Tarquin answers with surmise,

In silent wonder of still-gazing eyes.

This earthly saint, adored by this devil, Little suspecteth the false worshipper; For unstain'd thoughts do seldom dream on

Birds never lim'd no secret bushes fear: So guiltless she securely gives good cheer And reverend welcome to her princely guest, Whose inward ill no outward harm express'd:

For that he colour'd with his high estate, Hiding base sin in plaits of majesty; That nothing in him seem'd inordinate, Save sometime too much wonder of his eye, Which, having all, all could not satisfy;

But, poorly rich, so wanteth in his store That cloy'd with much he pineth still for more.

But she, that never cop'd with stranger eyes, Could pick no meaning from their parling looks, Nor read the subtle-shining secrecies Writ in the glassy margents of such books; She touch'd no unknown baits, nor fear'd no hooks;

Nor could she moralize his wanton sight, More than his eyes were open'd to the light You mocking birds, quoth she, your tune entomb

Within your hollow-swelling feather'd breasts, And in my hearing be you mute and dumb! (My restless discord loves no stops nor rests; A woeful hostess brooks not merry guests:) Relish your nimble notes to pleasing ears; Distress like dumps when time is kept with tears.

'Come, Philomel, that sing'st of ravishment, Make thy sad grove in my dishevell'd hair. As the dank earth weeps at thy languishment, So I at each sad strain will strain a tear, And with deep groans the diapason bear:

For burthen-wise I'll hum on Tarquin still, While thou on Tereus descant'st better skill.

'And whiles against a thorn thou bear'st thy part,
To keep thy sharp woes waking, wretched I,
To imitate thee well, against my heart
Will fix a sharp knife, to affright mine eye;
Who, if it wink, shall thereon fall and die.
These means, as frets upon an instrument,

These means, as frets upon an instrument, Shall tune our heartstrings to true languishment.

'And for, poor bird, thon sing'st not in the day, As shaming any eye should thee hehold, Some dark deep desert, seated from the way, That knows no parching heat nor freezing cold, We will find out; and there we will unfold To creatures stern sad tunes, to change their hinds: (minds.)

Since men prove heasts, let beasts bear gentle

As the poor frighted deer, that stands at gaze, Wildly determining which way to fly, Or one encompass'd with a winding maze, That cannot tread the way out readily; So with herself is she in muting,

To live or die which of the twain were better, When life is sham'd, and Death reproach's debtor.

'To kill myself,' quoth she, 'alack! what were it, But with my body my poor soul's pollution? They that lose half with greater patience hear it Than they whose whole is swallow'd in confusion. That mother tries a merciless conclusion Who, having two sweet babes, when death takes one, Will slay the other, and be nurse to none.

'My body or my soul, which was the dearer? When the one pure, the other made divine. Whose love of either to myself was nearer? When both were kept for heaven and Collatine. Ah, me! the bark peel'd from the lofty pine, His leaves will wither, and his sap decay;

'Her house is sack'd, her quiet interrupted, Her mansion hatter'd by the enemy; Her sacred temple spotted, spoil'd, corrupted, Grossly engirt with daring infamy: Then let it not he callid implety

So must my soul, her hark heing peel'd away.

If in this hlemish'd fort I make some hole Through which I may convey this troubled soul.

'Yet die I will not till my Collatine
Have heard the cause of my untimely death;
That he may vow, in that sad hour of mine,
Revenge on him that made me stop my breath
My stained blood to Tarquin I'll bequeath,
Which by him tainted shall for him be spent,
And as his due writ in my testament.

'My honour I'll bequeath unto the knife
That wounds my body so dishonoured.
'Tis honour to deprive dishonour'd life;
The one will live, the other being dead:
So of shame's ashes shall my fame be bred;
For in my death I murther shameful scorn:
My shame so dead, mine honour is new-born.

'Dear lord of that dear jewel I have lost,
What legacy shall I bequeath to thee?
My resolution, Love, shall be thy boast,
By whose example thon reveng'd mayst be.
How Tarquin must be used, read it in me:
Myself, thy friend, will kill myself, thy foe;
And, for my sake, serve thou false Tarquinso.

'This brief abridgement of my will I make: My soul and body to the skies and ground; My resolution, husband, do thou take; Mine honour be the knife's that makes my wound;

My shame be his that did my fame confound; And all my fame that lives disbursed be To those that live, and think no shame of me.

'Thou, Collatine, shalt oversee this will;
How was I overseen that thou shalt see it!
My hlood shall wash the slander of mine ill;
My life's foul deed my life's fair end shall free it.
Faint not, faint heart, hnt stoutly say, "so be it."
Yield to my hand; my hand shall conquerthee;
Thou dead, hoth die, and both shall victors be.

This plot of death when sadly she had laid, And wip'd the brinish pearl from her bright eyes, Withuntum'd tongue she hoarsely call'd hermaid, Whose swift obedience to her mistress hies; For fleet-wing'd duty with thought's feathers

Poor Lucrece' cheeks unto her maid seem so As winter meads when sun doth melt their snow.

Hermistress shedoth give demure good-morrow, With soft-slow tongue, true mark of modesty, And sorts a sad look to her lady's sorrow, (For why? her face wore sorrow's livery,) But durst not ask of her audacions!)

Why has two cans were cloud-eclined so.

Why her two suns were cloud-eclipsed so, Nor why her fair cheeks over-wash'd with woe.

But as the earth doth weep, the sun being set, Each flower moisten'd like a melting eye; Even so the maid with swelling drops 'gan wet Her circled eyne, enforc'd by sympathy Of those fair suns, set in her mistress' sky, Who in a salt-wav'd ocean quench their light.

Who in a salt-way'd ocean quench their upon Which makes the maid weep like the dewy night.

A pretty while these pretty creatures stand, Like ivory conduits coral cisterns filling:

Clo. Well held out, i' faith! No, I do not know you; nor am I not sent to you by my lady, to bid you come speak with her; nor your name is not Master Cesario; nor this is not my nose neither .- Nothing that is so is so.

Seb. I pr'ythee, vent thy folly somewhere se. Thou knowst me not.

Clo. Vent my folly! he has heard that word of some great man, and now applies it to a fool. Vent my follyl I am afraid this great lubber, the world, will prove a cockney .- I pr'ytbee now, ungird thy strangeness, and tell me what I shall vent to my lady. Shall I vent to her that thou art coming?

Seb. Ipr'ythee,foolish Greek,departfromme; There's money for thee; if you tarry longer

I shall give worse paymant.

Clo. By my troth, thou hast an open hand: -These wise men that give fools money get themselves a good report after fourteen years' purchase:

Enter Sir Andrew, Sir Toby, and Fabian.

Sir And. Now, sir, have I met you again? [Striking SEBASTIAN. there's for you. Seb. Why, there's for thee, and there and tbere.

Are all the people mad?

Beating Sir Andrew Sir To. Hold, sir, or I'll throw your dagger o'er the house.

Clo. This will I tell my lady straight. would not be in some of your coats for two pence. Exit CLOWN.

Sir To. Come on, sir; hold.

[Holding SEBASTIAN. Sir And. Nay, let him alone; I'll go another way to work with him; I'll have an action of battery against him, if there be any law in Illyria: though I struck him first, yet it's no matter for that. Seb. Let go thy hand.

Sir To. Come, sir, I will not let you go. Come, my young soldier, put up your iron: you are well fleshed; come on. Seb. I will be free from thee. What wouldst thou now? If thou dar'st tempt me further, draw thy sword.

Draws. Sir To. What, what? Nay, then I must have an ounce or two of this malapert blood from you. Draws.

Enter Olivia.

Oli. Hold, Toby; on thy life, I charge thee, hold.

Sir To. Madam? Oli. Willit be ever thus? Ungracious wretch, Fit for the mountains and the barbarous caves, Where manners ne'er'were preach'd! Out of my sightl

Be not offended, dear Cesario!—
Rudesby, be gone!—I pr'ythee, gentle friend, [Exeunt Sir To., Sir And., and Fab.

Let thy fair wisdom, not thy passion, sway In this uncivil and unjust extent Against thy peace. Go with me to my house, And hear thou there how many fruitless pranks

Do not deny. Beshrew his soul for me, He started one poor heart of mine in thee.

Seb. Whatrelishisinthis?howrunstbestream? Or am I mad? or else this is a dream: Let fancy still my sense in Lethe steep;

If it be thus to dream, still let me sleep!
Oli. Nay, come, I pr'ythee. Would thou'dst be ruled by mel Seb. Madam, I will.

Oli. O, say so, and so be! [Excunt.

Scene II.—A Room in Olivia's House. Enter MARIA and CLOWN.

Mar. Nay, I pr'ythee, put on this gown and this beard; make him believe thou art Sir Topas the curate; do it quickly: I'll call Sir Toby the whilst. Exit MARIA.

Clo. Well, I'll put it on, and I will dissemble myself in 't; and I would I were the first that ever dissembled in such a gown. I am not fat enough to become the function well: nor lean enough to be thought a good student: but to be said, an honest man and a good housekeeper, goes as fairly as to say, a careful man and a great scholar. The competitors enter.

Enter Sir Toby Belch and Maria.

Sir To. Jove bless thee, master parson. Clo. Bonos dies, Sir Toby: for as the old hermit of Prague, that never saw pen and ink, very wittily said to a niece of King Gorboduc, That that is, is: so I, being master parson, am master parson: for what is that but that? and is but is?

Sir To. To him, Sir Topas.

Clo. What, hoa, I say,—Peace in this prison! Sir To. The knave counterfeits well; a good knave.

Mal. (In an inner chamber.) Who calls Clo. Sir Topas the curate, who comes to visit Malvolio the lunatic.

Mal. Sir Topas, Sir Topas, good Sir Topas, go to my lady.

Clo. Out, hyperbolical fiend! how vexest thou this man? talkest thou nothing but of ladies?

Sir To. Well said, master parson.

Mal. Sir Topas, never was man thus wronged: good Sir Topas, do not think I am mad; they have laid me here in hideous darkness.

Clo. Fie, thou dishonest Sathan! I call thee by the most modest terms; for I am one of those gentle ones that will use the devil himself with " courtesy. Say'st thou that house is dark?

Mal. As hell, Sir Topas.
Clo. Why, it hatb bay-windows, transparent as barricadoes, and the clear storeys towards the south-north are as lustrous as ebony; and yet complainest thou of obstruction?

Mal. I am not mad, Sir Topas; I say to you this house is dark.

Clo. Madman, thou errest. I say there is no darkness but ignorance; in which thou art more puzzled than the Egyptians in their fog.

Mal. I say this house is as dark as ignorance, though ignorance were as dark as hell; and I say there was never man thus abused. This ruffian hath botch'd up, that thou thereby am no more mad than you are; make the trial Maystsmile at this: thou shalt not choose but go; of it in any constant question.

Clo. What is the opinion of Pythagoras concerning wild-fowl?

Mal. That the soul of our grandam might haply inhabit a hird.

Clo. What thinkest thou of his opinion? Mal. I think nobly of the soul, and no way approve of his opinion. Clo. Fare thee well. Remain thou still in darkness: thou shalt hold the opinion of Pythagoras ere I will allow of thy wits; and fear to kill a woodcock lest thou dispossess the soul of thy grandam. Fare thee well.

Mal. Sir Topas, Sir Topas!

Sir To. My most exquisite Sir Topas1

Clo. Nay, I am for all waters. Mar. Thou mightst have done this without thy beard and gown; he sees thee not. Sir To. To him in thine own voice, and bring me word how thou findest him: I would we were well rid of this knavery. If he may be conveniently delivered, I would he were; for I am now so far in offence with my niece that I cannot pursue with any safety this sport to the upshot. Come by and by to my chamber.

Exeunt Sir To. and MAR.

Clo. Hey, Robin, jolly Robin, Tell me how thy lady does.

[Singing.

Mal. Fool, Clo. My lady is unkind, perdy. Mal. Fool. Clo. Alas, why is she so?

Mal. Fool, I say;-Clo. She loves another-Who calls, ha? Mal. Good fool, as ever thou wilt deserve well at my hand, help me to a candle, and pen, ink, and paper; as I am a gentleman, I will live to be thankful to thee for 't.

Clo. Master Malvolio!

Mal. Ay, good fool. Clo. Alas, sir, how fell you besides your five wits?

Mal. Fool, there was never man so notoriously abused I am as well in my wits, fool, as thou art.

Clo. But as well? then you are mad indeed, if you be no better in your wits than a fool.

Mal. They have here propertied me; keep me in darkness, send ministers to me, asses, and do all they can to face me out of my wits. Clo. Advise you what you say; the minister s here.-Malvolio, Malvolio, thy wits the heavens restorel endeavour thyself to sleep, and leave thy vain bibble-babble. Mal. Sir Topas,- Clo. Maintain no words with him, good fellow. Who, I, sir? not I, sir. God b' wi' you, good Sir Topas.-Marry, amen.-I will, sir, I will.

Mal. Fool, fool, fool, I say,— Clo. Alas, sir, be patient. What say you, I am shent for speaking to you.

Mal. Good fool, help me to some light and some paper; I tell thee I am as well in my wits as any man in Illyria.

Clo. Well-a-day,—that you were, sirl Mal. By this hand, I am: Good fool, some ink, paper, and light, and convey what I will set down to my lady; it shall advantage thee more than ever the bearing of letter did.

Clo. I will help you to 't. But tell me true, are you not mad indeed? or do you but counterfeit?

Mal. Believe me, I'am not; I tell thee true, Clo. Nay, I'll ne'er believe a madman till I see his brains. I will fetch you light, and paper, and ink.

Mal. Fool, I'll requite it in the highest degree: I pr'ythee, be gone.

Clo. I am gone sir, And anon, sir, I'll be with you again, In a trice, Like to the old vice. Your need to sustain;

> Who with dagger of lath, In his rage and his wrath, Cries ah, ha! to the devil: Like a mad lad, Pare thy nails, dad, Adieu, goodman drivel.

[Exit.

Scene III .- Olivia's Garden.

Entet Sebastian.

Seb. This is the air; that is the glorious sun: This pearlshe gave me, I do feel't, and see't: And though 'tis wonder that enwraps me thus, Yet 'tis not madness. Where's Antonio, then? I could not find him at the Elephant; Yet there he was; and there I found this credit. That he did range the town to seek me out. His counsel now might do me golden service: For thou my soul disputes well with my sense, That this may be some error, but no madness, Yet doth this accident and flood of fortune So far exceed all instance, all discourse, That I am ready to distrust mine eyes And wrangle with my reason, that persuades me To any other trust but that I am mad, Or else the lady's mad; yet if 'twere so, She could not sway her house, command her followers.

Take and give back affairs and their despatch With such a smooth, discreet, and stable bearing As I perceive she does: there's something in't That is deceivable. But here comes the lady.

Enter OLIVIA and a Priest.

Oli. Blame not this haste of mine. If you mean well, Now go with me and with this holy man Into the chantry by: there, before him And underneath the consecrated roof, Plight me the full assurance of your faith, That my most jealous and too doubtful soul May live at peace. He shall conceal it Whiles you are willing it shall come to note;

According to my birth.—What do you say? Seb. I'll follow this good man, and go with

And, having sworn truth, ever will be true. Oli. Then lead the way, good father;-And heavens so shine That they may fairly note this act of mine!

What time we will our celebration keep

Exeunt.

One jastly weeps; the other takes in hand No cause, but company, of her drops spilling: Their gentle sex to weep are often willing; Grieringthemselvestoguessatothers'smarts, And then they drown their eyes, or break their hearts.

For mea bave marble, women waxen minds, And therefore are they form'd as marble will; The weak oppress'd, the impression of strange kinds

Is form'd in them by force, by fraud, or skill: Thea call them not the authors of their ill, No more than war shall be accounted evil. Wherein is stamp'd the semblance of a devil.

Their smoothness, like a goodly champaign

plain,
Lays open all the little worms that creep;
In men, as in a rough-grown grove, remain
Cave-keeping evils that obscurely sleep:
Through crystal walls each little mote will peep:
Though men can cover crimes with bold stern looks,

Poor women's faces are their own faults' books.

No man inveigh against the wither'd flower, Bat chide rough winter that the flower hath kill'd!

Not that devour'd, but that which doth devour Is worthy blame. O, let it not be hild Poor women's faults that they are so fulfill'd With men's abuses! those proud lords, to blame,

Make weak-made women tenants to their shame.

The precedent whereof in Lucrece view, Assail'd by night with circumstances strong Of present death, and shame that might ensue By that ber death, to do her husband wrong: Sach danger to resistance did belong.

That dying fear through all her body spread; And who cannot nbuse a body dead?

By this, mild Patience bid fair Lucrece speak To the poor counterfeit of ber complaining: 'My girl,' quoth she, 'on what occasion break Those tears from thee, that down thy cbeeks are raining?

If then dost weep for grief of my sustaining, Know, gentle wench, it small avails my mood:

If tears could help, mine own would do me good.

'But tell me, girl, when went'-(and there she stay'd Till after a deep groan) 'Tarquin from hence?' 'Madam, ere I was up,' replied the maid, 'The more to blame my sluggard negligence: Yet with the fault I thus far can dispense; Myself was stirring ere the break of day, And, ere I rose, was Tarquin gone away.

'But, lady, if your maid may be so bold, She would request to know your beaviness.'
'O peace!' quoth Lucrece; 'if it should be told, The repetition cannot make it less;
For more it is than I can well express:
And that deep torture may be call'd a hell.
When more is felt than one hath power to tell.

'Go, get me hither paper, ink, and pen—Yet save that labour, for I bave them here. What should I say?—One of my husband's men Bid thou be ready, by and by, to bear A letter to my lord, my love, my dear;
Bid him with speed prepare to carry it;

The cause craves haste, and it will soon be wit.'

Her maid is gone, and she prepares to write, First hovering o'er the paper with her quill: Conceit and grief an eager combat fight; What wit sets down is blotted straight with will; This is too curious-good, this blunt and ill:

Much like a press of people at a door, Throng her inventions, which shall be before.

At last she thus begins:—'Thou worthy lord Of that unworthy wife that greeteth thee, Health to thy person! next vouchsafe to afford (If ever, love, thy Lucrece thou wilt see) Some present speed to come and visit me: So I commend me from our house in grief; My woes are tedious, though my words are brief.'

Here folds she up the tenor of her woe, Her certain sorrow wit uncertainly. By this short schedule Collatine may know Her grief, but not her grief's true quality; Sbe dares not thereof make discovery,

Lest he should bold it her own gross abuse, Ere she with blood had stain'd her stain'd excuse,

Besides, the life and feeling of her passion She hoards, to spend when he is by to bear her; When sighs, and groans, and tears may grace the fashion

Of her disgrace, the better so to clear her From that suspicion which the world might bear her.

To shan this blot, she would not blot the letter [better. With words, till action might become them

To see sad sights moves more than hear them told;

For then the eye interprets to the ear The heavy motion that it doth bebold, When every part a part of woe doth bear. 'Tis but a part of sorrow that we hear:

Deep sounds make lesser noise than shallow fords, [words. And sorrow ebbs, being blown with wind of

Her letter now is seal'd, and on it writ,
'At Ardea to my lord with more than haste;'
The post attends, and she delivers it,
Charging the sour-fac'd groom to hie as fast
As lagging fowls before the northern blast.
Speed more than speed but dull and slow

she deems: Extremity still urgeth such extremes. Then can I grieve at grievances foregone, And heavily from woe to woe tell o'er. The sad account of fore-bemoaned moan, Which I new pay as if not paid before. But if the while I think on thee, dear friend, All losses are restor'd, and sorrows end.

TXXI.

Thy bosom is endeared with all hearts, Which I by lacking have supposed dead; And their reigns love and all love's loving parts, And all those friends which I thought buried. How many a holy and obsequious tear Hath dear religious love stolen from mine eye, As interest of the dead, which now appear But things remov'd, that hidden in thee lie! Thon art the grave where buried love doth live, Hung with the trophies of my lovers gone. Who all their parts of me to thee did give; That due of many now is thine alone: Their images I lov'd, I view in thee, And thon (all they) hast all the all of me.

XXXII.

If thou survive my well-contented day, When that churl Death my bones with dust shall cover,

And shalt by fortune once more re-survey. These poor rude lines of thy deceased lover, Compare them with the bettering of the time; And though they be outstipp'd by every pen, Reserve them for my love, not for their rhyme, Exceeded by the height of happier men. O then vouchassie me but this loving thought! 'Had my friend's muse grown with this growing age,

A dearer birth than this his love had brought,
To march in ranks of better equipage:
But since he died, and poets better prove,
Theirs for their style I'll read, his for his love.'

XXXIII.

Full many a glorious morning have I seen Flatter the mountain-tops with sovereign eye, Kissing with golden face the meadows green, Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchymy; Anon permit the basest clouds to ride With ugly rack on his celestial face, And from the forlorn world his visage hide, Stealing unseen to west with this disgrace: Even so my sun one early morn did shine With all triumphant splendour on my brow; But ont! alack! he was but one hour mine, The region cloud hath mask'd him from me now. Yet him for this my love no whit disdaineth Suns of the world may stain, when heaven's sun staineth.

XXXIV

Why didst thou promise such a besinteous day, And make me travel forth without my cloak, To let base clouds o'ertake me in my way, Hiding thy bravery in their rotten smoke? 'Tis not enough that through the cloud thou break,

To dry the rain on my storm-beaten face,
For no man well of such a salve can speak,
That heals the wound, and cures not the dis-

Nor can thy shame give physic to my grief; Though thou repent, yet I have still the loss: The oftender's sorrow lends but weak relief To him that beers the strong offence's cross, Ah! but those teers are pearl which thy love sheds,

And they are rich, and ransom all ill deeds.

XXXX.

No more be griev'd at that which thou hast done:

Roses have thoms, and silver fountains mud; Clouds and eclipses stain both moon and sun, and loathsome canker lives in sweetest bud. All men make faults, and even I in this, Authorising thy trespass with compare, Myself corrupting, salving thy amiss, Excusing thy sins more than thy sins are: For to thy sensual fault I bring in sense, (Thy adverse party is thy advocate,) And 'geinst myself a lawful plea commence: Such civil war is in my love and hate,

That I an accessary needs must be
To that sweet thief which soutly robs from me.

XXXVI.

Let me confess that we two must be twain,
Although our undivided loves are one:
So shall those blots that do with me remain,
Without thy help, by me be borne alone.
In our two loves there is but one respect,
Though in our lives a separable spite,
Which though it alter not love's sole effer,
Yet doth it steal sweet hours from fore's delight.

I may not evermore acknowledge thee, Lest my bewelled guilt should do thee shame; Not thou with public kindness honour me, Unless thon take that honour from thy name: But do not so; I love thee in such sort, As, thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

XXXVII.

As a decrepit father takes delight
To see his active child do deeds of youth,
So I, made lame by fortune's degrest spite,
Take all my comfort of thy worth and truth;
For whether besuty, birth, or wealth, or wit,
Or any of these all, or all, or more,
Entitled in thy parts do crowned sit,
I make my love engrafted to this store:
So then I am not lame, poor, nor despis'd,
Whilst that this shadow dost such substance give,
That I in thy abundance am suffic'd,
And by a part of all thy glory live.
Look what is best, that best I wish in thee;
This wish I have; then ten times happy me!

XXXVIII.

How can my muse want subject to invent.
Whilst thou dost breathe, that pour'st into my

Thine own sweet argument, too excellent
For every vulgar paper to rehears?
O, give thyself the thanks, if aught in me
Worthy perusal stand against thy sight;
For who's so dumb that cannot write to thee,
When thou thyself dost give invention light?
Be thou the tenth muse, ten times more in
worth

Than those old nine which rhymers invocate; And he that calls on thee, let him bring forth Eternal numbers to outlive long date. [days, If my slight muse do please these curious

The homely villain court'sies to her low: And blushing on her, with a steadfast eye Receives the scroll, without or yea or no. And forth with bashful innocence doth hie. But they whose guilt within their bosoms lie Imagine every eye beholds their blame:

For Lucrece thought he blush'd to see her shame:

When, silly groom! God wot, it was defect Of spirit, life, and bold audacity. Such harmless creatures have a truer respect To talk in deeds, while others saucily Promise more speed, but do it leisurely:

Even so, this pattern of the worn-out age Pawn'd honest looks, but laid no words to gage.

His kindled duty kindled her mistrust, That two red fires in both their faces blaz'd; She thought he blush'd as knowing Tarquin's lust,

And, blushing with him, wistly on him gaz'd; Her earnest eye did make him more amaz'd: The more she saw the blood his cheeks replenish. The more she thought he spied in her some

But long she thinks till he return again, And yet the duteous vassal scarce is gone. The weary time she cannot entertain, For now 'tis stale to sigh, to weep, and groan: So woe hath wearied woe, moan fired moan, That she her plaints a little while doth stay.

At last she calls to mind where hangs a piece Of skilful painting, made for Priam's Troy; Before the which is drawn the power of Greece, For Helen's rape the city to destroy, Threat'ning cloud-kissing Ilion with annoy; Which the conceited painter drew so proud Asheaven (it seem'd) to kiss the turrets bow'd.

Pausing for means to mourn some newer way.

A thousand lamentable objects there, In scorn of Nature, Art gave lifeless life: Many a dry drop seem'd a weeping tear, Shed for the slaughter'd husband by the wife: The red blood reek'd to show the painter's strife; And dying eyes gleam'd forth their ashy lights, Like dying coals burnt out in tedious nights.

There might you see the labouring pioneer Begrim'd with sweat, and smeared all with dust; And from the towers of Troy there would appear The very eyes of men through loopholes thrust, Gazing upon the Greeks with little lust: Snch sweet observance in this work was had, That one might see those far-off eyes look sad.

In great commanders grace and majesty You might behold, triumphing in their faces; In youth, quick bearing and dexterity; And here and there the painter interlaces Pale cowards, marching on with trembling paces; Which heartless peasants did so well resemble, That one would swear he saw them quake and tremble.

In Ajax and Ulysses, O what art Of physiognomy might one behold! The face of either 'cipher'd either's heart: Their face their manners most expressly told: In Ajax' eyes blunt rage and rigour roll'd: But the mild glance that sly Ulysses lent Show'd deep regard and smiling government.

There pleading might you see grave Nestor. stand. As't were encouraging the Greeks to fight; Making such sober action with his hand That it beguil'd attention, charm'd the sight: In speech, it seem'd, his beard all silver white Wagg'd up and down, and from his lips did fly Thin winding breath, which purl'd up to the

About him were a press of gaping faces, Which seem'd to swallow up his sound advice; All jointly listening, but with several graces, As if some mermaid did their ears entice; Some high, some low, the painter was so nice: The scalps of many, almost hid behind, To jump up higher seem'd to mock the mind.

Here one man's hand lean'd on another's head. His nose being shadow'd by his neighbour's

Here one being throng'd bears back, all boll'n and red:

Another smother'd seems to pelt and swear; And in their rage such signs of rage they bear. As, but for loss of Nestor's golden words, It seem'd they would debate with angry

For much imaginary work was there; Conceit deceitful, so compact, so kind, That for Achilles' image stood his spear, Grip'd in an armed hand; himself, behind, Was left unseen, save to the eye of mind: A hand, a foot, a face, a leg, a head, Stood for the whole to be imagined.

And from the walls of strong-besieged Troy When their brave hope, bold Hector, march'd to field,

Stood many Trojan mothers, sharing joy To see their youthful sons bright weapons wield And to their hope they such odd action yield, That through their light joy seemed to appear (Like bright things stain'd) a kind of heavy

And, from the strond of Dardan where they fought.

To Simois' reedy banks, the red blood ran, Whose waves to imitate the battle scught With swelling ridges; and their ranks began To break upon the galled shore, and than Retire again, till meeting greater ranks

They join, and shoot their foam at Simois' banks.

To this well-painted piece is Lucrece come, To find a face where all distress is stell'd. Many she sees where cares have carved some, The pain be mine, but thine shall be the praise.

XXXIX.

O, how thy worth with manners may I sing, When thou art all the better part of me? What can mine own praise to mine own self bring?

And what is't but mine own, when I praise thee?
Even for this let us divided live,
And our dear love lose name of single one,
That by this separation I may give
That due to thee, which thou deserv'st alone.
O absence, what a torment wouldst thou prove,
Were it not thy sour leisure gave sweet leave
To entertain the time with thoughts of love, (Which time and thoughts so sweetly doth deceive,)

And that thou teachest how to make one twain,
By praising him here, who doth hence remain!

XL.

Take all my loves, my love, yea, take them all; What hast thou then more than thou hadst before?

No love, my love, that thou mayst true love call; All mine was thine, before thou hadst this more. Then if for my love thou my love receivest, I cannot blame thee for my love thou usest; But yet be blam'd, if thou thyself deceivest By wilful taste of what thyself refusest. I do forgive thy robbery, gentle thief, Although thou steal thee all my poverty; And yet, love knows, it is a greater grief To bear love's wrong, than hate's known injury.

Lascivious grace, in whom all ill well shows, Kill me with spites; yet we must not be foes.

XT.T.

Those pretty wrongs that liberty commits When I am sometime absent from thy heart, Thy beauty and thy years full well befits, For still temptation follows where thou art. Gentle thou art, and therefore to be won, Beauteous thou art, therefore to be assail'd; And when a woman wooes, what woman's son Will sourly leave her till she have prevail'd? Ah mel but yet thou mightst my seat forbear, And chide thy beauty and thy straying youth, Who lead thee in their riot even there Where thou art forc'd to break a twofold truth; Hers, by thy beauty tempting her to thee, Thine, by thy beauty being false to me.

XLII.

That thou hast her, it is not all my grief,
And yet it may be said I lov'd her dearly;
That she hath thee, is of my wailing chief,
A loss in love that touches me more nearly.
Loving offenders, thus I will excuse ye:
Thou dost love her, because thou knew'st I love her;

And for my sake even so doth she abuse me,
Sufiering my friend for my sake to approve her.
If I lose thee, my loss is my love's gain,
And, losing her, my friend hath found that loss;
Both find each other, and I lose both twain,
And both for my sake lay on me this cross;
But here's the joy; my friend and I are one;

Sweet flatteryl then she loves but me alone.

XLIII.

When most I wink, then do mine eyes best see. For all the day they view things unrespected; But when I sleep, in dreams they look on thee, And, darkly bright, are bright in dark directed; Then thou whose shadow shadows doth make bright,

How would thy shadow's form form happy show To the clear day with thy much clearer light, When to unseeing eyes thy shade shines so! How would (I say) mine eyes be blessed made By looking on thee in the living day, When in dead of night thy fair imperfect shade Through heavy sleep on sightless eyes doth

All days are nights to see, till I see thee, And nights, bright days, when dreams do show thee me.

XLIV.

If the dull substance of my flesh were thought, Injurious distance should not stop my way; For then, despite of space, I would be brought From limits far remote, where thou dost stay. No matter then, although my foot did stand Upon the farthest earth remov'd from thee, For nimble thought can jump both sea and land, As soon as think the place where he would be. But ah! thought kills me, that I am not thought, To leap large lengths of miles when thou art gone,

But that, so much of earth and water wrought, I must attend time's leisure with my moan; Receiving nought by elements so slow But heavy tears, badges of either's woe:

TIV

The other two, slight air and purging fire, Are both with thee, wherever I abide; The first my thought, the other my desire, These present-absent with swift motion slide. For when these quicker elements are gone In tender embassy of love to thee, My life, being made of four, with two alone Sinks down to death, oppress'd with melancholy;

Until life's composition be recur'd
By those swift messengers return'd from thee,
Who even but now come back again, assur'd
Of thy fair health, recounting it to me:
This told, I joy; but then no longer glad,
I send them back again, and straight grow sad.

ZLVI.

Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war, How to divide the conquest of thy sight; Mine eye my heart thy picture's sight would bar,

My heart mine eye the freedom of that right.

My heart doth plead that thou in him dost lie,
(A closet never pierc'd with crystal eyes.)

But the defendant doth that plea deny,
And says in him thy fair appearance lies.

To 'cide this title is impannelled
A quest of thoughts, all tenants to the heart;
And by their verdict is determined part.

The clear eye's moiety, and the dear heart'
As thus; mine eye's due is thine outward part,

And my heart's right thine inward love of heart.

But none where all distress and dolour dwell'd Till she despairing Hecubn beheld,

Staring on Priam's wounds with her old eyes, Which bleeding under Pyrrhus' proud foot

In her the painter had anatomiz'd Time's ruin, beauty's wrack, and grim care's

Time's ruin, beauty's wrack, and grim care's reign; Her cheeks with chaps and wrinkles were dis-guis'd; Of what she was no semblance did remain: Her blue blood, chang'd to black in every vein, Wanting the spring that those strunk pipes had fed, Show'd life imprison'd in a body dead.

On this sad shadow Lucrece spends her eyes, And shapes her sorrow to the beldame's woes, Who nothing wants to answer her but cries, And bitter words to ban her cruel foes: The painter was no god to lend her those; And therefore Lucrece swears he did her wrong,

To give her so much grief, and not a tongue.

'Poor instrument,' quoth she, 'without n sound,
I'll tune my woes with my lamenting tongue:

And drop sweet balm in Priam's painted wound, And rail on Pyrrhus that hath done him wrong, And with my tears quench Troy that burns so long;

And with my knife scratch out the angry eyes Of all the Greeks that are thine enemies.

Show me the strumpet that began this stir,
That with my nails her beauty I mny tear.
Thy heat of lust, fond Paris, did incur
This load of wrath that burning Troy doth bear:

The eye kindled the fire that burneth here: And here in Troy, for trespass of thine eye, To sire, the son, the dame, and daughter, die.

'Why should the private pleasure of some one Become the public plague of many mo? Let sin, alone committed, light alone Upon his head that hath transgressed so. Let guiltless souls he freed from guilty woe: For one's offence why should so many fall, To plague a private sin in general?

Lo, here weeps Hecuba, here Priam dies, Here manly Hector faints, here Troilus swounds;

Here friend by friend in bloody channel lies,
And friend to friend gives unadvised wounds,
And one man's lust these many lives confounds:
Had doting Priam check'd his son's desire,
Troy had been bright with fame, and not with fire.

Here feelingly she weeps Troy's painted woes: For sorrow, like n heavy-hanging bell, Once set on ringing, with his own weight goes; Then little strength rings out the doleful knell: So Lucrece set a-work sad tales doth tell

To pencill'd pensiveness and colour'd sorrow; She lends them words, and she their looks doth borrow. She throws her eyes about the painting round And whom she finds forlorn she doth lament At last she sees n wretched image bound, That piteous looks to Phrygian shepherds lent Hisface, though full of cares, yet show'd content Onward to Troy with the blunt swains he goe So mild that Patience seem'd to scorn his woes

In him the painter labour'd with his skill To hide deceit, and give the harmless show An humble gait, calm looks, eyes wailing stil A brow unbent, that 58cm'd to welcome woe Cheeks neither red nor pale, but mingled so That blushing red no guilty instance gave, Nor ashy pale the fear that false hearts have

But, like a constant and confirmed devil, He entertsin'd a show so seeming just, And therein so ensconc'd his secret evil, That jealousy itself could not mistrust False-creeping craft and perjury should thrus Into so bright n day such black-fac'd storms Orblot with hell-born sin such seint-like forms

The well-skill'd workman this mild image dret For perjur'd Sinin, whose enchanting story The credulons old Priam after slew; [glor Whose words, like wildfire, burnt the shinin Of rich-built Ilion, that the skies were sorry, And little stars shot from their fixed place When their glass fell wherein they view' their faces.

This picture ahe advisedly perus'd, And chid the painter for his wondrous skill; Saying, some shape in Sinon's was nbus'd, So fair a form lodg'd not n mind so ill; And still on him she £az'd, and gazing still, Such signs of truth in his plain face she spied That she concludes the picture was belied.

'It cannot be,' quoth she, 'that so much guile' (She would have said) 'tan lurk in such a look; But Tarquin's shape came in her mind the while,

And from her tongue 'can lurk' from 'cannot'

took;
'It cannot be' she in that sense forsook,
And turn'd it thus: 'It cannot be, I find,
But such a face should bear a wicked mind:

For even ns subtle Sinon here is painted,
So sober-sad, so weary, and so mild,
(As if with grief or travail he had fainted,)
To me came Tarquin armed; so beguil'd
With outward honesty, but yet defil'd
With inward vice: as Priam him did cherish,
So did I Tarquin; so my Troy did perish.

'Look, look, how listening Priam wets his eyes, To see those borrow'd tears that Sinon sheds, Priam, why art thou old, and yet not wise? For every tear he falls a Trojan bleeds; His eye drops fire, no water thence proceeds; Those round clear pearls of his that move thy pity

Are bails of quenchless fire to burn thy city.

'Such devils steal effects from lightless hell; For Sinon in his fire doth quake with cold,

XLVII.

Betwirt mine eye and heart a league is took, And each doth good turns now unto the other: When that mine eye is famish'd for a look, Or heart in love with sighs himself doth smother, With my love's picture then my eye doth feast, And to the painted benquet bids my heart; Another time mine eye is my heart's guest, And in his thoughts of love doth share a part: So, either by thy picture or my love, Thyself away art present still with me; [move, For thou not farther than my thoughts canst And I am still with them, and they with thee; Or if they sleep, thy picture in my sight Awakes my heart to heart's and eye's delight.

XLVIII.

How careful was I when I took my way, Each trifle under truest hars to thrust, That, to my use, it might unused stay From hands of falsehood, in snre wards of trust! But thou, to whom my jewels trifles are, Most worthy comfort, now my greatest grief, Thou, hest of dearest, and mine only care, Art left the prey of every vulgar thief. Thee have I not lock'd up in any chest, Sare where thou art not, though I feel thou art, Within the gentle closure of my breast, Ipart; From whence at pleasure thou mayst come and And even thence thou wilt be stolen I fear, For truth proves thierish for a prize so dear.

XLIX.

Against that time, if ever that time come, When I shall see thee frown on my defects, Whenas thy love hath cast his utmost sum, Call'd to that audit by advis'd respects; [pass, Against that time, when thou shalt strangely And scarcely greet me with that sun, thine eye, When love, converted from the thing it was, Shall reasons find of settled gravity; Against that time do I ensconce me here Within the knowledge of mine own desert, And this my hand against myself uprear, To guard the lawful reasons on thy part:

To leave poor me thou hast the strength of laws, Since, why to love, I can allege no cause.

How heavy do I journey on the way, When what I seek—my weary travel's end— Doth teach that ease and that repose to say, 'Thus far the miles are measur'd from thy friend!'

The beast that bears me, tired with my woe,
Plods dully on, to bear that weight in me,
As if by some instinct the wretch did know
His rider lov'd not speed, being made from thee:

The bloody spur cannot provoke him on
That sometimes anger thrusts into his hide,
Which heavily he answers with a groan,
More sharp to me than spurring to his side;
For that same groan doth put this in my mind,
My grief lies onward, and my joy behind.

Ţ.I.

Thus can my love excuse the slow offence Of my dull bearer, when from thee I speed: From where thou art why should I haste me thence? Till I return, of posting is no need.

O what excuse will my poor beast then find,
When swift extremity can seem but slow?
Then should I spur, though mounted on the wind;

In winged speed no motion shall I know:
Then can no horse with my desire keep pace:
Therefore desire, of perfect's love being made,
Shall neigh (no dull flesh) in his fiery race;
But love, for love, thus shall excuse my jade;
Since from thee going he went wilful slow,
Towards thee I'll run, and give him leave to 1.71.

So am I as the rich, whose blessed key Can bring him to his sweet up-locked treasure, The which he will not every hour survey, For blanting the fine point of seldom pleasure. Therefore are feasts so solemn and so rare, Since seldom coming, in the long year set, Like stones of worth they thinly placed are, Or captain jewels in the carcanet. So is the time that keeps you, as my chest, Or as the wardrobe which the robe doth hide, To make some special instant special-blest, By new unfolding his imprison?d pride.
Blessed are you, whose worthiness gives scope, Being had, to triumph, being lack'd, to hope.

3.111.

What is your substance, whereof are you made,
That millions of strange shadows on you tend?
Since every one hath, every one, one's shade,
And you, but one, can every shadow lend.
Describe Adonis, and the counterfeit
Is poorly imitated after you;
On Helen's cheek all art of beauty set,
And you in Grecian tires are painted new:
Speak of the spring, and foison of the year;
The one doth shadow of your beauty show,
The other as your bounty doth appear,
And you in every blessed shape we know.
In all external grace you have some part,
But you like none, none you, for constant heart.

LIV.

O how much more doth beauty beauteous seem, By that sweet ornament which truth doth givel The rose looks fair, hut fairer we it deem For that sweet odour which doth in it live. The canker-blooms have full as deep a dye As the perfumed tincture of the roses, Heng on such thorns, and play as wantonly When summer's breath their masked buds discloses:

But, for their virtue only is their show,
They live unwoo'd, and unrespected fade;
Die to themselves. Sweet roses do not so;
Of their sweet deeths are sweetest odours made:
And so of you, beauteous and lovely youth,
When that shall fade, by verse distils your truth.

LV.

Not marble, nor the gilded monuments Of princes, shall outlive this powerful rhyme; But you shall shine more bright in these contents Than unswept stone, besmear'd with sluttish time.

When wasteful war shall statues overturn,

And in that cold hot-hurning fire doth dwell; These contraries such unity do hold Only to flatter fools, and make them hold: So Priam's trust false Sinon's tears doth flatter.

That he finds means to burn his Troy with water.'

Here, all enrag'd, such passion her assails, That patience is quite beaten from her breast. She tears the senseless Sinon with her nails, Comparing him to that unhappy guest Whose deed hath made herself herself detest; At last she smilingly with this gives o'er; 'Fooll fooll' quoth she, 'his wounds will not he sore.'

Thus ehhs and flows the current of her sorrow, And time doth weary time with her complaining.

She looks for night and then she longs for morrow,

And both she thinks too long with her remain-

Short time seems long in sorrow's sharp sustaining.

Though woe he heavy, yet it seldom sleeps; And they that watch see time how slow it creeps.

Which all this time hath overslipp'd her thought, That she with painted images hath spent; Being from the feeling of her own grief brought By deep surmise of others' detriment; Losing her woes in shows of discontent.

It easeth some, though none it ever cur'd, To think their dolour others have endur'd.

But now the mindful messenger, come back, Brings home his lord and other company; Who finds his Lucrece clad in mourning black; And round about her tear-distained eye Blue circles stream'd like rainhows in the sky. These water-galls in her dim element Foretell new storms to those already spent.

Which when her sad-beholding husband saw, Amazedly in her sad face he stares: Her eyes, though sod in tears, look'd red and raw,

Her lively colour kill'd with deadly cares. He hath no power to ask her how she fares, But stood like old acquaintance in a trance, Met far from home, wondering each other's chance.

At last he takes her by the bloodless hand, And thus begins: 'What uncouth ill event Hath thee befallen, that thou dost trembling stand?

Sweet love, what spite hath thy fair colour spent?

Why art thou thus attir'd in discontent?
Unmask, dear dear, this moody heaviness,
And tell thy grief, that we may give redress.

Three times with sighs she gives her sorrow fire,
Ere once she can discharge one word of woe:
At length address'd to answer his desire,

She modestly prepares to let them know Her honour is ta'en prisoner hy the foe; While Collatine and his consorted lords With sad attention long to hear her words,

And now this pale swan in her watery nest Begins the sad dirge of her certain ending: 'Few words, quoth she, 'shall fit the trespass best,

Where no excuse can give the fault amending: In me more woes than words are now depending; [long, And my laments would be drawn out

And my laments would he drawn out too To tell them all with one poor tired tongue.

Then he this all the task it hath to say:—Dear hushand, in the interest of thy hed A stranger came, and on that pillow lay Where thou wast wont to rest thy weary head; And what wrong else may he imagined By foul enforcement might be deed.

By foul enforcement might be done to me, From that, alas! thy Lucrece is not free.

'For in the dreadful dead of dark midnight, With shining falchion in my chamber came A creeping creature, with a flaming light, And softly cried, Awake, thou Roman dame, And entertain my love; else lasting shame On thee and thine this night I will inflict, If thou my love's desire do contradict.

'Forsome hard-favour'd groom of thine, quothhe, Unless thou yoke thy liking to my will, I'll murder straight, and then I'll slaughter thee, And swear I found you where you did fulfil The loathsome act of lust, and so did kill

The lechers in their deed: this act will be My fame, and thy perpetual infamy.

With this I did begin to start and cry,
And then against my heart he set his sword,
Swearing, unless I took all patiently,
I should not live to speak another word:
So should my shame still rest upon record,
And never he forgot in mighty Rome
The adulterate death of Lucrece and her

'Mine enemy was strong, my poor self weak, And far the weaker with so strong a fear: My hloody judge forhade my tongue to speak; No rightful plea might plead for justice there:

groom.

His scarlet lust came evidence to swear

That my pure beauty had purloin'd his eyes,
Andwhenthe judgeisrobb'd, the prisoner dies.

'O teach me how to make mine own excuse!
Or, at least, this refuge let me find;
Though my gross blood be stain'd with the abuse,

Immaculate and spotless is my mind;
That was not forc'd; that never was inclin'd
To accessary yieldings, but still pure
Doth in her poison'd closet yet endure.'

Lo here, the hopeless merchant of this loss, With head declin'd, and voice damn'd up with woe,

With sad-set eyes, and wretched arms across From lips new-waxen pale hegins to hlow

And hroils root out the work of masonry, Nor Mars his sword nor war's quick fire shall hurn

The living record of your memory. 'Gainst death and all-oblivious enmity Shall you pace forth; your praise shall still find

Even in the eyes of all posterity That wear this world out to the ending doom. So, till the judgment that yourself arise, You live in this, and dwell in lovers' eyes.

Sweet love, renew thy force; be it not said. Thy edge should blunter he than appetite, Which but to-day by feeding is allay'd, To-morrow sharpen'd in his former might: So, love, be thou; although to-day thou fill Thy hungry eyes, even till they wink with fulness.

To-morrow see again, and do not kill The spirit of love with perpetual dulness. Let this sad interim like the ocean be Which parts the shore, where two contracted-new Come daily to the banks, that, when they see Return of love, more blest may be the view; Or call it winter, which, heing full of care, Makes summer's welcome thrice more wish'd, more rare.

LVII.

Being your slave, what should I do but tend Upon the hours and times of your desire? I have no precious time at all to spend. Nor services to do, till you require. Nor dare I chide the world-without-end hour, Whilst I, my sovereign, watch the clock for you, Nor think the bitterness of absence sour, When you have bid your servant once adieu; Nor dare I question with my jealous thought Where you may be, or your affairs suppose, But, like a sad slave, stay and think of nought, Save, where you are now happy you make those:

So true a fool is love, that in your will (Though you do anything) he thinks no ill.

That God forbid, that made me first your slave, I should in thought control your times of pleasure,

Or at your hand the account of hours to crave, Being your vassal, bound to stay your leisure! O, let me suffer (being at your heck) The imprison'd absence of your liberty And patience, tame to sufferance, bide each check Without accusing you of injury Be where you list; your charter is so strong, That you yourself may privilege your time: Do what you will, to you it doth belong Yourself to pardon of self-doing crime. I am to wait, though waiting so be hell; Not blame your pleasure, be it ill or well.

If there be nothing new, but that which is Hath heen hefore, how are our brains heguil'd, Which labouring for invention bear amiss The second burthen of a former child! O, that record could with a backward look. Even of five hundred courses of the sun, Show me your image in some antique book,

Since mind at first in character was done! That I might see what the old world could say To this composed wonder of your frame; Whether we are mended, or whe'r hetter they, Or whether revolution he the same. O! sure I am, the wits of former days To subjects worse have given admiring praise.

Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore, So do our minutes hasten to their end; Each changing place with that which goes before In sequent toil all forwards do contend. Nativity, once in the main of light, Crawls to maturity, wherewith heing crown'd Crooked eclipses 'gainst his glory fight, And Time, that gave, doth now his gift confound Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth, And delves the parallels in heauty's hrow; Feeds on the rarities of nature's truth, And nothing stands but for his scythe to mow And yet, to times in hope, my verse shall stand, Praising thy worth, despite his cruel hand.

Is it thy will thy image should keep open My heavy eyelids to the weary night? Dost thou desire my slumhers should be hroken, While shadows, like to thee, do mock my sight? Is it thy spirit that thou send'st from thee So far from home, into my deeds to pry; To find out shames and idle hours in me, 🛝 The scope and tenor of thy jealousy? O no! thy love, though much, is not so great; -It is my love that keeps mine eye awake; Mine own true love that doth my rest defeat, To play the watchman ever for thy sake: For thee watch I, whilst thou dost wake elsewhere,

From me far off, with others all-too-near.

Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye, And all my soul, and all my every part; And for this sin there is no remedy, It is so grounded inward in my heart. Methinks no face so gracious is as mine, No shape so true, no truth of such account, And for myself mine own worth to define, As I all other in all worths surmount But when my glass shows me myself indeed, Beated and chopp'd with tann'd antiquity, Mine own self-love quite contrary I read, Self so self-loving were iniquity. 'Tis thee (myself) that for myself I praise,

Painting my age with beauty of thy days.

Against my love shall he, as I am now, With Time's injurious hand crush'd and o'erworn; When hours have drain'd his blood, and fill'd his brow

With lines and wrinkles; when his youthful morn Hath travell'd on to age's steepy night; And all those beauties, whereof now he's king, Are vanishing or vanish'd out of sight, Stealing away the treasure of his spring: For such a time do I now fortify Against confounding age's cruel knife, That he shall never cut from memory My sweet love's heauty, though my lover's life. The grief away that stops his answer so: But wretched as he is he strives in vain: What be breathes out his breath drinks up again.

As through an arch the violent roaring tide Outruns the eya that doth behold his haste: Yet in the eddy boundeth in his pride Back to the strait that forc'd him on so fast: In rage sent out, recall'd in rage, being past: Even so he sighs, his sorrows make a saw, To push grief on, and back the same grief draw.

Which speechless woe of his poor she attendeth, And his untimely frenzy thus awaketh: Dear lord, thy sorrow to my sorrow lendeth Another power; no flood by raining slaketh. My woa too sensible thy passion maketh More feeling-painful: let it then suffice To drown one woe, one pair of weeping eyes.

And for my sake, when I might charm thee so. ·For she that was thy Lucrece, -now attend me; Be suddenly revenged on my foe, [fend me Thioe, mine, his own; suppose thou dost de-From what is past: the help that thou shalt lend me

Comes all too late, yet let the traitor die; For sparing justice feeds iniquity.

'But ere I name him, you, fair lords,' quoth

she, (Speaking to those that came with Collatine) 'Shall plight your honourable faiths to me, With swift pursuit to venge this wrong of mine; For 'tis a meritorious fair design

To chase injustice with revengeful arms: Knights, by their oaths, should right poor ladies' harms.'

At this request, with noble disposition Each present lord began to promise aid, As bound in knighthood to her imposition, Longing to hear the hateful foe bewray'd. But she, that yet her sad task hath not said,

The protestation stops. 'O speak,' quoth she, me? 'How may this forced stain be wip'd from

What is the quality of mine offence, Being constrain'd with dreadful circumstance? May my pure mind with the foul act dispense, My low-declined honour to advance?

May any terms acquit me from this chance? The poison'd fountain clears itself again; And why not I from this compelled stain?'

With this, they all at once began to say, Her body's stain her mind untainted clears; While with a joyless smile she turns away The face, that map which deep impression bears Of bard misfortune, carv'd in it with tears. 'No, no,' quoth she, 'no dame, hereafter living,

By my excuse shall claim excuse's giving.'

Here with a sigh, as if her heart would break, She throws forth Tarquin's name: 'He, he, she says,

But more than 'be' her poor tongue could not Till after many accents anddelays, Untimely breathings, sick and short assays, She utters this: 'He, he, fair lords, 'tis he, That guides this hand to give this wound to

That blow did bail it from the deep unrest Of that polluted prison where it breath'd: Her contrite sighs unto the clouds bequeath'd Her winged sprite, and through ber wounds doth fly Life's lasting date from cancell'd destiny.

Stone-still, astonish'd with this deadly deed. Stood Collatine and all his lordly crew; Till Lucrece' father that beholds her bleed, Himself on her self-slaughter's body threw; And from the purple fountain Brutus drew

The murderous knife, and as it left the place. Her blood, in poor revenge, beld it in chase;

And bubbling from ber breast, it doth divide In two slow rivers, that the crimson blood Circles her body in on every side, Who like a late-sack'd island vastly stood Bare and unpeopled, in this fearful flood. Some of her blood still pure and red remain'd,

And some look'd black, and that false Tarquin stain'd.

About the mourning and congealed face Of that black blood a watery rigol goes, Which seems to weep upon the tainted place: And ever since, as pitying Lucrece' woes, Corrupted blood some watery token shows; And blood untainted still doth red abide. Blushing at that which is so putrefied.

'Daughter, dear daughter,' old Lucretius cries,
'That life was mine which thou hast here depriv'd.

If in the child the father's image lies, Where shall I live now Lucrece is unliv'd? Thou wast not to this end from me deriv'd. If children predecease progenitors, We are their offspring, and they none of ours.

Poor broken glass, I often did behold In thy sweet semblance my old age new born; But now that fair fresh mirror, dim and old, Shows me a barebon'd death by time ontworn: O, from thy cheeks my image thou hast torni And shiver'd all the beauty of my glass, That I no more can see what once I was.

O time, cease thou thy course, and last no longer,

If they surcease to be that should survive. Shall rotten death make conquest of the stronger, And leave the faltering feeble souls alive? The old bees die, the young possess their hive: Then live, sweet Lucrece, live again, and see Thy father die, and not thy father thee!"

The right of sepulchres, were sborn away, To live a second life on second head, Ere heauty's dead fleece made another gay: In him those holy antique hours are seen, Without all ornament, itself, and true, Making no summer of another's green, Rohhing no old to dress his heanty new: And him as for a map doth Nature store, To show false Art what beauty was of yore.

Those parts of thee that the world's eye doth view Want nothing that the thought of hearts can mend:

Alltongues (the voice of souls) give thee that due, Uttering hare truth, even so as foes commend. Thine outward thus with outward praise is crown'd;

But those same tongues that give thee so thine

In other accents do this praise confound, By seeing farther than the eye hath shown. They look into the heauty of thy mind, And that, in guess, they measure hy thy deeds: Then (churls) their thoughts, although their eyes were kind,

To thy fair flower add the rank smell of weeds: But why thy odour matcheth not thy show, The solve is this, -that thou dost common grow.

That thou art hlam'd shall not be thy defect. For slander's mark was ever yet the fair; The ornament of beauty is suspect, A crow that flies in heaven's sweetest air. So thou be good, slander doth hut approve Thy worth the greater, heing woo'd of time; For canker vice the sweetest buds doth love, And thou present'st a pure unstained prime. LXXI.

No longer mourn for me when I am dead Than you shall hear the surly sullen bell Give warning to the world that I am fled From this vile world, with vilest worms to dwell:

Nay, if you read this line, remember not The hand that writ it; for I love you so, That I in your sweet thoughts would be forgot, If thinking on me then should make you woe. O, if (I say) you look upon this verse, When I perhaps compounded am with clay, Do not so much as my poor name rehearse; But let your love even with my life decay: Lest the wise world should look into your moso, And mock you with me after I am gone.

O, lest the world should task you to recite What merit liv'd in me, that you should love After my death,—dear love, forget me quite, By this starts Collatine as from a dream, And bids Lucretius give his sorrow place; And then in key-cold Lucrece' bleeding stream He falls, and bathes the pale fear in his face, And counterfeits to die with her a space;

Till manly shame bids him possess his breath, And live, to be revenged on her death.

The deep vexation of his inward soul Hath serv'd a dumb arrest upon his tongue; Who, mad that sorrow should his use control, Or keep him from heart-easing words so long, Begins to talk; but through his lips do throng

Weak words, so thick come, in his poor heart's aid, That no man could distinguish what he said.

Yet sometime Tarquin was pronounced plain, But through his teeth, as if the name he tore. This windy tempest, till it blow up rain, Held back his sorrow's tide, to make it more; At last it rains, and busy winds give o'er:

Then son and father weep with equal strife, Who should weep most for daughter or for wife.

The one doth call her his, the other his, Yet neither may possess the claim they lay, The father says, 'She's mine,' 'O, mine she is,'

Replies her husband: 'do not take away
My sorrow's interest; let no mourner say
He weeps for her, for she was only mine,
And only must be wail'd by Collatine.'

'O,' quoth Lucretius, 'I did give that life Which she too early and too late hath spill'd.' 'Woe, woe,' quoth Collatine, 'she was my wife,

I ow'd her, and 'tis mine that she hath kill'd'
'My daughter!' and 'My wife!' with clamours fill'd

The dispers'd air, who, holding Lucrece' life, Answer'd their cries, 'My daughter!' and 'My wife!'

Brutus, who pluck'd the knife from Lucrece's side,

Seeing such emulation in their woe, Began to clothe his wit in state and pride, Burying in Lucrece' wound his folly's show. He with the Romans was esteemed so

As silly jeering idiots are with kings, For sportive words, and uttering foolish things. But now he throws that shallow habit by, Wherein deep policy did him disguise; And arm'd his long-hid wits advisedly. To check the tears in Collatinus' eyes. 'Thou wronged lord of Rome,' quoth he, 'arise;

Let my unsounded self, suppos'd a fool, Now set thy long-experienc'd wit to school.

'Why, Collatine, is woe the cure for woe? Do wounds help wounds, or grief help grievous deeds?

Is it revenge to give thyself a blow, For his foul act by whom thy fair wife bleeds? Such childish humour from weak minds proceeds:

Thy wretched wife mistook the matter so, To slay herself, that should have slain her foe.

'Courageous Roman, do not steep thy heart
In such relenting dew of lamentations,
But kneel with me, and help to bear thy part,
To rouse our Roman gods with invocations,
That they will suffer these abominations,
(Since Rome herself in them doth stand disgrac'd,)

By our strong arms from forth her fair streets chas'd.

'Now by the Capitol that we adore, And by this chaste blood so unjustly stain'd, By heaven's fair sun that breeds the fat earth's store,

By all our country rights in Rome maintain'd, And by chaste Lucrece' soul that late complain'd Her wrongs to us, and by this bloody knile, We will revenge the death of this true wife.'

This said, he struck his hand upon his breast, And kiss'd the fatal knife to end his vow; And to his protestation urg'd the rest, Who, wondering at him, did his words allow; Then jointly to the ground their knees they bow, And that deep vow which Brutus made before, He doth again repeat, and that they swore.

When they had sworn to this advised doom, They did conclude to bear dead Lucrece thence; To show her bleeding body thorough Rome, And so to publish Tarquin's foul offence: Which being done with speedy diligence,
The Romans plausibly did give consent

The Romans plausibly did give consent To Tarquin's everlasting banishment. Unless you would devise some virtuous lie,
To do more for me than mine own desert,
And hang more praise upon deceased I
Than niggardly truth would willingly impart:
O, lest your true love may seem false in this,
That you for love speak well of me untrue,
My name be buried where my hody is,
And live no more to shame nor me nor you.
For I am sham'd by that which I bring forth,
And so should you, to love things nothing
worth.

When thou reviewest this, thou dost review The very part was consecrate to thee. The earth can have hut earth, which is his due; My spirit is thine, the better part of me: So then thou hast hut lost the dregs of life, The prey of worms, my hody heing dead; The coward conquest of a wretch's knife, Too hase of thee to he remembered. The worth of that, is that which it contains, And that is this, and this with thee remains.

LXXV.

So are you to my thoughts, as food to life,
Or as sweet-season'd showers are to the ground,
And for the peace of you I hold such strife
As 'twixt a miser and his wealth is found:
Now proud as an enjoyer, and anon
Douhting the filching age will steal his treasure;
Now counting hest to be with you alone,
Then hetter'd that the world may see my
pleasure:

Sometime all full with feasting on your sight, And hy and hy clean starved for a look; Possessing or pursuing no delight, Save what is had or must from you he took. Thus do I pine and surfeit day by day. Or gluttoning on all, or all away.

LXXVI.

Why is my verse so barren of new pride? So far from variation or quick change? Why, with the time, do I not glance aside To new-found methods and to compounds strange?

Thy glass will show thee how thy heauties wear, Thy dial how thy precious minutes waste; The vacant leaves thy mind's imprint will hear, And of this hook this learning mayst thou taste. The wrinkles which thy glass will truly show, Of mouthed graves will give thee memory; Thou by thy dial's shady stealth mayst know Time's thievish progress to eternity.

Look what thy memory cannot contain, Committo these waste hlanks, and thou shalt find Those children nurs'd, deliver'd from thy hrain, To take a new acquaintance of thy mind. These offices, so oft as thou will look, Shall profit thee, and much enrich thy hook.

LXXVIII.

So off have I invok'd thee for my muse, And found such fair assistance in my verse, As every alien pen hath got my use, And under thee their poesy disperse. Thine eyes, that taught the dumh on high to sing,

And heavy ignorance aloft to fly,
Have added feathers to the learned's wing,
And given grace a double majesty.
Yet he most proud of that which I compile,
Whose influence is thine, and horn of thee:
In others' works thou dost hut mend the style
And arts with thy sweet graces graced be;
But thou art all my art, and dost advance
As high as learning my rude ignorance.

LXXIX.

Whilst I alone did call upon thy aid,
My verse alone had all thy gentle grace;
But now my gracious numbers are decay'd,
And my sick muse doth give another place.
I grant, sweet love, thy lovely argument
Deserves the travail of a worthier pen;
Yet what of thee thy poet doth invent,
He rohs thee of, and pays it thee again.
He lends thee virtue, and he stole that word
From thy hehaviour; heauty doth he give,
And found it in thy cheek; he can afford
No praise to thee but what in thee doth live.
Then thank him not for that which he doth say,
Since what he owes thee thou thyself dost pay.

O, how I faint when I of you do write,
Knowing a hetter spirit doth use your name,
And in the praise thereof spends all his might,
To make me tongue-tied, speaking of your famel
But since your worth (wide as the ocean is)
The humhle as the proudest sail doth hear,
My saucy hark, inferior far to his,
On your broad main doth wilfully appear.
Your shallowest help will hold me up affeat.
Whilst he upon your soundless deep doth ride;
Or, being wreck'd, I am a worthless hoat,

These verses collected by "Mr. W. H." from Shakespeare's private friends are numbered consecutively but such numbering is purely arbitrary. The sequence of their composition is unknown. It is a matter for conjecture whether in naming "Mr. W. H." the "only begetter" applies the term meaning the "getter together" or considered him the inspirer of most of the verses. As a number of these Scantest are addressed to a "dark lady" the former is probably the correct meaning of the phrase. It is also a subject for controversy among students as to whether any or the whole of the Sonnets can be a description of the poet's own feelings, or not. Some members certainly favor the theory that he reveals himself. But in none of his other works does he do so; they are purely objective.

•

FROM fairest creatures we desire increase,
That thereby beauty's rose might never die,
But as the riper should by time decrease,
His tender heir might bear his memory:
But thou, contracted to thine own bright eyes,
Feed'st thy light's flame with self-substantial fuel,

Making a famine where abundance lies,
Thyself thy foe, to thy sweet self too cruel.
Thou that art now the world's fresh ornament,
And only herald to the gaudy spring,
Within thine own bud buriest thy content,
And, tender churl, mak'st waste in niggarding.
Pity the world, or else this glutton be,
To eat the world's due, by the grave and thee.

π.

When forty winters shall besiege thy brow, And dig deep trenches in thy beauty's field, Thy youth's proud livery, so gaz'd on now, Will be a tatter'd weed, of small worth heid: Then being ask'd where all thy beanty lies, Where all the treasure of thy lusty days; To say, within thine own deep sunken eyes, Were an all-eating shame and thriftless praise. How much more praise deserv'd thy beauty's use.

If thon couldst answer—'This fair child of mine Shall sum my count, and make my old excuse—'

Proving his beauty by succession thine!
This were to be new-made when thou art old,
And see thy blood warm when thon feel'st it cold.

III.

Look in thy glass, and tell the face thon viewest, Now is the time that face should form another; Whose fresh repair if now thou not renewest, Thou dost beguile the world, unbless some mother.

For where is she so fair whose unear'd womb Disdains the tillage of thy husbandry? Or who is he so fond will be the tomb Of his self-love, to stop posterity? Thon art thy inother's glass, and she in thee Calls back the lovely April of her prime:

So thou through windows of thine age shalt see,

Despite of wrinkles, this thy golden time. But if thou live, remember'd not to be, Die single, and thine image dies with thee.

IV.

Unthrifty loveliness, why dost thou spend Upon thyself thy beauty's legacy? Nature's bequest gives nothing, but doth lend, And, being frenk, she lends to those are free. Then, beauteous niggard, why dost thou abuse The bounteous largess given thee to give? Profiless usurer, why dost thou use So great a sum of sums, yet canst not live? For having traffic with thyself alone, Thou of thyself thy sweet self dost deceive. Then how, when nature calls thee to be gone, What acceptable audit canst thou leave? Theunus'd beauty must be entomb'd with thee, Which, used, lives th' executor to be.

V.

Those hours that with gentle work did frame
The lovely gaze where every eye doth dwell
Will play the tyrants to the very same,
And that unfair which fairly doth excel;
For never-resting time leads summer on
To hideous winter, and confounds him there;
Sap check'd with frost, and lusty leaves quite

Beauty o'ersnow'd, and bareness everywhere:
Then, were not summer's distillation left,
A liquid prisoner pent in walls of glass,
Beauty's effect with beanty were bereit,
Nor it, nor no remembrance what it was.
But flowers distill'd, though they with winter meet, [sweet. Leese but their show; their substance still lives

VI.

Then let not winter's ragged hand deface In thee thy summer, ere thou be distill'd: Make sweet some phial; treasure thou some place

With beauty's treasure, ere it be self-kill'd. That use it not forbidden usury, Which happies those that pay the willing loan; That's for thyself to breed another thee, He of tall huilding, and of goodly pride: Then if he thrive, and I be cast away, The worst was this; -my love was my decay.

Or I shall live your epitaph to make. Or you survive when I in earth am rotten: From hence your memory death cannot take. Although in me each part will he forgotten. Your name from hence immortal life shall have. Though I, once gone, to all the world must die: The earth can yield me hut a common grave, When you entombed in men's eyes shall lie. Your monument shall be my gentle verse, Which eyes not yet created shall o'er-read; And tongues to be, your being shall rebearsa When all the hreathers of this world are dead; You still shall live (such virtue hath my pen) Where breath most breathes, even in the mouths of men.

.I grant thou wert not married to my muse, And therefore mayst without attaint o'erlook The dedicated words which writers use Of their fair subject, blessing every book. Thou art as fair in knowledge as in hue, Finding thy worth a limit past my praise; And therefore art enforc'd to seek anew Some fresher stamp of the time-bettering days. And do so, love; yet when they have deris'd What strained touches rbetoric can lend, Thou truly fair wert truly sympathiz'd

In true plain words, by thy true-telling friend, And their gross painting might he better us'd Where theeks need blood; in thee it is abus'd.

LXXXIII.

I never saw that you did painting need. And therefore to your fair no painting set. I found, or thought I found, you did exceed The barren tender of a poet's debt: And therefore have I slept in your report That you yourself, being extant, well might show How far a modern quill doth come too short, Speaking of worth, what worth in you doth grow. This silence of my sin you did impute, Which shall he most my glory, heing dumb; For I impair not heauty being mute, When others would give life, and bring a tomh, There lives more life in one of your fair eyes Than hoth your poets can in praise devise.

LXXXIV.

Who is it that says most? which can say more Than this rich praise, -that you alone are you? In whose confine immured is the store Which should example where your equal grew? Lean penury within that pen doth dwell, That to his subject lends not some small glory; But he that writes of you, if he can tell That you are you, so dignifies his story, Let him hut copy what in you is writ, Not making worse what nature made so clear, And such a counterpart shall fame his wit, Making his style admired everywhere.

You to your beauteous hlessings add a curse, Being fond on praise, which makes your praises worse.

LXXXV.

My tongue-tied muse in manners holds her still, While comments of your praise, richly compil'd, Reserve their character with golden quill And precious phrase hy all the muses fil'd. I think good thoughts, while others write good words.

And, like unlettered clerk, still cry 'Amen' To every hymn that able spirit affords, In polish'd form of well-refined pen. Hearing you prais'd, I say, 'Tis so, 'tis true,' And to the most of praise add something more; But that is in my thought, whose love to you, Though words come hindmost, holds his rank before.

Then others for the breath of words respect, Me for my dumh thoughts, speaking in effect.

Was it the proud full sail of his great verse. Bound for the prize of all-too-precious you, That did my ripe thoughts in my brain inhearse, Making their tomb the womh wherein they Was it his spirit, by spirits taught to write Above a mortal pitch, that struck me dead? No, neither he, nor his compeers by night Giving him aid, my verse astonished. He, nor that affahle familiar ghost Which nightly gulls him with intelligence, As victors, of my silence cannot hoast; I was not sick of any fear from thence But when your countenance fil'd up his line, Then lack'd I matter; that enfeebled mine.

LXXXVII.

Ferewell! thou art too dear for my possessing, And like enough thou know'st thy estimate: The charter of thy worth gives thee releasing; My honds in thee are all determinate. For how do I hold thee but by thy granting? And for that riches where is my deserving? The cause of this fair gift in me is wanting, And so my patent back again is swerving. Thyself thou gav'st, thy own worth then not knowing,

Or me, to whom thou gav'st it, else mistaking; So thy great gift, upon misprision growing, Comes home again, on hetter judgment making. Thus have I had thee, as a dream doth flatter, In sleep a king, but, waking, no such matter.

LXXXVIII.

When thou shalt be dispos'd to set me light, And place my merit in the eye of scorn, Upon thy side against myself I'll fight, [sworn: And prove thec virtuous, though thou art for-With mine own weakness heing hest acquainted, Upon thy part I can set down a story Of faults conceal'd, wherein I am attainted; That thou, in losing me, shall win much glory: And I by this will he a gainer too; For hending all my loving thoughts on thee, The injuries that to myself I do, Doing thee vantage, double-vantage me. Such is my love, to thee I so belong, That for thy right myself will hear all wrong.

Say that thou didst forsake me for some fault, And I will comment upon that offence:

Or ten times happier, be it ten for one: Ten times thyself were happier than thou art, If ten of thine ten times refigur'd thee: Then what could Death do if thou shouldst depart.

Leaving thee living in posterity? Be not self-will'd, for thou art much too fair To be Death's conquest and make worms thine heir.

VII.

Lo, in the orient when the gracious light Lifts up his burning head, each under eye Doth homage to his new-appearing sight, Serving with looks his sacred majesty; And having climb'd the steep-up heavenly hill, Resembling strong youth in his middle age, Yet mortal looks adore his beauty still, Attending on his golden pilgrimage; But when from high-most pitch, with weary car, Like feeble age, he reeleth from the day. The eyes, 'fore duteous, now converted are From his low tract, and look another way: So thou, thyself outgoing in thy noon, Unlook'd on diest, unless thou get a son.

Music to hear, why hear'st thou music sadly? Sweets with sweets war not, joy delights in joy, Why lov'st thou that which thou receiv'st not gladly?

Or else receivist with pleasure thine annoy? If the true concord of well-tuned sounds By unions married, do offend thine ear, They do but sweetly chide thee, who confounds In singleness the parts that thou shouldst bear. Mark how one string, sweet husband to another, Strikes each in each by mutual ordering; Resembling sire and child and happy mother, Who, all in one, one pleasing note do sing: Whose speechless song, being many, seeming

Sings this to thee, 'thou single wilt prove none.'

Is it for fear to wet a widow's eye That thou consum'st thyself in single life? Ah! if thou issueless shalt hap to die, The world will wail thee, like a makeless wife: The world will be thy widow, and still weep That thou no form of thee hast left behind, When every private widow well may keep, By children's eyes, her husband's shape in mind. Look, what an unthrift in the world doth spend Shifts but his place, for still the world enjoys it: But beauty's waste hath in the world an end, And kept unus'd, the user so destroys it. No love toward others in that bosom sits, That on himself such murderous shame commits.

For shamel deny that thou bear'st love to any, Who for thyself art so unprovident. Grant if thou wilt thou art belov'd of many, But that thou none lov'st is most evident; For thou art so possess'd with murderous hate, That 'gainst thyself thou stick'st not to conspire, Seeking that beauteous roof to ruinate, Which to repair should be thy chief desire. O change thy thought, that I may change my mindl Shall hate be fairer lodg'd than gentle love? Be, as thy presence is, gracious and kind, Or to thyself, at least, kind-hearted prove: Make thee another self, for love of me That beauty still may live in thine or thee.

As fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou grow'st In one of thine, from that which thou departest: And that fresh blood which youngly thou bestow'st. [convertest. Thou mayst call thine, when thou from youth Herein lives wisdom, beauty, and increase: Without this folly, age, and cold decay. If all were minded so the times should cease. And threescore years would make the world away.

Let those whom Nature hath not made for store, Harsh, featureless, and rude, barrenly perish: Look whom she best endow'd, she gave the lcherish: Which bounteous gift thou shouldst in bounty She carv'd theo for her seal, and meant thereby Thou shouldst print more, nor let that copy

When I do count the clock that tells the time. And see the brave day sunk in hideous night: When I behold the violet past prime And sable curls, all silver'd o'er with white; When lofty trees I see barren of leaves, Which erst from heat did canopy the herd. And summer's green all girdled up in sheaves, Borne on the bier with white and bristly beard; Then of thy beauty do I question make, That thou among the wastes of time must go, Since sweets and beauties do themselves forsake,

And die as fast as they see others grow; And nothing 'gainst Time's scythe can make defence Thence.

Save breed, to brave him when he takes thee

I that you were yourself: but, love, you are No longer yours than you yourself here live: Against this coming end you should prepare, And your sweet semblance to some other give. So should that beauty which you hold in lease. Find no determination: then you were Yourself again, after yourself's decease, When your sweet issue your sweet form should bear.

Who lets so fair a house fall to decay, Which husbandry in honour might uphold Against the stormy gusts of winter's day, And barren rage of death's eternal cold? Ol noue but unthrifts:-Dear my love, you know.

You had a father; let your son say so.

Not from the stars do I my judgment pluck; And yet methinks I have astronomy, But not to tell of good or evil luck, Of plagues, of dearths, or season's quality: Nor can I fortune to brief minutes tell, Pointing to each his thunder, rain, and wind, Or say with princes if it shall go well, By oft predict that I in heaven find: But from thine eyes my knowledge I derive, Speak of my lameness, and I straight will halt; Against thy reasons making no defence. Thou canst not, love, disgrace me half so ill, To set a form upon desired change, As I'll myself disgrace: knowing thy will, I will acquaintance strangle, and look strange; Be absent from thy walks; and in my tongue Thy sweet-beloved name no more shall dwell; Lest I (too much profane) should do it wrong, And haply of our old acquaintance tell.

For thee, against myself I'll vow debate, For I must ne'er love him whom thou dost XC.

Then hate me when thou wilt; if ever, now; Now while the world is bent my deeds to cross, Join with the spite of fortune, make me bow, And do not drop in for an after-loss: Ah! do not, when my heart hath scap'd this sorrow,

Come in the rearward of a conquer'd woe; Give not a windy night a rainy morrow,
To linger out a purpos'd overthrow.
If thou wilt leave me, do not leave me last,
When other petty griefs have done their spite,
But in the onset come; so shall I taste
At first the very worst of fortune's might;
And other strains of woe, which now seem

Compar'd with loss of thee will not seem so.

XCI.

Some glory in their birth, some in their skill, Some in their wealth, some in their body's force;

Some in their garments, though new-fangled ill; [horse; Some in their hawks and hounds, some in their And every humour hath his adjunct pleasure, Wherein it finds a joy above the rest; But these particulars are not my measure, All these I better in one general best. Thy love is better than high birth to me, Richer than wealth, prouder than garments' cost.

Of more delight than hawks and horses be; And, having thee, of all men's pride I boast. Wretched in this alone, that thou mayst take All this away, and me most wretched make.

XCII.

But do thy worst to steal thyself away,
For term of life thou art assured mine;
And life no longer than thy love will stay,
For it depends upon that love of thine.
Then need I not to fear the worst of wrongs,
When in the least of them my life hath end.
I see a better state to me belongs
Than that which on thy humour doth depend:
Thou canst not vex me with inconstant mind,
Since that my life on thy revolt doth lie.
O what a happy title do I find,
Happy to have thy love, happy to die!
But what's so blessed-fair that fears no blot?—
Thou mayst be false, and yet I know it not:

So shall I live, supposing thou art true, Like a deceived husband; so love's face May still seem love to me, thou alter'd new; Thy looks with me, thy heart in other place: For there can live no hatred in thine eye, Therefore in that I cannot know thy change. In many's looks the false heart's history Is writ, in moods and frowns and wrinkles strange:

But heaven in thy creation did decree
That in thy face sweet love should ever dwell;
Whate'er thy thoughts or thy heart's workings be, [tell.

Thy lips should nothing thence but sweetness How like Eve's apple doth thy beauty grow, If thy sweet virtue answer not thy show?

They that have power to hurt and will do none, That do not do the thing they most do show, Who, moving others, are themselves as stone, Unmoved, cold, and to temptation slow; They rightly do inherit Heaven's graces, And husband nature's riches from expense; They are the lords and owners of their faces, Others but stewards of their excellence. The summer's flower is to the summer sweet Though to itself it only live and die; But if that flower with base infection meet, The basest weed outbraves his dignity:

For sweetest things turn sourest by their deeds:

How sweet and lovely dost thou make the shame, Which, like a canker in the fragrant rose, Doth spot the beauty of thy budding name! O, in what sweets dost thou thy sins enclose! That tongue that tells the story of thy days, Making lascivious comments on thy sport, Cannot dispraise but in a kind of praise: Naming thy name blesses an ill report. O, what a mansion have those vices got Which for their habitation chose out theel

Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds.

Where beauty's veil doth cover every blot, And all things turn to fair, that eyes can seel Take heed, dear heart, of this large privilege; The hardest knife ill-used doth lose his edge.

XCVI.

Some say thy fault is youth, some wantonness; Some say thy grace is youth and gentle sport; Both grace and faults are lov'd of more and less:

Thou mak'st faults graces that to thee resort.
As on the finger of a throned queen
The basest jewel will be well esteem'd;
So are those errors that in thee are seen
To truths translated, and for true things deem'd.
How many lambs might the stern wolf betray,
If like a lamb he could his looks translate!
How many gazers mightst thou lead away,
If thou wouldst use the strength of all thy state!
But do not so; I love thee in such sort,
As, thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

XCVII.

How like a winter hath my absence been From thee, the pleasure of the fleeting year! What freezings have I felt, what dark days seen!

What old December's bareness everywhere! And yet this time remov'd was summer's time, The teeming autumn, big with rich increase, Bearing the wanton burden of the prime, And (constant stars) in them I read such art, As truth and heauty shall together thrive. If from thyself to store thou wouldst convert: Or else of thee this I prognosticate.

Thy end is truth's and beauty's doom and date.

TV.

When I consider every thing that grows
Holds in perfection but a little moment,
That this huge state presenteth nought but shows
Whereon the stars in secret influence comment;
When I perceive that men as plants increase,
Cheered and check'd even by the relf-same sky;

Vaunt in their youthful sap, at height decrease, And wear their brave state out of memory; Then the conceit of this inconstant stay Sets you most rich in youth before my sight, Where wasteful time debateth with decay, To change your day of youth to sullied night; And, all in war with Time, for love of you, As he takes from you, I engralt you new.

XVI.

But wherefore 60 not 500 is mightier way. Make war upon this bloody tyrant, Time? And fortify yourself in 5000 decay. With means more blessed than my barren thyme?

Now stand you on the top of happy hours;
And many maiden gardens, yet unset,
With virtuous wish would bear your living
flowers.

Much liker than your painted counterfeit: So should the lines of life that life repair, Which this, Time's pencil, or my puril pen. Neither in inward worth, nor outward fair, Can make you live yourself in eyes of men. To give away yourself keeps yourself still; And you must live, drawn by your own sweet shill.

XVII.

Who will believe my verse in time to come, If it were full d with your most high deserts? Though yet, Heaven knows, it is but as a tomb Which hides your life, and shows not half your parts.

If I could write the beauty of your eyes, And in fresh numbers number all your graces, The age to come would say, this poet lies, Such hearenly touches ne'er touch'd earthly faces. So should my papers, yellow'd with their age, Be scorn'd, like old men of less truth than

tongue;
And your true rights be term'd a poet's rage,
And stretched metre of an antique song:
But were some child of yours alive that time,
You should live twice;—in it, and in my thyme.

XVttt.

Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?
Thou art more lovely and more temperate:
Rough winds do shake the derling hudsof May,
And aummer's lease hath all too short a date:
Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines,
And often is his gold complexion dimm'd;
And every fair from fair sometime declines,
By chance, or nature's changing course, untrimm'd;

But thy eternal summer shall not fade,

Nor lose possession of that fair thou owest; Nor shall Death brag thou wander'st in his shade.

When in eternal lines to time thou growest; So long as men can breathe, or eyes can see, So long lives this, and this gives life to thee.

Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws, And make the earth devour her own sweet brood;

Pluck the keen teeth from the herce tiger's jaws, And burn the long-lie'd phænix in her blood; Make glad and sorry seasons, as thou fleets, And do whate'er thou wilt, swift-footed Time, To the wide world, and all her fadiog sweets; But I forbid thee one most heinous crime: O carve not with thy hours my love's fair brow, Uor draw no lines there with thine antique pen; Him in thy course untainted do allow, Fer beauty's pattern to succeeding men. Yet, do thy worst, old Time: despite thy wrong, My love shall in my verse ever live young.

XX.

A woman's face, with nature's own hand painted, Hast thou, the master-mistress of my passion; A woman's gentle heart, but not acquainted With shifting change, as is felse woman's fashion; [rolling,

An eye more bright than theirs, less false in Gilding the object whereupon it gazeth;
A man in hue, all hues in his controlling,
Which steals men's eyes, and women's souls amereth.

And for a woman wert thou first created;
Till Nature, as she wrought thee, fell a-doting,
And by addition me of thee defeated,
By adding one thing to my purpose nothing.
But since she prick'd thee out for women's pleasure,
Mine be thy love, and thy love's use their

So is it not with me as with that muse, Stirr'd by a painted beauty to his verse; Who heaven itself for ornament doth use, And every fair with his fair doth rehearse; Making a couplement of proud compare, With sun and moon, with earth and sea's rich rems.

With April's first-born flowers, and all things That heaven's air in this huge rondure hems. O let me, true in love, but truly write, And then believe me, my love is as fair. As any mother's child, though not so hright As those gold candles fix'd in heaven's air:

Let them say more than like of heavsay well; I will not graise, that purpose not to sell.

XXII.

My glass shall not persuade me I am old, So long as youth and thou are of one date; But when in thee time's furrows I behold, Then look I death my days should expiate. For all that beauty that doth cover thee Is but the seemly raiment of my heart, Which in thy breast doth live, as thine in me; How can I then be elder than thou art? O therefore, love, be of thyself so wary, As I not for myself but for thee will; Bearing thy heart, which I will keep so chary

Like widow'd wombs after their lords' decease; Yet this abundant issue seem'd to me But bope of orphans, and unfather'd fruit; For summer and his pleasures wait on thee, And, thou away, the very hirds are mute; Or, if they sing, 'tis with so dull a cheer. That leaves look pale, dreading the winter's near.

From you bave I heen absent in the spring, When proud-pied April, dress'd in all his trim, Hath put a spirit of youth in everything, That heavy Saturn laugh'd and leap'd with him. Yet nor the lays of birds, nor the sweet smell Of different flowers in odour and in bue Could make me any summer's story tell, Or from their proud lap plack them where they grew:

Nor did I wonder at the lilies white. Nor praise the deep vermilion in the rose; They were but sweet, but figures of delight, Drawn after you, you pattern of all those. Yet seem'd it winter still, and yon, away, As with your shadow I with these did play:

The forward violet thus did I chide;-Sweet thief, whence didst thou steal thy sweet that smells,

If not from my love's breath? The purple pride Which on thy soft cheek for complexion dwells, In my love's veins thou bast too grossly dy'd. The lily I condemned for thy hand, And buds of marjoram had stolen thy hair: The roses fearfully on thorns did stand, One blushing shame, another white despair; A third, nor red nor white, had stolen of both. And to his robbery had annex'd thy breath; · But for his theft, in pride of all his growth A vengeful canker eat him up to death. More flowers I noted, yet I none could see, But sweet or colour it had stolen from thee.

Where art thou, Muse, that thou forgett'st so long

To speak of that which gives thee all thy might? Spend'st thon thy fury on some worthless song, Darkening thy power, to lend base subjects light? Return, forgetful Muse, and straight redeem In gentle numbers time so idly spent; Sing to the ear that doth thy lays esteem, And gives thy pen both skill and argument. Rise, resty Muse, my love's sweet face survey, If Time bave any wrinkle graven there; If any, be a satire to decay,

And make Time's spoils despised everywhere. Give my love fame faster than Time wastes life; So thou prevent'st his scythe and crooked knife.

O truant Muse, what shall be thy amends For thy neglect of truth in beauty dy'd? Both truth and beauty on my love depends; So dost thou too, and therein dignified. Make answer, Muse: wilt thou not haply say, 'Truth needs no colour with his colour fix'd, Beanty no pencil, beanty's truth to lay; But best is best, if never intermix'd?" Because he needs no praise, wilt thou be dumb? | And in this change is my invention spent,

Excuse not silence so; for it lies in thee To make him much ontlive a gilded tomb. And to be prais'd of ages yet to be. Then do thy office, Muse; I teach thee bow To make him seem long bence as he shows

My love is strengthen'd, though more weak in seeming;

I love not less, thou less the show appear; That love is merchandiz'd whose rich esteeming The owner's tongue doth publish everywhere. Our love was new, and then hut in the spring, When I was won't to greet it with my lays; As Philomel in summer's front deth sing, And stops her pipe in growth of riper days: Not that the summer is less pleasant now Than when her mournful bymns did hush the night,

But that wild music burthens every bough, And sweets grown common lose their dear delight. tougue,

Therefore, like her, I sometime bold my Because I would not dull you with my song.

Alack! what poverty my Muse hrings forth, That having such a scope to show her pride. The argument, all hare, is of more worth, Than when it bath my added praise beside O bleme me not if I no more can write! Look in your glass, and there appears a face That over-goes my blunt invention quite, Dulling my lines, and doing me disgrace. Were it not sinful, then, striving to mend, To mar the subject that before was well? For to no other pass my verses tend, Than of your graces and your gifts to tell; And more, much more, than in my verse can sit, Your own glass shows you, when you look in it. CIV.

To me, fair friend, you never can be old, For as you were when first your eye I eyed, Such seems your beauty still. Three winters'

[pride: cold Have from the forests sbook three summers Three beauteous springs to yellow autumn turn'd In process of the seasons have I seen; Three April perfumes in three hot Junes burn'd. Since first I saw you fresh, which yet are green. Ah! yet doth beauty, like a dial-hand, Steal from his figure, and no pace perceiv'd; So your sweet bue, which methinks still doth stand. Hath motion, and mine eye may be deceiv'd. For fear of which, bear this, thou age unbred, Ere you were born, was beaut;'s summer dead.

Let not my love be call'd idolatry, Nor my beloved as an idol show, Since all alike my songs and praises be, To one, of one, still such, and ever so. Kind is my love to-day, to-morrow kind, Still constant in a woudrons excellence; Therefore my verse, to constancy confin'd One thing expressing, leaves out difference. Fair, kind, and true, is all my argument, Fair, kind, and true, varying to other words; As tender nurse ber babe from faring ill.
Presume not on thy beart when mine is slain;
Thou gav'st me thine, not to give back again.

XXIII

As an unperfect actor on the stage,
Who with his fear is put besides his part,
Or some fierce thing replete with too much rage,
Whose strength's abundance weakens his own
heart:

So I, for fear of trust, forget to say
The perfect ceremony of love's rite,
And in mine own love's strength seem to decay,
O'ercharg'd with burden of mine own love's might.

O let my books be, then, the eloquence And dumb presagers of my speaking breast; Who plead for love, and look for recompense More than that tongue that more hath more express'd.

O learn to read what silent love hath writ: To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit.

XXIV.

Mine eye hath play'd the painter, and hath stell'd

Thy beauty's form in table of my heart:
My body is the frame wherein 'tis held,
And perspective it is best painter's art.
For through the painter must you see his skill,
To find where your true image pictur'd lies,
Which in my bosom's shop is hanging still,
That hath his windows glazed with thine eyes.
Now see what good turns eyes for eyes have
done:

Mine eyes have drawn thy shape, and thine for me Isun

Are windows to my breast, where-through the Delights to peep, to gaze therein on thee;
Yet eyes this cunning want to grace their art,
They draw but what they see, know not the heart.

XXV.

Let those who are in favour with their stars, Of public honour and proud titles boast, Whilst I, whom fortune of such triumph bars, Unlook'd for joy in that I honour most. Great princes' favourites their fair leaves spread But as the marigold at the sun's eye; And in themselves their pride lies buried, For at a frown they in their glory die. The painful warrior famoused for fight, After a thousand victories once foil'd, Is from the book of honour razed quite, And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd: Then happy I, that love and am belov'd Where I may not remove, nor be remov'd.

XXVI.

Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage
Thy merit hath my duty strongly knit,
To thee I send this written embassage,
To witness duty, not to show my wit.
Duty so great, which wit so poor as mine
May make seem bare, in wanting words to show it;

But that I hope some good conceit of thine In thy soul's thought, all naked, will bestow it: Till whatsoever star that guides by moving, Points on me graciously with fair aspect, And puts apparel on my tatter'd loving, To show me worthy of thy sweet respect:
Then may I dare to boast bow I do love thee,
Till then, not show my head where thou mayst prove me.

XXVII.

Weary with toil, I haste me to my hed,
The dear repose for limbs with travel tir'd;
But then begins a journey in my head,
To work my mind, when body's work 's expir'd:
For then my thoughts (from far where I abide)
Intend a zealous pilgrimage to thee,
And keep my drooping eyelids open wide,
Looking on darkness which the blind do see:
Save that my soul's imaginary sight
Presents thy shadow to my sightless view,
Which, like a jewel hung in ghastly night,
Makes black night beauteous, and her old face new.

Lo, thus, by day my limbs, by night my mind For thee, and for myself, no quiet find.

XXVIII.

How can I then return in happy plight,
That am debarr'd the benefit of rest?
When day's oppression is not eas'd by night,
But day by night and night by day oppress'd?
And each, though enemies to either's reign,
Do in consent shake hands to torture me,
The one by toil, the other to complain
How far I toil, still farther off from thee.
I tell the day, to please him, thou art bright,
And dost him grace when clouds do blot the heaven:

So flatter I the swart-complexion'd night; When sparkling stars twire not, thou gild'st the even.

But day doth daily draw my sorrows longer, And night doth nightly make grief's strength seem stronger.

XXIX.

When in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes, I all alone beweep my outcast state, [cries, And trouble deaf Heaven with my bootless And look upon myself, and curse my fate, Wishing me like to one more rich in hope, Featur'd like him, like him with friends possess'd,

Desiring this man's art, and that man's scope, With what I most enjoy contented least; Yet in these thoughts myself almost despising. Haply I think on thee,—and then my state (Like to the lark at break of day arising From sullen earth) sings hymns at heaven's

For thy sweet love remember'd such wealth.
That then I scorn to change my state with kings.

When to the sessions of sweet silent thought I summon up remembrance of things past, I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought, And with old woes new wail my dear times' waste.

Then can I drown an eye, unus'd to flow, For precious friends hid in death's dateless night,

And weep afresh love's long-since cancell'd woe, And moan the expense of many a vanish'd sight. Three themes in one, which wondrons scope affords.

Fair, kind, and true, have often liv'd alone,

Which three, till now, never kept seat in one.

CVI.

When in the chronicle of wasted time
I see descriptions of the fairest wights,
And beauty making beautiful old rhyme,
In praise of ladies dead and lovely knights,
Then in the blazon of sweet beauty's best,
Of hand, of foot, of lip, of eye, of brow,
I see their antique pen would have express'd
Even such a beauty as you master now.
So all their praises are but prophecies
Of this our time, all you prefiguring;
And, for they look'd but with divining eyes,
They had not skill enough your worth to sing:
For we, which now behold these present days,
Have eyes to wonder, but lack tongues to CVII.

Not mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul Of the wide world dreaming on things to come, Can yet the lease of my true love control, Suppos'd as forfeit to a confin'd doom. The mortal moon hath her eclipse endur'd, And the sad augers mock their own presage; Incertainties now crown themselves assur'd, And peace proclaims olives of endless age. Now with the drops of this most balmy time Mylovelooks fresh, and Death to mesubscribes, Since spite of him I'll live in this poor rhyme, While he insults o'er dull and speechless tribes. And thou in this shalt find thy monument, When tyrants' crests and tombs of brass are spent.

CVIII.

What's in the brain that ink may character, Which hath not figur'd to thee my true spirit? What's new to speak, what new to register, That may express my love, or thy dear ment? Nothing, sweet boy; but yet, like prayers divine, I must each day say o'er the very same; Counting no old thing old, thou mine, I thine, Even as when first I hallow'd thy fair name. So that eternal love in love's fresh case Weighs not the dust and injury of age, Nor gives to necessary wrinkles place, But makes antiquity for aye his page; Finding the first conceit of love there bred, Where time and outward form would show it dead.

CIX.

O, never say that I was false of heart,
Though absence seem'd my flame to qualify!
As easy might I from myself depart.
As from my soul, which in thy breast doth lie:
That is my home of love: if I have rang'd,
Like him that travels, I return again;
Just to the time, not with the time exchang'd,—
So that myself bring water for my stain.
Never believe, though in my nature reign'd
All frailties that besiege all kinds of blood,
That it could so preposterously be stain'd,
To leave for nothing all thy sum of good;
For nothing this wide universe I call,
Save thou, my rose; in it thon art my all.

CX.

Alas, 'tis true, I have gone here and there, And made myself a motley to the view, Gor'd mine own thoughts, sold cheap what is most dear,
Made old offenses of affections new.
Most true it is, that I have look'd on truth Askance and strangely; but, by all above,
These blenches gave my heart another youth, And worst essays prov'd thee my best of love.
Now all is done, have what shall have no end:
Mine appetite I never more will grind
On newer proof, to try an older friend,
A God in love, to whom I am confin'd. [best,
Then give me welcome, next my heaven the
Even to thy pure and most most loving breast.

CXI

O, for my sake do you with Fortune chide, The guilty goddess of my harmful deeds, That did not better for my life provide, Than public means, which public manners breeds.

Thence comes it that my name receives a brand, And almost thence my nature is subdued To what it works in, like the dyer's hand: Pity me then, and wish I were renew'd; Whilst, like a willing patient, I will drink Potions of eysell, 'gainst my strong infection; No bitterness that I will bitter think, Nor double penance, to correct correction. Pity me then, dear friend, and I assure ye,

Even that your pity is enough to cure me.

Your love and pity doth the impression fill Which vulgar scandal stamp'd upon my brow; For what care I who calls me well or ill, So you o'ergreen my bad, my good allow? You are my all-the-world, and I must strive To know my shames and praises from your tongue;

None else to me, nor I to none alive,
That my steel'd sense or changes, right or wrong.
In so profound abysm I throw all care
Of other's voices, that my adder's sense
To critic and to flatterer stopped are.
Mark how with my neglect I do dispense;—
You are so strongly in my purpose bred,
That all the world besides methinks are dead.

CXIII

Since I left you, mine eye is in my mind;
And that which governs me to go about
Doth part his function, and is partly blind,
Seems seeing, but effectually is out;
For it no form delivers to the heart
Of bird, of flower, or shape, which it doth latch;
Of his quick objects hath the mind no part,
Nor his own vision holds what it doth catch;
For if it see the rud'st or gentlest sight,
The most sweet favour, or deform'dst creature,
The mountain or the sea, the day or night,
The crow, or dove, it shapes them to your feature,

Incapable of more, replete with you, My most true mind thus maketh mine untrue.

CXIV.

Or whether doth my mind being crown'd with you,

ACT V.

Scene I .- The Street before Olivia's House. Enter CLOWN and FABIAN.

Fab. Now, as thou lovest me, let me see his

Clo. Good Master Fabian, grant me another request.

Fab. Anything. Clo. Do not desire to see this letter.

Fab. That is to give a dog; and in recompense, desire my dog again.

Enter DUKE, VIOLA, and Attendants.

Duke. Belong you to the Lady Olivia, friends? Clo. Ay, sir; we are some of her trappings. Duke. I know thee well. How dost thou, my good fellow? Clo. Truly, sir, the better for my foes and the worse for my friends. friends. Duke. Just the contrary; the better for thy Clo. No. sir, the worse.

Duke. How can that be? Clo. Marry, sir, they praise me, and make an ass of me; now my foes tell me plainly I am an ass: so that by my foes, sir, I profit in the knowledge of myself, and by my friends I am abused: so, that, conclusions to be as kisses, if your four negatives make your two affirmatives, why then, the worse for my friends and the better for my foes.

Duke. Why, this is excellent.

Clo. By my troth, sir, no; though it please you to be one of my friends.

Duke. Thou shalt not be the worse for me;

there's gold.

Clo. But that it would be donble-dealing, sir, I would you could make it another.

Duke. O, you give me ill counsel.

Clo. Put your grace in your pocket, sir, for this once, and let your flesh and blood obey it.

Duke. Well, I will be so much a sinner to be a double-dealer: there's another.

Clo. Primo, secundo, tertio, is a good play; and the old saying is, the third pays for all; the triplex, sir, is a good tripping measure; or the bells of St. Bennett, sir, may put you in mind; One, two, three.

Duke. You can fool no more money out of me at this throw: if you will let your lady know I am bere to speak with her, and bring her along with you, it may awake my bounty further.

Clo. Marry, sir, lullaby to your bounty till I me again. I go, sir; but I would not have come again. you to think that my desire of baving is the sin of covetousness: but, as you say, sir, let your bounty take a nap, I will awake it anon.

Exit CLOWN.

Enter Antonio and Officers.

Vio. Here comes the man, sir, that did rescue me.

Duke. That face of his I do remember well: Yet, when I saw it last, it was besmeared As black as Vulcan in the smoke of war: A bawbling vessel was be captain of, For shallow draught and bulk unprizable; With which such scathful grapple did he make

With the most noble bottom of our feet, That very envy and the tongue of loss Cried fame and bonour on him.-What's the matter?

r Off. Orsino, this is that Antonio [Candy: That took the Phoenix and her fraught from And this is he that did the Tiger board When your young nephew Titus lost his leg: Here in the streets, desperate of shame and state, In private brabble did we apprehend him.

Vio. He did me kindness, sir; drew on my side;

But, in conclusion, put strange speech upon me, I know not what 'twas, but distraction.

Duke. Notable pirate! thou salt-water thief! What foolish boldness brought thee to their mercies?

Whom thon, in terms so bloody and so dear, Hast made thine enemies?

Ant.

Orsino, noble sir, Be pleased that I shake off these names you give me:

Antonio never yet was thief or pirate, Though, I confess, on base and ground enough, Orsino's enemy. A witchcraft drew me hither: That most ingrateful boy there, by your side, From the rude sea's enraged and foamy mouth Did I redeem; a wreck past bope he was: His life I gave him, and did thereto add My love, without retention or restraint. All his in dedication: for his sake, Did I expose myself, pure for his love, Into the danger of this adverse town; Drew to defend him when be was beset: Not meaning to partake with me in danger,— Taught him to face me out of his acquaintance, And grew a twenty-years-removed thing While one would wink; denied me mine own purse,

Which I had recommended to his use Not half an hour before.

Vio. How canythis be Duke. When came he to this town? Ant. To-day, my lord; and for three months before, No interim, not a minute's vacancy,— Both day and night did we keep company.

Enter Olivia and her Attendants.

Duke. Here comes the countess; beaven walks on earth.

But for thee, fellow, fellow, thy words are madness

Three months this youth hath tended upon me;

But more of that anon.—Take them aside. Oli. What would my lord, but that he may not have,

Wherein Olivia may seem serviceable!— Cesaria, you do not keep promise with me. Vio. Madam?

Duke. Gracious, Olivia,-Oli. What do you say, Cesario?-

my lord, me. Vio. My lord would speak, my duty hushes Oli. If it be aught to the old tune, my lord,

-Good

It is as fat and fulsome to mine ear As howling after music. Still so cruel? Duke.

Oli. Still so constant, lord.

Duke. What! to perverseness? you uncivil lady,

To whose ingrate and unauspicious altars My soul the faithfull'st offerings hath breathed

That e'er devotion tender'd! What shall I do?
Oli. Even what it please my lord, that shall become him. [to do it.

Duke. Why should I not, had I the heart Like the Egyptian thief, at point of death, Kill what I love; a savage jealousy [this: That sometime savours nobly?—But hear me Since you to non-regardance cast my faith, And that I partly know the instrument

That screws me from my true place in your favour.

Live you the marble-breasted tyrant still;
But this your minion, whom I know you love,
And wbom, by heaven I swear, I tender dearly,
Him will I tear out of that cruel eye
Where be sits crowned in his master's sprite.—
Come, boy, with me; my thoughts are ripe in mischief:

I'll sacrifice the lamb that I do love,
To spite a raven's heart within a dove.

Vio. And I, most jocund, apt, and willingly,
To do you rest, a thousand deaths would die.
[Following.

Oli. Where goes Cesario?

Vio. After him I love
More than I love these eyes, more than my life,
More, by all mores, than e'er I shall love wife;
If I do feign, you witnesses above
Punish my life for tainting of my love!

Oli. Ah me, detested! how am I beguiled?
Vio. Who does beguile you? who does do you wrong?
[long?--

Oli. Hast thou forgot thyself? Is it so Call forth the holy father?

Duke. Come away. [To Viola. Oli. Whither, my lord? Cesario, husband, stay.

Duke. Husband?

Oli. Ay, busband, can he that deny? Duke. Her husband, sirrah?

Vio. No, my lord, not I.
Oli. Alas, it is the baseness of thy fear
That makes thee strangle thy propriety:
Fear not Cesario, take thy fortunes up;
Be that thou know'st thou art, and then thou art [father]

As great as that thou fear'st—O, welcome,

Re-enter Attendant and Priest.

Father, I charge thee, by thy reverence, Here to unfold,—though lately we intended To keep in darkness what occasion now Reveals before 'tis ripe,—what thou dost know Hath newly past between this youth and me.

Priest. A contract of eternal bond of love, Confirmed by mutual joinder of your hands, Attested by the holy close of lips, Strengthen'd by interchangement of your rings; And all the ceremony of this compact Sealed in my function, by my testimony: Since when, my watch hath told me, toward my grave

I have travelled but two hours. [t]

Duke. O thou dissembling cub! what wilt When time hath sowed a grizzle on thy case? Or will not else thy craft so quickly grow That thine own trip shall be thine overthrow? Farewell, and take her; but direct thy feet Where thou and I henceforth may never meet.

Vio. My lord, I do protest,—

Oli. O, do not swear; Hold little faith, though thou hast too much tear.

Enter Sir Andrew Ague-cheek with his head broke.

Sir And. For the love of God, a surgeon; send one presently to Sir Toby.

Oli. What's the matter?

Sir And. He has broke my head across, and has given Sir Toby a bloody coxcomb too; for the love of God, your help: I bad rather than forty pound I were at home.

Oli. Who has done this, Sir Andrew? Sir And. The count's gentleman, one Cesario: we took him for a coward, but be's the very devil incardinate.

Duke. My gentleman, Cesario? Sir And. Od's lifelings, here he is:—You broke my head for nothing; and that that I did I was set on to do 't by Sir Toby. [hurf you: Vio. Why do you speak to me? I never You drew your sword upon me witbout cause; But I bespake you fair and hurt you not.

Sir And. If a bloody coxcomb be a hurt, you have hurt me; I think you set nothing by a bloody coxcomb.

Enter Sir Toby Belch drunk, led by the Clown.

Here comes Sir Toby halting; you shall hear more: but if he had not been in drink he would have tickled you othergates than he did.

Duke. How now, gentleman? how is 't with'

Sir To. That's all one; he has hurt me, and there's the end on 't.—Sot, didst see Dick surgeon, sot?

Clo. O he's drunk, Sir Toby, an bour agone; his eyes were set at eight i' the morning.

Sir To. Then he's a rogue. After a passymeasure, or a pavin, I hate a drunken rogue.

Oli. Away with him. Who hath made this have with them?

Sir And. I'll help you, Sir Toby, because we'll be dressed together.

Sir To. Will you belp an ass-head, and a coxcomb, and a knave? a thin-faced knave, a gull? Oli. Get him to bed, and let his hurt be looked to.

Exeunt CLOWN, Sir To., and Sir AND.

Enter SEBASTIAN.

Seb. I am sorry, madam, I have hurt your kinsman;

But, had it been the brother of my blood, I must have done no less, with wit and safety. You throw a strange regard upon me, and By that I do perceive it hath offended you; Pardon me, sweet one, even for the vows We made each other but so late ago.

Duke. One face, one voice, one habit, and two persons;

[thou be, A natural perspective, that is, and is not.

Drink up the monarch's plague, this flattery, Or whether shall I say mine eye saith true, And that your love taught it this alchymy, To make of monsters and things indigest Such cherubins as your sweet self resemble, Creating every bad a perfect best, As fast as objects to his beams assemble? O, 'bis the first; 'tis flattery in my seeing, And my great mind most kingly drinks it up: Mine eye well knows what with his gust is 'greeing,

And to his palate doth prepare the cup:
If it be poison'd, 'tis the lesser sin'
That mine eye loves it, and doth first begin.

CXV.

Those lines that I before have writ, do lie;
Even those that said I could not love you dearer;
Yet then my judgment knew no reason why
My most full flame should afterwards burn Clearer.

But reckoning time, whose million'd accidents. Creep in 'twixt vows, and change decrees of Tan sacred beauty, blunt the sharp'st intents, Whilst it hath thought itself so blessed never!

Divert strong minds to the course of altering things;

Whilst it hath thought itself so blessed never!

How have mine eyes out of their spheres been fitted.

Alasi why, fearing of Time's tyranny,
Might I not then say, 'Now I love you best,'
When I was certain o'er incertainty,
Crowning the present, doubting of the rest?
Love is a babe; then might I not say so,
To give full growth to that which still doth grow?

CXVIII.

Like as, to make our appetites more keen, With eager compounds we our palate urge; As, to prevent our maladies unseen, We sicken to shun sickness, when we purge; Even so, being full of your ne'er-cloying sweetness,

To bitter sauces did I frame my feeding.
And, sick of welfare, found a kind of, meetness
To be diseas'd, ere that there was true needing.

Thus policy in love, to anticipate
The ills that were not, grew to faults assured,
And brought to medicine a healthful state,
Which, rank of goodness, would by ill be cured.
But thence I learn, and find the lesson true,
Drugs poison him that so fell sick of you.

CXIX.

What potions have I drunk of Siren tears,
Distill'd from limbecs foul as hell within,
Applying fears to hopes, end hopes to fears,
Still losing when I saw myself to win!
What wretched errors hath my heart committed,
Whilst it hath thought itself so blessed never!
How have mine eyes out of their spheres been fitted.

In the distraction of this madding fever!
O benefit of ill! now I find true
That better is by evil made better;
And ruin'd love, when it is built znew,
Grows fairer than at first, more strong, far greater.

So I return rebuk'd to my content, And gain by ill thrice more than I have spent.

XIL

Crabbed age and youth Cannot live together; Youth is full of pleasance. Age is full of care: Youth like summer morn, Age like winter weather; Youth like summer brave, Age like winter bare. Youth is full of sport Age's breath is short, Youth is nimble, age is lame: Youth is hot and bold, Age is weak and cold: Youth is wild, and age is tame, Age, I do abhor thee, Youth, I do adore thee; O, my love, my love is young! Age, I do defy thee A sweet shepherd, hie thee For methinks thou stay'st too long.

XIII.

Beauty is but a vain and doubtful good,
A shining gloss, that vadeth suddenly;
A flower that dies, when first it 'gins to bud;
A brittle glass, that's broken presently:
A doubtful good, a gloss, a glass, a flower,
Lost, vaded, broken, dead within an hour.
And as goods lost are seld or never found,
As vaded gloss no rubbing will refresh,
As flowers dead lie wither'd on the ground,
As broken glass no cement can redress,
So beauty, blemish'd once, for ever's lost,
In spite of physic, painting, pain, and cost.

XIV.

Good night, good rest. Ah! neither be my share:
She bade good night, that kept my rest away;

And daff'd me to a cabin hang'd with care,
To descant on the doubts of my decay.
Farewell, quoth she, and come again tomorrow;
Farewell I could not, for I supp'd with sorrow.

Yet at my parting sweetly did she smile, In scorn or friendship, nill I construe whether: 'T may be, she joy'd to jest at my exile, 'T may be, again to make me wander thither: Wander, a word for shadows like myself, As take the pain, but cannot pluck the pelf.

XV.

Lord, how mine eyes throw gazes to the east!
My heart doth charge the watch; the morning rise

Doth cite each moving sense from idle rest.

Not daring trust the office of mine eyes,
While Philomela sits and sings, I sit and mark
And wish her lays were tuned like the lark;

For she doth welcome daylight with her ditty,
And drives away dark dismal-dreaming night:
The night so pack'd, I post unto my pretty;
Heart hath his hope, and eyes their wished sight: Isorrow;
Sorrow chang'd to solace, solace mix'd with
For why? she sigh'd, and bade me come tomorrow.

Were I with her, the night would post too soon;
But now are minutes added to the hours;
To spite me now, each minute seems a moon;
Yet not for me, shine sun to succour flowers!
Packs night, peep day; good day, of night
now borrow; [morrow.
Short, night, to-night, and length thyself to-

CXXII.

Thy gift, thy tables, are within my brain Full character'd with lasting memory Which shall above that idle rank remain, Beyond all date, even to eternity:
Or at the least so long as brain and heart Have faculty hy nature to subsist:
Till each to raz'd oblivion yield his part Of thee, thy record never can be miss'd. That poor retention could not so much hold, Nor need I tallies thy dear love to score; Therefore to give them from me was I bold, To trust those tables that receive thee more:
To keep an adjunct to remember thee, Were to import forgetfulness in me.

CXXIII.

No! Time, thou shalt not hoast that I do change:

Thy pyramids built up with newer might To me are nothing novel, nothing strange; They are but dressings of a former sight. Our dates are hrief, and therefore we admire What thou dost foist upon us that is old; And rather make them horn to our desire, Than think that we before have heard them told.

Thy registers and thee I both defy,
Not wondering at the present nor the past;
For thy records and what we see do lie,
Made more or less by thy continual haste:
This I do vow, and this shall ever be,
I will be true, despite thy scythe and thee:

CXXIV.

If my dear love were but the child of state, It might for Fortune's bastard be unfather'd, As subject to Time's love or to Time's hate, Weeds among weeds, or flowers with flowers gather'd.

gather'd.

No, it was builded far from accident;
It suffers not in smiling pomp, nor falls
Under the blow of thralled discontent,
Whereto the inviting time our fashion calls:
It fears not policy, that heretic,
Which works on leases of short-number'd hours,
But all alone stands hugely politic, |showers.
That it nor grows with heat, nor drowns with
To this I witness call the fools of time,
Which die for goodness, who have liv'd for crime.

CXXV.

Were it aught to me I hore the canopy,
With my extern the outward honouring,
Or laid great hases for eternity,
Which prove more short than waste or ruining?
Have I not seen dwellers on form and favour
Lose all, and more, hy paying too much rent,
For compound sweet foregoing simple savour,
Pitiful thrivers, in their gazing spent?
No;—let me be obsequious in thy heart,
And take thou my oblation, poor but free,
Which is not mix'd with seconds, knows no art,
But mutual render, only me for thee.
Hence, thou suhorn'd informer! a true soul,
When most impeach'd, stands least in thy

Who hast by waning grown, and therein show'st
Thy lovers withering, as thy sweet self grow'st!
If Nature, sovereign mistress over wrack,
As thou goest onwards, still will pluck thee back,
She keeps thee to this purpose, that her skill

May time disgrace, and wretched minutes kill. Yet fear her, O thou minion of her pleasure; She may detain, but not still keep her treasure: Her audit, though delay'd, answer'd must be, And her quietus is to render thee.

XXVII.

In the old age black was not counted fair, Or if it were, it bore not beauty's name; But now is black beauty's successive heir, And beauty slander'd with a bastard shame; For since each hand hath put on nature's power, Fairing the foul with art's false borrow'd face, Sweet beauty hath no name, no holy hour, But is profan'd, if not lives in disgrace. Therefore my mistress' eyes are raven black, Her eyes so suited; and they mourners seem At such, who, not born fair, no heauty lack, Slandering creation with a false esteem:
Yet so they mourn, becoming of their woe, That every tongue says, heauty should look

CXXVIII.

How oft, when thou, my music, music play'st, Upon that blessed wood whose motion sounds With thy sweet fingers, when thou gently sway'st

The wiry concord that mine ear confounds, Do I envy those jacks, that nimhle leap To kiss the tender inward of thy hand, Whilst my poor lips, which should that harvest reap,

At the wood's boldness by thee blushing stand!
To he so tickled, they would change their state
And situation with those dancing chips,
O'er whom thy fingers walk with gentle gait,
Making dead wood more bless'd than living lips.
Since saucy jacks so happy are in this,

Give them thy fingers, me thy lips to kiss.

CXXIX

The expense of spirit in a waste of shame Is lust in action; and till action, lust Is perjur'd, murderous, bloody, full of hlame, Savage, extreme, rude, cruel, not to trust; Enjoy'd no sooner, but despised straight; Past reason hunted; and no sooner had, Past reason hated, as a swallow'd hait, On purpose laid to make the taker mad: Mad in pursuit, and in possession so; Had, having, and in quest to have, extreme; A bliss in proof,—and prov'd, a very woe; Before, a joy propos'd; hehind, a dream: All this the world well knows; yet none knows well

To shun the heaven that leads men to this hell.

CXXX.

My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun; Coral is far more red than her lips' red: If snow he white, why then her breasts are dun; If hairs he wires, hlack wires grow on her head. I have seen roses damask'd, red and white, But no such roses see I in her cheeks; And in some perfumes is there more delight

SONNETS TO SUNDRY NOTES OF MUSIC.

It was a lordling's daughter, the fairest one of All fears scorn I. That liked of ber master as well as well might That liked of her master as well as well might Till looking on an Englishman, the fairest that Heart is bleeding, eye could see.

Her fancy fell a turning. Long was the combat doubtful, that love with love did fight, (knight; To leave the master loveless, or kill the gallant To put in practice either, alas it was a spite

Unto the silly damsel. But one must be refused, more mickle was the That nothing could be used, to turn them both with disdain: to gain. For of the two the trusty knight was wounded Alas, see could not belp it! [the day, Thus art, with arms contending, was victor of Which by a cift of lacentary.] Which by a gift of learning did bear the maid away:

Then lullaby, the learned man hath got the lady gay;

For now my song is ended.

On a day (alack the day!), Love, whose month was ever May, Spied a blossom passing fair, Playing in the wanton air: Through the velvet leaves the wind, All unseen, 'gan passage find; That the lover, sick to death, Wisb'd himself the beaven's breath. Air, quoth he, thy cheeks may blow; Air, would I might triumph so! But, alas, my hand hath sworn Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn: Vow, alack, for youth unmeet, Youth, so apt to pluck a sweet, Thou for whom Jove would swear Juno but an Ethiope were; And deny himself for Jove,

My flocks feed not, My ewes breed not, My rams speed not, All is amiss:

Turning mortal for thy love.

Love is dying, Faith's defying, Heart's denying.

Causer of this. All my merry jigs are quite forgot, ... All my lady's love is lost, God wot: Where her faith was firmly fix'd in love, There a may is plac'd without remove. One silly cross Wrought all my loss;

O frowning Fortune, cursed, fickle dame! For now I see. Inconstancy

More in women then in men remain.

In black mourn L. Love hath forlorn me. All help needing, (O cruel speeding!) Fraughted with gall.

My shepherd's pipe can sound no deal. My wether's bell rings doleful knell; My curtail dog, that wont to have play'd, Plays not at all, but seems afraid; With sighs so deep,

Procures to weep,

In bowling-wise, to see my doleful plight. How sighs resound

Through beartless ground, lfight! Like a thousand vanquish'd men in bloody Clear wells spring not, Sweet birds sing not. Green plants bring not Forth; they die: Herds stand weeping, Flocks all sleeping, Rymphs back peeping Fearfully. All our pleasure known to us poor swains, All our merry meetings on the plains, All our evening sport from us is fled, All our love is lost, for Love is dead. Farewell, sweet lass, Thy like ne'er was,

For a sweet content, the cause of all my moan Poor Coridon

Must live alone,

Other help for him I see that there is none.

Whenas thine eye hath chose the dame, And stall'd the deer that thou shouldst strike, Let reason rule things worthy blame, As well as fancy, partial might: Take counsel of some wiser head, Neither too young, nor yet unwed.

And when thou com'st thy tale to tell, Smooth not thy tongue with filed talk, . Lest she some subtle practice smell; (A cripple soon can find a halt:)
But plainly say thou lov'st ber well, And set ber person forth to sell.

What though ber frowning brows be bent, Her cloudy looks will calm ere night; And then too late she will repent, That thus dissembled her delight; And twice desire, ere it be day, That which with scorn she put away.

What though she strive to try ber strength, And ban and brawl, and say thee nay, Her feeble force will yield at length, When craft hath taught her thus to say:

Than in the breath that from my mistress reeks. I love to hear her speak, -yet well I know That music hath a far more pleasing sound; I grant I never saw a goddess go,-My mistress when she walks, treads on the ground;

And yet, by heaven, I think my love as rare As any she belied with false compare.

CXXXI.

Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art, As those whose beauties proudly make them cruel;

For well thou know'st to my dear doting heart Thon art the fairest and most precious jewel, Yet, in good faith, some say that thee behold. Thy face hath not the power to make love groan: To say they err, I dare not be so bold, Although I swear it to myself alone, And, to he sure that is not false I swear, A thousand groaus, but thinking on thy face. One on another's neck, do witness bear Thy black is fairest in my judgment's place. In nothing art thou black, save in thy deeds, And thence this slander, as I think, proceeds.

CXXXII.

Thine eyes I love, and they, as pitying me Knowing thy heart torments me with disdein, Have put on black, and loving mourners be, Looking with pretty ruth upon my pain. And truly not the morning sun of heaven Better becomes the grey cheeks of the east, Nor that full star that ushers in the even Doth half that glory to the sober west, As those two mourning eyes become thy face: O, let it then as well beseem thy heart To mourn for me, since mourning doth thee grace,

And suit thy pity like in every part. Then will I swear beauty herself is black, And all they foul that thy complexion lack.

CXXXIII.

Beshrew that heart that makes my heart to groan For that deep wound it gives my friend and Is't not enough to torture me alone, But slave to slavery my sweet's friend must be? Me from myself thy cruel eye hath taken, And my next self thou harder hast engross'd; Of him, myself, and thee, I am forsaken; A torment thrice three-fold thus to be cross'd. Prison my heart in thy steel bosom's ward, But then my friend's heart let my poor heart bail;

Who e'er keeps me, let my heart be his guard; Thou canst not then use rigour in my gaol: And yet thou wilt; for I, being pent in thee Perforce am thine, and all that is in me.

CXXXIV.

So now I have confess'd that he is thine, And I myself am mortgag'd to thy will; Myself I'll forfeit, so that other mine Thou wilt restore, to be my comfort still: But thou wilt not, nor be will not be free, For thou art covetous, and he is kind; He learn'd but, surety-like, to write for me, Under that bond that him as fast doth bind. The statue of thy beauty thou wilt take,

Thou usurer, that putt'st forth all to use. And sue a friend, came dehtor for my sake; So him I lose through my unkind abuse. Him have I lost; thou hast both him and me; He pays the whole, and yet am I not free.

Whoever hath ber wish, thou hast thy will, And will to boot, and will in over-plus; More than enough am I that yex thee still, To thy sweet will making addition thus. Wilt thou, whose will is large and spacious, Not once vouchsafe to hide my will in thine? Shall will in others seem right gracious, And in my will no fair acceptance shine? The sea, all water, yet receives rain still, And in shundance addeth to his store; So thou, heing rich in will, add to thy will One will of mine, to make thy large will more. Let no unkind, no fair heseethers kill; Think all but one, and me in that one Will.

If thy soul check thee that I come so near Swear to thy blind soul that I was thy Will, And will, thy soul knows, is admitted there; Thus far for love, my love-suit, sweet, fulfil. Will will fulfil the treasure of thy love, Ay, fill it full with wills, and my will one, In things of great receipt with ease we prove; Among a number one is reckon'd none. Then in the number let me pass untold, Though in thy stores' account I one must be: For nothing hold me, so it please thee hold That nothing me, a something sweet to thee; Make but my name thy love, and love that still. And then thou lov'st me,-for my name is

CXXXVII.

Thou blind fool, Love, what dost then to mine eves

That they behold, and see not what they see? They know what beauty is, see where it lies, Yet what the best is, take the worst to be. If eyes, corrupt by over-partial looks, Be anchor'd in the hay where all men ride, Why of eyes' falsehood hast thou forged hooks, Whereto the judgment of my heart is tied? Why should my heart think that a several plot. Which my heart knows the wide world's common place?

Or mine eyes, seeing this, say this is not, To put fair truth upon so foul a face? In things right true my heart and eyes have And to this false plague are they now trans-

CXXXVIII.

When my love swears that she is made of truth, I do believe her, though I know she lies; That she might think me some untutor'd youth, Unlearned in the world's false subtleties. Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young, Although she knows my days are past the best, Simply I credit her false-speaking tongue; On both sides thus is simple truth supprest, But wherefore says she not she is unjust? And wherefore say not I that I am old? O, love's best habit is in seeming trust, And age in love loves not to have years told:

'Had women heen so strong as men, In faith you had not had it then.'

And to her will frame all thy ways; Spare not to spend,—and chiefly there Where thy desert may merit praise, By ringing in thy lady's ear: The strongest castle, tower, and town, The golden hullet heats it down.

Serve always with assured trust,
And in thy suit he humble, true;
Unless thy lady prove unjust,
Press never thou to choose anew:
When time sball serve, be thou not slack
To proffer, though she put thee hack.

The wiles and guiles that women work,
Dissembled with an outward show,
The tricks and toys that in them lurk,
The cock that treads them shall not know.
Have you not heard it said full oft,
A woman's nay doth stand for nought?

Think women still to strive with men, To sin, and never for to saint: There is no heaven, by holy then, When time with age shall them attaint. Were kisses all the joys in hed, One woman would another wed.

But soft; enough,—too much I fear,
.Lest that my mistress hear my song;
She'll not stick to round me i' th' ear,
To teach my tongue to be so long:
Yet will she blush, here he it said,
To hear her secrets so bewray'd.

v.

Live with me, and be my love, And we will all the pleasures prove That hills and valleys, dales and fields, And all the craggy mountains yields.

There will we sit upon the rocks, And see the shepherds feed their flocks, By shallow rivers, hy whose falls Melodious hirds sing madrigals.

There will I make thee a hed of roses, With a thousand fragrant posies, A cap of flowers and a kirtle Embroider'd all with leaves of myrtle.

A belt of straw and ivy huds, With coral clasps and amber studs; And if these pleasures may thee move Then live with me, and be my love.

LOVE'S ANSWER.

If that the world and love were young, And truth in every shepherd's tongue, These pretty pleasures might me move To live with thee and be thy love.

VI.

As it fell upon a day, In the merry month of May, Sitting in the pleasant shade Which a grove of myrtles made, Beasts did leap, and birds did sing, Trees did grow, and plants did spring: Everything did hanish moan, Save the nightingale alone: She, poor hird, as all forlorn, Lean'd her hreast up-till a thorn And there sung the dolefull'st ditty That to hear it was great pity: Fie, fie, fie, now would she cry, Teru, Teru, by and by: That to hear her so complain, Scarce I could from tears refrain; For her griefs so lively shown, Made me think upon mine own. Ah thought I, thou mourn'st in vain; None take pity on thy pain: Senseless trees, they cannot hear thee; Ruthless hears, they will not cheer thee. King Pandion, he is dead; All thy friends are lapp'd in lead; All thy fellow-birds do sing, Careless of thy sorrowing. Even so, poor bird, like thee, None alive will pity me. Whilst as fickle fortune smil'd, Thou and I were both beguil'd. Every one that flatters thee Is no friend in misery. Words are easy like the wind; Faithful friends are hard to find. Every man will be thy friend, Whilst thou hast wherewith to spend; But if store of crowns he scant, No man will supply thy want. If that one he prodigal, Bountiful they will him call: And with such-like flattering 'Pity hut he were a king.' If he he addict to vice, Quickly him they will entice; If to women he he hent, They have him at commandement; But if fortune once do frown, Then farewell his great renown: They that fawn'd on him hefore, Use his company no more. He that is thy friend indeed He will help thee in thy need; If thou sorrow, he will weep; If thou wake, he cannot sleep: Thus of every grief in heart He with thee doth hear a part. These are certain signs to know Faithful friend from flattering foe.

Therefore I lie with her, and she with me, And in our faults by lies we flatter'd be.

CXXXIX.

O, call not me to justify the wrong That my unkindness lays upon my heart; Wound me not with thine eye, but with thy tongue:

Use power with power, and stay me not by art. Tell me thou lov'st elsewhere; but in my sight, Dear heart, forbear to glance thine eye aside. What need'st thou wound with cunning, when thy might

Is more than my o'erpress'd defence can 'bide!
Let me excuse thee: ah! my love well knows
Her pretty looks have been mine enemies;
And therefore from my face she turns my foes,
That they elsewhere might dart their injuries:
Yet do not so: but since I am near slain,
Kill me outright with looks, and rid my pain.

CXL

Be wise as thou art cruel; do not press My tongue-tied patience with too much disdain; Lest sorrow lend me words, and words express The manner of my pity-wanting pain. If I might teach thee wit, better it were, Though not to love, yet, love, to tell me so; (As testy sick men, when their deaths be near, No news but health from their physicians know;) For, if I should despair, I should grow mad, And in my madness might speak ill of thee: Now this ill-wresting world is grown so bad, Mad slanderers by mad ears believed be.

That I may not be so, nor thou belied, Bear thine eyes straight, though thy proud heart go wide.

CXLL

In faith I do not love thee with mine eyes, For they in thee a thousand errors note; But 'tis my heart that loves what they despise, Who in despite of view is pleased to dote. Nor are mine ears with thy tongue's tune delighted;

Nor tender feeling, to base touches prone,
Nor taste nor smell, desire to be invited
To any sensual feast with thee alone:
But my five wits, nor my five senses can
Dissuade one foolish heart from serving thee.
Who leaves unsway'd the likeness of a man,
Thy proud heart's slave and vassal wretch to
he:

Only my plague thus far I count my gain, That she that makes me sin, awards me pain.

CXIII.

Love is my sin, and thy dear virtue hate, Hate of my sin, grounded on sinful loving: O, but with mine compare thou thine own state, And thou shalt find it merits not reproving; Or, if it do, not from those lips of thine. That have profan'd their scarlet ornaments, And seal'd false honds of love as oft as mine; Robb'd other's beds' revenues of their rents. Be it lawful I love thee, as thou lov'st those Whom thine eyes woo as mine importune thee: Root pity in thy heart, that, when it grows, Thy pity may deserve to pitied be.

If thou dost seek to have what thou dost hide; By self-example mayst thou be denied!

CXLIII.

Lo, as a careful housewife runs to catch One of her feather'd creatures broke away, Sets down her babe, and makes all swift despatch

In pursuit of the thing she would have stay; Whilst her neglected child holds her in chace, Cries to catch her whose busy care is bent To follow that which flies before her face, Not prizing her poor infant's discontent; So runn'st thou after that which flies from thee, Whilst I thy babe chase thee afar behind; But if thou catch thy hope, turn back to me, And play the mother's part, kiss me, be kind: So will I pray that thou mayst have thy Will, If thou turn back, and my loud crying still.

CXLIV.

Two loves I have of comfort and despair, Which like two spirits do suggest me still; The better angel is a man right fair, The worser spirit a woman, colour'd ill. To win me soon to hell, my female evil Tempteth my better angel from my side. And would corrupt my saint to be a devil, Wooing his purity with her foul pride. And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend, Suspect I may, yet not directly tell; But, being both from me, both to each friend, I guess one angel in another's hell. Yet this shall I ne'er know, but live in doubt, Till my had angel fire my good one out.

CXLV.

Those lips that Love's own hand did make Breath'd forth the sound that said, 'I hate, To me that languish'd for her sake: But when she saw my woeful state, Straight in her heart did mercy come, Chiding that tongue, that ever sweet Was used in giving gentle doom; And taught it thus anew to greet: 'I hate' she alter'd with an end, That follow'd it as gentle day Doth follow night, who like a fiend From heaven to hell is flown away. 'I hate' from hate away she threw, And sav'd my life, saying—'not you.'

CTIVE

Poor soul, the centre of my sinful earth, Fool'd by these rebel powers that thee array, Why dost thou pine within, and suffer dearth, Painting thy outward walls so costly gay? Why so large cost, having so short a lease, Dost thou upon thy fading mansion spend? Shall worms, inheritors of this excess, Eat up thy charge? Is this thy body's end? Then, soul, liv thou upon thy servant's loss, And let that pine to aggravate thy store; Buy terms divine in selling hours of dross; Within be fed, without be rich no more: So shalt thou feed on Death, that feeds on then.

And, Death once dead, there's no more dying

CXLVII

My love is as a fever, longing still For that which longer nurseth the disease: Feeding on that which doth preserve the ill, The uncertain sickly appetite to please.

THE PHOENIX AND THE TURTLE

LET the bird of loudest lay, On the sole Arabian tree, Herald sad and trumpet be, To whose sound chaste wings obey.

But thou, shricking harbinger, Foul pre-currer of the fiend, Augur of the fever's end, To this troop come thou not near.

From this session interdict Every fowl of tyrant wing, Save the eagle, feather'd king: Keep the obsequy so strict.

Let the priest in surplice white. That defunctive music can, Be the death-divining swan, Lest the requiem lack his right.

And thou, treble-dated crow, That thy sable gender mak's: With the breath thou giv'st and tak's: 'Mongst our mourners shalt thou go.

Here the anthem doth commence: Love and constancy is dead; Phoenix and the turtle fied In a mutual flame from hence.

So they lov'd, as love in twain Had the essence but in one: Two distincts, division none: Number there in love was slau.

Hearts remote, yet not asunder. Distance, and no space was seen 'Twixt the turtle and his queen; But in them it were a wonder.

So between them love did shine, That the turtle saw his right

Flaming in the phoenix's sight: Either was the other's mine.

Property was thus appail'd, That the self was not the same; Single nature's double name Neither two nor one was call'd.

Reason, in itself confounded, Saw division grow together; To themselves yet either-neither, Simple were so well compounded

That it cried how true a twain Seemeth this concordant one! Love hath reason, reason none If what parts can so remain.

Whereupon it made this threne To the phonix and the dove, Co-supremes and stars of love; As chorus to their tragic scene.

THRENOS.

Beauty, truth, and rarity. Grace in all simplicity, Here enclos'd in cinders lie.

Death is now the phoenix' nest; And the turtle's loyal breast To eternity doth rest,

Leaving no posterity:—
'Twas not their infirmity,
It was married chastity.

Truth may seem, but cannot be: Beauty brag, but 'tis not she; Truth and beauty buried be.

To this urn let those repair. That are either true or fair; For these dead birds sigh a prayer. My reason, the physician to my love,
Angry that his prescriptions are not kept,
Angry that his prescriptions are not kept,
Hath left me, and I desperate now approve Hath left me, and inch physic did except.
Desire is death, which physic did except.
Past cure I am, now reason is past care,
And frantic mad with evermore unrest;
My thoughts and my discourse as mad men's

At random from the truth vainly express'd; For I have sworn thee fair, and thought thee bright,

Who art as black as hell, as dark as night

CXLVIII.

O me! what eyes hath love put in my head which have no correspondence with true sight! Or, if they have, where in my judgment fled, That censures falsely what they see anight? If the be fair whereon my false eyes dote, If they have the world to say it is not so? What means the world to say it is not so? If it be not, then love doth well denote love's eye is not so true as all men's: no, How can it? O how can Love's eye be true, That is so ver'd with watching and with tears? No marvel then though I mistake my view: The sun itself sees not till heaven clears. O cunning Love! with tears thou keep'st me blind. Lest eyes well-seeing thy foul faults should find.

CXLIX.

Canst thou, O cruel! say I love thee not.
When I, against myself, with thee partake?
Do I not think on thee, when I forgot
Am of myself, all tyrant, for thy sake?
Who hateth thee that I do call my friend?
On whom frown'st thou that I do fawn upon?
Nay if thou low'rst on me, do I not spend
Revenge upon myself with present moan?
What merit do I in myself respect,
That is so proud thy service to despise,
When all my best doth worship thy defect,
Commanded by the motion of thine eyes?
But, love, hate on, for now I know thy mind:
Those that can see thou lov'st, and I am blind.

CI

O, from what power hast thou this powerful might,
With insufficiency my heart to sway?
To make me give the lie to my true sight,
And swear that brightness doth not grace the day?
Whence hast thou this becoming of things ill,
That in the very refuse of thy deeds
There is such strength and warrantise of skill,
That in my mind, thy worst all best exceeds?
Who taught thee how to make me love thec

more,
The more I hear and see just cause of hate?
O, though I love what others do abhor.
With others thou shouldst not abhor my state;
If thy unworthiness rais'd love in me,
More worthy I to be belor'd of thee.

CIT.

Love is too young to know what conscience is:
Yet who knows not, conscience is born of love?
Then, gentle cheater, urge not my amiss,
Lest guilty of my faults thy sweet self prove.
For thou betraying me, I do betray
My nobler part to my gross body's treason;
My soul doth tell my body that he may
Triumph in love; flesh stays no farther reason;
But, raising at thy name, doth point out thee
As his triumphant prize. Proud of this pride.
He is eontented thy poor drudge to be,
To stand in thy affairs, fall by thy side,
No want of conscience hold it that I call
Her—love, for whose dear love I rise and fall.

CLII

In toving thee thou know'st I am forsworn,
But thou art twice forsworn, to me love swearing;
In act thy bed-vow broke, and new faith
In vowing new hate after new love bearing.
But why of two oaths' breach do I accuse thee,
When I break twenty? I am perjur'd most;
For all my vows are oaths but to misuse thee,
And all my honest faith in thee is lost: [ness,
For I have sworn deep oaths of thy deep kindOaths of thy love, thy truth, thy constancy;
Aod, to enlighten thee, gave eyes to blindness,
Or made them swear against the thing they see:

For I have swom thee fair: more perjur'd I To swear, against the truth, so foul a lie!

CMII.

Cupid lay by his brand, and fell asleep:
A maid of Dien's this advantage found,
And his love-kindling fire did quickly steep
In a cold valley-fountain of that ground;
Which bortow'd from this holy fire of love
A dateless lively heat, still to endure,
And grew a seething bath, which yet men prove Against strange maladies a sovereign cure.
But at my mistress' eye Love's brand new-fir'd,
The boy for trial needs would touch my breast;
I, sick withal, the help of bath desir'd,
And thither hied, a sad distemper'd guest,
But found no cure: the bath for my help lies
Where Cupid got new fire, —my mistress' eyes.

CLI

The little love-god, lying once asleep Laid by his side his heart-inflaming brand. Whilst many nymphs that vow'd chaste hie to keep

Came tripping by; but in her maiden hand
The fairest votary took up that fire
Which meany legions of true hearts had warm'd:
And so the general of hot desire
Was sleeping by a virgin hand disarm'd.
This brand she quenched in a cool well by,
Which from Love's fire took heat perpetual,
Growing a bath and healthful remedy
For men diseas'd; but I, my mistress' thrall,
Came there for cure, and this by that I prove,
Love's fire heats water, water cools not love.

A LOVER'S COMPLAINT

FROM off a hill whose concave womb re-worded ! What unapproved witness dost thou bear! A plaintful story from a sistering vale. My spirits to attend this double voice accorded. And down I laid to list the sad-tun'd tale: Ere long espied a fickle maid full pale, Tearing of papers, breaking rings a-twain. Storming her world with sorrow's wind and rain.

Upon her head a platted hive of straw. Which fortified her visage from the sun. Whereon the thought might think sometime it

The carcase of a beauty spent and done. Time had not scythed all that youth begun. Nor youth all quit; but, spite of Heaven's fell rage. jage.

Some beauty peep'd through lattice of sear'd

Oft did she heave her napkin to her eyne, Which on it had conceited characters. Laund'ring the silken figures in the brine That season'd woo had pelleted in tears. And often reading what contents it bears; As often shricking undistinguish'd woe. In clamours of all size, both high and low.

Sometimes her levell'd eyes their carriage ride; As they did battery to the spheres intend; Sometimes diverted their poor balls are tied To th' orbed earth: sometimes they do extend Their view right on; anon their gazes lend To every place at once, and nowhere fix'd, The mind and sight distractedly commix'd.

Her hair, nor loose, nor tied in formal plat, Proclaim'd in her a careless hand of pride; For some, untuck'd, descended her sheav'd hat, Hanging her pale and pined cheek beside; Some in her threaden fillet still did bide, And, true to bondage, would not break from thence.

Though slackly braided in loose negligence.

A thousand favours from a maund she drew Of amber, crystal, and of bedded jet, Which one by one she in a river threw, Upon whose weeping margent she was set; Like usury, applying wet to wet, Or monarch's hands, that let not bounty fail Where want cries 'some,' but where excess begs all:

Of folded schedules had she many a one, Which she perus'd, sigh'd, tore, and gave the flood;

Crack'd many a ring of posied gold and bone, Bidding them find their sepulchres in mud; Found yet mo letters sadly penn'd in blood, With sleided silk feat and affectedly Enswath'd, and seal'd to curious secresy.

These often bath'd she in her fluxive eyes, And often kiss'd, and often gave to tear; Cried, 'O false blood, thou register of lies, Ink would have seem'd more black and damned here!

This said, in top of rage the lines she rents. Big discontent so breaking their contents.

A reverend man that graz'd his cattle nigh. Sometime a blusterer, that the ruffle knew Of court, of city, and had let go by The swiftest hours, observed as they flew, Towards this afflicted fancy fastly drew: And, privileg'd by age, desires to know In brief, the grounds and motives of her woe.

So slides he down upon his grained bat, And comely-distant sits he by her side: When he again desires her, being sat, Her grievance with his hearing to divide: If that from him there may be aught applied Which may her suffering ecstasy assuage, 'Tis promis'd in the charity of age.

'Father,' she says, 'though in me you behold The injury of many a blasting hour, Let it not tell your judgment I am old; Not age, but sorrow, over me hath power: I might as yet have been a spreading flower, Fresh to myself, if I had self-applied Love to myself, and to no love beside.

'But woe is me! too early I attended A youthful suit (it was to gain my grace) Of one by nature's outwards so commended, That maiden's eyes stuck over all his face: Love lack'd a dwelling, and made him her place;

And when in his fair parts she did abide, She was new lodg'd, and newly deified.

'His browny locks did hang in crooked curls; And every light occasion of the wind Upon his lips their silken parcels hurls. What's sweet to do, to do will aptly find: Each eye that saw him did enchant the mind; For on his visage was in little drawn, What largeness thinks in paradise was sawn.

Small show of man was yet upon his chin; His phœnix down began but to appear, Like unshorn velvet, on that termless skin, Whose bare out-bragg'd the web it seem'd to wear; Yet show'd his visage by that cost more dear; And nice affections wavering stood in doubt If best 'twere as it was, or best without.

His qualities were beauteous as his form, For maiden-tongued he was, and thereof free; Yet, if men mov'd him, was he such a storm As oft 'twixt May and April is to see, The. When winds breathe sweet, unruly though they. His rudeness so with his authoriz'd youth Did livery falseness in a pride of truth.

Well could he ride, and often men would say That horse his mettle from his rider takes: Proud of subjection, noble by the sway, What rounds, what bounds, what course, what stop he makes!

And controversy hence a question takes, Whether the borse by him became his deed, Or he his manage by the well-doing steed.

'But quickly on this side the verdict went; His real habitude gave life and grace To appertainings and to ornament, Accomplish'd in himself, not in his case: All sids, themselves made fairer hy their place, Can for additions; yet their purpos'd trim pice'd not his grace, but were all grac'd by him.

'So on the tip of his subduing tongue All kind of arguments and question deep, All replication, prompt, and reason strong, For his advantage still did wake and sleep: To make the weeper laugh, the laugher weep, He had the dialect and different skill, Catching all passions in his craft of will;

'That he did in the general bosom reign Of young, of old; and sexes hoth enchanted, To dwell with him in thoughts, or to remain In personal duty, following where he haunted: Consents bewitch'd, ere he desire, have granted; And dialogued for him what he would say, Ask'd their own wills, and made their wills obey.

'Many there were that did his picture get,
To serre their eyes, and in it put their mind;
Like fools that in the imagination set
The goodly objects which abroad they find
Of lands and mansions, theirs in thought assign'd;

And labouring in mo pleasures to bestow them, Than the true gouty landlord which doth owe them:

'So many have, that never touch'd his hand, Sweetly suppos'd them mistress of his beart. My woeful self, that did in freedom stand, And was my own fee-simple, (not in part,) What with his heart in youth, and youth in art, Threw my affections in his charmed power, Reserv'd the stalk, and gave him all my flower.

'Yet did I not, as some my equals did,
Demand of him, nor being desired yielded;
Finding myself in honour so forbid,
With safest distance I mine honour shielded:
Experience for me many hulwarks huilded
Of proofs new-hleeding, which remain'd the foil
Of this false jewel, and his amorous spoil.

'But ab! who ever shunn'd by precedent
The destin'd ill she must herself assay?
Or forc'd examples, 'gainst her own content,
To put the hy-pass'd perils in her way?
Counsel may stop a while what will not stay
For when we rage, advice is often seen
By blunting us to make our wits more keen.

'Nor gives it satisfaction to our blood, That we must curh it upon others' proof, To be forbid the sweets that seem so good, For fear of barms that preach in our behoof. O appetite, from judgment stand aloof!
The one a palate hath that needs will taste,
Though reason weep, and cry It is thy last.

'For further I could say, This man's untrue. And knew the patterns of his foul beguiling: Heard where his plants in others' orchards grew. Saw how deceits were gilded in his smiling; Knew vows were ever brokers to defiling; Thought characters and words, merely but art, And bastards of his foul adulterate beart.

'And long upon these terms I held my city,
Till thus he 'gan besiege me: Gentle maid,
Have of my suffering youth some feeling pity,
And be not of my boly vows afraid:
That's to you sworn, to none was ever said;
For feasts of love I have been call'd unto,
Till now did ne'er invite, nor never vow.

'All my offences that abroad you see
Are errors of the blood, none of the mind;
Love made them not; with acture they may be.

Where neither party is nor true nor kind: They sought their shame that so their shame did find;

And so much less of shame in me remains, By how much of me their reproach contains.

'Among the many that mine eyes have seen, Not one whose flame my heart so much as warm'd,

On my affection put to the smallest teen, Or any of my leisures ever charm'd: Harm have I done to them, but ne'er was harm'd;

Kept hearts in liveries, but mine own was free, And reign'd, commanding in his monarchy.

Look here what tributes wounded fancies sent me,

Of paled pearls, and rubies red as blood; Figuring that they their passions likewise lent

Of grief and blushes, apily understood In bloodless white and the encrimson'd mood, Effects of terror and dear modesty, Encamp'd in hearts, but fighting outwardly.

'And lo! behold the talents of their heir, With twisted metal amorously impleach'd, I have receiv'd from many a several fair. (Their kind acceptance weepingly beseech'd,) With the annexions of feir gems enrich'd, And deep-brain'd sonnets that did amplify Each stone's dear nature, worth, and quality.

'The diamond, why 'twas beantiful and hard, Whereto his invis'd properties did tend; The deep-green emerald, in whose fresh regard Weak sights their sickly radiance do amend; The heaven-hned sapphire and the opal blend With objects manifold; each several stone. With wit well blazon'd, smil'd or made some moan.

Lo! all the trophies of affections hot, Of pensiv'd and subdued desires the tender, Nature hath charg'd me that I hoard them not? But yield them up where I myself must render, That is, to you, my origin and ender: For these, of force, must your oblations be, Since I their altar, you enpatron me.

'O then advance of yours that phraseless hand, Whose white bears down the airy scale of praise; Take all these similes to your own command, Hallow'd with sighs that burning lungs did raise; What me your minister, for you obeys, Works under you; and to your audit comes Their distract parcels in combined sums.

'Lol this device was sent me from a nun,
Or sister sanctified of holiest note;
Which late her noble suit in court did shun,
Whose rarest havings made the blossoms dote;
For she was sought by spirits of richest coat,
But kept cold distance, and did thence remove.

To spend her living in eternal love.

'Bnt O, my sweet, what labour is't to leave The thing we have not, mastering what not strives?

Paling the place which did no form receive, Playing patient sports in unconstrained gyves: She that her fame so to herself contrives, The scars of battle 'scapeth by the flight, And makes her absence valuant, not her might.

'O pardon me, in that my boast is true;
The accident which brought me to her eye,
Upon the moment did her force subdue,
And now she would the caged cloister fly:
Religious love put out religion's eye:
Not to be tempted, would she be immur'd,
And now, to tempt all, liberty procur'd.

'How mighty then you are, O hear me tell! The broken bosoms that to me belong Have emptied all their fountains in my well, And mine I pour your ocean all among: I strong o'er them, and you o'er me being strong, Must for your victory us all congest, As compound love to physic your cold breast.

'My parts had power to charm a sacred sun, Who, disciplin'd and dieted in grace, Believ'd her eyes when they to assail begun, All vows and consecrations giving place. O most potential love! vow, bond, nor space, In thee hath neither sting, knot, nor confine, For thou art all, and all things else are thine.

'When thou impressest, what are precepts worth Of stale example? When thou wilt inflame, How coldly those impediments stand forth, Of wealth, of filial fear, law, kindred, fame! Love's arms are peace, 'gainst rule, 'gainst sense, 'gainst shame, sense, 'gainst shame,

And sweetens, in the suffering pangs it bears,
The aloes of all forces, shocks, and fears.

'Now all these hearts that do on mine depend, Feeling it break, with bleeding groans they pine,

And supplicant their sighs to you extend, To leave the battery that you make 'gains mine.

Lending soft audience to my sweet design, And credent soul to that strong-bonded oath, That shall prefer and undertake my troth.

'This said, his watery eves he did dismount, Whose sights till then were levell'd on my face Each cheek a river running from a fount With brinish current downward flow'd apace O how the channel to the stream gave grace! Who, glaz'd with crystal, gate the glowing rose That flame through water which their hu encloses.

O father, what a hell of witchcraft lies In the small orb of one particular tear! But with the inundation of the eyes What rocky heart to water will not wear? What breast so cold that is not warmed here! O cleft effect! cold modesty, hot wrath, Both fire from hence and chill extincture hat!

'For lo! his passion, but an art of craft, Even there resolv'd my reason into tears; There my white stole of chastity I daff'd, Shook off my sober guards, and civil fears; Appear to him, as he to me appears, [bor. All melting; though our drops this different His poison'd me, and mine did him restore.

'In him a plentitude of snbtle matter,
Applied to cautels, all strange forms receive
Of burning blushes or of weeping water,
Or swooning paleness; and he takes and leave
In either's aptness, as it best deceives,
To blush at speeches rank, to weep at woes,
Or to turn white and swoon at tragic shows:

'That not a heart which in his level came Could scape the bail of his all-hurting zim, Showing fair nature in both kind and tame; And, veil'd in them, did win whom he wou maim:

Against the thing he sought he would exclain When he most burn'd in heart-wish'd luxury He preech'd pure maid, and prais'd cold chatity.

'Thus merely with the garment of a Grace The naked and concealed flend he cover'd, That the unexperienced gave the tempter plat Which, like a cherubim, above them hover'd. Who, young and simple, would not be lover'd?

Ah me! I fell; and yet do question make What I should do again for such a sake.

'O, that infected moisture of his eye,
O, that false fire which in his cheek so glow
O, that forc'd thunder from his heart did fly
O, that sad breath his spongy lungs bestow'c
O, all that borrow'd motion, seeming ow'd,
Would yet again betray the fore-betray'd,

And new pervert a reconciled maid!

THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM

When my love swears that she is made of truth. I do believe her, though I know she lies. That she might think me some untutor'd youth, Unskilful in the world's false forgeries. Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young, Although I know my years be past the best, I smiling credit her false-speaking tongue, Outfacing faults in love with love's ill rest. But wherefore says my love that she is young? And wherefore say not I that I am old? O, love's best habit is a soothing tongue, And age, in love, loves not to have years told. Therefore I'll lie with love, and love with me, Since that our faults in love thus smother'd be.

Two loves I have, of comfort and despair, That like two spirits do suggest me still; My better angel is a man right fair. My worser spirit a woman colour'd ill. To win me soon to hell, my female evil Tempteth my better angel from my side. And would corrupt my saint to be a devil, Wooing his purity with her fair pride. And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend, Suspect I may, yet not directly tell: For being both to me, both to each friend, I guess one angel in another's hell; The truth I shall not know, but live in doubt, Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye, 'Gainst whom the world could not hold argu- If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear ment, Persuade my heart to this false perjury? Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment. A woman I forswore; but I will prove, Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee: My row was earthly, thou a heavenly love; Thy grace being gain'd cures all disgrace in me My vow was breath, and breath a vapour is; Then, thou fair sun, that on this earth doth shine.

Exhale this vapour vow; in thee it is: If broken, then it is no feult of mine. If by me broke, what fool is not so wise To lose an oath, to win a paradise?

Sweet Cytheres, sitting by a brook With young Adonis, lovely, fresh and green, Did court the lad with many a lovely look, Such looks as none could look but beauty's queen.

She told him stories to delight his ear; She show'd him favours to allure his eye; To win his heart, she touch'd him hero and there:

Touches so soft still conquer chastity. But whether unripe years did want conceit, Or he refus'd to take her figur'd proffer, The tender mibbler would not touch the bait, But smile and jest at every gentle offer: Then fell she on her back, fair queen, and toward: He rose and ran away; ah, fool too froward!

VI.

Scarce had the sun dried up the dewy morn. And scarce the herd gone to the hedge for shade,

When Cytherea, all in love forlorn, A longing tarriance for Adonis made, Under an osier growing by a brook, A brook where Adon used to cool his spleen. Hot was the day; she hotter that did look For his approach, that often there had been. Anon he comes, and throws his mantle by, And stood stark naked on the brook's green brim:

The sun look'd on the world with glorious eye, Yet not so wistly as this queen on him: He, spying her, bounc'd in, whereas he stood; O Jove, quoth she, why was not I a flood?

Fair is my love, but not so fair as fickle; Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty; Brighter than glass, and yet, as glass is, brittle; Softer than wax, and yet, as iron, rusty:

A lily pale, with damask die to grace her, None fairer, nor none falser to deface her.

Her lips to mine how often hath she join'd, Between each kiss her oaths of true love swear-

How many tales to please me hath she coin'd, Dreading my love, the loss thereof still fearing! Yet in the midst of all her pure protestings,

Her faith, her oaths, her tears, and all were jestings.

She burn'd with love, as straw with fire flameth, She burn'd out love, as soon as straw out framing, burneth: She fram'd the love, and yet she foil'd the She bade love last, and yet she fell a turning.

Was this a lover, or a lecher whether? Bad in the best, though excellent in neither.

VIII.

If music and sweet poetry agree, As they must needs, the sister and the brother, Then must the love be great 'twist thee and me.

Dowland to thee is dear, whose heavenly touch Upon the lute doth ravish human sense; Spencer to me, whose deep conceit is such, As, passing all conceit, needs no defence. Thou lov'st to hear the sweet melodious sound [prehend. | That Phoebus' lute, the queen of music, makes; And I in deep delight am chiefly drown'd, When as himself to singing he betakes.

One god is god of both, as poets feign; One knight loves both, and both in thee remain.

IX.

Fair was the morn, when the fair queen of love

Paler for sorrow than her milk-white dove, For Adon's sake, a youngster proud and wild; Her stand she takes upon a steep-up hill: Anon Adonis comes with horn and hounds: She, silly queen, with more than love's good will Forbade the boy he should not pass those grounds:

Once, quoth she, did I see a fair sweet youth Here in these brakes deep-wounded with a Deep in the thigh, a spectacle of ruth! See in my thigh, quoth she, here was the sore: She showed hers; he saw more wounds than And blushing fled, and left her all alone.

X.

Sweet rose, fair flower, untimely pluck'd, soon vaded,

Pluck'd in the bud, and vaded in the spring! Bright orient pearl, alack! too timely shaded! Fair creature, kill'd too soon by death's sharp sting!

I weep for thee, and yet no cause I have; For why? thou left'st me nothing in thy will. And yet thou left'st me more than I did crave; For why? I craved nothing of thee still:

O yes, dear friend, I pardon crave of thee; Thy discontent thou didst bequeath to me.

Venus, with Adonis sitting by her, Under a myrtle shade, began to woo him: She told the youngling how god Mars did try her,

And as he fell to her, she fell to him, me: Even thus, quoth she, the warlike god embrac'd And then she clipp'd Adonis in her arms: Even thus, quoth she, the warlike god unlac'd me;

As if the boy should use like loving charms. Even thus, quoth she, he seized on my lips, And with her lips on his did act the seizure; And as she fetched breath, away he skips, And would not take her meaning nor her pleasure.

Seb. Antonio, O my dear Antonio! How have the hours rack'd and tortur'd me Since I have lost thee.

Ant. Sebastian are you?

Fear'st thou that, Antonio? Seb. Ant. How have you made division of yourself?-

An apple, cleft in two, is no more twin Than these two creatures. Which is Sebastian?

Oli. Most wonderful!

Seb. Do I stand there? I never had a brother: Nor can there be that deity in my nature Of here and everywhere. I had a sister voured:-

Of charity, what kin are you to me? [To VIOLA. What countryman? what name? what parentage?

Vio. Of Messaline: Sebastian was my father; Such a Sebastian was my brother too; So went he suited to his watery tomb: If spirits can assume both form and suit,

You come to fright us.

A spirit I am indeed: Seb. But am in that dimension grossly clad, Which from the womb I did participate. Were you a woman, as the rest goes even, I should my tears let fall upon your cheek, And say-Thrice welcome, drowned Viola!

Vio. My father had a mole upon his brow.

Had numbered thirteen years.

Seb. O, that record is lively in my soul! He finished, indeed, his mortal act

That day that made my sister thirteen years. Vio. If nothing lets to make us happy hoth But this my masculine usurp'd attire, Do not embrace me till each circumstance Of place, time. fortune, do cohere, and jump That I am Viola: which to confirm, I'll bring you to a captain in this town, [help Where lie my maiden's weeds; by whose gentle I was preserv'd to serve this noble count; All the occurrence of my fortune since Hath heen between this lady and this lord.

But nature to her bias drew in that. You would have been contracted to a maid; Nor are you therein, by my life, deceived; You are betroth'd both to a maid and man.

Duke. Be not amazed; right noble is his hiood.-

If this be so, as yet the glass seems true, I shall have share in this most happy wreck: Boy, thou hast said to me a thousand times, [To VIOLA.

Thou never shouldst love woman like to me. Vio. And all those sayings will I over-swear; And all those swearings keep as true in soul

As doth that orbed continent the fire That severs day from night.

Give me thy hand: And let me see thee in thy woman's weeds.

Vio. The captain that did hring me first on shore Hath my maid's garments: he, upon some Is now in durance, at Malvolio's suit; A gentleman and follower of my lady's.

Oli. He shall enlarge him:-Fetch Malvolio hither:-

And yet, alas, now I remember me. They say, poor gentleman, be's much distract.

Clo. No, madam, I do but read madness: an your ladyship will have it as it ought to be, you must allow vox.

Oli. Pr'ythee, read i' thy right wits.

Clo. So I do, madonna; but to read his right wits is to read thus: therefore perpend, my princess, and give ear.

Oli. Read it you, sirrah. To FABIAN. Fab. (reads.) By the Lord, modam, you wrong Seb. And so had mine.

Duke. Is this the madman?

letter:

Oli. Ay, my lord, this same;

How now, Malvolio? Mal. Madam, you have done me wrong,

Notorious wrong. Have I, Malvolio? no. Oli. Mal. Lady, you have. Pray yon, peruse that You must not now deny it is your hand,

Write from it, if you can, in hand or phrase; Or say, 'tis not your seal, nor your invention: You can say none of this. Well, grant it then, And tell me, in the modesty of honour, Why you have given me such clear lights of favour; Bade me come smiling and cross-garter'd to you; To put on yellow stockings, and to frown

Upon Sir Toby and the lighter people: And, acting this in an obedient hope, Why have you suffer'd me to be imprison'd, Keptin a dark house, visited by the priest, And made the most notorious geck and gull That e'er invention play'd on? tell me why.

Oli. Alas, Malvolio, this is not my writing, Though, I confess, much like the character: But, out of question, 'tis Maria's hand. And now I do hethink me, it was she First told me thou wast mad; then cam'st in smiling,

And in such forms which here were presuppos'd Upon thee in the letter. Pr'ythee, be content: This practice has most shrewdly pass'd upon thee:

But, when we know the grounds and authors of it.

Thou shalt be both the plaintiff and the judge Of thine own cause. Fab. Good madam, hear me speak;

And let no quarrel, nor no brawl to come, Taint the condition of this present hour, Which I have wonder'd at. In hope it shall not, Most freely, I confess, myself and Toby Set this device against Malvolio here, Upon some stubborn and uncourteous parts We had conceived against him. Maria writ The letter, at Sir Tohy's great importance; In recompense whereof he hath married her. How with a sportful malice it was follow'd May rather pluck on laughter than revenge, If that the injuries he justly weigh'd That have on hoth sides past.

Oli. Alas, poor fool! how have they baffled theel

Clo. Why, some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrown upon them. I was one, sir, in this interlude; one Sir Topas, eir; hut that's all one:-By the Lord. fool, I am not mad;--But do you remember? Madam, why laugh you at such a barren rascal? an you smile not he's gagged. And thus the whirligis of time brings in his revenges.

Mal. I'll be revenged on the whole pack of you.

Oli. He hath been notoriously abused. Duke, Pursue him, and entreat him to a peace:

He hath not told us of the captain yet: When that is known, and golden time convents, A solema combination shall be made Of our dear souls.-Meantime, sweet sister, We will not part from hence.-- Cesario, come:

For so you shall be while you are a man; But, when in other habits you are seen. Orsino's mistress, and his fancy's queen. Exeunt.

SONG.

Clo. When that I was and a little tiny boy, With hey, ho, the wind and the rain, A foolish thing was hut a toy, For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came to man's estate, With bey, ho, the wind and the rain, Gainst knave and thief men shut their gate, For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came, alas! to wive, With hey, ho, the wind and the rain, By swaggering could I never thrive, For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came unto my bed, With hey, ho, the wind and the rain, with toss-pots still had drunken head. For the rain it raineth every day.

Enter Angelo.

Duke. Look where he comes. Ang. Always obedient to your grace's will, I come to know your pleasure.

Duke. Angelo There is a kind of character in thy life, That to the observer doth thy history Fully unfold. Thyself and thy belongings Are not thine own so proper as to waste Thyself upon thy virtues, they on thee. Heaven doth with us as we with torches do, Not light them for themselves: for if our virtues Did not go forth of us, 'twere all alike As if we had them not. Spirits are not finely touch'd

But to fine issues: nor nature never lends The smallest scruple of her excellence But, like a thrifty goddess, she determines Herself the glory of a creditor, Both thanks and use. But I do hend my speech To one that can my part in him advertise; Hold, therefore, Angelo; In our remove be thou at full ourself:

Mortality and mercy in Vienna Live in thy tongue and heart! Old Escalus, Though first in question, is thy secondary: Take thy commission.

Now, good my lord, Let there be some more test made of my metal, Before so nohle and so great a figure

Be stamped upon it.

Duke.No more evasion: We have with a leaven'd and prepared choice Proceeded to you; therefore take your honours. Our haste from hence is of so quick condition That it prefers itself, and leaves unquestion'd Matters of needful value. We shall write to you As time and our concernings shall importune How it goes with us; and do look to know What doth hefall you here. So, fare you well: To the hopeful execution do I leave you Of your commissions.

Yet, give leave, my lord, That we may bring you something on the way. Duke. My haste may not admit it; Nor need you, on mine honour, have to do With any scruple: your scope is as mine own: So to enforce or qualify the laws As to your soul seems good. Give me your hand; I'll privily away: I love the people, But do not like to stage me to their eyes: Though it do well, I do not relish well Their loud applause and aves vehement:

Nor do I think the man of safe discretion That does affect it. Once more, fare you well. Ang. The heavens give safety to your purposes! [happiness. Escal. Lead forth and hring you back in Duke. I thank you. Fare you well. [Exit. Escal. I shall desire you, sir, to give me leave To have free speech with you; and it concerns me To look into the hottom of my place:

A power I have, hut of what strength and nature, I am not yet instructed. Itogether.

Ang. 'Tis so with me.-Let us withdraw And we may soon our satisfaction have Tonching that point.

Escal. I'll wait upon your honour.

Exeunt.

Lucio. If the duke, with the other dukes. come not to composition with the King of Hungary, why, then, all the dakes fall upon [the King of Hungary's! the king.

I Gent. Heaven grant us its peace, hut not

2 Gent. Amen.

Lucio. Thou concludest like the sanctimonious pirate that went to sea with the ten commandments, hut scraped one out of the table. 2 Gent. Thou shalt not steal?

Lusio. Ay, that he razed.

I Gent. Why, 'twas a commandment to command the captain and all the rest from their functions; they put forth to steal. not a soldier of us all that, in the thanksgiving hefore meat, doth relish the petition well that prays for peace.

2 Gent. I never heard any soldier dislike it.

Lucio. I believe thee; for I think thou never wast where grace was said.

2 Gent. No? a dozen times at least.

I Gent. What? in metre?

Lucic. In any proportion or in any language. I Gent. I think, or in any religion.

Lucio. Ay! why not? Grace is grace, despite of all controversy. As for example;-

thou thyself art a wicked villain, despite of all z Gent. Well, there went but a pair of shears hetween us.

Lucio. I grant; as there may between the sts and the velvet. Thou art the list. lists and the velvet.

I Gent. And thou the velvet: thou art good velvet; thou art a three-piled piece, I warrant thee: I had as lief he a list of an English kersey as he piled, as thou art piled, for a French velvet. Do I speak feelingly now?

Lucio. I think thou dost; and, indeed, with most painful feeling of thy speech. I will, out of thine own confession, learn to hegin thy health; but, whilst I live, forget to drink after thee

I Gent. I think I have done myself wrong; have I not?

2 Gent. Yes, that thou hast; whether thou art tainted or free.

Lucio. Behold, hehold, where Madam Mitigation comes! I have purchased as many diseases under her roof as come to-

2 Gent. To what, I pray? 1 Gent. Judge. 2 Gent. To three thousand dollars a-year.

I Gent. Ay, and more.

Lucio. A French crown more.

1 Gent. Thou art always figuring diseases in me, hut thou art full of error; I am sound.

Lucio. Nay, not as one would say, healthy; but so sound as things that are hollow: thy hones are hollow: implety has made a feast of thee.

I Gent. How now! which of your hips has the most profound sciatica?

Bawd. Well, well; there's one yonder arrested and carried to prison was worth five thousand of you all.

> Scene IV .- A Monostery. Enter Duke and Frier THOMAS.

Duke. No; holy father; throw away that thought;

Believe not that the dribbling dart of love Can pierce a complete bosom: why I desire thee To give me secret barbour hath a purpose More grave and wrinkled than the aims and ends Of burning youth.

Fτi. May your grace speak of it? Duke. My holy sir, none better knows than

How I have ever lov'd the life remov'd. And held in idle price to baunt assemblies Where youth, and cost, and witless bravery keeps. I have deliver'd to Lord Angelo,-A man of stricture and firm abstinence, My absolute power and place here in Vienna And he supposes me travell'd to Poland; For so I have strew'd it in the common ear, And so it is received. Now, pious sir, You will demand of me wby I do this?

flaws, Fri. Gladly, my lord. Duke. We have strict statutes and most biting ! The needful bits and curbs for headstrong steeds.

Which for these fourteen years we have let sleep, Even like an o'ergrown lion in a cave, That goes not out to prey. Row, as fond fathers,

Having bound up the threat'ning twigs of birch, Only to stick it in their children's sight For terror, not to use, in time the rod Becomesmore mock'd than fear'd: so our decrees, Dead to infliction, to themselves are dead; And liberty plucks justice by the nose; The baby beats the nurse, and quite athwart Goes all decorum.

Fri. It rested in your grace To unloose this tied-up justice when you pleas'd: And it in you more dreadful would have seem'd

Than in Lord Angelo.

Duke.I do fear, too dreadful: Sith 'twas my fault to give the people scope, Twould be my tyranny to strike and gall them For what I bid them do: for we bid this be done When evil deeds have their permissive pass Therefore, indeed, And not the punishment. my father,

I have on Angelo impos'd the office; Whomay, in the ambush of myname, strike home, And yet my nature never in the fight, To do it slander. And to behold his sway, I will, as 'twere a brother of your order, Visit both prince and people: therefore, I pr'ythee, Supply me with the habit, and instruct me How I may formally in person bear me Like a true friar. More reasons for this action At our more leisure shall I render you; Only, this one:-Lord Angelo is precise; Stands at a guard with envy; scarce confesses That his blood flows, or that his appetite Is more to bread than stone: bence shall we see, If power change purpose, what our seemers be. Exeunt.

Scene V.—A Nunnery.

Enter Isabella and Francisca.

Isob. And have you nuns no further privileges? Fron. Are not these large enough? Isob. Yes, truly: I speak not as desiring more, But rather wishing a more strict restraint Upon the sisterhood, the votaries of St. Clare, Lucio. Ho! Peace be in this place! [Within. Who's that which calls? Fran. It is a man's voice. Gentle Isabella, Turn your key, and know his business of him:

You may, I may not; you are yet unsworn: When you have vow'd, you must not speak with

But in the presence of the prioress; Then, if you speak, you must not show your Or, if you show your face, you must not speak. He calls again; I pray you answer bim.

Enter Lucio.

Lucio. Hail, virgin, if you be; as those cheek roses

Proclaim you are no less! Can you so stead me As bring me the sight of Isabella, A novice of this place, and the fair sister To her unhappy brother Claudio? Isab. Why her unhappy brother? let me ask?

The rather, for I now must make you know I am that Isabella, and his sister.

Lucio. Gentle and fair, your brother kindly greets you:

Not to be weary with you, he's in prison.

Isob. Woe me! For what? Lucio. For that which, if myself might be his judge, He shall receive his punishment in thanks:

He hath got his friend with child.

e hath got his hiteld.

Isob. Sir, make me not your story.

It is true. I would not—though 'tis my familiar sin With maids to seem the lapwing, and to jest Tongue far from heart—play with all virgins so: I hold you as a thing ensky'd and sainted; By your renouncement an immortal spirit;

And to be talk'd with in sincerity. As with a saint. Isob. You do blaspheme the good in mocking Lucio. Do not believe it. Fewness and truth, 'tis thus:

Your brother and his lover have embraced: As those that feed grow full: as blossoming time, That from the seedness the bare fallow brings To teeming foison; even so her plenteous womb Expresseth his full tilth and husbandry.

Isab. Some one with child by him?—My cousin Juliet?

Lucio. Is she your cousin?

Escal. How know you that?

Elb. My wife, sir, whom I detest before heaven and your honour,— Escal. How! thy wife!

Elb. Ay, sir; who, I thank heaven, is an honest woman, Escal. Dost thou detest her therefore?

Elb. I say, sir, I will detest myself also, as well as she, that this house, if it be not a bawd's house, it is pity of her life, for it is a naughty house.

Escal. How dost thou know that, constable? Elb. Marry, sir, by my wife; who, if she had been a woman cardinally given, might have been accused in fornication, adultery, and all uncleanliness there.

Escal. By the woman's means?

Elb. Ay, sir, by Mistress Overdone's means: but as she spit in his face, so she defied him.

Clo. Sir, if it please your honour, this is not so. Elb. Prove it before these variets here, thou honourable man, prove it.

Escal. Do you hear how he misplaces? To ANGELO.

Clo. Sir, she came in great with child; and longing—saving your honour's reverence—for stewed prunes, sir; we had but two in the house, which at that very distant time stood, as it were, in a fruit-dish, a dish of some threepence; your honours have seen such dishes; they are not China dishes, but very good dishes.

Escal. Go to, go to; no matter for the dish, Clo. No, indeed, sir, not of a pin; you are therein in the right: but to the point. As I say, this Mistress Elbow, being, as I say, with child, and being great-bellied, and longing, as I said for prunes; and having but two in the dish, as I said, Master Froth here, this very man, having eaten the rest, as I said, and, as I say, paying for them very honestly;-for, as you know, Master Froth, I could not give you threepence again, Froth. No, indeed.

Clo. Very well: you being then, if you be remembered, cracking the stones of the aforesaid prunes, Froth. Ay, so I did, indeed.

Clo. Why, very well: I telling you then, if you be remembered, that such a one and such a one were past cure of the thing you wot of, unless they kept very good diet, as I told you,-Froth. All this is true.

Clo. Why, very well then.

Escal. Come, you are a tedious fool: to the purpose.-What was done to Elbow's wife that he hath cause to complain of? Come me to what was done to her.

Clo. Sir, your honour cannot come to that yet.

Escal. No, sir, nor I mean it not.

Clo. Sir, but you shall come to it, by your honour's leave. And I beseech you, look into Master Froth, here, sir; a man of fourscore pound a-year; whose father died at Hallowmas:-was't not at Hallowmas, Master Froth?

Froth. All-hallond eve.

Clo. Why, very well; I hope here be truths: He, sir, sitting, as I say, in a lower chair, sir; 'twas in the Bunch of Grapes, where, indeed, you have a delight to sit, have you not?-Froth. I have so; because it is an open room, and good for winter. [truths.

Clo. Why, very well then; -I hope here be Ang. This will last out a night in Russia, When nights are longest there: I'll take my leave, And leave you to the hearing of the cause; Hoping you'll find good cause to whip them all. Escal. I think no less. Good morrow to your lordship. Exit ANGELO. Now, sir, come on: what was done to Elbow's wife, once more? Clo. Once, sir? there was nothing done to her once.

Elb. I beseech you, sir, ask him what this man did to my wife.

Clo. I beseech your honour, ask me.

Escal. Well, sir: what did this gentleman to her?

Clo. I beseech you, sir, look in this gentleman's face.-Good Master Froth, look upon his honour; 'tis for a good purpose.-Doth your honour mark his face?

Escal. Ay, sir, very well.

Clo. Nay, I beseech you, mark it well.

Escal. Well, I do so.

Clo. Dothyourhonourseeanyharminhisface?

Escal. Why, no.

Clo. I'll be supposed upon a book, his face is the worst thing about him. Good then; if his face be the worst thing about him, how could Master Froth do the constable's wife any harm? I would know that of your honour.

Escal. He's in the right.—Constable, what say you to it?

Elb. First, an it like you, the house is a respected house; next, this is a respected fellow; and his mistress is a respected woman.

Clo. By this hand, sir, his wife is a more respected person than any of us all.

Elb. Varlet, thou liest; thou liest, wicked variet: the time is yet to come that she was ever respected with man, woman, or child.

Clo. Sir, she was respected with him before he married with her.

Escal. Which is the wiser here? Justice or Iniquity?—Is this true?

Elb. O thou caitiff! O thou variet! O thou wicked Hannibal! I respected with her before I was married to her? If ever I was respected with her, or she with me, let not your worship think me the poor duke's officer.—Prove this, thou wicked Hannibal, or I'll have mine action of battery on thee.

Escal. If he took you a box o' th' ear, you might have your action of slander too.

Elb. Marry, I thank your good worship for What is 't your worship's pleasure I should do with this wicked caitiff?

Escal. Truly, officer, because he hath some offences in him that thou wouldst discover if thou couldst, let him continue in his courses till thou knowest what they are.

Elb. Marry, I thank your worship for it.-Thou seest, thou wicked variet, now, what's come upon thee; thou art to continue now, thou variet; thou art to continue.

Ang. Hath he a sister?

Prov. Ay, my good lord; a very virtuous maid,
And to be shortly of a sisterhood,
If not already.

Ang. Well, let her be admitted. [Exit Servant.

See you the fornicatress be remov'd; Let her have needful but not lavish means; There shall be order for it.

Enter LUCIO and ISABELLA.

Prov. Save your honour! [Offering to retire.

Ang. Stay a little while.—[To ISAB.] You are welcome. What's your will?

Isab. I am a woeful suitor to your honour,

Please but your honour hear me.

Ang. Well; what's your suit?

Isab. There is a vice that most I do abhor,
And most desire should meet the blow of justice;
For which I would not plead, but that I must;
For which I must plead, but that I am
At war 'twixt will and will not.

Ang. Well; the matter?

Isab. I have a brother is condemn'd to die;
I do beseech you, let it be his fault,

And not my brother.

Prov. Heaven give thee moving graces.
Ang. Condemn the fault and not the actor of itl
Why, every fault's condemn'd ere it be done;
Mine were the very cipher of a function,
To find the fault whose fine stands in record,
And let go by the actor.

Isab. O just but severe law! I had a brother, then.—Heaven keep your honour! [Retiring. Lucio. [To ISAB.] Give 't not o'er so: to him again, entreat him;

Kneel down before him, hang upon his gown; You are too cold; if you should need a pin. You could not with more tame a tongue desire it: To him, I say.

Isab. Must he needs die?

Ang. Maiden, no remedy. Isab. Yes; I do think that you might pardon him,

And neither heaven nor man grieve at the mercy.

Ang. I will not do 't.

Isab. But can you, if you would?

Ang. Look, what I will not, that I cannot do.

Isab. But might you do 't, and do the world no wrong,

If so your heart were touch'd with that remorse

As mine is to him.

Ang. He's sentenc'd; 'tis too late. Lucio. You are too cold. [To Isabella. Isab. Too late? why, no; I, that do speak a word,

May call it back again. Well, believe this, No ceremony that to great ones 'longs, Not the king's crown nor the deputed sword, The marshal's truncheon nor the judge's robe, Become them with one half so good a grace As mercy does. If he had been as you, And you as he, you would have slipp'd like him; But he, like you, would not have been so stern. Ang. Pray you, be gone.

Isab. I would to heaven I had your potency. And you were Isabel! should it then be thus? No; I would tell what 'twere to be a judge

And what a prisoner.

Lucio. Ay, touch him; there's the vein.

Ang. Your brother is a forfeit of the law, And you but waste your words.

Isab.

Mas! alas! Why, all the souls that were forfeit once; And He that might the vantage best have took Found out the remedy. How would you be If He, which is the top of judgment, should But judge you as you are? O, think on that; And mercy then will breathe within your lips,

Like man new made.

Ang. Be you content, fair maid:
It is the law, not I, condemns your brother:
Were he my kinsman, brother, or my son,
It should be thus with him;—he must die tomorrow. [him, spare him! Isab. To-morrow! O that's sudden! Spare He's not prepared for death. Even for our kitchens

We kill the fowl of season: shall we serve heaven With less respect than we do minister | you: Toourgrossselves? Good, good mylord, bethink Who is it that hath died for this offence? There's many have committed it.

Lucio. Ay, well said. Ang. The law hath not been dead, though it hath slept:

Those many had not dared to do that evil If the first man that did the edict infringe Had answer'd for his deed: now 'tis awake; Takes note of what is done; and, like a prophet, Looks in a glass that shows what future evils,—Either now, or by remissness new-conceiv'd, And so in progress to be hatch'd and born,—Are now to have no successive degrees, But, where they live, to end.

Isab. Yet show some pity.

Ang. I show it most of all when I show justice;
For then I pity those I do not know,
Which a dismiss'd offence would after gall,
And do him right that, answering one foul wrong,
Lives not to act another. Be satisfied;
Your brother dies to-morrow: be content.

Isab. So you must be the first that gives this sentence:

And he that suffers. O, it is excellent
To have a giant's strength; but it is tyrannous
To use it like a giant.

Lucio. That's well said.

Isab. Could great men thunder

Solve himself does, Jove would ne'er be quiet,
For every pelting petty officer

Would use his heaven for thunder: nothing but thunder.—

Merciful heaven!
Thou rather, with thy sharp and sulphurous bolt,
Splitt'st the unwedgeable and gnarled oak
Than the soft myrtle;—but man, proud man!
Dress'd in a little brief authority,—
Most ignorant of what he's most assured,
His glassy essence,—like an angry ape,
Plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven
As make the angels weep; who, with our spleens,
Would all themselves laugh mortal.

Lucio. O, to him, to him, wench: he will re-He's coming; I perceive 't. [lent; Prov. Pray heaven she win him!

Enter Angelo.

Ang. When I would pray and think, I think and pray [words; To several subjects. Heaven hath my empty Whilst my invention, hearing not my tongue, Anchors on Isabel: Heaven in my mouth, As if I did but only chew his name; And in my heart the strong and swelling evil Of myconception. The state whereon I studied, Is like a good thing, being often read, Grown sear'd and tedious; yea, my gravity, Wherein—let no man hear me—I take pride, Could I with boot change for an idle plume, Which the air beats for vain. O placel O form!

How often dost thou with thy case, thy habit, Wrench awe from fools, and tie the wiser souls To thy false seeming? Blood, thou still art blood:

Let's write good angel on the devil's horn, 'Tis not the devil's crest.

Enter Servant.

How now, who's there? Serv. One Isabel, a sister. Desires access to you. Ang. Teach her the way. [Exit Serv. O heavens! Why does my blood thus muster to my heart, Making both it unable for itself And dispossessing all the other parts Of necessary fitness? [swoons; So play the foolish throngs with one that Come all to help me, and so stop the air By which he should revive: and even so The general, subject to a well-wished king, Quit their own part, and in obsequious fondness Crowd to his presence, where their untaught love Must needs appear offence.

Enter ISABELLA.

How now, fair maid?

Isab. I am come to know your pleasure.

Ang. That you might know it, would much better please me [not live.

Than to demand what 'tis. Your brother canIsab. Even so?—Heaven keep your honour!

Ang. Yet may he live awhile: and, it may be, As long as you or I: yet he must die.

Isab. Under your sentence?

Ang. Yea. [prieve, Isab. When, I beseech you? that in his re-Longer or shorter, he may be so fitted

That his son! sicken not. [as good Ang. Ha! Fie, these filthy vices! It were To pardon him that hath from nature stolen A man already made, as to remit [image Their saucy sweetness that do coin heaven's In stamps that are forbid; 'tis all as easy Falsely to take away a life true made As to put metal in restrained means To make a false one. [earth.

Isab. 'Tis set down so in heaven, but not in Ang. Say you so? then I shall poze you quickly.

Which had you rather,—that the most just law Now took your brother's life; or, to redeem him Give up your body to such sweet uncleanness As she that he hath stain'd?

Isab. Sir, believe this, I had rather give my body than my soul.

Ang. I talk not for your soul; our compell'd sins

Stand more for number than accompt.

Isab. How say you?

Ang. Nay, I'll not warrant that; for I can speak

Against the thing I say. Answer to this;—
I, now the voice of the recorded law,
Pronounce a sentence on your brother's life:
Might there not be a charity in sin,
To save this brother's life?

Isab. Please you to do 't,

I'll take it as a peril to my soul It is no sin at all, but charity.

Ang. Pleas'd you to do't at peril of your soul, Were equal poise of sin and charity.

Isab. That I do beg his life, if it be a sin, Heaven let me bear it! you granting of my suit, If that be sin, I'll make it my morn prayer To have it added to the faults of mine, And nothing of your answer.

Ang. Nay, but hear me:
Your sense pursues not mine: either you are ignorant

Or seem so, craftily; and that's not good.

Isab. Let me be ignorant, and in nothing good
But graciously to know I am no better.

Ang. Thus wisdom wishes to appear most bright

When it doth tax itself: as these black masks Proclaim an enshield beauty ten times louder Than beauty could, displayed.—But mark me; To be received plain, I'll speak more gross: Your brother is to die.

Isab. So.

Ang. And his offence is so, as it appears Accountant to the law upon that pain.

Isab. True.

Ang. Admit no other way to save his life,—
As I subscribe not that, nor any other,
But in the loss of question,—that you, his sister,
Finding yourself desir'd of such a person,
Whose credit with the judge, or own great place,
Could fetch your brother from the manacles
Of the all-binding law; and that there were
No earthly mean to save him but that either
You must lay down the treasures of your body
To this suppos'd, or else let him suffer;
What would you do?

Isab. As much for my poor brother as myself: That is, were I under the terms of death, The impression of keen whips I'd wear as rubies, And strip myself to death, as to a bed That longing I have been sick for, ere I'd yield My body up to shame.

Ang. Then must your brother die.

Isab. And 'twere the cheaper way:
Better it were a brother died at once
Than that a sister, by redeeming him,
Should die forever. [sentence
Ang. Were not yon, then, as cruel as the
That you have slandered so?

Isab. Ignominy in ransom and free pardon Are of two houses; lawful mercy is Nothing akin to fonl redemption. [tyrant; Ang. You seem'd of late to make the law a And rather prov'd the sliding of your brother

A merriment than a vice. .

Enter Duke, Escalus, Lords, and Attendants.

Duke. Escalus,-Escal. My lord. Duke. Of government the properties to unfold, Would seem in me to affect speech and discourse; Since I am put to know that your own science Exceeds, in that, the lists of all advice My strength can give you: then no more remains But that to your sufficiency, as your worth is able, And let them work. The nature of our people,

Our city's institutions, and the terms For common instice you are as presuant in t As art and practice hath enriched any That we remember. There is our commission From which we would not have you warp.-Call hither,

I say, bid come before us Angelo .-Exit on Attendant.

What figure of us think you he will bear? For you must know we have with special sou Elected him our absence to supply: Lent him our terror, drest him with our love, And given his deputation all the organs Of our own power: what think you of it? Escal. If any in Vienna be of worth To undergo such ample grace and honour, It is Lord Angelo.

Claud. I humhly thank you. To sue to live, I find I seek to die; And, seeking death, find life. Let it come on. Isab. [Within.] What, hol Peace here; grace and good company!

Prov. Who's there? come in: the wish deserves a welcome. Duke. Dear sir, ere long I'll visit you again.

Claud. Most holy sir, I thank you.

Enter Isabella.

Isab. My business is a word or two with Claudio. [here's your sister. Prov. And very welcome. Look, signior, Duke. Provost, a word with you. Prov. As many as you please.

Duke. Bring me to hear them speak where I may he conceal'd.

Exeunt DUKE and PROVOST. Claud. Now, sister, what's the comfort? Isab. Why, as all comforts are; most good in deed:

Lord Angelo, having affairs to heaven, Intends you for his swift emhassador, Where you shall he an everlasting lieger: Therefore, your best appointment make with speed;

To-morrow you set on.

Is there no remedy? Isab. None, hutsuch remedyas, to save a head. To cleave a heart in twain.

Claud. But is there any? Isab. Yes, brother, you may live: There is a devilish mercy in the judge, If you'll implore it, that will free your life, But fetter you till death.

Perpetual durance? Isab. Ay, just perpetual durance; a restraint, Though all the world's vastidity you had,

To a determin'd scope,

But in what nature? Isab. In such a one as, you consenting to 't, Would bark your honour from that trunk you bear,

And leave you naked.

Let me know the point. Claud Isab. O, I do fear thee, Claudio; and I quake, Lest thou a feverous life shouldst entertain, And six or seven winters more respect Than a perpetual honour. Dar'st thou die? The sense of death is most in apprehension; And the poor beetle that we tread upon, In corporal sufferance finds a pang as great As when a giant dies.

Why give you me this shame? Claud. Think you I can a resolution fetch From flowery tenderness? If I must die I will encounter darkness as a hride, father's grave And hug it in mine arms. Isab. There spake my brother; there my id utter forth a voice! Yes, thou must die: Did utter forth a voice!

Thou art too noble to conserve a life In hase appliances. This outward-sainted deputy.

Whose settled visage and deliberate word Nips youth i' the head, and follies doth emmew As falcon doth the fowl,—is yet a devil; His filth within being cast, he would appear A pond as deep as hell, Claud. The princely Angelo?

Isab. O, 'tis the cunning livery of hell.' The damned'st body to invest and cover In princely guards! Dost thou think, Claudio, If I would yield him my virginity Thou might'st he freed?

Claud. O, heavens! it cannot be. Bab. Yes, he would give it thee, from this rank offence

So to offend him still. This night's the time That I should do what I abhor to name, Or else thou diest to-morrow.

Thou shalt not do 't. Claud. Isab. O, were it but my life, I'd throw it down for your deliverance As frankly as a pin.

Thanks, dear Isahel. Claud. Isab. Be ready, Claudio, for your death tomorrow.

Claud. Yes .- Has he affections in him That thus can make him hite the law hy the nose When he would force it? Sure it is no sin; Or of the deadly seven it is the least.

Isab. Which is the least? Claud. If it were damnable, he, heing so wise, Why would he for the momentary trick. Be perdurahly fined?—O Isahel!

Isab. What says my hrother? Death is a fearful thing. Claud. Isab. And shamed life a hateful.

Claud. Ay, hut to die, and go we know not where;

To lie in cold obstruction, and to rot; This sensible warm motion to become A kneaded clod; and the delighted spirit To bathe in fiery floods or to reside In thrilling regions of thick-ribbed ice; To be imprison'd in the viewless winds, And blown with restless violence round about The pendent world; or to be worse than worst Of those that lawless and incertain thoughts. Imagine howling!-'tis too horrible! The weariest and most loathed worldly life That age, ache, penury, and imprisonment Can lay on nature is a paradise To what we fear of death.

Isab. Alasi alasi

Claud. Sweet sister, let me live: What sin you do to save a brother's life Nature dispenses with the deed so far That it becomes a virtue.

O you beast! Isab. O faithless coward! O dishonest wretch! Wilt thou be made a man out of my vice? Is 't not a kind of incest to take life [I think? From thine own sister's shame. What should Heaven shield my mother play'd my father fairl

For such a warped slip of wilderness Ne'er issued from his blood. Take my defiance: Die; perish! might hut my bending down Reprieve thee from thy fate, it should proceed: I'll pray a thousand prayers for thy death,-No word to save thee.

Claud. Nay, hear me, Isahel. O fie, fie, fiel Thy sin's not accidental, but a trade: Mercy to thee would prove itself a bawd: Going. 'Tis best that thou diest quickly.

O hear me, Isabella. Claud.

Bawd. Marry, sir, that's Claudio, Signior Claudio.

r Gent. Claudio to prison! 'tis not so.

Bawd. Nay, but I know 'tis so: I saw him arrested; saw him carried away; and, which is more, within these three days his head's to he chopped off. Lucio. But, after all this fooling, I would not have it so. Art thou sure of this?

Bawd. I am too sure of it: and it is for getting Madam Julietta with child.

Lucio. Believe me, this may he: he promised to meet me two hours since; and he was ever precise in promise-keeping.

2 Gent. Besides, you know, it draws something near to the speech we had to such a purpose. (proclamation.

r Gent. But most of all agreeing with the Lucio. Away; let's go learn the truth of it. [Exeunt Lucio and Gentlemen.

Bawd. Thus, what with the war, what with the sweat, what with the gallows, and what with poverty, I am custom-shrunk. How now! what's the news with you?

Enter CLOWN.

Clo. Yonder man is carried to prison. Bawd. Well: what has he done? Clo. A woman.

Bawd. But what's his offence?

Clo. Groping for trouts in a peculiar river. Bawd. What! is there a maid with child by him?

Clo. No; hut there's a woman with maid by him. You have not heard of the proclamation, have you?

Bawd. What proclamation, man?

Clo. All houses in the suburbs of Vienna must be plucked down. (the city?

Bawd. And what shall become of those in Clo. They shall stand for seed: they had gone down too, but that a wise burgher put in for them.

Bawd. But shall all our houses of resort in the suburbs he pulled down?

Clo. To the ground, mistress.

Bawd. Why, here's a change indeed in the commonwealth! What shall become of me?

Clo. Come; fear not you: good counsellors lack no clients: though you change your place you need not change your trade; I'll be your apster still. Courage; there will he pity taken on you: you that have worn your eyes almost out in the service, you will be considered.

Bawd: What's to do here, Thomas Tapster?

Let's withdraw.

Clo. Here comes Signior Claudio, led hy the provost to prison: and there's Madam Juliet.

[Excunt.]

Scene III.—The same.

Enter Provost, Claudio, Juliet, and Officers; Lucio and two Gentlemen,

Claud. Fellow, why dost thou show me thus to the world.

Bear me to prison, where I am committed. Prov. I do it not in evil disposition, But from Lord Angelo hy special charge.

Claud. Thus can the demi-god Authority Make us pay down for our offence by weight.-

The words of heaven;—on whom it will, it will; On whom it will not, so; yet still 'tis just.

Lucio. Why, how now, Claudio? whence comes this restraint?

Claud. From too much liberty, my Lucio, liberty:

As surfeit is the father of much fast. So every scope by the immoderate use Turns to restraint. Our natures do pursue,-Like rats that ravin down their proper bane,-A thirsty evil; and when we drink we die.

Lucio. If I could speak so wisely under an arrest, I would send for certain of my creditors; and yet, to say the truth, I had as lief have the foppery of freedom as the morality of imprisonment.-What's thy offence, Claudio?

Claud. What but to speak of would offend again.

Lucio. What, is it murder? Claud. No. Lucio. Lechery?

Claud. Call it so.

Prov. Away, sir; you must go. Claud. One word, good friend:—Lucio, a word with you. Takes him aside.

Lucio. A hundred, if they'll do you any good.

Is lechery so looked after?

Claud. Thus it stands with me:—Upon a true contract I got possession of Julietta's bed: You know the lady; she is fast my wife, Save that we do the denunciation lack Of outward order: this we came not to Only for propagation of a dower Remaining in the coffer of her friends; From whom we thought it meet to hide our love Till time had made them for us. But it chances The stealth of our most mutual entertainment, With character too gross, is writ on Juliet. .

Lucio. With child, perhaps?
Claud. Unhappily, even so.
And the new deputy now for the duke,— Whether it be the fault and glimpse of newness, Or whether that the body public be A horse whereon the governor doth ride, Who, newly in the seat, that it may know He can command, lets it straight feel the spur Whether the tyranny be in his place, Or in his eminence that fills it up, I stagger in.—But this new governor Awakes me all the enrolled penalties Which have, like unscour'd armour, hung by the wall So long that nineteen zodiacs have gone round And none of them been worn; and, for a name, Now puts the drowsy and neglected act Freshly on me;-'tis surely for a name.

Lucio. I warrant it is: and thy head stands so tickle on thy shoulders that a milkmaid, if she he in love, may sigh it off. Send after the duke, and appeal to him.

Claud. I have done so, hut he's not to be I pr'ythee, Lucio, do me this kind service: This day my sister should the cloister enter, And there receive her approbation: Acquaint her with the danger of my state; Implore her, in my voice, that she make friends To the strict deputy; hid herself assay him; I have great hope in that: for in her youth . There is a prone and speechless dialect.

Isab. I thank you for this comfort. Fare you well, good father. Exeunt severally.

Scene II .- The Street before the Prison.

Enter DUKE, as a Friar; to him ELBOW, CLOWN, and Officers.

Elb. Nay, if there be no remedy for it, but that you will needs buy and sell men and women like beasts, we shall have all the world drink brown and white bastard.

Duke. O heavens! what stuff is here?
Clo. 'Twas never merry world since, of two usuries, the merriest was put down, and the worser allowed by order of law a furred gown to keep him warm; and furred with fox and lamb-skins, too, to signify that craft, being richer than innocency, stands for the facing.

Elb. Come your way, sir.—Bless you, good father friar.

Duke. And you, good brother father. What offence hath this man made you, sir?

Elb. Marry, sir, he hath offended the law; and, sir, we take him to be a thief too, sir; for we have found upon him, sir, a strange picklock: which we have sent to the deputy.

Duke. Fie, sirrah; a bawd, a wicked bawdl The evil that thou causest to be done, That is thy means to live. Do thou but think What 'tis to cram a maw or clothe a back From such a filthy vice: say to thyself,-From their abominable and beastly touches I drink, I eat, array myself, and live. Canst thou believe thy living is a life, So stinkingly depending? Go mend, go mend.

Clo. Indeed, it does stink in some sort, sir;

but yet, sir, I would prove-

Duke. Nay, if the devil have given thee proofs for sin,

Thou wilt prove his. Take him to prison, officer; Correction and instruction must both work

. Ere this rude beast will profit.

Elb. He must before the deputy, sir; he has given him warning: the deputy cannot abide a whoremaster: if he be a whoremonger, and comes before him, he were as good go a mile on his errand. -

Duke. That we were all, as some would seem to be, Free from our faults, as faults from seeming

Elb. His neck will come to your waist, a cord, sir.

Clo. I spy comfort; I cry bail! Here's a gentleman, and a friend of mine.

Enter Lucio.

Lucio. How now, noble Pompey? What, at the heels of Caesar! Art thou led in triumph? What, is there none of Pygmalion's images, newly made woman, to be had now, for putting the hand in the pocket and extractingit clutched? What reply, ha? What say'st thou to this tune, matter, and method? Is 't not drowned i' the last rain, ha? What say'st thou to 't? Is the world as it was, man? Which is the way? Is it sad, and few words? or how? The trick of it?

Duke. Still thus, and thus 1 still worsel Lucio. How doth my dear morsel, thy mistress? Procures she still, ha?

Clo. Troth, sir, she hath eaten up all her-beef, and she is herself in the tub.

Lucio. Why, 'tis good: it is the right of it:
it must be so: ever your fresh whore and your powdered bawd: an unshunned consequence; it must be so. Art going to prison, Pompey? Clo. Yes, faith, sir.

Lucio. Why, 'tis not amiss, Pompey. Farewell; go, say I sent thee thither. For debt, Pompey? or how?

Elb. For being a bawd, for being a bawd. Lucio. Well, then, imprison him: if imprisonment be the due of a bawd, why, 'tis his right; bawd is he doubtless, and of antiquity, too: bawd-born. Farewell, good Pompey. mend me to the prison, Pompey. You will turn good husband now, Pompey; you will keep the house.

Clo. I hope, sir, your good worship will be my bail.

Lucio. No, indeed, will I not, Pompey; it is not the wear. I will pray, Pompey, to increase your bondage: if you take it not patiently, why, your mettle is the more. Adieu, trusty Pompey.-Bless you, friar.

Duke. And you. Lucio. Does Bridget paint still, Pompey, ha? Elb. Come your ways, sir; come.

Clo. You will not bail me then, sir? Lucio. Then, Pompey, nor now .-- What news abroad, friar? what news?

Elb. Come your ways, sir; come.
Lucio. Go,—to kennel, Pompey, go:
[Exeunt Elbow, Clown, and Officers.

What news, friar, of the duke? Duke. I know none. Can you tell me of Lucio. Some say he is with the Emperor of Russia; other some, he is in Rome: but where is he, you think?

Duke. I know not where; but wheresoever, Iwish him well.

Lucio. It was a mad fantastical trick of him to steal from the state and usurp the beggary he was never born to. Lord Angelo dukes it well in his absence; he puts transgression to 't. Duke. He does well in 't.

Lucio. A little more lenity to lechery would do no harm in him: something too crabbed that way, friar.

Duke. It is too general a vice, and severity must cure it.

Lucio. Yes, in good sooth, the vice is of a great kindred; it is well allied: but it is impossible to extirp it quite, friar, till eating and drinking be put down. They say this Angelo was not made by man and woman after the downright way of creation: is it true think you?

Duke. How should he be made, then? Lucio. Some report a sea-maid spawned him; some, that he was begot between two stockfishes.—But it is certain that, when he makes water, his urine is congealed ice; that I know to be true: and he is a motion ungenerative; that's infallible.

Duke. You are pleasant, sir, and speak apace. Lucio. Why, what a ruthless thing is this in him, for the rebellion of a cod-piece to take away the life of a man? Would the duke that is absent have done this? Ere he would have Isab. Adoptedly; as schoolmaids change their names

By vain though apt affection. She it is. Lucio.

Isab. O, let him marry her! Lucio. This is the point. The duke is very strangely cone from hence; Bore many gentlemen, myself being one, In hand, and hope of action: but we do learn By those that know the very nerves of state, His givings out were of an infinite distance Upon his place, From his true-meant design. And with full line of his authority, Governs Lord Angelo: a man wbose blood

Is very snow-broth; one who never feels The wanton stings and motions of the sense. But doth rebate and blunt his natural edge With profits of the mind, study, and fast. He,—to give fear to use and liberty, Which have for long run by the hideous law, As mice by lions,—hath pick'd out an act,

Under whose beavy sense your brother's life Falls into forfeit: he arrests him on it; And follows close the rigour of the statute To make him an example; all hope is gone. Unless you have the grace by your fair prayer To soften Angelo: and that's my pith Of business 'twixt you and your poor brother.

Isab. Doth he so seek his life? Has censur'd him Lucio. Already; and, as I hear, the provost hath

A warrant for his execution. Isab. Alasl what poor ability's in me To do him good.

Lucio. Assay the power you have. Isab. My power! alas, I doubt,-

Our doubts are traitors, Lucio. And make us lose the good we oft might win By fearing to attempt. Go to Lord Angelo, And let him learn to know, when maidens sue. Men give like gods; but when they weep and kneel.

All their petitions are as freely theirs As they themselves would owe them.

Isab. I'll see what I can do. Lucio.

Isab. I will about it straight: No longer staying but to give the mother Notice of my affair. I humbly thank you: Commend me to my brother: soon at night I'll send him certain word of my success.

Lucio. I take my leave of you. Isab. Good sir, adieu.

But speedily.

ACT II.

Scene I .- A Hall in Angelo's House,

Enter Angelo, Escalus, a Justice, Provost, Officers, and other Attendants.

law,

Setting it up to fear the birds of prey, And let it keep one shape till custom make it Their perch, and not their terror.

Ay, but yet Escal. Let us be keen, and rather cut a little Than fall and bruise to death. Alas! this gentleman. Whom I would save, had a most noble father. Let but your honour know,-

Whom I believe to be most strait in virtue.-That, in the working of your own affections, Had time cober'd with place, or place with wishing, Or that the resolute acting of your blood Could have attain'd the effect of your own purpose,

Whether you had not sometime in your life Err'd in this point which now you censure him, And pull'd the law upon you.

Ang. 'Tis one thing to be tempted, Escalus, Another thing to fall. I not deny.

The jury, passing on the prisoner's life, May, in the sworn twelve, have a thief or two Guiltier than him they try. What's open made to justice,

That instice seizes. What know the laws That thieves do pass on thieves? 'Tis very pregnant,

The jewel that we find, we stoop and take it, Because we see it: but what we do not see We tread upon, and never think of it. You may not so extenuate his offence For I have had such faults; but rather tell me, When I, that censure him, do so offend, Let mine own judgment pattern out my death, And nothing come in partial. Sir, he must die.

Escal. Be it as your wisdom will. Where is the provost? Ang.

Prov. Here, if it like your honour. Ang. See that Claudio Be executed by nine to-morrow morning: Bring him bis confessor; let bim be prepared;

For that's the utmost of his pilgrimage. Exit PROVOST. Escal. Well, heaven forgive him! and forgive us all!

Some rise by sin and some by virtue fall: Some run from brakes of vice, and answer none; And some condemned for a fault alone.

Enter Elbow, Froth, Clown, Officers, &c.

Elb. Come, bring them away: if these be good people in a commonweal that do nothing but use their abuses in common houses, I know no law; bring them away.

Ang. How now, sirl What's your name? and what's the matter?

Elb. If it please your honour, I am the poor duke's constable, and my name is Elbow; I do lean upon justice, sir, and do bring in here before your good honour two notorious bene-[Exeunt. | factors.

Ang. Benefactors! Well; what benefactors are they? are they not malefactors?

Elb. If it please your bonour, I know not well what they are: but precise villains they are, that I am sure of; and void of all profanation Ang. We must not make a scarecrow of the in the world that good Christians ought to have. officer.

Escal. This comes off well: bere's a wise Ang. Go to:—what quality are they of?
Elbow is your name? Why dost thou not speak, Elbow?
Clo. He cannot, sir; he's out at elbow.

Ang. What are you, sir? Elb. He, sir? a tapster, sir; parcel-bawd; one that serves a bad woman; whose house, sir, was, as they say, plucked down in the Duke. He professes to have received no sinister measure from his judge, but most willingly humbles himself to the determination of justice: yet had he framed to himself, by the instruction of his frailty, many deceiving promises of life; which I, by my good leisure, have discredited to him, and how is he resolved to die.

Escal. You have paid the heavens your function and the prisoner the very deht of your call-I have laboured for the poor gentleman to the extremest shore of my modesty; hut my brother justice have I found so severe that he hath forced me to tell him he is indeed-justice.

Duke. If his own life answer the straitness of his proceeding, it shall become him well; wherein if he chance to fail, he hath sentenced himself.

Escal. I am going to visit the prisoner.

Fare you well. Duke. Peace be with you!

Exeunt ESCAL., and PROV. He who the sword of heaven will bear Should be as holy as severe; Pattern in himself to know, Grace to stand, and virtue go: More nor less to others paying Than hy self-offences weighing Shame to him whose cruel striking Kills for faults of his own liking! Twice trehle shame on Angelo, To weed my vice and let his grow! O, what may man within him hide, Though angel on the outward side! How may likenesses, made in crimes, Making practice on the times, Draw with idle spiders' strings Most pond'rous and substantial things! Craft against vice I must apply; With Angelo to-night shall lie His old betrothed but despis'd; So disguise shall, hy the disguis'd, Pay with falsehood false exacting,

ACT IV.

And perform an old contracting.

SCENE I .- A Room in MARIANA'S House.

MARIANA discovered sitting; a Boy singing.

SONG.

Take, O take those lips away, That so sweetly were forsworn; And those eyes, the break of day, Lights that do mislead the morn: But my kisses bring again, Bring again: Seals of love, but seal'd in vain, Sealed in vain.

Mari. Break off thy song, and haste thee quick away; Here comes a man of comfort, whose advice Hath often still'd my hrawling discontent Exit Boy.

Enter DUKE.

I cry you mercy, sir; and well could wish You had not found me here so musical: Let me excuse me, and believe me so, [woe, My mirth it much displeas'd, but pleas'd my Duke. 'Tis good: though music oft hath such a charm

To make bad good and good provoke to harm. I pray you, tell me, hath anybody inquired for me here to-day? much upon this time have I promised here to meet.

Mari. You have not heen inquired after: I have sat here all day.

Enter Isabella.

Duke I do constantly believe you,—The time is ome even now. I shall crave your forbearance a little: may he I will call upon you anon, for some advantage to yourself.

Mari. I am always bound to you.

Duke. Very well met, and welcome.

What is the news from this good deputy? Isab. He hath a garden circummur'd with brick, Whose western side is with a vineyard hack'd: And to that vineyard is a planched gate That makes his opening with this bigger key: This other doth command a little door Which from the vineyard to the garden leads; There have I made my promise to call on him Upon the heavy middle of the night.

Duke. But shall you on your knowledge find this way? Isab. I have ta'en a due and wary note upon't; With whispering and most guilty diligence, In action all of precept, he did show me

The way twice o'er. Are there no other tokens Duke. Between you 'greed concerning her observance?

Isab. No, none, but only a repair i' the dark; And that I have possess'd him my most stay Can he but brief: for I have made him know I have a servant comes with me along, That stays upon me; whose persuasion is I come about my hrother.

'Tis well borne up. Duke. I have not yet made known to Mariana. A word of this.-What, hol withink come forth.

Re-enter Mariana.

I pray you be acquainted with this maid; She comes to do you good.

Exit.

I do desire the like: Isab. Duke. Do you persuade yourself that I respect you? Mari. Good friar, I know you do, and I [the hand, have found it.

Duke. Take, then, this your companion by Who hath a story ready for your ear: I shall attend your leisure; but make haste;

The vaporous night approaches. Mari.

Will 't please you walk aside? [Exeunt MARI. and ISAB. Duke. O place and greatness, millions of false eyes Are stuck upon theel volumes of report Run with these false and most contrarious quests Upon thy doings! thousand 'scapes of wit Make thee the father of their idle dream, And rack thee in their fanciesl-Welcome! How agreed?

Re-enter Mariana and Isabella.

Isab. She'll take the enterprise upon her, father,

If you advise it. It is not my consent, Duke. But my entreaty too.

Escal. Where were you born, friend? ITa FROTH.

Froth. Here in Vienna, sir.

Escal. Are you of fourscore pounds a-year? Frath. Yes, an 't please you, sir.

Escal. So .- What trade are you of, sir? Ta the CLOWN.

. Cla. A tapster; a poor widow's tapster. Escal. Your mistress's name?

Cla. Mistress Overdone.

Escal. Hath she had any more than one husband?

Cla. Nine, sir; Overdone by the last.

Escal. Nine!—Come hither to me, Master Froth. Master Froth, I would not have you acquainted with tapsters: they will draw you, Master Froth, and you will hang them. Get you gone, and let me hear no more af you.

Frath. I thank your worship. For mine own part, I never come into any room in a taphouse but I am drawn in.

Escal. Well; no more of it, Master Froth: farewell. [Exit FROTH.]—Come you hither to me, master tapster; what's your name, master tapster?

Clo. Pompey.

Escal. What else? Cla. Bum, sir.

Escal. 'Troth, and your bum is the greatest thing about you; so that, in the beastliest sense, you are Pompey the great. Pompey, you are partly a bawd, Pompey, howsoever you colour it in being a tapster. Are you not? come, tell me true; it shall be the better for you.

Truly, sir, I am a poor fellow that ! would live.

Escal. How would you live, Pompey? by being a bawd? What do you think of the trade, Pompey? is it a lawful trade?

Clo. If the law would allow it, sir.

Escal. But the law will not allow it, Pompey: nor it shall not be allowed in Vienna.

Clo. Does your worship mean to geld and splay all the youth in the city?

Escal. No, Pompey.

Clo. Truly, sir, in my poor opinion, they will to 't then. If your worship will take order for the drabs and the knaves, you need not to fear the bawds.

Escal. There are pretty orders beginning, I can tell you. It is but heading and hanging.

Clo. If you head and hang all that offend that way but for ten year together, you'll be glad to give out a commission for more heads. If this law hold in Vienna ten year, I'll rent the fairest house in it, after threepence a bay. If you live to see this come to pass, say Pompey told you so.

Escal. Thank you, good Pompey: and, in requital of your prophecy, hark you,-I advise you, let me not find you before me again upon any complaint whatsoever, no, not for dwelling where you do; if I do, Pompey, I shall beat you to your tent, and prove a shrewd Caesar to you; in plain dealing, Pompey, I shall have you whipt: so for this time, Pompey, fare you well.

Clo. I thank your worship for your good counsel; but I shall follow it as the flesh and fortune shall better determine.

Whip me? No, no; let carman whip his jade: The valiant heart's not whipt out of his trade.

Escal. Come hither to me, Master Elbow; come hither, Master Constable. How long have you been in this place of constable?

Elb. Seven year and a half, sir.

Escal. I thought, by your readiness in the office, you had continued in it some time. You say seven years together?

Elb. And a half, sir.

Escal. Alas! it hath been great pains to you!-They do you wrong to put you so aft upon 't. Are there not men in your ward sufficient to serve it?

Elb. Faith, sir, few of any wit in such matters: as they are chosen, they are glad to choose me for them; I do it for some piece of money, and ga through with all.

Escal. Look you, bring me in the names at some six or seven, the most sufficient of your parish.

Elb. Ta your worship's house, sir? Escal. Ta my house. Fare you well. [Exit ELBOW.] What's o'clock, think you?

Just. Eleven, sir. Escal. I pray you home to dinner with me. Just. I humbly thank you.

Escal. It grieves me for the death of Claudio; But there's na remedy.

Just. Lord Angelo is severe.

It is but needful: Mercy is not itself, that oft looks so: Pardon is still the nurse of second woe: But yet,-Poor Claudio!-There's no remedy. Come, sir.

Scene II .- Another Room in the same.

Enter Provost and a Servant.

Serv. He's hearing of a cause; he will come straight.

Now, sir, what news?

Prov. I told you: Lord Angelo, belike thinking me remiss in mine office, awakens me with! this unwonted putting on; methinks strangely, ! for he hath not used it before.

Duke. Przy 7ou, let's hear.

Prov. [Reads.] Whatsoever you may hear to the contrary, let Claudio be executed by four of the clock; and, in the afternoon, Barnardine: for my better salisfaction, let me have Claudio's head sent me by five. Let this be duly performed; with a thought that more depends on it than we must yet deliver. Thus fail not to do your office, as you will answer it at your peril. What say you to this, sir?

Duke. What is that Barnardine who is to be executed in the afternoon? Prov. A Bohemian born; but here nursed up and bred: one that is a prisoner nine years old.

Duke. How came it that the absent duke had not either delivered him to his liberty or executed him? I have heard it was ever his manner to do so.

Prov. His friends still wrought reprieves for him: and, indeed, his fact, till now in the government of Lord Angelo, came not to an un-doubtful proof.

Duke. Is it now apparent?

Prov. Most manifest, and not denied by himzelf.

Duke. Hath he borne himself penitently in prison? How seems he to be touched?

Prov. A man that apprehends death no more dreadfully but as a drunken sleep; careless, reckless, and fearless of what's past, present, or to come; insensibly of mortality and desperately mortal.

Duke. He wants advice.

Prov. Pardon me, good father; it is against my oath.

Duke. Were you sworn to the duke, or to the deputy?

Prov. To him and his substitutes.

Duke. You will think you have made no offence if the duke avouch the justice of your dealing?

Prov. But what likelihood is in that?

Duke. Not a resemblance, but a certainty. Yet since I see yu fearful that neither my coat, integrity, nor my persuasion can with ease attempt you, I will go further than I meant, to pluck all fears out of you. Look you, sir, here is the hand and seal of the duke. You know the character, I doubt not; and the signet is not strange to you.

Prov. I know them both.

Duke. The contents of this is the return of the duke; you shall anon over-read it at your pleasure; where you shall find, within these two days he will be here. This is a thing that Angelo knows not: for he this very day receives letters of strange tenor: perchance the duke's death; perchance entering into some monastery; but, by chence, nothing of what is writ. Look, the unfolding star calls up the shepherd. not yourself into amezement how these things should be: all difficulties are but easy when they are known. Scene I .- A Room in the Prison.

Enter DUKE, CLAUDIO, and PROVOST. Duke. So, then you hope of pardon from Lord Angelo?

clusion I now begin with grief and shame to utter: He would not, but by gift of my chaste body To his concupiscible intemperate lust, Release my brother; and, after much debatement,

My sisterly remorse confutes mine honour, And I did yield to him. But the next morn betimes.

His purpose surfeiting, he sends a warrant For my poor brother's head.

Duke.This is most likely. Isab. O, that it were as like as it is true! Duke. By heaven, fond wretch, thou know'st not what thou speak'st.

Or else thou art suborn'd against his honour In hateful practice. First, his integrity Stands without blemish:-next, it imports no reason

That with such vehemency he should pursue Faults proper to himself: if he had so offended, He would have weigh'd thy brother by himself, And not have cut him off. Some one hath set you on:

Confess the truth, and say by whose advice Thou cam'st here to complain.

And is this all? Isab. Then, O you blessed ministers above Keep me in patience; and, with ripen'd time, Unfold the evil which is here wrapt up In countenance!-Heaven shield your grace from woe,

As I, thus wrong'd, hence unbelieved go! Duke. I know you'd fain be gone.—An officer!

F. Peter. Well, he in time may come to clear himself;

But at this instant he is sick, my lord, Of a strange fever Upon his mere request,-Being come to knowledge that there was complaint

Intended 'gainst Lord Angelo,—came I hither To speak, as from his mouth, what he doth know

Isab. What is your will?

Duke. Might you dispense with your reisure I would by and by have some speech with yon: the satisfaction I would require is likewise your own benefit.

Isab. I have no superfluous leisure; my stay must be stolen out of other affairs; but I will attend you awhile.

Duke. [To CLAUDIO aside.] Son, I have overheard what hath passed between you and your sister. Angelo had never the purpose to corrupt her; only he hath made an essay of her virtue to practise his judgment with the disposition of natures; she, having the truth of honour in her, hath made him that gracious denial which he is most glad to receive: I am confessor to Angelo, and I know this to be true; therefore prepare yourself to death. Do not satisfy your resolution with hopes that are fallible: to-morrow you must die; go to your knees and make ready.

Cloud. Let me ask my sister pardor so out of love with life that I will sue to be rid of it.

Duke. Hold you there. Farewell. Exit CLAUDIO.

Re-enter Provost

Provost, a word with you.

Prov. What's your will, father?

Duke. That, now you are come, you will be gone. Leave me a while with the maid; my mind promises with my habit no loss shall touch her by my company.

Prov. In good time. Exit PROVOST. Duke. The hand that hath made you fair hath made you good: the goodness that is cheap in beauty makes beauty brief in goodness: but grace, being the soul of your complexion, should keep the body of it ever fair. The assault that Angelo hath made to you, fortune hath conveyed to my understanding; and, but that frailty hath examples for his falling, I should wonder at Angelo. How will you do to content this substitute, and to save your brother?

Isob. I am now going to resolve him; I had rather my brother die by the law than my son should be unlawfully born. But O, how much is the good duke deceived in Angelol If ever he return, and I can speak to him, I will open my lips in vain, or discover his government.

Duke. That shall not be much amiss: yet, as the matter now stands, he will avoid your accusation; he made trial of you only.-Therefore fasten your ear on my advisings; to the love I have in doing good a remedy presents itself. I do make myself believe that you may most uprighteously do a poor wronged lady a merited benefit; redeem your brother from the angry law; do not stain to your own gracious person; and much please the absent duke if, peradventure, he shall ever return to have Re-enter Duke. Vouchsase a word, young sister, but the circus of Earful. Have you not heard speak of Mariana, the sister of Frederick the great soldier who miscarried at sea?

Isab. I have heard of the lady, and good words went with her name.

Duke. Her should this Angelo have married; was affianced to her by oath, and the nuptial appointed: between which time of the contract and limit of the solemnity her brother Frederick was wrecked at sea, having in that perished vessel the dowry of his sister. But mark how heavily this befell to the poor gentlewoman: there she lost a noble and renowned brother, in his love toward her ever most kind and natural; with him the portion and sinew of her fortune, her marriage-dowry; with both, her combinate husband, this well-seeming Angelo.

Isab. Can this be so? Did Angelo so leave

Duke. Left her in her tears, and dried not one of them with his comfort; swallowed his vows whole, pretending, in her, discoveries of dishonour; in few, bestowed her on her own lamentation, which she yet wears for his sake; and he, a marble to her tears, is washed with them, but relents not.

Isab. What a merit were it in neath to take this poor maid from the world! What corruption in this life that it will let this man live!-

But how out of this can she avail? Duke. It is a supture that you may easily heal, and the cure of it not only saves your brother, but keeps you from dishonour in doing

Isab. Show me how, good father. Duke. This forenamed maid hath yet in her the continuance of her first affection; his unjust unkindness, that in all reason should have quenched her love, hath, like an impediment in the current, made it more violent and unruly. Go you to Angelo; answer his requiring with a plausible obedience; agree with his demands to the point: only refer yourself to this advantage, first, that your stay with him may not be long; that the time may have all shadow and silence in it; and the place answer to convenience: this being granted in course, now follows all. We being granted in course, now follows all. shall advise this wronged maid to stead up your appointment, go in your place; if the encounter acknowledge itself bereafter, it may compel him to her recompense: and here, by this, is your brother saved, your honour untainted, the poor Mariana advantaged, and the corrupt deputy scaled. The maid will I frame and make fit for his attempt. If you think well to carry this as you may, the doubleness of the benefit de-fends the deceit from reproof. What think you of it?

Iscb. Theimage of it gives me content already; and I trust it will grow to a most prosperous perfection.

Duke. It lies much in your holding up. Haste you speedily to Angelo: if for this night he entreat you to his bed, give him promise of satisfaction. I will presently to St. Luke's; nearing of this business.

Isob. Let me hear you speak further; I have jected Mariana. At that place call upon me; spirit to do anything that appears not foul in the truth of my spirit.

The meaning of this business.

I wan presently to St. Luke's; there, at the moated grange, resides this dejected Mariana. At that place call upon me; spirit to do anything that appears not foul in guickly. Escal. The duke's in us; and we will hear you speak:

Look you speak justly.

Duke. Boldly, at least. But, O, poor souls, Come you to seek the lamb here of the fox, Good night to your redress! Is the duke gone! Then is your cause gone too. The duke's unjust Thus to retort your manifest appeal, And put your trial in the villain's mouth

Which here you come to accuse. Lucio. This Escal. Why, thou low'd friar! lof. This is the rascal; this is he I spoke thou unreverend and unhal-

Is 't not enough thou hast suborn'd these women To accuse this worthy man, but, in foul mouth, And in the witness of his proper ear,

To call him villain?

And then to glance from him to the duke himself. To tax him with injustice? Take him hence;

To the rack with him.-We'll touze you joint by joint,

But we will know this purpose.—What! unjust?

Duke. Be not so hot; the duke Dare no more stretch this finger of mine than he Dare rack his own; his subject am I not, Nor here provincial. My business in this state Made me a looker-on here in Vienna, Where I have seen corruption boil and bubble Till it o'errun the stew: laws for all faults, Butfaultssocountenanc'dthatthestrongstatutes Stand like the forfeits in a barber's shop, As much in mock as mark.

Escal. Slander to the state! Away with him to prison!

Ang. What can you vouch against him, Signior Lucio?

Is this the man that you did tell us of?

Lucio. 'Tis he, my lord. Come hither, good-an bald-pate. Do you know me?

man bald-pate.

Duke. I remember you, sir, by the sound of your voice. I met you at the prison, in the absence of the duke.

Lucio. O did you so? And do you remember what you said of the duke?

Duke. Most notedly, sir.

Lucio. Do you so, sir? And was the duke a fleshmonger, a fool, and a coward, as you then reported him to be?

Duke. You must, sir, change persons with me ere you make that my report: you, indeed, spoke so of him; and much more, much worse.

Lucio. O thou damnable fellow! Did not I pluck thee by the nose for thy speeches?

Duke. I protest I love the duke as I love myself.

Ang. Hark how the villain would gloze now, after his treasonable abuses!

Escal. Such a fellow is not to be talked withal. Away with him to prison!-Where is the provost? -Away with him to prison! lay bolts enough upon him: let him speak no more. -- Away with those giglots too, and with the other confederate companion!

The PROVOST lays hands on the DUKE.

Duke. Stay, sir; stay awhile.

Ang. What! resists he?—Help him, Lucio. Lucio. Come, sir; come, sir! come, sir; foh, sir. Why, you bald-pated, lying rascal! you must be hooded, must you? Show your knave's visage, with a pox to you! show your sheepbiting face, and be hanged an hour! Will't not off?

> [Pulls off the Friar's hood, and discovers the DUKE.

Duke. Thou art the first knave that e'er made a duke.

First, Provost, let me bail these gentle three:-Sneak not away, sir [to Lucio]; for the friar and We'll borrow place of him.—Sir, by your leave: To ANGELO.

Hast thou or word, or wit, or impudence That yet can do thee office? If thou hast, Rely upon it till my tale be heard, And hold no longer out.

O my dread lord, Ang. I should be guiltier than my guiltiness, To think I can be undiscernible, When I perceive your grace, like power divine, Hathlooked upon my passes. Then, good prince, No longer session hold upon my shame, But let my trial be mine own confession: Immediate sentence then, and sequent death,

Is all the grace I beg. Come hither, Mariana:-Duke. Say, wast thou e'er contracted to this woman?

Ang. I was, my lord.

Duke. Go, take her hence and marry her instantly.

Do you the office, friar; which consummate, Return him here again.—Go with him, Provost. [Exeunt Ang., MARI., PET., and Prov. Escal. My lord, I am more amazed at his dishonour Than at the strangeness of it.

Come hither, Isabel: Duke. Your friar is now your prince. As I was then Advertising and holy to your business, Not changing heart with habit, I am still Attorney'd at your service.

O give me pardon, Isab. That I, your vassal, have employ'd and pain'd

Your unknown sovereignty.

You are pardon'd, Isabel. Duke.And now, dear maid, be you as free to us. Your brother's death, I know, sits at your heart; And you may marvel why I obscur'd myself, Labouring to save his life, and would not rather Make rash remonstrance of my hidden power Than let him so be lost. O most kind maid, It was the switt celerity of his death, Which I did think with slower foot came on, That brain'd my purpose. But peace be with himl That life is better life, past fearing death,

Than that which lives to fear: make it your comfort,

So happy is your brother. I do, my lord. Isab.

Re-enter Angelo, Mariana, Peter, and PROVOST.

Duke. For this new-married man approaching here. Whose salt imagination yet hath wrong'd hanged a man for the getting a hundred bastards, he would have paid for the nursing a thousand. He had some feeling of the sport; he knew the service, and that instructed him to mercy.

Duke. I never heard the absent duke much detected for women; he was not inclined that Lucio. O, sir, you are deceived. Duke. 'Tis not possible.

Lucio. Who, not the duke? yes, your beggar of fifty; -- and his use was to put a ducat in her clack-dish: the duke had crotchets in him. He would be drunk too: that let me inform you.

Duke. You do him wrong, surely. Lucio. Sir, I was an inward of his. fellow was the duke: and I believe I know the cause of his withdrawing.

Duke. What, I pr'ythee, might be the cause?
Lucio. No,—pardon;—'tis a secret must be locked within the teeth and the lips: but this I can let you understand,—the greater file of the subject held the duke to be wise.

Duke. Wise? why, no question but he was. Lucio. A very superficial, ignorant, un-weighing fellow.

Duke. Either this is envy in you, folly, or mistaking; the very stream of his life, and the business he hath helmed, must, upon a war-ranted need, give him a better proclamation. Let him be but testimonied in his own bringings forth, and he shall appear to the envious a scholar, a statesman, and a soldier. Therefore you speak unskilfully; or, if your knowledge be more, it is much darkened in your malice.

Lucio. Sir, I know him, and I love him.

Duke. Love talks with better knowledge, and knowledge with dearer love.

Lucio. Come, sir, I know what I know.

Duke. I can hardly believe that, since you know not what you speak. But, if ever the duke return,—as our prayers are he may,—let me desire you to make your answer before him.

If it be honest you have spoke, you have courage to maintain it: I am bound to call upon you; and, I pray you, your name?

Lucio. Sir, my name is Lucio; well known to the duke.

Duke. He shall know you better, sir, if I may live to report you.

Lucio. I fear you not.

Duke. O, you hope the duke will return no more; or you imagine me too unhurtful an opposite. But, indeed, I can do you little harm: you'll forswear this again.

Lucio. I'll be hanged first! thou art deceived in me, friar. But no more of this. Canst thou tell if Claudio die to-morrow or no?

Duke. Why should he die, sir? Lucie. Why, for filling a bottle with a tundish. I would the duke we talk of were returned again: this ungenitured agent will unpeople the province with continency; sparrows must not build in his house-eaves because they are lecherous. The duke yet would have dark deeds darkly answered; he would never bring them to light: would he were returned! Marry, this Claudio is condemned for untrus-sing. Farewell, good friar: I pr'ythee, pray for me. The duke, I say to thee again, would visitation.

eat mutton on Fridays. He's now past it; yet, and I say to thee, he would mouth with a beggar though she smelt brown bread and garlic: say that I said so .- Farewell.

Duke. No might nor greatness in mortality Can censure 'scape; back-wounding calumny The whitest virtue strikes. What king so strong Can tie the gall up in the slanderous tongue?

But who comes here?

Enter Escalus, Provost, Bawd, and Officers

Escal. Go, away with her to prison.

Bawd. Good my lord, be good to me; your honour is accounted a merciful man; good my Escal. Double and treble admonition, and still forfeit in the same kind? This would make mercy swear and play the tyrant.

Prov. A bawd of eleven years' continuance, may it please your honour.

Bawd. My lord, this is one Lucio's information against me: Mistress Kate Keepdown was with child by him in the duke's time; he promised her marriage; his child is a year and a quarter old come Philip and Jacob: I have kept it myself; and see how he goes about to abuse me.

Escal. That fellow is a fellow of much licence:--let him be called before us .-- Away with her to prison. Go to; no more words. [Excunt BAWD and Officers.] Provost, my brother Angelo will not be altered, Claudio must die to-morrow: let him be furnished with divines, and have all charitable preparation: if my brother wrought by my pity it should not be so with him.

Prov. So please you, this friar hath been with him, and advised him for the entertainment of death.

Escal. Good even, good father. Duke. Bliss and goodness on you!

Escal. Of whence are you?

Duke. Not of this country, though my chance

To use it for my time: I am a brother Of gracions order, late come from the see In special business from his holiness.

Escal. What news abroad i' the world? Duke. None, but that there is so great a fever on goodness, that the dissolution of it must cure it: novelty is only in request; and it is as dangerous to be aged in any kind of course as it is virtuous to be constant in any undertaking. There is scarce truth enough alive to make societies secure; but security enough to make fellowships accursed: much upon this riddle runs the wisdom of the world. This news is old enough, yet it is every day's news. I pray you, sir, of what disposition was the duke? Escal. One that, above all other strifes, contended especially to know himself.

Duke. What pleasure was he given to?
Escal. Rather rejoicing to see another merry, than merry at anything which professed to make him rejoice: a gentleman of all temperance. But leave we him to his events, with a prayer they may prove prosperous; and let me desire to know how you find Claudio prepared. I am made to understand that you have lent him for it, you may; but I had rather it would please you I might be whipped.

Duke. Whipp'd first, sir, and hang'd after.—Proclaim it, Provost, round about the city, If any woman's wrong'd by this lewd fellow,—As I have heard him swear himself there's ome Whom he begot with child,—let her appear, And he shall marry her: the nuptial finish'd, Let him be whipp'd and hang'd.

Lucio. I beseech your highness, do not marry me to a whore! Your highness said even now I made you a duke; good my lord, do not recompense me in making me a cuckold.

Duke. Upon mine honour, thou shalt marry her.

Thy slanders I forgive; and therewithal Remit thy other forfeits.—Take him to prison; And see our pleasure herein executed.

Lucio. Marrying a punk, my lord, is pressing to death, whipping, and hanging. Duke. Slandering a prince deserves it.—
[Exeunt Officers with Lucio.
She, Claudio, that you wrong'd, look you restore.—

Joy to you, Mariana!—Love her, Angelo; I have confess'd her, and I know her virtue.—Thanks, good friend Escalus, for thy much goodness

There's more behind that is more gratulate. Thanks, Provost, for thy care and secrecy; We shall employ thee in a worthier place.—Forgive him, Angelo, that brought you home The head of Ragozine for Claudio's: The offence pardons itself.—Dear Isabel, I have a motion much imports your good; Whereto if you'll a willing ear incline, What's mine is yours, and what is yours is mine:—

So, bring us to our palace; where we'll show
What's yet behind that's meet you all should know.

[Exeunt.

Little have you to say, Isab. When you depart from him, but, soft and low. Remember now my brother.

Fear me not. Mari. Duke. Nor, gentle daughter, fear you not at ell:

He is your husband on a pre-contract: To bring you thus together 'tis no sin Sith that the justice of your title to him Doth flourish the deceit. Come, let us go; Our corn's to reap, for yet our tilth's to sow. Exeunt.

Scene II .- A Room in the Prison.

Enter PROVOST and CLOWN.

Prov. Come hither, sirrah. Can you cut off a man's head?

Clo. If the man he a bachelor, sir, I can: but if he be a married man, he is his wife's head, and I can never cut off a woman's head.

Prov. Come, sir, leave me your snatches To-morrow and yield me a direct answer. morning are to die Claudio and Barnardine. Here is in our prison a common executioner, who in his office lacks a helper; if you will take it on you to assist him, it shall redeem you from your gyves; if not, you shall have your full time of imprisonment, and your deliverance with an unpitied whipping; for you have been a notorious bawd.

Clo, Sir, I have been an unlawful bawd time out of mind; but yet I will be content to be a lawful hangman. I would be glad to receive lawful hangman. some instruction from my fellow-partner.

Prov. What ho, Abhorson! Where's Abhorson than 2

horson, there?

Enter ABHORSON.

Abhor. Do you call, sir?

Prov. Sirrah, here's a fellow will help you to-morrow in your execution. If you think it meet, compound with him by the year, and let him abide here with you; if not, use him for the present, and dismiss him. He cannot plead his estimation with you; he hath been a bawd. Abhor. A bawd, sir? Fie upon him; he will discredit our mystery.

Prov. Go to, sir; you weigh equally; feather will turn the scale. (Exit.

Clo. Pray, sir, by your good favour,—for, surely, sir, a good favour you have, but that you have a hanging look,-do you call, sir, your occupation a mystery?

Abhor. Ay, sir; a mystery. Clo. Painting, sir, I have heard say, is a mystery; and your whores, sir, being members of my occupation, using painting, do prove my occupation a mystery; but what mystery there should be in hanging, if I should be hanged, I cannot imagine.

Abhor. Sir, it is a mystery.

Clo. Proof.

Abhor. Every true man's apparel fits your thief: if it be too little for your thief, your true man thinks it big enough; if it be too big for your thief, your thief thinks it little enough: so every true man's apparel fits your thief.

Re-enter PROVOST.

Prov. Are you agreed?

Clo. Sir, I will serve him; for I do find your hangman is a more penitent trade than your bawd; he doth oftener ask forgiveness.

Prov. You, sirrah, provide your block and your axe to-morrow four o'clock.

Abhor. Come on, bawd; I will instruct thee in my trade; follow.

Clo. I do desire to learn, sir; and I hope, if you have occasion to use me for your own turn, you shall find me yare: for, truly, sir, for your kindness I owe you a good turn.

Prov. Call hither Barnardine and Claudio. Exeunt CLO. and ABHOR. One has my pity; not a jot the other,

Being a murderer, though he were my brother.

Enter CLAUDIO.

Look, here's the warrant, Claudio, for thy death: 'Tis now dead midnight, and by eight to-morrow Thou must be made immortal. Where's Barnardine? Nabour

By and byl-I hope it is some pardon or reprieve For the most gentle Claudio .- Welcome, father.

Enter DUKE. Duke. The best and wholesomest spirits of of late? the night

Duke.

Not Isabel?

Prov. No.

Duke. They will, then, ere 't be long. Prov. What comfort is for Claudio?

There's some in hope. Duke. Prov. It is a bitter deputy.

Duke. Not so, not so; his life is parallel'd Even with the stroke and line of his great justice; He doth with holy abstinence subdue That in himself which he spurs on his power Prov. There he must stay until the officer Arise to let him in; he is call'd up. yet, Duke. Have you no countermand for Claudio But he must die to-morrow?

None, sir, none.

Duke. As near the dawning, Provost, as it is, You shall hear more ere morning

Prov. Happily You something know; I believe there comes No countermand; no such example have we: Besides, upon the very siege of justice, ${\it Hero.}\,$ My cousin means Signior Benedick of Padua.

Mess. O, he is returned, and as pleasant as ever he was.

Beat. He set up his bills here in Messina, and challenged Cupid at the flight: and my uncle's fool, reading the challenge, subscribed for Cupid, and challenged him at the bird-holt.—I pray you, how many hath he killed and eaten in these wars? But how many hath he killed? for, indeed, I promised to eat all of his killing.

Leon. Faith, niece, you tax Signior Benedick too much; but he'll he meet with you, I doubt it not.

Mess. He hath done good service, lady, in Beat. You had musty victual, and he hath holp to eat it: he is a very valiant trencherman; he hath an excellent stomach.

Mess. And a good soldier too, lady.

Beat. And a good soldier to a lady: but what is he to a lord?

-Mess. A lord to a lord, a man to a man; stuffed with all honourable virtues.

Beat. It is so, indeed: he is no less than a stuffed man: but for the stuffing—well, we are all mortal.

Leon. You must not, sir, mistake my niece: there is a kind of merry war betwixt Signior Benedick and her: they never meet but there is a skirmish of wit between them.

Beat. Alas, he gets nothing hy that. In our last conflict four of his five wits went halting off, and now is the old man governed with one: so that if he have wit enough to keep himself warm, let him bear it for a difference between himself and his horse; for it is all the wealth that he hath left, to be known a reason able creature.—Who is his companion now? He hath every month a new sworn brother.

Mess. Is it possible?

Beat. Very easily possible: he wears his faith but as the fashion of his hat; it ever changes with the next block.

Mess. I see, lady, the gentleman is not in your books.

Beat. No: an he were I would burn my study. But, I pray you, who is his companion? Is there no young squarer, now, that will make a voyage with him to the devil?

Mess. He is most in the company of the right noble Claudio.

Beat. O Lord! he will hang upon him like a disease: he is sooner caught than the pestilence, and the taker runs presently mad. God help the nohle Claudio! if he have caught the Benedick, it will cost him a thousand pound ere he be cured.

Mess. I will hold friends with you, lady.

Beat. Do, good friend.

Leon. You will never run mad, niece.

Beat. No, not till a hot January.
Mess. Don Pedro is approached.

Enter Don Pedro, attended by Balthazar and others, Don John, Claudio, and Benedick.

D. Pedro. Good Signior Leonato, you are come to meet your trouble: the fashion of the world is to avoid cost, and you encounter it.

Leon. Never came trouble to my house in the likeness of your grace; for trouble being gone, comfort should remain; but when you depart from me, sorrow abides, and happiness takes his leave.

D. Pedro. You embrace your charge too willingly.—I think this is your daughter.

Leon. Her mother hath many times told me so. [her?

Benc. Were you in doubt, sir, that you asked Leon. Signior Benedick, no; for then were you a child.

D. Pedro. You have it full, Benedick: we may guess by this what you are, being a man. Truly, the lady fathers herself.—Be happy, ladyl for you are like an honourable father.

Bene. If Signior Leonato be her father, she would not have his head on her shoulders for all Messina, as like him as she is.

Beat. I wonder that you will still be talking, Signior Benedick; nohody marks you.

Bene. What, my dear lady Disdainl are you yet living?

Beat. Is it possible disdain should die while she hath such meet food to feed it as Signior Benedick? Courtesy itself must convert to disdain if you come in her presence.

Bene. Then is courtesy a turn-coat.—But it is certain I am loved of all ladies, only you excepted: and I would I could find in my heart that I had not a hard heart: for, truly, I love

Beat. A dear happiness to women; they would else have been troubled with a pernicious suitor. I thank God, and my cold blood, I am of your humour for that: I had rather hear my dog bark at a crow than a man swear he loves Bene. God keep your ladyship still in that mindl so some gentleman or other shall 'scape a predestinate scratched face.

Beat. Scratching could not make it worse as 'twere such a face as yours were.

Bene. Well, you are a rare parrot-teacher.

Beat. A bird of my tongue is better than a beast of yours.

Bene. I would my horse had the speed of your tongue, and so good a continuer. But keep your way o' God's name; I have done.

Beat. You always end with a jade's trick; I know you of old.

D. Pedro. This is the sum of all: Leonato, —Signior Claudio, and Signior Benedick,—my dear friend Leonato hath invited you all. I tell him we shall stay here at the least a moaths and he heartily prays some occasion may detain us longer: I dare swear he is no hypocrite, hut prays from his heart.

Leon. If you swear, my lord, you shall not he forsworn.—Let me bid you welcome, my lord: being reconciled to the prince your hrother, I owe you all duty.

D. John. I thank you: I am not of many words, hut I thank you.

Leon. Please it your grace lead on?
D. Pedro. Your hand, Leonato; we will go together.

[Exeunt all but BENE., and CLAUD. Claud. Benedick, didst thou note the daughter of Signior Leonato?

seventeen pounds; of which he made five marks, ready money: marry, then, ginger, was not much in request, for the old women were all dead. Then is there here one Master Caper, at the suit of Master Threepile the mercer, for some four suits of peach-coloured satin, which now peaches him a beggar. Then have we here young Dizy, and young Master Deepvow, and Master Copperspur, and Master Starvelackey the rapier and dagger-man, and young Dropheir that killed lusty Pudding, and Master Forth-right the tilter, and hrave Master Shoetie the great traveller, and wild Halfcan that stabhed Pots, and, I think, forty more; all great doers in our trade, and are now "for the Lord's sake."

Enter ABHORSON

Abhor. Sirrah, hring Barnardine hither. Clo. Master Barnardinel you must rise and he hanged, Master Barnardine! Abhor. What, ho, Barnardine!

Barnar. [Within.] A pox o' your throats! Who makes that noise there? What are you? Clo. Your friend, sir; the hangman. You must he so good, sir, to rise and he put to death.

Barnar. [Within.] Away, you rogue, away;

I am sleepy.

Abhor. Tell him he must awake, and that quickly too.

Clo. Pray, Master Barnardine, awake till you are executed, and sleep afterwards.

Abhor. Go in to him, and fetch him out.

Clo. He is coming, sir, he is coming; I hear his straw rustle.

Enter BARNARDINE.

'Abhor. Is the axe upon the block, sirrah? Clo. Very ready, sir. Barnar. How now, Abhorson? what's the news with you?

Abhor. Truly, sir, I would desire you to clap into your prayers; for, look you, the warrant's come.

Barnar. You rogue, I have been drinking all night; I am not fitted for 't.

Clo. O, the hetter, sir; for he that drinks all night and is hanged hetimes in the morning may sleep the sounder all the next day.

Enter DUKE.

Abhor. Look you, sir, here comes your nostly father. Do we jest now, think you? ghostly father. Duke. Sir, induced by my charity, and hearing how hastily you are to depart, I am come to advise you, comfort you, and pray with you.

Barnar. Friar, not I; I have been drinking hard all night, and I will have more time to prepare me, or they shall heat out my hrains with hillets: I will not consent to die this day, that's certain.

Duke. O, sir, you must; and therefore, I heseech you,

Look forward on the journey you shall go.

Barnar. I swear I will not die to-day for any man's persuasion.

Duke. But hear you,

Barnar. Not a word; if you have anything to say to me, come to my ward; for thence will not I to-day.

Duke. Unfit to live or die. O gravel heart!-After him, fellows; hring him to the block. Exeunt ABHOR. and CLOWN.

Enter Provost.

Prov. Now, sir, how do you find the prisoner? Duke. A creature unprepar'd, unmeet for death;

And to transport him in the mind he is

Were damnahle. Here in the prison, father, Prov. There died this morning of a cruel fever One Ragozine, a most notorious pirate. A man of Claudio's years; his heard and head Just of his colour. What if we do omit This reprohate till he were well inclined; And satisfy the deputy with the visage Of Ragozine, more like to Clandio?

Duke. O, 'tis an accident that Heaven pro-videsl Despatch it presently; the hour draws on Prefix'd hy Angelo: see this he done,

And sent according to command; whiles I Persuade this rude wretch willingly to die. Prov. This shall he done, good father, pressently. But Barnardine must die this afternoon: And how shall we continue Claudio. To save me from the danger that might come

If he were known alive? Duke. Let this be done:-Put them in secret holds; both Barnardine and Claudio.

Ere twice the sun hath made his journal greet-To the under generation, you shall find Your safety manifested.

Prov. I am your free dependent. Duke. Quick, despatch,

And send the head to Angelo.

We shall proceed with Angelo.

Re-enter Provost.

Prov. Here is the head; I'll carry it myself. Duke. Convenient is it. Make a swift return: For I would commune with you of such things That want no ear hut yours.

I'll make all speed. Prov. Exit. Isab. [Within.] Peace, ho, he here! Duke. The tongue of Isahel.—She's come to know If yet her hrother's pardon he come hither:

But I will keep her ignorant of her good, To make her heavenly comforts of despair When it is least expected.

Enter Isabella.

Isab. Ho, hy your leavel
Duke. Good morning to you, fair and gracious daughter.

Isab. The hetter, given me by so holy a man. [Exit. | Hath yet the deputy sent my hrother's pardon? And thou shalt see how apt it is to learn Any hard lesson that may do thee good. Claud. Hath Leonato any son, my lord? D. Pedro. No child but Hero, she's his only heir:

Dost thou affect her, Claudio?

O my lord, Claud. When you went onward on this ended action, I looked upon her with a soldier's eye, That liked, but had a rougher task in hand Than to drive liking to the name of love: But now I am return'd, and that war-thoughts Have left their places vacant, in their rooms Come thronging soft and delicate desires, All prompting me how fair young Hero is, Saying, I liked her ere I went to wars.

D. Pedro. Thou wilt he like a lover presently, And tire the hearer with a hook of words: If thou dost love fair Hero, cherish it; And I will break with her, and with her father, And thou shalt have her. Was't not to this end That thou hegan'st to twist so fine a story?

Claud. How sweetly do you minister to love, That know love's grief by his complexion! But lest my liking might too sudden seem,
I would have salv'd it with a longer treatise.

D. Pedro. What need the bridge much broader than the flood!

The fairest grant is the necessity. Look, what will serve is fit: 'tis once, thou lov'st; And I will fit thee with the remedy. I know we shall have revelling to-night: I will assume thy part in some disguise, And tell fair Hero I am Claudio; And in her bosom I'll unclasp my heart, And take her hearing prisoner with the force and strong encounter of my amourous tale: Then, after, to her father will I break; And the conclusion is, she shall be thine. In practice let us put it presently. Exeunt.

Scene II.—A Room in Leonato's House. Enter, severally, LEONATO and ANTONIO.

Leon. How now, brother! Where is my cousin, your son? Hath he provided this music? Ant. He is very busy about it. But brother, I can tell you strange news that you yet dreamed not of.

Leon. Are they good?

Ant. As the event stamps them; but they have a good cover; they show well outward. The prince and Count Claudio, walking in a thick-pleached alley in my orchard, were thus much overheard by a man of mine: the prince discovered to Claudio that he loved my niece your daughter, and meant to acknowledge it this night in a dance; and, if he found her accordant, he meant to take the present time by the top, and instantly break with you of it.

Leon. Hath the fellow any wit that told you this?

Ant. A good sharp fellow; I will send for him, and question him yourself.

Leon. No, no; we will hold it as a dream, till it appear itself:—but I will acquaint my daughter withal, that she may be the better prepared for an answer, if peradventure this be Go you and tell her of it. [Several persons cross the stage.] Cousins, you know what you have to do .-- O, I cry you mercy, friend: you ference. I whipt me behind the arras, and go with me, and I will use your skill.—Good cousin, have a care this busy time. [Exeunt.

Scene IIL-Another Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Don JOHN and CONRADE. .

Con. What the good-year, my lord! why are you thus out of measure sad?

D. John. There is no measure in the occasion that breeds it; therefore the sadness is without limit.

Con. You should hear reason.

D. John. And when I have heard it, what hlessing bringeth it? Sufferance. Con. If not a present remedy, yet a patient

- D. John. I wonder that thou, heing-as thou say'st thou art-horn under Saturn, goest about to apply a moral medicine to a mortifying mis-I cannot hide what I am: I must be sad when I have cause, and smile at no man's jests; eat when I have stomach, and wait for no man's leisure; sleep when I am drowsy, and 'tend to no man's business; laugh when I am merry, and claw no man in his humour.

Con. Yea, but you must not make the full show of this till you may do it without controlment. You have of late stood out against your brother, and he hath ta'en you newly into his grace; where it is impossible you should take true root but by the fair weather that you make yourself: it is needful that you frame the season for your own harvest.

D. John. I had rather be a canker in a hedge than a rose in his grace; and it better fits my blood to be disdained of all than to fashion a carriage to rob love from any: in this, though I cannot be said to be a flattering honest man, it must not be denied that I am a plain-dealing villain. I am trusted with a muzzle and enfranchised with a clog: therefore I have decreed not to sing in my cage. If I had my mouth I would bite; if I had my liherty I would do my liking: in the meantime let me be that I am, and seek not to alter me.

Con. Can you make no use of your discon-

D. John. I make all use of it, for I use it only. Who comes here? What news, Borachio?

Enter BORACHIO.

Bora. I came yonder from a great supper: the prince, your brother, is royally entertained by Leonato; and I can give you intelligence of. an intended marriage.

D. John. Will it serve for any model to tild mischief on? What is he for a fool that build mischief on?

betroths himself to unquietness?

... Bora. Marry, it is your hrother's right hand. D. John. Who! the most exquisite Claudio? Bora. Even he.

D. John. A proper squire! And who, and who? which way looks he?

Bora. Marry, on Hero, the daughter and heir of Leonato.

D. John. A very forward March-chickl

How came you to this?

Bora. Being entertained for a perfumer, as I was smoking a musty room, comes me the prince and Claudio hand in hand, in sad conAnd bid them bring the trumpets to the gate; But send me Flavius first.

F. Peter. It shall be speeded well. [Exit FRIAR.

Enter VARRIUS.

Duke. I thank thee, Varrius; thon hast made good haste: [friends Come, we will walk. There's other of our Will greet us here anou, my gentle Varrius.

Scene VI.—Street near the City Gate.

Enter Isabella and Mariana.

Isab. To speak so indirectly I am losth; I would say the truth; but to accuse him so, That is your part: yet i'm advis'd to do it; He says, to 'vailfull purpose.

Mari. Be ruled by him. Isab. Besides, he tells me that, if peradveu-

He speak against me on the adverse side, I should not think it strange; for 'tis a physic That's bitter to sweet end.

Mari. I would friar Peter.—

Isab. O, peace; the friar is come.

Enter Friar PETER

F. Peler. Come, I have found you out a stand most fit,

Where you may have such vantage on the duke He shall not pass you. Twice have the trumpets sounded;

The generous and gravest citizens
Have heut the gates, and very near npon
The duke is entering; therefore, hence, away.

ACT V.

Scene L.-A public Place near the City Gate.

MARIANA (veiled), ISABELLA, and PETER, at a distance. Enter at opposite doors Duke, VARRIUS, Lords; ANGELO, ESCALUS, LUCIO, PROVOST, Officers, and Citizens.

Duke. My very worthy cousin, fairly met;— Our old and faithful friend, we are glad to see you. [royal grace!

Ang. and Escal. Happy return be to your Duke. Manyand hearty thankings to you both. We have made inquiry of you; and we hear Such goodness of your justice that our soul Cannot but yield you forth to public thanks, Forerunning more requital.

Ang. You make my bouds still greater. Duke. O, your desert speaks loud; and I should wrong it

To lock it in the wards of covert bosom.
When it deserves, with characters of brass,
A forted residence 'gainst the tooth of time
And rasure of oblivion. Give me your hand,
And let the subject see, to make them know
That outward courtesies would fain proclaim
Favours that keep within.—Come, Escalus;
You must walk by us on our other hand:
And good supporters are you.

PETER and ISABELLE come forward.

F. Peter. Now is your time; speak loud, and kneel before him. [regard Isab. Justice, O royal dukel Vail your Upon a wroug'd, I'd fain have said, a maid!

O worthy prince, dishonour not your eye By throwing it ou any other object Till you have heard me in my true complaint, And give me justice, justice, justice!

Duke. Relate your wrongs. In what? whom? Be brief: Here is Lord Angelo shall give you justice.

Here is Lord Angelo shall give you justice. Reveal yourself to him.

Isab. O, worthy duke,
You bid me seek redemption of the devil:
Hear me yourself; for that which I must speak
Must either punish me, not being believ'd,
Or wring redress from you; hear me, O, hear me here. firm:

Ang. My lord, her wits, I fear me, are not She hath been a suitor to me for her brother, Cnt on by course of justice.

Isab. By course of justice!
Ang. And she will speak most bitterly and strange. [I speak:

Isob. Most strange, but yet most truly, will That Angelo's forsworn, is it not strange? That Angelo's a murderer, is 't not strange? That Angelo is an adulterous thief, An hypocrite, a virgin-violator, Is it not strange and strange?

Duke. Nay, it is teu times strange. Isab. It is not truer he is Angelo
Than this is all as true as it is strange:
Nay, it is ten times true; for truth is truth

Nay, it is ten times true; for truth is truth To the end of reckoning.

Duke. Away with her!—Poor soul, She speaks this in the infirmity of sense. Isco. O prince, I conjure thee, as thon believ'st

There is another comfort than this world,
That thou neglect me not with that opinion
That I am touch'd with madness: make not impossible

That which but seems unlike; 'tis not impossure the wicked'st caitiff on the ground, hay seem as shy, as grave, as just, as absolute As Angelo; even so may Angelo.

In all his dressings, characts, titles, forms, Be an arch-villein; believe it, royal prince, If he be less, he's nothing; but he's more, Had I more name for badness.

Duke. By mine honesty, If she be mad, as I believe no other, Her madness hath the oddest frame of sense, Such a dependency of thing on thing, As e'er I heard in madness.

Isab. O gracious duke,
Harp not ou that: nor do not banish reason
For inequality; but let your reason serve
To make the truth appear where it seems hid
And hide the false seems true.

Duke. Many that are not mad: Have, sure, more lack of reason.—What would you say?

Isab. I am the sister of one Claudio,
Condemn'd npou the act of fornicaticu
To lose his head; condemn'd by Angelo:
I, in probatiou of a sisterhood,
Was sent to by my brother: one Lucio

As then the messenger:—
Lucio. That's I, an't like your grace:
gard I came to her from Claudio, and desir'd her your To try her gracious fortune with Lord Angelo

For her poor brother's pardon.

Marg. And God keep him out of my sight when the dance is done!-Answer, clerk.

Balth. No more words; the clerk is answered. Urs. I know you well enough; you are Sig-- nior Antonio.

Ant. At a word, I am not.

Urs. I know you by the waggling of your

Ant. To tell you true. I counterfeit him.

Urs. You could never do him so ill-well unless you were the very man. Here's his dry hand up and down: you are he; you are he.

Ant. At a word, I am not.

Urs. Come, come; do you think I do not know you by your excellent wit? Can virtue hide itself? Go to; mum; you are he: graces will appear, and there's an end.

Beat. Will you not tell me who told you so?

Bene. No, yon shall pardon me.

Beat. Nor will you not tell me who you are?

Bene. Not now.

Beat. That I was disdainful!—and that I had my good wit out of the Hundred Merry Tales!-Well, this was Signior Benedick that said so. Bene. What's he?

Beat. I am sure you know him well enough.

Bene. Not I, believe me. Beat. Did he never make you laugh?

Bene. I przy you, what is he? Beat. Why, he is the prince's jester: a very dull fool; only his gift is in devising impossible slanders: none but libertines delight in him; and the commendation is not in his wit but in his villainy; for he both pleaseth men and angers them, and then they laugh at him and beat him. I am sure he is in the fleet: I would he had boarded me.

Bene. When I know the gentleman I'll tell him what you say.

Beat. Do, do: he'll but break a comparison or two on me: which, peradventure, not marked, or not laughed at, strikes him into melancholy; and then there's a partridge wing saved, for the fool will eat no supper that night. [Music with-We must follow the leaders.

Bene. In every good thing. Beat. Nay, if they lead to any ill, I will leave them at the next turning.

Then exeunt all but Don JOHN, Dance. BORACHIO, and CLAUDIO.

D. John. Sure, my brother is amorous on Hero, and hath withdrawn her father to break with him about it. The ladies follow her, and but one visor remains. his bearing.

Bora. And that is Claudio. I know him by D John. Are not you Signior Benedick?

Clcud. You know me well; I am he.

D. John. Signor, you are very near my brother in his love: he is enamoured on Hero; I pray you dissuade him from her; she is no equal for his birth: you may do the part of an honest man in it.

Claud. How know you he loves her? D. John. I heard him swear his affection. Bora. So did I too; and he swore he would marry her to-night.

D. John. Come, let us to the banquet.

Exeunt Don JOHN and BORACHIO. Thus answer I in name of Benedick, But hear these ill news with the ears of Claudio. by my faith, you say honestly.

'Tis certain so:-the prince woos for himself. Friendship is constant in all other things. Save in the office and affairs of love:

Therefore, all hearts in love use their own tongues:

Let every eye negotiate for itself, And trust no agent: for beauty is a witch, Against whose charms faith melteth into blood. This is an accident of hourly proof, Which I mistrusted not: farewell, therefore,

Re-enter BENEDICK.

Bene. Count Claudio? Claud. Yea, the same.

Bene. Come, will you go with me? Claud. Whither?

Bene. Even to the next willow, about your own business, count. What fashion will you wear the garland of? About your neck, like an usurer's chain? or under your arm like a lieu-tenant's scars? You must wear it one way, for the prince hath got your Hero.

Claud. I wish him joy of her.

Bene. Why, that's spoken like an honest drover; so they sell bullocks. But did you think the prince would have served you thus? Claud. I pray you, leave me.

Bene. Ho! now you strike like the blind men; 'twas the boy that stole your meat, and you'll beat the post.

Claud. If it will not be, I'll leave you. [Exil.

Bene. Alas, poor hurt fowl! Now will he creep into sedges.—But, that my Lady Beatrice should know me, and not know me! The prince's fool!-Ha, it may be I go under that title because I am merry.—Yea, but so I am apt to do myself wrong: I am not so reputed: it is the base, the bitter disposition of Beatrice that puts the world into her person, and so gives me out. Well, I'll be revenged as I may.

Re-enter Don PEDRO.

D. Pedro. Now, signior, where's the count? Did you see him?

Bene. Troth, my lord, I have played the part of Lady Fame. I found him here as melancholy as a lodge in a warren; I told him, and I think I told him true, that your grace had got the good-will of this young lady; and I offered him my company to a willow-tree, either to make him a garland, as being forsaken, or to bind him up a rod, as being worthy to bewhipped.

D. Pedro. To be whipped! What's his fault? Bene. The fiat trangression of a school-boy, who, being overjoyed with finding a bird's nest, shows it his companion, and he steals it.

D. Pedro. Wilt thou make a trust a transgression? . The transgression is in the stealer.

Bene. Yet it had not been amiss the rod had been made, and the garlands too: for the garland he might have worn himself; and the rod he might have bestowed on you, who, as I take it, have stolen his bird's nest.

D. Pedro. I will but teach them to sing, and restore them to the owner.

Bene. If their singing answer your saying,

Lucio. Well, my lord. [married; Mari. My lord, I do confess I ne'er was And I confess, besides, I am no maid:

I have known my husband; yet my husband knows not

That ever he knew me.

Lucio. He was drunk, then, my lord; it can be no better. Duke. For the benefit of silence, would thou Lucio. Well, my lord.

Duke. This is no witness for Lord Angelo.

Mari. Now I come to 't, my lord:

She that accuses him of fornication, In self-same manner doth accuse my husband; And charges him, my lord, with such a time When I'll depose I had him in mine arms,

With all the effect of love. Charges she more than me? Ang.

Mari. Not that I know.

Duke. No? you say, your husband. Mari. Why, just, mylord, and that is Angelo. Who thinks he knows that he ne'er knew my body,

But knows he thinks that he knows Isabel's. Ang. This is a strange abuse. Let's see thy face. mask. Mari. My husband bids me; now I will un-[Unveiling. This is that face, thou cruel Angelo, [on: Which once thou swor'st was worth the looking [on: This is the hand which, with a vow'd contract, Was fast helock'd in thine: this is the body That took away the match from Isabel. And did supply thee at thy garden-house In her imagin'd person.

Know you this woman? Duke.

Lucio. Carnally, she says.

Duke. Sirrah, no more. Lucio. Enough, my lord. [woman;
Ang. My lord, I must confess I know this
And five years since there was some speech of marriage

Betwixt myself and her; which was broke off Partly for that her promis'd proportions Came short of composition; but in chief For that her reputation was disvalued In levity: since which time of five years [her, I never spake with her, saw her, nor heard from Upon my faith and honour.

Nohle prince, Mari. As there comes light from heaven and words from breath,

As there is sense in truth and truth in virtue, I am affianc'd this man's wife as strongly

As words could make up vows: and, my good lhouse, lord, But Tuesday night last gone, in his garden-He knew me as a wife. As this is true, Let me in safety raise me from my knees,

Or else for ever be confixed here, A marhie monument!

Ang. I did but smile till now: Now, good my lord, give me the scope of justice; My patience here is touch'd. I do perceive These poor informal women are no more But instruments of some more mightiermember | Be sometime honour'd for his burning throne!-That sets them on. Let me have way, my lord, To find this practice out.

Duke.Ay, with my heart: And punish them unto your height of pleasure.-Thou foolish friar, and thou pernicious woman, Compact with her that's gone, thinkst thou thy oaths. saint.

Though they would swear down each particular Were testimonies against his worth and credit, That's seal'd in approbation?—You, Lord Escalus,

Sit with my cousin; lend him your kind pains To find out this abuse, whence 'tis deriv'd.— There is another friar that set them on;

the indeed Let him be sent for. Would he were here, my lord: for F. Peter. Hath set the women on this complaint:

Your provost knows the place where he abides.

And he may fetch him.

Duke. Go, do it instantly.—[Exit Provost. And you, my noble and well-warranted cousin, Whom it concerns to hear this matter forth. Do with your injuries as seems you best In any chastisement. I for awhile [well

Will leave you: but stir not you till yon have Determined upon these slanderers. Escal. My lord, we'll do it thoroughly. [Exit DUKE.]—Signior Lucio, did not you say you knew that friar Lodowick to be a dishonest person? Lucio. Cucullus non facil monachum: honest in nothing hut in his clothes; and one that hath spoke most villainous speeches of the duke.

Escal. We shall entreat you to abide here till he come, and enforce them against him: we shall find this friar a notable fellow.

Lucio. As any in Vienna, on my word.
Escal. Call that same Isahel here once again

[to an Attendant]; I would speak with her. Pray you, my lord, give me leave to question; you shall see how I handle her.

Lucio. Not better than he, by her own report. Escal. Say you?

Lucio. Marry, sir, I think if you handled her privately she would sooner confess: perchance, publicly, she'll be ashamed.

Re-enter Officers, with ISABELLA.

Escal. I will go darkly to work with her. Lucio. That's the way; for women are light at midnight.

Escal. Come on, mistress [to ISABELLA]: here's a gentlewoman denies all that you have said.

Re-enter the DUKE, in the Friars' habit, and PROVOST.

Lucio. My lord, here comes the rascal I spoke of; here with the provost. Escal. In very good time:-speak not you to him till we call upon you.

Lucio. Mum. Escal. Come, sir: did you set these women on to slander Lord Angelo? they have confessed you did.

Duke. 'Tis false.

Escal. How! know you where you are?

Duke. Respect to your great placel and let the devil

Where is the duke? 'tis he should hear me speak.

the time shall not go dully by us. I will in the interim undertake one of Hercules' labours; which is, to bring Signior Benedick and the Lady Beatrice into a mountain of affection the one with the other. I would fain have it a match; and I doubt not but to fashion it if you three will but minister such assistance as I shall give you direction.

Leon. My lord, I am for you, though it cost me ten nights' watchings.

Claud. And I, my lord.

D. Pedro. And you too, gentle Hero?

Hero. I will do any modest office, my lord, to help my cousin to a good husband.

D. Pedro. And Benedick is not the unhopefullest husband that I know: thus far can I praise him; he is of a noble strain, of approved valour, and confirmed honesty. I will teach you how to humour your cousin that she shall fall in love with Benedick:—and I, with your two helps, will so practise on Benedick, that, in despite of his quick wit and his queasy stomach, he shall fall in love with Beatrice. If we can do this, Cupid is no longer an archer; his glory shall be ours, for we are the only lovegods. Go in with me, and I will tell you my drift.

[Exeunt.

Scene II.—Another Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Don JOHN and BORACHIO.

D. John. It is so: the Count Claudio shall marry the daughter of Leonato.

Bora. Yea, my lord, hut I can cross it.

D. John. Any har, any cross, any impediment-will be medicinal to me; I am sick in displeasure to him; and whatsoever comes athwart his affection ranges evenly with mine. How canst thou cross this marriage?

Bora. Not honestly, my lord; but so covertly that no dishonesty shall appear in me.

D. John. Show me hriefly how.

Bora. I think I told your lordship a year since how much I am in the favour of Margaret, the waiting-gentlewoman to Hero.

D. John. I remember.

Bora. I can at any unseasonable instant of the night appoint her to look out at her lady's chamber-window.

D. John. What life is in that, to be the death of this marriage?

Bora. The poison of that lies in you to temper. Go you to the prince your hrother; spare not to tell him that he hath wronged his honour in marrying the renowned Claudio—whose estimation do you mightily hold up—to a contaminated stale, such a one as Hero.

D. John. What proof shall I make of that?

Bora. Proof enough to misuse the prince, to vex Claudio, to undo Hero, and kill Leonato.

Look you for any other issue?

D. John. Only to despite them I will endeavour anything.

Bora. Go, then; find me a meet hour to draw Don Pedro and the Count Claudio alone: tell them that you know that Hero loves me; intend a kind of zeal both to the prince and Claudio, as,—in love of your brother's honour, who hath made this match, and his friend's reputation, who is thus like to he cozened with the semblance of a maid,—that you have discovered thus. They will scarcely believe this without trial: offer them instances; which shall bear no less likelihood than to see me at her chamberwindow; hear me call Margaret Hero; hear Margaret term me Borachio; and bring them to see this the very night before the intended wedding; for, in the meantime I will so fashion the matter that Hero shall be absent; and there shall appear such seeming truth of Hero's disloyalty that jealousy shall be called assurance, and all the preparation overthrown.

D. John. Grow this to what adverse issue it can, I will put in practice. Be cunning in the working this, and thy fee is a thousand ducats.

Bora. Be you constant in the accusation, and my cunning shall not shame me.

D. John. I will presently go learn their day of marriage. [Exeunt.

Scene III.—Leonato's Garden. Enter Benedick and a Boy.

Bene. Boy,-Boy. Signior.

Bene. In my chamber-window lies a book;

bring it hither to me in the orchard.

Boy. Lam here already, sir. Bene. I know that; hut I would have thee hence and here again. [Exit Boy.] I do much wonder that one man, seeing how much another man is a fool, when he dedicates his. behaviours to love, will, after he hath laughed at such shallow follies in others, become the argument of his own scorn by falling in love. And such a man is Claudio. I have known when there was no music in him but the drum and fife; and now had he rather hear the tabor and the pipe: I have known when he would have walked ten mile afoot to see a good armour; and now will he lie ten nights awake. carving the fashion of a new doublet. He waswont to speak plain and to the purpose, like an honest man and a soldier; and now is he turned orthographer; his words are a very fantastical banquet, just so many strange dishes. May I be so converted, and see with these eyes? cannot tell; I think not: I will not be sworn . but Love may transform me to an oyster; but I'll take my oath on it, till he have made an oyster of me he shall never make me such a fool. One woman is fair; yet I am well: another is wise; yet I am well: another virtuous; . yet I am well: but till all graces be in one. woman, one woman shall not come in my grace. Rich she shall he, that's certain; wise, or I'll! none; virtuous, or I'll never cheapen her;: fair, or I'll never look on her; mild, or come not near me; noble, or not I for an angel; of ? good discourse, an excellent musician, and herr hair shall he of what colour it please God. Ha! the prince and Monsieur Love! I will hide, Withdrows. me in the arbour.

Enter Don Pedro, Leonato, and Claudio D. Pedro. Come, shall we hear this music? Claud. Yea, my good lord.—How still the evening is, As hushed on purpose to grace harmonyl

D. Pedro. See you where Benedick hath hid; himself?

Your well-defended honour, you must pardon Provost, how came it Clandio was beheaded For Mariana's sake; but as he adjudg'd your brother.

Being criminal, in double violation Of sacred chastity and of promise-breach Thereon dependent, for your brother's life,— The very mercy of the law cries out Most audible, even from his proper tongue, An Angelo for Claudio, death for death. Haste still pays haste, and leisure answers leisure; Like doth quit like, and measure still for measure. Then, Angelo, thy fault thus manifested,— Which though thou wouldst deny, denies thee vantage, We do condemn thee to the very block Where Claudio stoop'd to death, and with like haste.-

Away with him.

Mari. O my most gracious lord, I hope you will not mock me with a busband! Duke. It is your husband mock'd you with a husband.

Consenting to the sateguard of your bonour, I thought your marriage fit; else imputation, For that be knew you, might reproach your life, And choke your good to come: for his possessions.

Although by confiscation they are ours, We do instate and widow you withal, To buy you a better husband.

O my dear lord, Mari.

I crave no other, nor no better man Duke. Never crave him; we are definite.
Mari. Gentle my liege,— [Kneelin
Duke. You do but lose your labour. Kneeling.

Away with him to death .- Now, sir [to Lucio], my part; to you. Mari. O my good lord!-Sweet Isabel, take Lend me your knees, and all my life to come I'll lend you all my life to do you service. Duke. Against all sense you do importune her:

Sbould she kneel down, in mercy of this fact, Her brother's ghost his paved bed would break, And take ber hence in horror.

Isabel. Mari. Sweet Isabel, do yet but kneel by me; Hold up your hands, say nothing,-I'll speak all. They say, best men are moulded out of faults; And, for the most, become much more the better For being a little bad: so may my husband O Isabel, will you not lend a knee?

Duke. He dies for Claudio's death Most bounteous sir, [Kneeling. Look, if it please you, on this man condemn'd, As if my brother liv'd: I partly think A due sincerity govern'd his deeds Till be did look on me; since it is so,

Let him not die. My brother had but justice, In that he did the thing for which he died: For Angelo,

His act did not o'ertake his bad intent, And must be buried but as an intent [jects; That perish'd by the way: thoughts are no sub-Intents but merely thoughts.

Mari. Merely, my lord. Duke. Your suit's unprofitable; stand up, I say.

I have bethought of another fault .-

At an unusual hour?

Prov. It was commanded so. Duke. Had you a special warrant for the deed?

Prov. No, my good lord; it was by private message. Duke. For which I do discharge you of your office: Give up your keys.

Prov. Pardon me, noble lord: I thought it was a fault, but knew it not; Yet did repent me, after more advice: For testimony whereof, one in the prison, That should by private order else have died, That should by provide the state of the stat

Prov. His name is Barnardine. Duke, I would thou hadst done so by Claudio.

Go fetch him hither; let me look upon him.

Exit PROVOST. Escal. I am sorry one so learned and so wise As you, Lord Angelo, have still appear'd, Should slip so grossly, both in the beat of blood And lack of temper'd judgment afterward. Ang. I am sorry that such sorrow I procure: And so deep sticks it in my penitent heart That I crave death more willingly than mercy; 'Tis my deserving, and I do entreat it.

Re-enter Provost, with Barnardine, CLAUDIO, (muffled), and JULIET.

Duke. Which is that Barnardine? Prov. This, my lord. Duke. There was a friar told me of this man:

Sirrah, thou art said to have a stubborn soul, That apprehends no further than this world, And squar'st thy life according. Thou'rt condemn'd:

But, for those earthly faults. I quit them all, And pray thee take this mercy to provide For better times to come:—Friar, advise him; I leave him to your hand.—What muffled fellow's that?

Prov. This is another prisoner that I sav'd, Who should have died when Claudio lost his head;

As like almost to Claudio as himself.

Unmuffles CLAUDIO. Duke. If he be like your brother, fto ISABELLA), for his sake

Is he pardon'd; and, for your lovely sake, Give me your hand, and say you will be mine; He is my brother too; but fitter time for that. By this Lord Angelo perceives he's safe; Methinks I see a quick'ning in his eye.-Well, Angelo, your evil quits you well: Look that you love your wife; her worth worth yours. I find an apt remission in myself; And yet here's one in place I cannot pardon.-You, sirrah [to Lucio], that knew me for a fool, a coward. One all of luxury, an ass, a madman; Wherein bave I so deserved of you

That you extol me thus?

Lucio. 'Faith, my lord, I spoke it but according to the trick. If you will hang me

D. Pedro. An he should, it were an aims to hang him. She's an excellent sweet lady; and, out of all suspicion, she is virtuous.

Claud. And she is exceeding wise. D. Pedro. In everything but in loving Bene-Leon. O my lord, wisdom and blood com-bating in so tender a body, we have ten proofs to one that blood hath the victory. I am sorry for ber, as I have just cause, being her uncle and her guardian.

D. Pedro. I would she had bestowed this dotage on me: I would have dassed all other respects and made her half myself. I pray you, tell Benedick of it, and hear what he will say.

Leon. Were it good, think you? Claud. Hero thinks surely she will die; for she says she will die if he love her not; and she will die ere she makes her love known: and she will die if he woo her, rather than she will bate one breath of her accustomed crossness.

D. Pedro. She doth well; if she should make tender of her love, 'tis very possible, he'll scorn it: for the man, as you know all, bath a contemptible spirit.

Claud. He is a very proper man.

D. Pedro. He hath, indeed, a good outward happiness.

Claud. 'Fore God, and in my mind, very wise. D. Pedro. He doth, indeed, show some sparks that are like wit.

Leon. And I take him to be valiant.

D. Pedro. As Hector, I assure you: and in the managing of quarrels you may say he is wise; for either he avoids them with great discretion, or undertakes them with a most Christian-like fear.

Leon. If he do fear God, he must necessarily keep peace; if he break the peace, he ought to enter into a quarrel with fear and trembling.

D. Pedro. And so will he do; for the man doth fear God, howsoever it seems not in him by some large jests he will make. Well, I am sorry for your niece. Shall we go see Benedick, and fell him of her love?

Claud. Never tell him, my lord; let her wear it out with good counsel.

D. Pedro. Well, we'll hear further of it by your daughter: let it cool the while. I love Benedick well: and I could wish he would modestly examine himself, to see how much he is unworthy to have so good a lady.

Leon. My lord, will you walk? dinner is ready.

Claud. If he do not dote on her upon this, I will never trust my expectation. Aside.

D. Pedro. Let there be the same net spread for her: and that must your daughter and her gentlewoman carry. The sport will be when they hold one an opinion of another's dotage, and no such matter; that's the scene that I would see, which will be merely a dumb show. Let us send her to call him in to dinner. [Aside. [Executi Don Pedro, Claudio, and Leonato.

BENEDICK advances from the arbour.

" Bene. This can be no trick. The conference was sadly borne. - They have the truth of this from Hero. They seem to pity the lady; it presently.

seems her affections have their full bent. Love mel why, it must be requited. I hear how I am censured: they say I will bear myself proudly if I perceive the love come from her; they say, too, that she will rather die than give any sign of affection. - I did never think to marry-I must not seem proud.-Happy are they that hear their detractions and can put them to mending. They say the lady is fair; 'tis a truth, I can bear them witness: and virtuous-'tis so, I cannot reprove it; and wise, but for loving me. - By my troth, it is no addition, to her wit;-nor no great argument of her folly, for I will be horribly in love with her. I may chance have some odd quicks and remnants of wit broken on me because I have railed so long against marriage; but doth not the appetite alter? A man loves the meat in his youth that he cannot endure in his age. Shall quips, and sentences, and these paper bullets of the hrain awe a man from the career of his humour? No: the world must he When I said I would die a hachelor peopled. I did not think I should live till I were married. -Here comes Beatrice. By this day, she's a fair lady: I do spy some marks of love in her.

Enter BEATRICE.

Beat. Against my will I am sent to bid you come in to dinner. pains.

Bene. Fair Beatrice, I thank you for your Beat. I took no more pains for those thanks than you take pains to thank me; if it had been painful I would not have come. [sage?

Benc. You take pleasure, then, in the mes-Beat. Yea, just so much as you may take upon a knife's point, and choke a daw withal. -You have no stomach, signior; fare you well.

Bene. Ha! Against my will I am sent to bid you come to dinner-there's a double meaning in that. I took no more pains for those thanks than you took pains to thank me—that's as much as to say, Any pains that I take for you is as easy as thanks.—If I do not take pity on her, I am a villain; if I do not love her, I am a Leon. Nay, that's impossible; she may Jew: I will go get her picture. wear her heart out first. Exit.

ACT III.

Scene I .- Leonato's Gorden.

Enter Hero, Margaret and Ursula.

Hero. Good Margaret, run thee into the parlour;

There shalt thou find my cousin Beatrice Proposing with the prince and Claudio: Whisper her ear, and tell her I and Ursula Walk in the orchard, and our whole discourse Is all of her; say that thou overheard'st us; And bid her steal into the pleached bower, Where honeysuckles, ripen'd by the sun, Forhid the sun to enter;—like favourites, Made proud by princes, that advance their pride Against that power that bred it:-there will she hide her,

To listen to our purpose. This is thy office, Bear thee well in it, and leave us alone.

Morg. I'll make her come, I warrant you, Exil.

SCENE,-MESSINA.

ACT I.

SCENE I .- Before LEONATO'S House.

Enter Leonato, Hero, Beatrice, and others with a Messenger.

Leon. I learn in this letter that Don Pedro of Arragon comes this night to Messina.

Mess. He is very near by this; he was not three leagues off when I left him.

Leon. How many gentlemen have you lost in this action?

Mess. But few of any sort, and none of name. Leon. A victory is twice itself when the achiever brings home full numbers. I find here that Don Pedro hath bestowed much Honour on a young Florentine called Claudio.

Mess. Much deserved on his part, and equally remembered by Don Pedro. He hath borne himself, beyond the promise of his age; doing, in the figure of a lamb, the feats of a Leon. What is he that you ask for, niece?

lion: he hath, indeed, better bettered expectation than you must expect of me to tell you how Leon. He hath an uncle here in Messina will be very glad of it.

Mess. I have already delivered him letters, and there appears much joy in him; even so much that joy could not show itself modest enough without a badge of bitterness.

Leon. Did he break out into tears?

Mess. In a great measure. -Leon. A kind overflow of kindness. There are no faces truer than those that are so washed. How much better is it to weep at joy than to joy at weeping?

Leon. So say I; methinks you are sadder.

Cloud. I hope he he in love.

D. Pedro. Hang him, truant; there's no true drop of blood in him to he truly touched with love: if he be sad he wants money.

Bene. I have the toothache.

D. Pedro. Draw it

Bene. Hang itl

Claud. You must hang it first and draw it afterwards.

D. Pedro. What, sigh for the toothachel Leon. Where is but a humour or a worml Bene. Well, every one can master a grief but be that has it.

Cloud. Yet, say I, he is in love.

D. Pedro. There is no appearance of fancy in him, unless it be a fancy that he hath to strange disguises; as, to he a Dutchman to-day, a Frenchman to-morrow, or in the shape of two countries at once, as a German from the waist downward, all slops, and a Spaniard from the hip upward, no doublet. Unless he have a fancy to this foolery, as it appears he hath, he is no fool for fancy, as you would have it appear he is.

Claud. If he be not in love with some woman there is no believing old signs: he brushes his hat o'mornings: what should that bode?

D. Pedro. Hath any man seen him at the barber's?

Cloud. No, but the barher's man hath been seen with him; and the old ornament of his cheek hath already stuffed tennis-balls.

Leon. Indeed, he looks younger than he did,

by the loss of a beard.

D. Pedro. Nay, he rubs himself with civet.

Can you smell him out by that? Cloud. That's as much as to say the sweet youth's in love.

D. Pedro. The greatest note of it is his Claud. And when was he wont to wash his D. Pedro. Yea, or to paint himself? for the which I hear what they say of him.

Claud. Nay, but his jesting spirit; which is now crept into a lute-string, and now governed hy stops.

D. Pedro. Indeed, that tells a heavy tale for him: conclude, conclude, he is in love.

Claud. Nay, but I know who loves him. D. Pedro. That would I know too; I warrant one that knows him not.

Claud. Yes, and his ill conditions; and, in [upwards.

despite of all, dies for him.

D. Pedro. She shall he buried with her face Bene. Yet is this no charm for the toothache. studied eight or nine wise words to speak to you, which these hobby-horses must not hear. Exeunt Benedick and Leonato.

D. Pedro. For my life, to break with him bout Beatrice.

Cloud. 'Tis even so: Hero and Margaret save by this played their parts with Beatrice; and then the two hears will not bite one another when they meet.

Enter Don JOHN.

D. John. Mylord and brother, God save you. D. Pedro. Good den, brother.

D. John. If your leisure served, I would speak with you.

D. Pedro. In private?

D. John. If it please you; -yet Count Claudio may hear; for what I would speak of concerns him.

D. Pedro. What's the matter?
D. John. Means your lordship to he married to-morrow? [To CLAUDIO.

D. Pedro. You know he does.

D. John. I know not that, when he knows what I know.

Claud. If there be any impediment, I pray you discover it.

D. John. You may think I love you not; let that appear hereafter, and aim better at me by that I now will manifest. For my brother, I think he holds you well, and in dearness of heart hath holp to effect your ensuing marriage; surely suit ill spent, and labour ill hestowed!

D. Pedro. Why, what's the matter?
D. John. I came hither to tell you: and, circumstances abortened,—for she bath been too long a-talking of,—the lady is disloyal. Cloud. Who? Hero?

D. John. Even she; Leonato's Hero, your

Hero, every man's Hero. Claud. Disloyal?

D. John. The word is too good to paint out her wickedness; I could say she were worse: think you of a worse title and I will fit her to it. Wonder not till further warrant: go hut with me to-night, you shall see her chamber-window entered, even the night before her weddingday: if you love her then, to-morrow wed her; but it would better fit your honour to change your mind.

Claud. May this be so?

D. Pedro. I will not think it.
D. John. If you dare not trust that you see confess not that you know: if you will follow me I will show you enough; and when you have seen more, and heard more, proceed accordingly

Cloud. If I see anything to-night why I should not marry her to-morrow, in the congregation where I should wed, there will I shame her.

D. Pedro. And, as I wooed for thee to obtain her, I will join with thee to disgrace her.

D. John. I will disparage her no farther till you are my witnesses: bear it coldly but till midnight, and let the issue show itself.

D. Pedro. O day untowardly turned! Claud. O mischief strangely thwarting!

D. John. O plague right well prevented! Old signior, walk aside with me; I have So will you say when you have seen the sequel. Exeunt.

Scene IIL-A Street.

Enter DOGBERRY and VERGES, with the Watch.

Dogb. Are you good men and true? Verg. Yea, or else it were pity hnt they should suffer salvation, body and soul.

Dogb. Nay, that were a punishment too good for them, if they should have any allegiance in them, being chosen for the prince's watch. Verg. Well, give them their charge, neighbour Dogberry.

Bene. I noted her not, but I looked on her. Claud. Is she not a modest young lady?

Bene. Do you question me, as an honest man should do, for my simple true judgment; or would you have me speak after my custom, as being a professed tyrant to their sex?
Claud. No, I pray thee, speak in sober

- Bene. Why, i' faith, methinks she is too low for a high praise, too brown for a fair praise, and too little for a great praise; only this commendation I can afford her; that were she other than she is, she were unhandsome; and being no other but as she is. I do not like her.

Claud. Thou thinkest I am in sport: I pray thee, tell me truly how thou likest her.

Bene. Would you buy ber, that you inquire after her?

Claud. Can the world buy such a jewel? Bene. Yea, and a case to put it into.

speak you this with a sad brow? or do you play the flouting Jack, to tell us Cupid is a good hare-finder, and Vulcan a rare carpenter? Come, in what key shall a man take you to go in the Samos?

Claud. In mine eye, she is the sweetest lady that ever I looked on.

Bene. I can see yet without spectacles, and I see no such matter: there's her cousin, an she were not possessed with a fury, exceeds her as much in beauty as the first of May doth the last of December. But I bope you have no intent to turn husband, have you?

Cloud. I would scarce trust myself, though I had sworn the contrary, if Hero would be my wife.

Bene. Is it come to this, i' faith? Hath not the world one man but he will wear his cap with suspicion? Shall I never see a bacbelor of threescore again? Go to, i' faith; an thou will needs thrust thy neck into a roke, wear the print of it, and sigh away Sundays. Look, Don Pedro is returned to seek you.

Re-enter Don PEDRO.

D. Pedro. What secret hath held you here, that you followed not to Leonato's?

Bene. I would your grace would constrain me to tell.

D. Fedro. I charge thee on thy allegiance. Bene. You hear, Count Claudio: I can be secretas a dumb man, -I would have you think so; but on my allegiance,—mark you this,—on my allegiance;—He is in love. With wbo? -Now that is your grace's part.-Mark bow short his answer is:-With Hero. Leonato's short daughter.

Claud. If this were so, so were it uttered.

Bene. Like the old tale, my lord: "It is not so, nor 'twas not so; but, indeed, God forbid it should be so.'

Claud. If my passion change not shortly,

God forbld it should be otherwise.

D. Pedro. Amen, if you love her; for the flord? lady is very well worthy. Claud. You speak this to fetch me in, my leave you.

D. Pedro. By my troth, I speak my thought. Cloud. And, in faith, my lord, I spoke mine. Bene. And, by my two faiths and troths, my lord. I spoke mine.

Claud. That I love her, I feel.

D. Pedro. That she is worthy, I know. Bene. That I neither feel how she should be loved, nor know how she should be worthy, is the opinion that fire cannot melt out of me: I will die in it at the stake.

D. Pedro. Thou wast ever an obstinate heretic in the despite of beauty.

Claud. And never could maintain his part but in the force of his will.

Bene. That a woman conceive me, I thank her; that she brought me up, I likewise give her most humble thanks; but that I will have a rechest winded in my forehead, or hang my bugle in an invisible baldrick, all women shall pardon me. Because I will not do them the wrong to mistrust any, I will do myself the right to trust none; and the fine is,—for the which I may so the finer,—I will live a bacbelor.

D. Pedro. I shall see thee, ere I die, look pale with love.

Bene. With anger, with sickness, or with hunger, my lord; not with love; prove that ever I lose more blood with love than I will get again with drinking, pick out mine eyes with a ballad-maker's pen, and hang me up at the door of a brothel-house, for the sign of blind Cupid.

D. Pedro. Well, if ever thou dost fall from this faith, thou wilt prove a notable argument. Bene. If I do, hang me in a bottle like a cat, and shoot at me; and he that hits me, let him be elapped on the shoulder and called Adam.

D. Pedro. Well, as time shall try: In time the savage bull doth bear the yoke.

Bene. The savage bull may; but if ever the sensible Benedick bear it, pluck off the bull's horns and set them in my forehead; and let me be vilely painted; and in such great letters as they write Here is good horse to hire, let them signify under my sign, -Here you may see Benedick the married man.

~Claua. If this should ever happen, thou wouldst be horn-mad

D. Pedro. Nay, if Cupid have not spent all his quiver in Venice, thou will quake for this shortly.

. Bene. I look for an earthquake too, then.

D. Pedro. Well, you will temporise with the hours. In the meantime, good Signior Benedick, repair to Leoneto's; commend me to him, and tell him I will not fail him at supper; for, indeed, he hatb made great preparation.

Bene. I have almost matter enough in me for such an embassage; and so I commit you-Claud. To the tuition of God: From my house,-if I had it-

D. Pedro. The sixth of July. Your loving friend, Benedick.

Bene. Nay, mock not, mock not. The body of your discourse is sometime guarded with fragments, and the guards are but slightly basted on neither: ere you flout eld ends any further, examine your conscience; and so I leave you.

Cloud. My liege, your highness now may do ಸಾಕ ೯೦೦ರೆ.

D. Pedro. My love is thing to teach; teach it but how,

In the smirched worm-eaten tapestry, where his cod-piece seems as massy as his cluh?

Con. All this I see; and see that the fashion wears out more apparel than the man. Butart not thou thyself giddy with the fashion too, that thou hast shifted ont of thy tale into telling me of the fashion?

Bora. Not so neither; but know that I have to-night wooed Margaret, the Lady Hero's gentlewoman, by the name of Hero; she leans me out at her mistress's chamber-window, bids me a thousand times good night,—I tell this tale vilely:-I should first tell thee, how the prince, Claudio, and my master, planted and placed and possessed by my master Don John, saw afar off in the orchard this amiable en-

Con. And thought they Margaret was Hero? Boro. Two of them did, the prince and Claudio; but the devil my master knew she was Margaret; and partly by his oaths, which first possessed them, partly by the dark of night. which did deceive them, but chiefly by my villany, which did confirm any alander that Don John had made, away went Claudio enraged; swore he would meet her, as he was appointed, next morning at the temple, and there, before the whole congregation, shame her with what he saw over-night, and send her home again without a husband.

x Wotch. We charge you in the prince's name, stand.

2 Watch. Call up the right master constable: we have here recovered the most dangerous piece of lechery that ever was known in the commonwealth.

1 .Watch. And one Deformed is one of them;

I know him, 'a wears a lock.

Con. Masters, masters!

2 Wotch. You'll be made bring Deformed forth, I warrant you.

Con. Masters,

r Wotch. Never speak; we charge you, let us obey you to go with us.

Bora. We are like to prove a goodly commodity, being taken up of these men's hills.

Con. A commodity in question, I warrant Exeunt. you. Come, we'll obey you.

Scene 1V .- A Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Hero, MARGARET, and URSULA.

Hero. Good Ursula, wake my cousin Beat-long bave you professed apprehension? rice, and desire her to rise.

Urs. I will, lady.

Hero. And bid her come hither. Urs. Well. Exit URSULA. Marg. Troth, I think your other rabato were better. (this.

Hero. No. pray thee, good Meg, I'll wear Morg. By my troth, it's not so good; and I warrant your cousin will say so.

Hero. My cousin's a fool, and thou art another; I'll wear none but this.

Marg. I like the new tire within excellently, if the bair were a thought browcer: and your gown's a most rare fashion, i' faith. I saw the Duchess of Milan's gown that they praise so.

Hero. O, that exceeds, they say.

Marg. By my troth, it's but a night-gown in respect of yours. 'Cloth of gold, and cuts, and laced with silver; set with pearls, down-sleeves, side-sleeves, and skirts round, underborne with a blueish tinsel: but for a fine, quaint, graceful, and excellent fashion, yours is worth ten on't.

Hero. God give me joy to wear it, for my heart is exceeding heavy!

Marg. 'Twill be heavier soon, by the weight of a man,

Hero. Fie upon theel art not asbamed?

Marg. Of what, lady? of speaking honourably? Is not marriage honourable in a beggar? Is not your lord honourable without marriage? I think, you would have me say, saving your reverence,-a husband: an bad thinking do not wrest true speaking I'll offend nobody. Is there any harm in—the heovier for o husband? None, I think, an it be the right husband and the right wife; otherwise 'tis light, and not heavy. Ask my Lady Beatrice else, here she

Enter BEATRICE.

Hero. Good morrow, coz. Beat. Good morrow, sweet Hero.

Hero. Why, how nowl do you speak in the sick tune?

Beot. I am ont of all other tune, methinks. Marg. Clap's into Light o' love; that goes without a burden: do you sing it and I'll dance Beat. Yes, Light o' love, with your heels!then if your husband have stables enough, you'll see he shall lack no barns.

Morg. O illegitimate construction! I scorn that with my heels.

Beat. 'Tis almost five o'clock, cousin; Jtis time you were ready. By my troth, I am exceeding ill:-hey-hol Morg. For a bawk, a horso, or a husband? Beot. For the letter that begins them all, H. Marg. Well, an you be not turned Turk, there's no more sailing by the star.

Beot. What means the fool, trow?

Morg. Nothing I; but God send every one their beart's desire!

Hero. These gloves the count sent me; they are an excellent perfume.

Beat. I am stuffed, cousin, I cannot smell. Morg. A maid and stuffed! there's goodly catching of cold.

Beof. O. God help mel God belp mel how Marg. Ever since you left it:-doth not my wit become me rarely?

Beat. It is not seen enough; you should wear it in your cap.—By my troth, I am sick.

Marg. Get you some of this distilled Carduus Benedictus and lay it to your heart; it is the only thing for a qualm.

Hero. There thou prick'st her with a thistle. Beol. 'Benedictus! why Benedictus? you have some moral in this Benedictus.

Morg. Moral? no, by my troth, I have no I meant plain holy-thistic. moral meaning; You may think, perchance, that I think you are in love: nay, by'r lady. I am not such a fool to think what I list; nor I list not to think what I can; nor, indeed, I cannot think, If I would there heard it agreed upon that the prince should woo Hero for himself, and, having ohtained her, give her to Count Claudio.

D. John. Come, come, let us thither; this may prove food to my displeasure: that young start-up hath all the glory of my overthrow. If I can cross him in any way, I hless myself every way. You are both sure, and will assist me?

Con. To the death, my lord.

D. John. Let us to the great supper: their cheer is the greater that I am subdued. the cook were of my mind?—Shall we go prove what's to be done?

Bora. We'll wait upon your lordship.

ACT II.

Exeunt.

Scene I .- A Hall in Leonato's House. Enter LEONATO, ANTONIO, HERO, BEATRICE and others.

Leon. Was not Count John here at supper? Ant. I saw him not.

Beat. How tartly that gentleman looks! I never can see him but I am heart-hurned an hour after.

Hero. He is of a very melancholy dispostion. Beat. He were an excellent man that were made just in the mid-way between him and Benedick: the one is too like an image, and says nothing; and the other too like my lady's eldest son, evermore tattling.

Leon. Then half Signior Benedick's tongue in Count John's mouth, and half Count John's melancholy in Signior Benedick's face,-

Beat. With a good leg and a good foot, uncle, and money enough in his purse, such a man would win any woman in the world,-if he could get her good-will.

Leon. By my troth, niece, thon wilt never get thee a husband if thon he so shrewd of thy tongue.

Ant. In faith, she is too curst.

Beat. Too curst is more than curst. I shall lessen God's sending that way: for it is said, God sends a curst cow short horns; but to a cow too curst he sends none.

Leon. So, by being too curst, God will send you no horns.

Beof. Just if he send me no husband; for the which blessing I am at him upon my knees every morning and evening. Lord! I could not endure a husband with a heard on his face: I had rather lie in the woollen.

Leon. You may light upon a husband that hath no beard.

Beat. What should I do with him? dress him in my apparel, and make him my waiting gentlewoman? He that hath a beard is more than a youth; and he that hath no beard is less than a man: and he that is more than a youth is not for me; and he that is less than a man I am not for him: therefore I will even take sixpence in earnest of the bear-ward, and lead his apec into bell.

Leon. Well then, go you into hell?

Beat. No; hat to the gate; and there will the devil meet me, like an old cuckold, with horns on his head, and say, Get you to heaven, Beatrice; get you to heaven: here's no place for you maids: so deliver I np my apes and away to Saint Peter for the heavens; he shows me where the hachelors sit, and there live we as merry as the day is long.

Ant. Well, niece [to HERO], I trust you will be ruled by your father.

Beot. Yes, faith; it's my cousin's dnty to make courtesy, and say, Father, as it please you: -but yet for all that, cousin, let him he a handsome fellow, or else make another courtesy, and say, Father, as it please me.

Leon. Well, niece, I hope to see you one day fitted with a husband.

Beot. Not till God make men of some other metal than earth. Would it not grieve a woman to he over-mastered with a piece of valiant dust! to make an account of her life to a clod of wayward marl? No, uncle, I'll none: Adam's sons are my hrethren; and truly, I hold it a sin to match in my kindred.

Leon. Daughter, remember what I told you: if the prince do solicit you in that kind, you know your answer.

Beat. The fault will be in the music, cousin, if you he not wooed in good time: if the prince be too important, tell him there is measure in everything, and so dance out the answer. For hear me, Hero, wooing, wedding, and repenting is as a Scotch jig, a measure, and a cinque-pace: the first suit is hot and hasty, like a Scotch jig, and full as fantastical; the wedding, mannerly modest as a measure, full of state and ancientry; and then comes repentance, and, with his bad legs, falls into the cinque-pace faster and faster, till he sink into his grave.

Leon. Cousin, you apprehend passing shrewdly.

I have a good eye, uncle; I can see a Beat. church by daylight. Leon. The revellers are entering, brother; make good room.

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, Benedick, Bal-thazar; Don John, Borachio, Margaret URSULA, and others, masked.

D. Pedro. Lady, will you walk about with your friend? Hero. So you walk softly, and look sweetly, and say nothing, I am yours for the walk; and, especially, when I walk away.

D. Pedro. With me in your company?

Hero. I may say so, when I please. D. Pedro. And when please you to say so? Hero. When I like your favour; for God defend the lute should be like the case!

D. Pedro. My visor is Philemon's 100f; within the house is Jove.

Why, then, your visor should be Hero. thatched.

D. Pedro. Speak low, if you speak love. [Takes her aside.

Balth. Well, I would yon did like me. Marg. So would not I, for your own sake; for I have many ill qualities.

Bolth. Which is one?

Marg. I say my prayers aloud. Balth. I love you the better; the hearers may cry Amen. Marg. God match mo with a good dancer!

Balth. Amen.

Behold, how like a maid she blushes here!

O, what anthority and show of truth
Can cunning sin cover itself withal!
Comes not that blood as modest evidence.
To witness simple virtue? Would you not swear,
All you that see her, that she were a maid,
By these exterior shows? But she is none:
She knows the heat of a luxurious bed:
Her blush is guiltiness, not modesty.

Leon. What do you mean, my lord?
Claud.
Not to be married,
Not to knit my soul to an approved wanton.
Leon. Dear, my lord, if you, in your own proof,

Have vanquish'd the resistance of her youth, And made defeat of her virginity,— Claud. I know what you would say: If I have known her,

You'll say, she did embrace me as a husband,

And so extenuate the 'forehand sin: No. Leonato.

I'n ever tempted her with word too large; But, as a brother to his sister, show'd Bashful sincerity and comely love.

Bashful sincerity and comely love.

Hero. And seem'd I ever otherwise to you?

Claud. Out on thy seeming! I will write against it:

You seem to me as Dian in her orb;
As chaste as is the bud ere it be blown;
But you are more intemperate in your blood
Than Venus, or those pamper'd animals
That rage in savage sensuality. (so wide?
Hero. Is my lord well, that he doth speak
Claud. Sweet prince, why speak not you?

D. Pedro. What should I speak?
I stand dishonour'd, that have gone about
To link my dear friend to a common stale.

Leon. Are these things spoken? or do I but dream?

D. John. Sir, they are spoken, and these things are true.

Bene. This looks not like a nuptial.

Hero. True!—O God!
Claud. Leonato, stand I here? [brother?
Is this the prince? Is this the prince? Is this face Hero's? Are our eyes our own?
Leon. All this is so; but what of this, my lord? [your daughter;

Claud. Let me but move one question to And, by that fatherly and kindly power

That you have in her, bid her answer truly.

Leon. I charge thee do so, as thou art my child,

Hero. O God defend me! how am I beset!— What kind of catechising call you this?

Claud. To make you answer truly to your name. (name

Hero. Is it not Hero? Who can blot that

With any just reproach?

Claud. Marry, that can Hero; Hero itself can blot out Hero's virtue. What man was he talk'd with you yesternight Out at your window, betwixt twelve and one?

How, if you are a maid, answer to this.

Hero. I talk'd with no man at that hour, my lord. [Leonato, D. Pedro. Why, then are you no maiden.—I am sorry you must hear: upon mine honour, Myself, my brother, and this grieved count, Did see her, hear her, at that hour last night, Talk with a ruffian at her chamber-window; Who hath, indeed, most like a liberal villain, Confess'd the vile encounters they have had A thousand times in secret.

D. John. Fie, fiel they are Not to be named, my lord, not to be spoke of; There is not chastity enough in language, Without offence, to utter them. Thus, pretty lady.

I am sorry for thy much misgovernment.

Claud O Hero! what a Hero hadst thon been

If half thy outward graces had been placed About thy thoughts and counsels of thy heart! But fare thee well, most foul, most fair! farewell.

Thou pure implety and impions purityl For thee I'll lock up all the gates of love, And on my eyelids shall conjecture hang, To turn all beauty into thoughts of harm, And never shall it be more gracious.

nd never shall it be more gracious.

Leon. Hath no man's dagger here a point for me?

[Hero swoons.

Beat. Why, how now, cousin? wherefore sink you down?

D. John. Come, let us go: these things, come thus to light,
Smother her spirits up.

[Exeunt D. PEDRO, D. JOHR, and CLAUDIO Bene. How doth the lady?

Beat. Dead, I think;—help, uncle;— Herol why, Herol—Uncle!—Signior Benedick!—friarl

Leon. O fate, take not away thy heavy handl Death is the fairest cover for her shame That may be wish'd for.

Beat. How now, cousin Hero?
Friar. Have comfort, lady.
Leon. Dost thou look up?
Friar. Yea; wherefore should she not?
Leon. Wherefore! Why, doth not every earthly thing

Cry shame upon her? Could she here deny The story that is printed in her blood?—
Do not live, Hero; do not ope thine eyes:
For did I think thou wouldst not quickly die,
Thought I thy spirits were stronger than thy shames.

Myself would, on the rearward of reproaches, Strike at thy life. Griev'd I I had but one? Chid I for that at frugal nature's frame? O, one too much by thee! Why had I one? Why ever wast thou lovely in my eyes? Why had I not, with charitable hand, Took up a beggar's issue at my gates; Who, smirched thus and mir'd with infamy, I might have said, No part of it is mine; This shame derives itself from unknown loins? But mine, and mine I lov'd, and mine I prais'd, And mine that I was proud on; mine so much That I myself was to myself not mine Valuing of her; why, she-O, she is fallen Into a pit of ink, that the wide sea Hath drops too few to wash her clean again, And salt too little, which may season give

To her foul tainted flesh!

Bene.

Sir, sir, be patient:
For my part, I am so attir'd in wonder
I know not what to say.

Beat. O, on my soul, my cousin is belied!

D. Pedro. The Lady Beatrice hath a quarrel to you; the gentleman that danced with her told her she is much wronged by you.

Bene. O, she misused me past the endurance of a block; an oak but with one green leaf on it would have answered her; my very visor hegan to assume life and scold with her: she told me, not thinking I had heen myself,-that I was the prince's jester; that I was duller than a great thaw; huddling jest upon jest with such impossible conveyance npon me, that I stood like a man at a mark, with a whole army shooting at me. She speaks poniards, and every word stabs: if her hreath were as terrible as her terminations, there were no living near her; she would infect to the north star. I would not marry her though she were endowed with all that Adam had left him hefore he transcressed: she would have made Hercules have turned spit; yea, and have cleft his club to make the fire too. Come, talk not of her: you shall find her the infernal Ate in good apparel. I would I would to God some scholar would conjure her; for certainly, while she is here, a man may live as quiet in hell as in a sanctuary; and people sin upon purpose, because they would go thither; so, indeed, all disquiet, horror, and perturbation follows her.

D. Pedro. Look, here she comes.

Re-enter CLAUDIO and BEATRICE, LEONATO and HERO.

Bene. Will your grace command me any service to the world's end? I will go on the slighest errand now to the antipodes that you can devise to send me on; I will fetch you a toothpicker now from the farthest inch of Asin; bring you the length of Prester John's foot; fetch you a hair off the great Cham's heard; do you any embassage to the Pigmies; -rather than hold three words' conference with this harpy. You have no employment for me?

D. Pedro. None, but to desire your good company.

Bene. O God, sir, here's a dish I love not; I cannot endure my Lady Tongue. (Exit. D. Pedro. Come, lady, come; you have lost the heart of Signior Benedick.

Beat. Indeed, my lord, he lent it me awhile; and I gave him use for it,-a double heart for his single one: marry, once before he won it of me with false dice, therefore your grace may well say I have lost it.

D. Pedro. You have put him down, lady, you have put him down.

Beat. So I would not he should do me, my lord, lest I should prove the mother of fools. I have brought Count Claudio, whom you sent me to seek. fore are you sad?

D. Pedro. Why, how now, count! where-

Claud. Not sad, my lord. D. Pedro. How then? Sick?

Claud. Neither, my lord.

Beat. The count is neither sad, nor sick, nor merry, nor well: but civil, count; civil as an orange, and something of that jealons complexion. D. Pedro. I' faith, lady, I think your blazon to he true; though I'll he sworn, if he be so, match, and all grace say Amen to it!

Beat. Speak, count, 'tis your cue.

Claud. Silence is the perfectest herald of joy: I were but little happy if I could say how much, -Lady, as you are mine. I am yours: I give away myself for you, and dote upon the exchange.

Beat. Speak, cousin; or, if you cannot, stop his mouth with a kiss, and let not him speak neither. lheart.

D. Pedro. In faith, lady, you have a merry Beot. Yea, my lord; I thank it, poor fool, it keeps on the windy side of care. - My cousin tells him in his ear that he is in her heart.

Claud. And so she doth, cousin. Beat. Good lord, for alliance!-Thus goes every one to the world hut I, and I am sun-hurnt; I may sit in a corner and cry heigh-hol for a husband.

D. Pedro. Lady Bestrice, I will get you one. Beat. I would rather have one of your father's getting. Hath your grace ne'er a brother like you? Your father got excellent husbands, if a maid could come by them.

D. Pedro. Will you have me, lady?

Beot. No, my lord, unless I might have another for working-days; your grace is too costly to wear every day. But, I beseech your grace, pardon me; I was born to speak all mirth and no matter.

D. Pedro. Your silence most offends me, and to he merry best becomes you; for, out of question, you were born in a merry hour-

Beat. No, sure, my lord, my mother cried; hut then there was a star danced, and under that was I born. Consins, God give you joy! Leon. Niece, will you look to those things I told yon of?

Beat. I cry you mercy, uncle.—By your Exit BEATRICE grace's pardon. [Exit BEATRICE. D. Pedro. By my troth, a pleasant-spirited lady.

Leon. There's little of the melancholy element in her, my lord: she is never sad but when she sleeps; and not ever sad then; for I have heard my daughter say she hath often dreamed of unhappiness, and waked herself with laughing.

D. Pedro. She cannot endure to hear tell of a husband.

Leon. O, by no means; she mocks all her Benedick. wooers out of suit.

D. Pedro. She were an excellent wife for Leon. O Lord, my lord, if they were but a week married, they would talk themselves mad. D. Pedro. Count Ciandio, when mean you to go to church? Time goes on Claud. Tomorrow, my lord.

too, to have all things answer my mind.

D. Pedro. Come, you shake the head at so his conceit is false. Here, Claudio, I have long a breathing; but I warrant thee, Claudio, Beat. As strange as the thing I know not. It were as possible for me to say I loved nothing so well as you: but believe me not; and yet I lie not; I confess nothing, nor I deny gowns; and the Watch, with Confade and Borachio. nothing. - I am sorry for my cousin.

Bene. By my sword, Bestrice, thou lovest me.

Beat. Do not swear by it and eat it.

and I will make him eat it that says I love not Beat. Will you not eat your word?

Bena. With no sauce that can be devised to it: I protest I love thee.

Beat. Why, then, God forgive me!

Bene. What offence, sweet Beatrice?
Beat. You have stayed me in a happy hour: I was about to protest Hoved you.

Bene. And do it with all thy heart?

Bect. I love you with so much of my heart that none is left to protest.

Bene. Come, bid me do anything for thee. Bect. Kill Claudio.

Bene. Ha! not for the wide world. Bect. You kill me to deny it. Farewell.

Bene. Tarry, sweet Beatrice.
Beat. I am gone though I am here;—there is no love in you:-nay, I pray you, let me go. Bene. Beatrice, Beat. In faith, I will go.

than fight with mine enemy.

Bene. Is Claudio thine enemy? Beat. Is he not approved in the height a villain that hath slandered, scorned, dishonoured my kinswoman?-O that I were a man!-What! bear her in hand until they come to take hands, and then with public accusation, uncovered hither, sirrah; a word in your ear, sir; I say slander, unmitigated rancour,—O God, that I to you, it is thought you are false knaves. were a man! Sexton. Which be the malefactors?

Dogb. Marry, that am I and my partner; Verg. Nay, that's certain; we have the exhibition to examine.

Sexton. But which are the offenders that are to be examined? let them come before master constable.

Dogb. Yez, marry, let them come before me. -What is your name, friend?

Bora. Borechio.

Dogb. Pray write down-Borachio. Yours, sirrah? Con. I am a gentleman, sir, and my name is Conrade.

Dogb. Write down-master gentleman Conrade.-Masters, do you serve God?

Yea, sir, we hope.

Borc. Dogb.Write down-that they hope they serve God:-and write God first; for God de-Bene. We'll be friends first.

Bect. You dere easier be friends with me Mesters, it is proved elready that you are little better than false knaves; and it will go near to be thought so shortly. How answer you for yourselves?

Beat. Sweet Hero!—she is wronged, she is that are their accusers.

Endered, she is undone.

Bene. Beat—

Let the Watch come forth—Masters, I charge you in the prince's name, accuse these men.
I Wotch. This men said, sir, that Don John,

the prince's brother, was a villain.

Dogb. Write down-Prince John a villain. Why, this is fiat perjury, to call a prince's Verg. Yes, by the mass, that it is.

Sexion. What else, fellow?

I Wotch. And that Count Claudio did mess.

Sexton. What else?

2 Wetch. This is all.

Claud. O. very well, my lord: the music We'll fit the kid-fox with a pennyworth lended.

Enter Balthazar, with Music.

D. Pedro. Come, Balthazar, we'll hear that voice song again.

Balth. O, good my lord, tax not so had a To slander music any more than once. D. Pedro. It is the witness still of excellency

To put a strange face on his own perfection: I pray thee, sing, and let me woo no more. Balth. Because you talk of wooing, I will sing: Since many a wooer doth commence his suit To her he thinks not worthy; yet he woos;

Yet will be swear be loves.

Nay, pray thee, come: D. Pedro. Or, if thou wilt hold longer argument, Do it in notes.

Note this before my notes, Balth. There's not a note of mine that's worth the [he speaks;] noting.

D. Pedro. Why, these are very crotchets that Note notes, forsooth, and noting! Music. Bene. Now, divine airl now is his soul ravished! Is it not strange that sheeps' guts should hale souls out of men's bodies?-Well. a horn for my money, when all's done.

BALTHAZAR sings.

ı.

Sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more; Men were deceivers ever; One foot in sea and one on shore, To one thing constant never: Then sigh not so, But let them go, And be you blithe and honny; Converting all your sounds of woe Into Hey nonny, nonny.

Sing no more ditties, sing no mo Of dumps so dall and heavy; The fraud of men was ever so Since summer first was leavy. Then sigh not so, &c.

D. Pedro. By my troth, a good song.

Balth. And an ill singer, my lord. Claud. Ha, no; no, faith; thou singest well enough for a shift.

Bene. [Aside.] An he had heen a dog that should have howled thus they would have hanged him: and I pray God his had voice hode no mischief! I had as lief have heard the night-raven, come what plague could have come after it.

D. Pedro. Yea, marry [to CLAUDIO].—Dost thou hear, Balthazarl I pray thee get us some excellent music; for to-morrow night we would have it at the lady Hero's chamber-window.

Balth. The best I can, my lord.

D. Pedro. Do so: farewell. Execut BAL-THAZAR and Music.] Come hither, Leonato. What was it you told me of to-day,—that your niece Beatrice was in love with Signior Benedick?

Claud. O sy:-stalk on, stalk on; the fowl sits aside to PEDRO. I did never think that lady would have loved any man.

Leon. No, nor I neither; hut most wonderful that she should so dote on Signior Benedick. whom she hathin all outward behaviours seemed even to ahhor.

Bene. Is't possible? Sits the wind in that corner?

Leon. By my troth, my lord, I cannot tell what to think of it; but that she loves him with an enraged affection,-it is past the infinite of thought.

D. Pedro. May he she doth but counterfeit.

Claud. 'Faith, like enough.

Leon. O Godl counterfeit! There was never counterfeit of passion came so near the life of passion as she discovers it. D. Pedro. Why, what effects of passion shows she?

Claud. Bait the book well; this fish will bite. Aside. Leon. What effects, my lord! She will sit you,-You heard my daughter tell you how.

Claud. She did, indeed.
D. Pedro. How, how, I pray you? You amaze me: I would have thought her spirit had been invincible against all assaults of affection. Leon. I would have sworn it had, my lord; especially against Benedick.

Bene. [Aside.] I should think this a gull, but that the white-hearded fellow speaks it: knavery cannot, sure, hide itself in such reverence.

Claud. He hath ta'en the infection; hold it [Aside. D. Pedro. Hath she made her affection known to Benedick.

Leon. No: and swears she never will: that's her torment.

· Claud. 'Tis true, indeed; so your daughter says: Shall I, says she, that have so oft encountered him with scorn, write to him that I love him?

Leon. This says she now, when she is heginning to write to him: for she'll he up twenty times a night: and there will she sit in her smock till she have writ a sheet of paper:-my daughter tells us all.

Claud. Now you talk of a sheet of paper, I remember a pretty jest your daughter told us of.

Leon. O!-When she had writ it, and was reading it over, she found Benedick, and Beatrice between the sheet?-

Claud. That.

Leon. Ol she tore the letter into a thousand halfpence; railed at herself that she should be so immodest to write to one that she knew would flout her. I measure him, says she, by my own spirit; for I shall flout him if he writ to me; yea, though I love him, I should. Claud. Then down upon her knees she falls, weeps, sohs, heats her heart, tears her hair, prays, curses;-O sweet Benedick! God give me patience!

Leon. She doth indeed; my daughter says so; and the ecstasy hath so much overhome her that my daughter is sometime afraid she will do a desperate outrage to herself. It is very true.

D. Pedro. It were good that Benedick knew of it by some other, if she will not discover it. A Claud. To what end? He would but make a sport of it, and torment the poor lady worse.

Leon. Canst thou so daff me? Thou hast kill'd my child;

If thou kill'st me, boy, thou shalt kill a man. Ant. He shall kill two of us, and men indeed; But that's no matter; let him kill one first; Win me and wear me,-let him answer me. Come, follow me, hoy; come, boy, follow me: Sir boy, I'll whip you from your foining fence; Nay, as I am a gentleman, I will.

Leon. Brother,-

Ant. Content yourself. God knows I lov'd my niece;

And she is dead, slander'd to death by villains, That dare as well answer a man, indeed. As I dare take a serpent by the tongue: Boys, apes, braggarts, Jacks, milksops!-

Brother Antony,-Leon. Ant. Hold you content. What, man! I know them, yea, (scruple,-

And what they weigh, even to the utmost Scambling, out-facing, fashion-mong'ring hoys. That lie, and cog, and flout, deprave and slander

Go anticly, and show outward hideousness And speak off half a dozen dangerous words, How they might hurt their enemies, if they durst;

And this is all.

Leon. But, brother Antony,

Come, 'tis no matter; Do not you meddle, let me deal in this.

D. Pedro. Gentlemen both, we will not wake your patience.

My heart is sorry for your daughter's death; But, on my honour, she was charg'd with noth-

But what was true, and very full of proof.

Leon. My lord, my lord,

I will not hear you. D. Pedro: Leon,

Come, brother, away.-- I will be heard;-Ant. And shall,

Or some of us will smart for it.

(Exeunt LEON. and ANT. D. Pedro. See, see; here comes the man we went to seck.

Enter BENEDICK.

Claud. Now, signior! what news? Bene. Good day, my lord.

D. Pedro. Welcome, signior: you are almost come to part almost a fray. Cloud. We had like to have had our two noses snapped off with two old men without teeth. D. Pedro. Leonato and his brother. think'st thou? Had we fought, I doubt we should have been too young for them.

Benc. In a false quarrel there is no true

I came to seek you both.

Cloud. We have been up and down to seek thee; for we are high proof melancholy, and would fain have it beaten away. Wilt thou use thy wit?

Bene. It is in my scabbard: shall I draw it? D. Pedro. Dost thou wear thy wit hy thy side?

Claud. Never any did so, though very many have heen beside their wit.—I will bid thee draw, as we do the minstrels; draw, to pleasure us.

D. Pedro. As I am an honest man, he looks pale. - Art thou sick or angry?

Cloud. What! courage, man! What though care killed a cat, thou hast mettle enough in thee to kill care.

Bene. Sir, I shall meet your wit in the career, an you charge it against me .- I pray you, choose another subject.

Claud. Nay, then, give him another staff; this last was broke cross.

D. Pedro. By this light, he changes more and more; I think he he angry indeed.

Claud. If he he, he knows how to turn his girdle.

Bene. Shall I speak a word in your ear? Claud. God hless me from a challenge!

Bene. You are a villain; -I jest not:-I will make it good how you dare, with what you dare, and when you dare. - Do me right, or I will protest your cowardice. You have killed a sweet lady, and her death shall fall heavy on . you. Let me hear from you.

Cloud. Well, I will meet you, so I may have good cheer.

D. Pedro. What, a feast? a feast? Cloud. P faith, I thank him; he hath bid me to a calf's head and a capon, the which if I do not carve most curiously, say my knife's naught. -Shall I not find a woodcock too?

Bene. Sir. your wit ambles well; it goes easily.

D. Pedro. I'll tell thee how Beatrice praised thy wit the other day: I said thou hadst a fine wit; True, says she, a fine little one. No. said I, a greot wit; Right, says she, a great gross one. Nay, said I, a good wit. said she, it hurts nobody. Nay, said I, the gentleman is wise. Certain, said she, a wise gentleman. Noy, said I, he hoth the tongues. That I believe, said she, for he swore a thing to me on Mondoy night which he forswore on Tuesdoy morning; there's a double tongue; there's two tongues. Thus did she, an hour together, trans-shape thy particular virtues; yet, at last, she concluded, with a sigh, thou wast the properest man in Italy.

Cloud. For the which she wept heartily, and said she cared not.

D. Pedro. Yea, that she did; hut yet, for all that, an if she did not hate him deadly, she would love him dearly: the old man's daughter told us all.

Claud. All, all; and moreover, God sow him when he was hid in the gorden.

D. Pedro. But when shall we set the savage bull's horns on the sensible Benedick's head? Claud. Yea, and text underneath, Here dwells Benedick the morried mon?

Bene. Fare you well, hoy; you know my mind. I will leave you now to your gossiplike humour: you break jests as braggarts do their blades, which, God be thanked, hurt not. -My lord, for your many courtesies I thank you: I must discontinue your company: your brother the bastard is fled from Messina: you have among you killed a sweet and innocent For my Lord Lackbeard there, he and I shall meet; and till then, peace be with him. Exit BENEDICK.

D. Pedro. He is in earnest.

Hero. Now, Ursula, when Beatrice doth come | She'd mock me into air; O, she would laugh As we do trace this alley up and down, Our talk must only he of Benedick: When I do name him, let it he thy part To praise him more than ever man did merit: My talk to thee must be how Benedick Is sick in love with Beatrice. Of this matter Is little Cupid's crafty arrow made, That only wounds by hearsay. Now hegin;

Enter BEATRICE, behind.

For look where Beatrice, like a lapwing, runs

Close by the ground, to hear our conference.

Urs. The pleasant'st angling is to see the fish Cut with her golden ours the silver stream, And greedily devour the treacherous bait-So angle we for Beatrice; who even now Is couched in the woodbine overture: Fear you not my part of the dialogue.

Hero. Then go we near her, that her ear lose nothing

Of the false sweet bait that we lay for it.-They advance to the bower. No, truly, Ursula, she is too discainful; I know her spirits are as coy and wild As haggards of the rock.

But are you sure That Benedick loves Beatrice so entirely?

Hero. So says the prince and my new-trothed Imadem? lord.

Urs. And did they hid you tell her of it, Hero. They did entreat me to acquaint her of it:

But I persuaded them, if they lov'd Benedick, To wish him wrestle with affection, And never to let Beatrice know of it. man Urs. Why did you so? Doth not the gentle-Deservo as full, as fortunate a bed

As ever Beatrice shall couch upon? [serve Hero. O God of lovel I know he doth de-As much as may he yielded to a man: But nature nover framed a woman's heart Of prouder stuff than that of Beatrice: Disdain and scorn ride sparkling in her eyes, Misprizing what they look on; and her wit Values itself so highly, that to her All else seems weak: she cannot love. Nor take no shape nor project of affection, She is so self-endeared.

Urs. Sure, I think so; And therefore, certainly, it were not good She knew his love, lest she make sport at it.

Hero. Why, you speak truth: I never yet saw man, [festured, How wise, how nohle, young, how rarely But she would spell him backward: if fair-faced, She'd swear the gentleman should be her sister; If hlack, why, Nature, drawing of an antic, Made a foul blot; if tall, a lance ill-headed; If low, an agate very vilely cut: If speaking, why, a vane blown with all winds; If silent, why, a block moved with none. So turns she every man the wrong side out; And never gives to truth and virtue that Which simpleness and merit purchaseth.

Urs. Sure, sure, such carping is not commendahle. Ifashions Hero. No: not to he so odd and from all

As Beaurice is, cannot be commendable: But who dare tell her so? If I should speak.

Out of myself, press me to death with wit. Therefore let Benedick, like covered fire, Consume away in sighs, waste inwardly: It were a hetter death than die with mocks: Which is as had as die with tickling, Urs. Yet tell her of it; hear what she will Hero. No; rather I will go to Benedick And counsel him to fight against his passion: And, truly, I'll devise some honest slanders To stain my cousin with. One doth not know How much an ill word may empoison liking.

Urs. O, do not do your cousin such a wrong. She cannot be so much without true judgment,-Having so swift and excellent a wit

Always excepted my dear Clandio. Urs. I pray you be not angry with me, madam. Speaking my fancy; Signior Benedick, For shape, for bearing, argument, and valour, Goes foremost in report through Italy.

Hero. Indeed, he hath an excellent good name. !it.-

Urs. His excellence did earn it ere he had When are you married, madam?

Hero. Why, every day;—to-morrow. igo iu; Come, I'll show thee some attires, and have thy counsel Which is the hest to furnish me to-morrow.

Urs. [Aside.] She's lim'd, I warrant yon; we have caught her, madam.

Hero. If it prove so, then loving goes by haps:

Beat. What fire is in mine ears?

To hind our loves up in a holy hand: For others say thou dost deserve, and I Believe it hetter than reportingly. Exit.

Scene II .- A Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Don PEDRO, CLAUDIO, BENEDICE, and LEONATO.

D. Pedro. I do hut stay till your marriage he consummate, and then I go toward Arragon. Claud. I'll bring you thither, my lord, if you'll vouchsafe me.

D. Pedro. Nay, that would be as great a soil in the new gloss of your marriage as to show a child his new coat, and forbid him to wear it. I will only be bold with Benedick for his company; for, from the crown of his head to the sole of his foot, he is all mirth; he hath twice or thrice cut Cupid's how-string, and the little hangman dare not shoot at him: he hath a heart as sound as a bell, and his tongue is the clapper; for what his heart thinks his tongue speaks.

Bene. Gallants. I am not as I have been.

the Watch heard them talk of one Deformed: smoothly in the even road of a blank verse. they say he wears a key in his ear and a lock hanging by it, and borrows money in God's name; the which he hath used so long, and never paid, that now men grow hard-hearted. and will lend nothing for God's sake: pray for scorn, horn-a hard rhyme; for school, fool you, examine him upon that point.

Leon. I thank thee for thy care and honest pains.

Dogb. Your worship speaks like a most thankful and reverend youth, and I praise God for you. Leon. There's for thy pains.

. Dogb. God save the foundation!

Leon. Go; I discharge thee of thy prisoner, and I thank thee.

Dogb. I leave an arrant knave with your worship; which I beseech your worship to correct yourself, for the example of others. God keep your worship; I wish your worship well; God restore you to health; I humbly give you leave to depart; and if a merry meeting may be wished, God prohibit it.—Come, neighbour.

[Exeunt DOGB., VERG., and Watch. Leon. Until to-morrow morning, lords, farewell. Ito-morrow. Ant. Farewell, my lords; we look for you D. Pedro. We will not fail.

Claud. To-night I'll mourn with Hero.

[Exeunt D. PEDRO and CLAUD. Leon. Bring you these fellows on: we'll talk with Margaret

How her acquaintance grew with this lewd fellow. Exeunt.

Scene II.—Leonato's Garden.

Enter BENEDICK and MARGARET, meeting.

Bene. Pray thee, sweet Mistress Margaret, deserve well at my hands by helping me to the speech of Beatrice.

Marg. Will you then write me a sonnet in praise of my beauty?

Bene. In so high a style, Margaret, that no man living shall come over it; for, in most comely truth, thou deservest it.

Marg. To have no man come over me? why, shall I always keep below stairs?

Bene. Thy wit is as quick as the greyhound's mouth; it catches.

Marg. And yours as blunt as the fencer's foils, which hit, but hurt not.

Bene. A most manly wit, Margaret; it will not hurt a woman; and so, I pray thee, call Beatrice: I give thee the bucklers.

Marg. Give us the swords; we have bucklers

Bene. If you use them, Margaret, you must put in the pikes with a vice; and they are dangerous weapons for maids.

Marg. Well, I will call Beatrice to you, who, Exit MARGARET. I think, hath legs.

Bene. And therefore will come. Singing.

> The god of love, That sits above And knows me, and knows me, How pitiful I deserve,-

I mean in singing; but in loving-Leander the good swimmer, Troilus the first employer of penders, and a whole book full of these quondam carpet-mongers, whose names yet run Lady Hero hath been falsely accused, the prince why, they were never so truly turned over and over as my poor self in love. Marry, I cannot show it in rhyme; I have tried; I can find outno rhyme to lady but baby-on innocent rhyme: —a babbling rhyme; very ominous endings, No, I was not born under a rhyming planet, nor I cannot woo in festival terms.

Enter BEATRICE.

Sweet Beatrice, wouldst thou come when I called thee? me.

Beat. Yea, signior, and depart when you bid

Bene. O, stay but till then!

Beat. Then is spoken; fare you well now:and yet, ere I go, let me go with that I came for, which is, knowing what hath passed between you and Claudie.

Bene. Only foul words; and thereupon I will kiss thee.

Beat. Foul words is but foul wind and foul wind is but foul breath, and foul breath is noisome; therefore I will depart unkissed.

Bene. Thou hast frighted the word out of his right sense, so forcible is thy wit. But, I must tell thee plainly, Claudio undergoes my challenge; and either I must shortly hear from him, or I will subscribe him a coward. And, I may thee now, tell me, for which of my bad parts didst thou first fall in love with me?

Beat. For them all together; which maintained so politic a state of evil that they will not admit any good part to intermingle with them. But for which of my good parts did you first suffer love for me?

Bene. Suffer love; a good epithet! I do suffer love, indeed, for I love thee against my will.

Beat. In spite of your heart, I think; alas! poor heart! If you spite it for my sake, I will spite it for yours; for I will never love that which my friend hates.

Thou and I are too wise to woo peace-Bene. Thou and I are too wise to woo peace-Beat. It appears not in this confession: there's not one wise man among twenty that will praise himself.

Bene. An old, an old instance, Beatrice, that lived in the time of good neighbours: if a man do not erect in this age his own tomb ere he dies, he shall live no longer in monument than the bell rings and the widow weeps.

Beat. And how long is that, think you?

Bene. Question: why, an hour in clamour, and a quarter in rheum: therefore it is most expedient for the wise (if Don Worm, his conscience, find no impediment to the contrary) to be the trumpet of his own virtues, as I am to myself. So much for praising myself, who, I myself will bear witness, is praiseworthy, and now tell me, how doth your cousin?

Beat. Very ill.
Bene. And how do you?
Beat. Very ill too.

Bene. Serve God, love me. and mend: there will I leave you too, for here comes one in haste.

Enter URSULA.

Urs. Madam, you must come to your uncle. Yonder's old coil at home: it is proved my

And when you lov'd you were my other husband.

Claud. Another Hero? Nothing certainer: Hero. One Hero died defil'd; but I do live,

And, surely as I live, I am a maid. Ideadl D. Pedro. The former Hero! Hero that is Leon. She died, my lord, but whiles her slander liv'd.

Friar. All this amazement can I qualify: When, after that the holy rites are ended, I'll tell you largely of fair Hero's death: Meantime let wonder seem familiar, And to the chapel let us presently.

Bene. Soft and fair, friar.—Which is Beatrice? Beat. I answer to that name; [Unmasking.

What is your will?

Bene. Do not you love me?

Reat. No, no more than reason. Bene. Why, then your uncle, and the prince. and Claudio

Have been deceived; for they swore you did. Beat. Do not you love me?

Вепе. No, no more than reason. Beat. Why, then my cousin, Margaret, and Ursula,

Are much deceived; for they did swear you did. Bene. They swore that you were almost sick [dead for me. for me.

Beat. They swore that you were well-nigh Bene. 'Tis no such matter.-Then you do lighten our own hearts and our wives' heels. not love me?

Beat. No, truly, but in friendly recompense. Leon. Come, cousin, I am sure you love the gentleman.

Claud. And I'll be sworn upon't that he loves her;

For here's a paper written in his hand-A halting sonnet of his own pure brain, Fashion'd to Beatrice.

And here's another, Hero. Writ in my cousin's hand, stolen from her pocket, Containing her affection unto Benedick.

Bene. A miracle!-here's our own hands against our hearts!-Come, I will have thee: but, by this light, I take thee for pity. Beat. I would not deny you; but, by this good day, I yield upon great persuasion; and partly to save your life, for I was told you were in a consumption.

Bene. Peace; I will stop your mouth.

Kissing her. D. Pedro. How dost thou, Benedick the married man?

Bene. I'll tell thee what, prince; a college of wit-crackers cannot flout me out of my humour. Dost thou think I care for a satire, or an epigram? No: if a man will be beaten with brains, he shall wear nothing handsome In brief, since I do purpose to about him. marry, I will think nothing to any purpose that the world can say against it; and therefore never flout at me for what I have said against it; for man is a giddy thing, and this is my conclusion. - For thy part, Claudio, I did think to have beaten thee; but in that thou art like to be my kinsman, live unbruised, and love my cousin.

Claud. I had well hoped thou wouldst have denied Beatrice, that I might have cudgelled thee out of thy single life, to make thee a double dealer; which, out of question thou wilt be if my cousin do not look exceeding narrowly to thee.

Bene. Come, come, we are friends:-let's have a dance ere we are married, that we may Leon. We'll have dancing afterwards.

Bene. First, o' my word; therefore, play, music.-Prince, thou art sad; get thee a wife, get thee a wife: there is no staff more reverend than one tipped with horn.

Enter a Messenger.

think my heart out of thinking, that you are in love, or that you will be in love, or that you can be in love: yet Benedick was such another, and now is he become a man: he swore he would never marry; and yet now, in despite of his heart, he eats his meat without grudging: and how you may be converted I know not: but methinks you look with your eyes as other keeps? women do.

Beat. What pace is this that thy tongue

Re-enter URSULA.

Urs. Madam, withdraw; the prince, the count, Signior Benedick, Don John, and all the gallants of the town are come to fetch you to church.

Hero. Help to dress me, good coz, good Meg, good Ursula. Exeunt.

Scene V .- Another Room in Leonato's House.

Leon. What would you with me, honest neighbor?

Dogb. Marry, sir, I would have some confidence with you that discerns you nearly.

Leon. Brief, I pray you; for you see 'tis a busy time with me

Dogb. Marry, this it is, sir. Verg. Yes, in truth it is, sir.

Leon. What is it, my good friends? Dogb. Goodman Verges, sir, speaks a little off the matter: an old man, sir, and his wits are not so blunt as, God help, I would desire they were: but, in faith, honest as the skin between his hrows.

Verg. Yes, I thank God I am as honest as any man living that is an old man and no honester than I.

Dogb. Comparisons are odorous: palabras, neighbour Verges.

Leon. Neighbours, you are tedious.

Dogb. It pleases your worship to say so, hut we are the poor duke's officers: but, truly, for mine own part, if I were as tedious as a king, I could find in my heart to bestow it all of your worship.

Leon. All thy tediousness on mel hal

Dogb. Yea, and 'twere a thousand times more than 'tis: for I hear as good exclamation on your worship as of any man in the city; and though I he hut a poor man, I am glad to hear Verg. And so am I.

Leon. I would fain know what you have to Verg. Marry, sir, our watch to-night, excepting your worship's presence, have ta'en a couple of as arrant knaves as any in Messina.

Dogb. A good old man, sir; he will be talking; as they say, When the age is in the wit is out; God help usl it is a world to see!—Well said, i' faith, neigbhour Verges:—well, God's a good man; an two men ride of a horse, one must ride behind. - An honest soul, i' faith, sir; by my troth he is, as ever hroke bread: but God is to be worshipped. All men are not alike,alas, good neighbour! [of you.

Leon. Indeed, neighbour, he comes too short

Dogb. Gifts that God gives. Leon. I must leave you.

Dogb. One word, sir: our watch, sir, have indeed comprehended two auspicious persons. and we would have them this morning examined

Leon. Take their examination yourself, and bring it me; I am now in great haste, as it may appear unto you.

Dogb. It shall be suffigance. [well. Leon. Drink some wine ere you go: fare you Leon. I will wait upon them; I am ready.

Verg. And we must do it wisely

Dogb. We will spare for no wit, I warrant you; here's that [touching his forehead] shall drive some of them to a non com: only get the learned writer to set down our excommunication, and meet me at the gaol. Exeunt.

ACT IV.

Scene I .- The inside of a Church.

Enter Don Pedro, Don John, Leonato, Friar, Claudio, Benedick, Hero, and BEATRICE, &c.

Leon. Come, Friar Francis, be brief; only to the plain form of marriage, and you shall recount their particular duties afterwards.

Frior. You come hither, my lord, to marry this lady? to marry her. Leon. To he married to ber, friar; you come Friar. Lady, you come hither to he married to this count?

Hero. I do.

Friar. If either of yon, know any inward impediment why you should not be conjoined I charge you, on your souls, to utter it. Claud. Know you any, Hero?

Hero. None, my lord.

Friar. Know you any, count?

Leon. I dare make his answer, none. Claud. O, what men dare do! what men may dol what men daily dol not knowing what they dol Bene. How now! Interjections? Why, then, some be laughing, as, ba! ha! be! Claud. Stand thee by, friar:—Father, by your leave:

Will you with free and unconstrained soul Give me this maid, your daughter?

Leon. As freely, son, as God did give her me. Claud. And what have I to give you back, wbose worth

May counterpoise this rich and precious gift? D. Pedro. Nothing, unless you render ber again. thankfulness.

Claud. Sweet prince, you learn me noble There, Leonato, take her back again; Give not this rotten orange to your friend; She's hut the sign and semblance of her honour .--

Enfer, EGEUS, HERMA, LYSANDER and DEMETRIUS

Ege. Happy be Theseus, our renowned duke!

The. Thanks, good Egeus: what's the news with thee?

Ege. Full of vexation come I, with complaint Against my child, my daughter Hermia.—Stand forth, Demetrius.—My noble lord, This man hath my consent to marry her:—Stand forth, Lysander;—and, my gracious duke, This hath hewitch'd the bosom of my child. Thou, thou, Lysander, thou hast given her rhymes,

And interchang'd love-tokens with my child:
Thou hast by moonlight at her window sung,
With feigning voice, verses of feigning love;
And stol'n the impression of her fantasy
With hracelets of thy hair, rings, gawds, con-ceits, [sengers, Knacks, trifles, nosegays, sweatmeets,—mes-Of strong prevailment in unharden'd yonth;—With cunning hast thou filch'd my daughter's heart;

Turned her chedience, which is due to me, To stubhorn harshness.—And, my gracious

duke,
Be it so she will not here before your grace
Consent to marry with Demetrius,
I beg the ancient privilege of Athens,—
As she is mine I may dispose of her:
Which shall be either to this gentleman
Or to her death; according to our law
Immediately provided in that case.

The. What say you, Hermis? be advis'd, fair maid:

To you your father should be as a god;
One that compos'd your beauties; yea, and one
To whom you are but as a form in war,
By him imprinted, and within his power
To leave the figure, or disfigure it.
Demetrius is a worthy gentleman.

Her. So is Lysander.
The.
In himself he is:
But, in this kind, wanting your father's voice,
The other must he held the worthier. [eyes.
Her. I would my father look'd but with my
The. Rather your eyes must with his judgment look.

Her. I do entreat your grace to pardon me. I know not by what power I am made bold, Nor how it may concern my modesty In such a presence here to plead my thoughts: But I heseech your grace that I may know The worst that may hefall me in this case If I refuse to wed Demetrius.

The. Either to die the death, or to ahjure For ever the society of men.
Therefore, fair Hermia, question your desires, Know of your youth, examine well your blood, Whether, if yon yield not to your father's choice, You can endure the livery of a nun; For aye to he in shady cloister mew'd, To live a barren sister all your life, Chanting feint hymns to the cold, fruitless moon. Thrice hlessed they that master so their blood To undergo such maiden pilgrimage:
But earthlier happy is the rose distill'd, Than that which, withering on the virgin thorn, Grows, lives, and dies in single blessedness.

Her. So will I grow, so live, so die, my lord, Ere I will yield my virgin patent up Unto his lordship, whose unwished yoke My soul consents not to give sovereignty.

The. Take time to pause; and by the next new moon,—

The sealing-day hetwirt my love and me, For everlasting hond of fellowship,—Upon that day either prepare to die For disobedience to your father's will; Or else to wed Demetrius, as he would; Or on Diana's altar to protest For aye ansterity and single life. [der. 7]

For aye ansterity and single life. [der, yield Dem. Relent, sweet Hermia;—and, Lysan-Thy crazed title to my certain right.

Lys. You have her father's love, Demetrius; Let me have Hermia's: do you marry him. Egs. Scornful Lysanderl true, he hath my love;

And what is mine my love shall render him; And she is mine; and all my right of her I do estate unto Demetrius.

Lys. I am, my lord, as well deriv'd as he, As well possess'd; my love is more than his; My fortunes every way as fairly rank'd, If not with vantage, as Demetrius's; And, which is more than all these boasts can be, I am belov'd of heauteous Hermia: Why should not I then prosecute my right? Demetrius, I'll avouch it to his head, Made love to Nedar's daughter, Helena, And won her soul; and she, sweet lady, dotes, Devoutly dotes, dotes in idolatry, Upon this spotted and inconstant man.

The. Imust confess that I have heard so much, And with Demetrius thought to have spoke thereof;

But, being over-full of self-affairs,
My mind did lose it.—But, Demetrius, come;
And come, Egeus; you shall go with me;
I have some private schooling for you both.—
For you, fair Hermia, look you arm yourself
To fit your fancies to your father's will,
Or else the law of Athens yields you up,—
Which hy no means we may extenuate,—
To death, or to a vow of single life.—
Come, my Hippolyta: what cheer, my love?
Demetrius, and Egeus, go along:
I must employ you in some business—
Against our nuptial, and confer with you
Of something nearly that concerns yourselves.

Ege. With duty and desire we follow you. [Exeunt THES., HIP., EGE., DEM., and Train. Lys. How now, my love! why is your cheek so pale?

How chance the roses there do fade so fast?
Her. Belike for want of rain, which I could well

Between them from the tempest of mine eyes.

Lys. Ah melfor aught that ever I could resd,
Could ever hear by tale or history,
The course of true love never did run smooth:
But either it was different in blood,—— [low!

Her. O cross! too high to be enthrail'd too

Lys. Or else misgrafied in respect of years;—
Her. O spite! too old to be engag'd to young!

Lys. Or else it stood upon the choice of friends:

Her. O hell! to choose love by another's eye!

Benc. Lady, were you her bedfellow last night? [night, Beat. No, truly not: although, until last I have this twelvemonth been her bedfellow.

Leon. Confirm'd, confirm'd! O, that is stronger made Which was before barr'd up with ribs of iron!

Would the two princes lie? and Claudio lie, Who loy'd her so that, speaking of her foulness, Wash'd it with tears? Hence from her! let her die.

Frior. Hear me a little; For I have only been silent so long, And given way unto this course of fortune. By noting of the lady: I have mark'd A thousand blushing apparitions start Into her face; a thousand innocent shames In angel whiteness bear away those blushes; And in her eye there hath appear'd a fire To burn the errors that these princes hold Against her maiden truth. Call me a fool; Trust not my reading, nor my observation, Which with experimental seal doth warrant The tenor of my book; trust not my age, My reverence, calling, nor divinity, If this sweet lady lie not guiltless here Under some biting error.

Friar, it cannot be: Lean. Thou seest that all the grace that she hath left Is that she will not add to her damnation A sin of perjury; she not denies it: Why seek'st thou then to cover with excuses That which appears in proper nakedness?

Lady, what man is he you are Frior. accused of? Hero. They know that do accuse me; I know none: If I know more of any man alive Than that which maiden modesty doth warrant, Let all my sins lack mercy!—O my father, Prove you that any man with me convers'd At hours unmeet, or that I yesternight Maintained the change of words with any creature, Refuse me, hate me, torture me to death! Frior. There is some strange misprision in (honour; Bene. Two of them have the very bent of And if their wisdoms be misled in this, The practice of it lives in John the bastard, Whose spirits toil in frame of villainies.

Leon. I know not. If they speak but truth of her. [honour, These hands shall tear her; if they wrong her The proudest of them shall well hear of it. Time hath not yet so dried this blood of mine, Nor age so eat up my invention, Nor fortune made such havoc of my means, Nor my bad life reft me so much of friends,

But they shall find, awak'd in such a kind, Both strength of limb and policy of mind, Ability in means and choice of friends, To quit me of them thoroughly.

Friar. Pause awhile, And let my counsel sway you in this case. Your daughter here the princes left for dead; Let her awhile be secretly kept in, And publish it that she is dead indeed: Maintain a mourning ostentation, And on your family's old monument

Hang mournful epitaphs, and do all rites That appertain unto a burial.

Leon. What shall become of this? What will this do? behalf

Friar. Marry, this, well carried, shall on her Change slander to remorse; that is some good; But not for that dream I on this strange course. But on this travail look or greater hirth. She dying, as it must be so maintain'd, Upon the instant that she was accus'd, Shall be lamented, pitied, and excus'd Of every hearer: for it so falls out That what we have we prize not to the worth Whiles we enjoy it; but being lack'd and lost, Why, then we rack the value; then we find The virtue that possession would not show us Whiles it was ours. So will it fare with Claudio: When he shall hear she died upon his words, The idea of her life shall sweetly creep Into his study of imagination: And every lovely organ of her life Shall come apparell'd in more precious habit, More moving delicate, and full of life, Into the eye and prospect of his soul, Than when she liv'd indeed:-then shall he mourn

If ever love had interest in his liver, And wish he had not so accused her; No, though he thought his accusation true. Let this be so, and doubt not but success Will fashion the event in better shape Than I can lay it down in likelihood. But if all aim but this be levell'd false, The supposition of the lady's death Will quench the wonder of her infamy: And, if it sort not well, you may conceal her -As best befits her wounded reputation,-In some reclusive and religions life, Out of all eyes, tongues, minds, and injuries. Bene. Signior Leonato, let the friar advise rou; And though you know my inwardness and love.

Is very much unto the prince and Claudio, Yet, by mine honour, I will deal in this As secretly and justly as your soul Should with your body. Being that I flow in grief

The smallest twine may lead me. Friar. 'Tis well consented; presently away; For to strange sores strangely they strain the cure.

Come, lady, die to live: this wedding-day Perhaps is but prolonged; have patience, and Excunt FRIAR, HERO, and LEON. Benc. Lady Beatrice, have you wept all this while?

Beat. Yes, and I will weep a while longer. Benc. I will not desire that.

Beat. You have no reason; I do it freely. Bene. Surely, I do believe your fair cousin is wrong'd. Ah, how much might the man deserve of me that would right her! ship?

Bene. Is there any way to show such friend-Beol. A very even way, but no such friend. Bene. May a man do it? Beal. It is a man's office, but not yours.

Bene. I do love nothing in the world so well as you. Is not that strange?

play treats on; then read the names of the actors; and so grow to a point.

Quin. Marry, our play is-The most lamentable comedy, and most cruel death of Pyramus and Thisby.

Bol. A very good piece of work, I assure you, and a merry.-Now, good Peter Quince, call forth your actors by the scroll .- Masters, spread the weaver. yourselves.

Quin. Answer, as I call you.—Nick Bottom, Bot. Ready. Name what part I am for, and proceed. Pyramus.

Quin. You, Nick Bottom, are set down for Bot. What is Pyramus? a lover, or a tyrant? Ouin. A lover, that kills himself most gallantly for love.

Bot. That will ask some tears in the true performing of it. If I do it, let the audience look to their eyes; I will move storms; I will con-dole in some measure. To the rest:—yet my chief humour is for a tyrant: I could play Ercles rarely, or a part to tear a cat in, to make all solit

And Phibbus' car The raging rocks, With shivering shocks, Shall shine from far, Shall break the locks And make and mar Of prison gates: The foolish Pates.

This was lofty!-Now, name the rest of the players .- This is Ercles' vein, a tyrant's vein; e lover is more condoling.

Quin. Francis Flute, the bellows-mender.

Flu. Here, Peter Quince.

Ouin. You must take Thisby on you. Flu. What is Thisby? a wandering knight? Quin. It is the lady that Pyramus must love. Flu. Nay, faith, let me not play a woman;

I have a beard coming.

Quin. That's all one; you shall play it in a mask, and you may speak as small as you will. Bot. An I may hide my face, let me play Thisby too: I'll speak in a monstrous little voice;—Thisne, Thisne.—Ah, Pyramus, my lover dear; thy Thisby dear! and lody dear!

Quin. No, no, you must play Pyramus; and,

Flute, you Thisby.

Bot. Well, proceed.

Quin. Robin Starveling, the tailor. Star. Here, Peter Quince.

Ouin. Robin Starveling, you must play Thisby's mother .- Tom Snout, the tinker.

Snout. Here, Peter Quince. Quin. You, Pyremus's father; myself, Thisby's father;—Snug, the joiner, you, the lion's part:—and, I hope, here is a play fitted.

Snug. Have you the lion's part written? pray you, if it be, give it me, for I am slow of study. Quin. You may do it extempore, for it is nothing but roaring.

Bot. Let me play the lion too: I will roar, that I will do any man's heart good to hear me; I will roar, that I will make the duke say, Let him roar again, let him roat again.

Quin. An you should do it too terribly you would fright the duchess and the ladies, that they would shrick; and that were enough to hang us all.

All. That would hang us every momer's son. Bot. I grant you, friends, if that you should fright the ladies out of their wits, they would By fountain clear or spangled starlight sheer have no more discretion but to hang us: but I will aggravate my voice so that I will roar you as gently as any sucking dove; I will roar you

'twere any nightingale.

Quin. You can play no part but Pyramus: for Pyramus is a sweet-faced man; a proper man, as one shall see on a summer's day; a most lovely, gentleman-like man; therefore you must needs play Pyramus.

Bot. Well, I will undertake it. What neard were I best to play it in?

Quin. Why, what you will. Bot. I will discharge it in either your strawcoloured beard, your orange-tawny beard, your purple-in-grain beard, or your French-crown-colour beard, your perfect yellow.

Quin. Some of your French crowns have no hair at all, and then you will play barefaced .-But, masters, here are your parts: and I am to entreat you, request you, and desire you, to con them by to-morrow night; and meet me in the palace wood, a mile without the town, by moonlight: there will we rehearse: for if we meet in the city, we shall be dogg'd with company, and our devices known. In the mean-time I will draw a bill of properties, such as our play wants. I pray you, fail me not. Bot. We will meet; and there we may rehearse more obscenely and courageously. Take pains; be perfect; adieu.

Quin. At the duke's oak we meet, Bol. Enough; hold, or cut bow-strings. Exeunt.

ACT II.

Scene L.—A Wood near Athens.

Enlet a Fairy at one door, and PUCK at another.

Puck. How now, spirit! whither wander you? Foi. Over hill, over dale,

Through bush, through brier,

Over park, over pale, Through flood, thorough fire, I do wander everywhere, Swifter than the moon's sphere; And I serve the fairy queen, To dew her orbs upon the green. The cowslips tall her pensioners be: In their gold coats spots you see; Those be rubies, fairy favours,

In those freckles live their savours: I must go seek some dew-drops here, And hang a pearl in every cowslip's ear. Farewell, thou lob of spirits; I'll be gone: Our queen and all our elves come here anon.

Puck. The king doth keep his revels here tonight; Take heed the queen come not within his sight. For Oberon is passing fell and wrath, Because that she, as her attendant, hath A lovely boy, stol'n from an Indian king; She never had so sweet a changeling: And jealous Oberon would have the child Knight of his train, to trace the forests wild: But she perforce withholds the loved boy, Crowns him with flowers, and makes him al her joy: And now they never meet in grove or green, Sexton. And this is more, masters, than you can deny. Prince John is this morning secretly stolen away; Hero was in this manner accused, in this very manner refused, and upon the grief of this suddenly died.—Master constable, let these men he hound and brought to Leonato's; I will go hefore and show him their examination. [Exit.

Dogb. Come, let them he opinioned.

Verg. Let them he in hand.

Con. Away! you are an ass, you are an ass, Doob. Dost thou not suspect my place? Dost thou not suspect my place? Dost thou not suspect my years?—O that he were here to write me down an ass! hut, masters, remember, that I am an ass; though it be not written down, yet forget not that I am an ass.—No, thou villain, thou art full of prety, as shall be proved upon thee hy good witness. I am a wise fellow; and, which is more, an officer; and, which is more, a householder; and, which is more, as pretty a piece of flesh as any in Messina: and one that knows the law, go to: and a rich fellow enough, to to; and a fellow that hath had losses; and one that hath two gowns, and everything handsome about him.—Bring him away. O that I had heen writ down an ass!

ACT V.

Scene I .- Before LEONATO'S House.

Enter LEONATO and ANTONIO.

Ant. If you go on thus you will kill yourself; And 'tis not wisdom thus to second grief

Against yourself. I pray thee, cease thy counsel. Leon. Which falls into mine ears as profitless As water in a sieve: give not me counsel; Nor let no comforter delight mine ear But such a one whose wrongs do suit with mine. Bring me a father that so lov'd his child, Whose joy of her is overwhelm'd like mine And bid him speak of patience; Imine. Measure his woe the length and breadth of And let it answer overy strain for strain; As thus for thus, and such a grief for such, In every lineament, hranch, shape, and form: If such a one will smile, and stroke his heard, Cry-sorrow, wagl and hem when he should Patch grief with proverbs, make misfortune With candle-wasters,—bring him yet to me, And I of him will gather patience. But there is no such man: for, brother, men Can counsel and speak comfort to that grief Which they themselves not feel; hut, tasting it, Their counsel turns to passion, which before Would give preceptial medicine to rage, Fetter strong madness in a silken thread, Charm ache with air and agony with words: No, no; 'tis all men's office to speak patience To those that wring under the load of serrow; But no man's virtue nor sufficiency

Leon. I pray thee, peace; I will be flesh and hlood:

For there was never yet philosopher That could endure the toothache patiently, However they have writ the style of gods, And make a pish at chance and sufferance.

And make a pish at chance and sufferance.

Ant. Yet hend not all the harm npon yourself:

Make those that do offend you suffer too.

Leon. There thou speak'st reason; nay, I.

will do so.

My soul doth tell me Hero is belied; And that shell Claudio know; so shell the prince,

And all of them that thus dishonour her.
Ant. Here comes the prince and Clandio hastily.

Enter Don PEDRO and CLAUDIO.

D. Pedro. Good den, good den. Claud. Good day to both of you. Leon. Hear you, my lords,—

D. Pedro. We have some haste, Leonato.

Leon. Some haste, my lord!—well, fare you well, my lord:—

Are you so hasty now?—well, all is one.

D. Pedro. Nay, do not quarrel with us, good old man. [ling,

Ani. If he could right himself with quarrelSome of us would lie low.
Cloud. Who wrongs him?

Leon. Marry, thou dost wrong me: thou dissembler, thou:— Ray, never lay thy hand upon thy sword—

Nay, never lay thy hand upon thy sword—
I fear thee not.
Claud. Marry, beshrew my hand

Claud. Merry, beshrew my hand,
If it should give your age such cause of fear:
In faith, my hand meant nothing to my sword.
Leon. Tush, tush, man; never fleer and jest

at me;
I speak not like a dotard nor a fool;
As, under privilege of age, to hrag [do
What I have done heing young, or what would
Where I not old. Know, Claudio, to thy head, Thou hast so wrong'd mine innocent child and me

That I am forc'd to lay my reverence by,
And with grey hairs and hruise of many days,
Do challenge thee to trial of a man.
I say thou hast belied mine innocent child;
Thy slander hath gone through and through her

heart.
And she lies huried with her ancestors,—
Ol in a tomh where never scandal slept,
Save this of hers, fram'd hy thy villainy.

Claud. My villsiny!

Leon. Thine, Claudio; thine, I say D. Pedro. You say not right, old man. Leon. My lord, my lord, I'll prove it on his body if he dare.

Despite his nice fence and his active practice,
His May of youth and bloom of lustihood.
Chud. Away! I will not have to do with

you.

My gentle Puck, come hither: thou remember'st What worser place can I beg in your love, Since once I sat upon a promontory, And heard a mermaid, on a dolphin's back. Uttering such dulcet and harmonious breath. That the rude sea grew civil at her song, And certain stars shot madly from their spheres! To hear the sea-maid's music.

Puck. I remember. Obe. That very time I saw, but thou couldst not, Flying between the cold moon and the earth. Cupid all arm'd: a certain aim he took At a fair vestal, throned by the west And loos'd his love-shaft smartly from his bow, As it should pierce a hundred thousand hearts: I But I might see young Cupid's fiery shaft Quench'd in the chaste beams of the watery moon;

And the imperial votaress passed on, In maiden meditation, fancy-free. Yet mark'd I where the bolt of Cupid fell: It fell upon a little western flower,-Before milk-white, now purple with love's wound .-

And maidens call it love-in-idleness. Fetch me that flower; the herb I show'd thee once:

The juice of it on sleeping eyelids laid Will make or man or woman madly dote Upon the next live creature that it sees. Fetch me this herh: and he thou here again Ere the leviathan can swim a league.

Puck. I'll put a girdle round about the earth In forty minutes. Exit Puck.

Having once this juice, Obe. I'll watch Titania when she is asleep. And drop the liquor of it in her eyes: The next thing then she waking looks upon,-Be it on lion, bear, or wolf, or hull, On meddling monkey, or on busy ape,-She shall pursue it with the soul of love, And ere I take this charm off from her sight, As I can take it with another herb, I'll make her render up her page to me. But who comes here? I am invisible; And I will overhear their conference.

Enter DEMETRIUS, HELENA following him.

Dem. I love thee not, therefore pursue me not.

Where is Lysander and fair Hermia? The one I'll slay, the other slayeth me. Thou told'st me they were stol'n into this wood, And here am I, and wood within this wood, Because I cannot meet with Hermia.

Hence, get thee gone, and follow me no more.

Hel. You draw me, you hard-hearted adamant:

But yet you draw not iron, for my heart Is true as steel. Leave you your power to draw, And I shall have no power to follow you.

Dem. Do I entice you? Do I speak you fair? Or, rather, do I not in plainest truth Tell you I do not, nor I cannot love you?

Hel. And even for that do I love you the more. I am your spaniel; and, Demetrius, The more you beat me, I will fawn on you: Use me hut as your spaniel, spurn me, strike me, Neglect me, lose me; only give me leave, Unworthy as I am, to follow you.

And yet a place of high respect with me,-Than to he used as you use your dog?

Dem. Tempt not too much the hatred of my spirit:

For I am sick when I do look on thee. Hel. I am sick when I look not on jou. Dem. You do impeach your modesty too much. To leave the city, and commit yourself Into the hands of one that loves you not; To trust the opportunity of night, And the ill counsel of a desert place, With the rich worth of your virginity.

Hel. Your virtue is my privilege for that. It is not night when I do see your face, Therefore I think I am not in the night: Nor doth this wood lack worlds of company; For you, in my respect, are all the world: Then how can it be said I am alone When all the world is here to look on me?

Dem. I'll run from thee, and hide me in the brakes,

And leave thee to the mercy of wild beasts. Hel. The wildest hath not such a heart as you. Run when you will, the story shall be chang'd; Apollo flies, and Daphne holds the chase The dove pursues the griffin; the mild hind Makes speed to catch the tiger, -- bootless speed, When cowardice pursues and valour flies.

Dem. I will not stay thy questions; let me go: Or, if thou follow me, do not believe

But I shall do thee mischief in the wood. Hel. Ay, in the temple, in the town, the field, You do me mischief. Fie, Demetrius! Your wrongs do set a scandal on my sex: We cannot fight for love as men may do: We should be woo'd, and were not made to woo. Pli follow thee, and make a heaven of hell, To die upon the hand I love so well.

Exeunt DEM. and HEL. Obe. Fare thee well, nymph: ere he do leave this grove,

Thou shalt fly him, and he shall seek thy love.—

Re-enter Puck.

Hast thou the flower there? Welcome, wanderer. Puck. Ay, there it is.

I pray thee, give it me. Obe. I know a bank whereon the wild thyme hlows, Where ox-lips and the nodding violet grows: Quite over-canopied with lush woodbine, With sweet musk roses, and with eglantine: There sleeps Titania sometime of the night Lulled in these flowers with dances and delight; And there the snake throws her enamell'd skin, Weed wide enough to wrap a fairy in: And with the juice of this I'll streak her eyes, And make her full of hateful fantasies. Take thou some of it, and seek through this grove, A sweet Athenian lady is in love With a disdeinful youth: anoint his eyes; But do it when the next thing he espice May he the lady: thou shalt know the man By the Athenian garments he hath on. Effect it with some care, that he may prove More fond on her than she upon her love: And look thou meet me ere the first cock crow.

Puck. Fear not, my lord, your servant shall Exeunt.

do so.

Claud. In most profound earnest; and I'll warrant you for the love of Beatrice.

D. Pedro. And hath challenged thee?

Claud. Most sincerely.

D. Pedro. What a pretty thing man is when he goes in his doublet and hose, and leaves off

Claud. He is then a giant to an ape: but then is an ape a doctor to such a man.

D. Pedro. But, soft, you, let be; pluck up, my heart, and be sad! Did he not say my brother was fled?

Enter Dogberry, Verges, and the Watch, with CONRADE and BORACHIO.

Dogb. Come, you, sir; if justice cannot tame you, she shall ne'er weigh more reasons in her balance; nay, an you be a cursing hypocrite once, you must be looked to.

D. Pedro. How now! two of my brother's men boundl Borachio one!

Claud. Hearken after their offence, my lord. D. Pedro. Officers, what offence hath these men done?

Dogb. Marry, sir, they have committed false report: moreover, they have spoken untruths; secondarily, they are slanders; sixth and lastly, they have belied a lady; thirdly, they have i verified unjust things: and, to conclude, they ! are lying knaves.

D. Pedro. First, I ask thee what they have done; thirdly, I ask thee what's their offence; sixth and lastly, why they are committed; and, to conclude, what you lay to their charge?

Claud. Rightly reasoned, and in his own division; and, by my troth, there's one meaning well suited.

D. Pedro. Whom have you offended, masters, that you are thus bound to your answer? this learned constable is too cunning to be understood. What's your offence?

Bora. Sweet prince, let me go no further to mine answer; do your hear me, and let this count kill me. I have deceived even your very eyes: what your wisdoms could not discover these shallow fools have brought to light; who, in the night, overheard me confessing to this man how Don John your brother incensed me to slander the Lady Hero; how you were brought into the orchard, and saw me court Margaret in Hero's garments; how you disgraced her, when you should marry her: my villainy they have upon record; which I had rather seal with my death than repeat over to my The lady is dead upon mine and my master's false accusation; and, briefly, I desire nothing but the reward of a villain.

D. Pedro. Runs not this speech like iron through your blood? [it.

Claud. I have drunk poison whiles he uttered D. Pedro. But did my brother set thee on to this?

Bora. Yea, and paid me richly for the practice of it.

D. Pedro. He is compos'd and fram'd of treachery:

Dogb. Come, bring away the plaintiffs; by this time our sexton hath reformed Signior Leonato of the matter: and, masters, do not forget to specify, when time and place shall serve, that I am an ass.

Verg. Here, here comes master Signior Leonato and the sexton too.

Re-enter LEONATO and ANTONIO, with the SEXTON.

Leon. Which is the villain? let me see his eyes. That when I note another man like him

I may avoid him: which of these is he? Bora. If you would know your wronger, look on me.

Leon. Art thou the slave that with thy breath hast kill'd

Mine innocent child?

Bora. Yea, even I alone. Leon. No, not so, villain; thou bely'st thyself: Here stand a pair of honourable men-A third is fied—that had a hand in it.-I thank you, princes, for my daughter's death; Record it with your high and worthy deeds; 'Twas bravely done, if you bethink you of it.

Claud. I know not how to pray your patience, Yet I must speak. Choose your revenge yourself;

Impose me to what penance your invention Can lay upon my sin: yet sinned I not But in mistaking.

D. Pedro. By my soul, nor I: And yet, to satisfy this good old man, I would hend under any heavy weight That he'll enjoin me to.

Lcon. I cannot bid you bid my daughter live-That were impossible; but, I pray you noth, Possess the people in Messina here How innocent she died: and, if your love Can labour aught in sad invention, Hang her an epitaph upon her tomb, And sing it to her hones; sing it tonight:— To-morrow morning come you to my house; And since you could not be my son-in-law, Be yet my nephew: my brother hath a daughter, Almost the copy of my child that's dead. And she alone is heir to both of us: Give her the right you should have given her cousin,

And so dies my revenge.

O, noble sir, Your overkindness doth wring tears from me! I do embrace your offer; and dispose For henceforth of poor Claudio.

Leon. To-morrow, then, I will expect your coming:

To-night I take my leave.—This naughty man Shall face to face be brought to Margaret, Who, I believe, was pack'd in all this wrong, Hir'd to it by your brother.

Вота. No, by my soul, she was not; Nor knew not what she did when she spoke to me:

But always hath heen just and virtuous In anything that I do know by her.

Dogb. Moreover, slr, - Which, indeed, is not And fled he is upon this villainy. [appear | under white and mack,—uns planting 2011]

Claud. Sweet Hero! now thy image doth offender, did call me ass: I beseech you, let it he rare semblance that I lov'd it first. | he remembered in his punishment. And also,

Not Hermia but Helena I love: Who will not change a raven for a dove? The will of man is by his reason sway'd; And reason says you are the worthier maid. Things growing are not ripe until their season; So I, being young, till now ripe not to reason; And touching now the point of human skill, Reason becomes the marshal to my will, And leads me to your eyes, where I o'erlook Love's stories, written in love's richest book.

Hel. Wherefore was I to this keen mockery born?

When at your hands did I deserve this scorn? Is't not enough, is't not enough, young man, That I did never, no, nor never can Deserve a sweet look from Demetrius' eye, But you must flout my insufficiency? Good troth, you do me wrong,—good sooth, you do—

In such disdainful manner me to woo. But fare you well: perforce I must confess. I thought you lord of more true gentleness. O, that a lady of one man refus'd, Should of another therefore be abus'd! [Exit.

Lys. She sees not Hermia:-Hermia, sleep

For, as a surfeit of the sweetest things The deepest loathing to the stomach brings; Or, as the heresies that men do leave Are hated most of those they did deceive; So thou, my surfeit and my heresy, Of all be hated, and the most of me! Alack, where are you? speak, an if you hear; Speak, of all loves! I swoon almost with fear. No?—then I will perceive you are not nigh: Either death or you I'll find immediately. Exit.

ACT III.

The Queen of Fairies Scene I .- The Wood. lying asleep.

Enter Quince, Snug, Bottom, Plute, Shout and Starveling.

Bot. Are we well met?

Quin. Pat, pat; and here is a marvellous convenient place for our rehearsal. This green plot shall be our stage, this hawthorn brake our tiring-house; and we will do it in action, as we will do it before the duke.

Bot. Peter Quince,

Quin. What say'st thou, bally Bottom? Bot. There are things in this comedy of Pyramus and Thisby that will never please. First, so every one according to his cue. Pyramus must draw a sword to kill himself; which the ladies cannot abide. How answer you that?

Snout. By'r lakin, a parlous fear.

Star. I believe you must leave the killing out, when all is done.

Bot. Not a whit: I have a device to make all Write me a prologue; and let the prologue seem to say, we will do no harm with our swords, and that Pyramus is not killed indeed: and for the more better assurance, tell them that I Pyramus am not Pyramus, but Bottom the weaver: this will put them out of fear.

Quin. Well, we will have such a prologue: and it shall be written in eigh and six.

Bot. No, make it two more; let it be written in eight and eight. (lion?

Snout. Will not the ladies be afeared of the Star. I fear it, I promise you.

Bot. Masters, you ought to consider with yourselves: to bring in, God shield us! a lion among ladies is a most dreadful thing: for there is not a more fearful wild-fowl than your lies living; and we ought to look to it.

Snout. Therefore another prologue must tell he is not a lion.

Bot. Nay, you must name his name, and half his face must be seen through the lion's neck; and he himself must speak through, saying thus, or to the same defect,-"Ladies," or "Fair Ladies l I would wish you, or, I would request you, or, I would entreat you, not to fear, not to tremble; my life for yours. If you think I come hither as a lion, it were pity of my life. No, I am no such thing; I am a man as other men are:"—and, there, indeed, let him name his name, and tell them plainly he is Soug the Quin. Well, it shall be so. But there is two hard things; that is, to bring the moonlight into a chamber: for, you know, Pyramus and Thisby meet by moonlight.

Snug. Doth the moon shine that night we play our play?

Bot. A calendar, a calendar! look in the almanack; find out moonshine, find out moonshine.

Bot. Why, then you may leave a casement of the great chamber-window, where we play, open; and the moon may shine in at the casement.

Quin. Ay; or else one must come in with a bush of thorns and a lantern, and say he comes to disfigure or to present the person of moon-Then there is another thing: we must have a wall in the great chamber; for Pyramus and Thisby, says the story, did talk through the Snug. You never can bring in a wall.—What say you, Bottom?

Bot. Some man or other must present wall: and let him have some plaster, or some loam, or some rough-cast about him, to signify wall; or let him hold his fingers thus, and through that cranny shall Pyramus and Thisby whisper.

Quin. If that may be, then all is well. Come, sit down, every mother's son, and rehearse your Pyramus, you begin: when you have parts. spoken your speech, enter into that brake; and Scene III .- The inside of a Church.

Enter Don PEDRO, CLAUDIO, and Attendants with music and tapers.

Claud. Is this the monument of Leonato?
Atten. It is, my lord. Claud. [reads from a scroll.]

Done to death by slanderous tongues Was the Hero that here lies: Death in guerdon of her wrongs, Gives her fame which never dies: So the life, that died with shame, Lives in death with glorious fame. Hang thou there upon the tomb, [effixing it. Praising her when I am dumb.—

Scene IV .- A Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Leonato, Antonio, Benedick, Beat-RICE, MARGARET, URSULA, FRIAR, and HERO.

Friar. Did I not tell you she was innocent? Leon. So are the prince and Claudio, who accus'd her

Upon the error that you heard dehated: But Margaret was in some fault for this. Although against her will, as it appears In the true course of all the question.

Ant. Well, I am glad that all things sort so well.

Bene. And so am I, being else by faith enforc'd To call young Claudio to a reckoning for it.

Leon. Well, daughter, and you gentlewomen all,

Withdraw into a chamber by yourselves; And when I send for you, come hither mask'd: The prince and Claudio promis'd by this hour Tn visit me.—You know your office, brother; You must be father to your hrother's daughter, And give her to young Claudio.

Leon. My heart is with your liking. Friat. And my help.-

Here come the prince and Claudio. Enter Don PEDRO and CLAUDIO, with Attend-

D. Pedro. Good morrow to this fair assembly. Leon. Good morrow, prince; good morrow, Claudio: We here attend you. Are you yet determin'd To-day to marry with my brother's daughter? Claud. I lihold my mind were she an Ethiope. Leon. Call her forth, brother; here's the friar (Exit ANTONIO. ready.

Scene II.—Another part of the Wood.

Enter OBERON.

Obe. I wonder if Titania be awak'd; Then what it was that next came in her eye, Which she must dote on in extremity.

Enter Puck.

Here comes my messenger.—How now, mad spirit?

What night-rule now about this haunted grove? Puck. My mistress with a monster is in love. Near to her close and consecrated bower, While she was in her dull and sleeping hour, A crew of patches, rude mechanicals, That work for bread upon Athenian stalls, Were met together to rehearse a play Intended for great Theseus' nuptial day. The shallowest thickskin of that barren sort Who Pyramus presented in their sport, Forsook his scene and enter'd in a brake; When I did him at this advantage take, An ass's nowl I fixed on his head; Anon, his Thisbe must be answered, spy, And forth my mimic comes. When they him As wild geese that the creeping fowler eye, Or russet-pated choughs, many in sort, Rising and cawing at the gun's report, Sever themselves, and madly sweep the sky, So at his sight away his fellows fly: And at our stamp here o'er and o'er oue falls; He murder cries, and help from Athens calls. Their sense, thus weak, lost with their fears, thus strong,

Made senseless things begin to do them wrong: For briers and thorns at their apparel snatch: Some sleeves, some hats: from yielders all;

things catch.

I led them on in this distracted fear, And left sweet Pyramus translated there: When in that moment,—so it came to pass,-Titenia wak'd, and straightway lov'd an ass.

Obe. This falls out better than I could devise. But hast thou yet latch'd the Athenian's eyes With the love-juice, as I did bid thee do?

Puck. I took him sleeping,—that is finish'd too,

And the Athenian woman by his side; That, when he wak'd, of force she must be ey'd.

Enter Demetrius and Hermia.

Obe. Stand close; this is the same Athenian. | And Helena of Athens look thou find:

Puck. This is the woman, but not this the man. So? Dem. O, why rebuke you him that loves you Lay breath so bitter on your bitter foe.

Her. Now I but chide, but I should use thee worse;

For thou, I fear, hast given me cause to curse. If thou hast slain Lysander in his sleep. Being o'er shoes in blood, plunge in the deep. And kill me too.

The sun was not so true unto the day As he to me: would he have stol'n away From sleeping Hermia? I'll believe as soon This whole earth may be bor'd; and that the moon

May through the centre creep, and so displease Her brother's noontide with the antipodes. It cannot be but thou hast murder'd him;

So should a murderer look; so dead, so grim. Dem. So should the murder'd look; and so should I,

Pierc'd through the heart with your stern cruelty:

Yet you, the murderer, look as bright, as clear, As yonder Venus in her glimmering sphere. Her. What's this to my Lysander? where Ah, good Demetrius, wilt thou give him me? Dem. I had rather give his carcass to my hounds.

Her. Out, dog! out, curl thou driv'st me past the bounds Of maiden's patience. Hast thou slain him, Henceforth be never number'd among men! Oh! once tell true, tell true, even for my sake; Durst thou have look'd upon him, being awake, And hast thou kill'd him sleeping? O brave touch!

Could not a worm, an adder, do so much? An adder did it; for with doubler tongue Than thine, thou serpent, never adder stung. Dem. You spend your passion on a mispris'd mood: I am not guilty of Lysander's blood; Nor is he dead, for aught that I can tell.

Her. I pray thee, tell me, then, that he is well. Dem. An if I could, what should I get therefore?

Het. A privilege never to see me more.-See me no more whether he be dead or no.

Dem. There is no following her in this fierce

Here, therefore, for awhile I will remain. So sorrow's heaviness doth heavier grow For debt that bankrupt sleep doth sorrow owe; Which now in some light measure it will pay, If for his tender here I make some stay.

[Lies down. Obe. What hast thou done? thou hast missight: taken quite, And laid the love-juice on some true-love's Of thy misprision must perforce ensue Some true-love turn'd, and not a false turn'd [holding troth, true. Puck. Then fate o'er-rules, that, one man A million fail, confounding oath on oath. Obe. About the wood go, swifter than the

ACT I.

SCENE I.—ATHENS. A Room in the Palace of THESEUS.

Enter THESEUS, HIPPOLYTA, PHILOSTRATE, and Attendants.

The. Now, fair Hippolyta, our nuptial hour Draws on apace; four happy days bring in Another moon: but, oh, methinks, how slow This old moon wanes! she lingers my desires, Like to a step-dame or a dowager, Long withering out a young man's revenue.

Hip. Four days will quickly steep themselves in nights:

And then the moon, like to a sliver bow
New bent in heaven, shall behold the night
Of our solemnities.
The.
Go, Philostrate,

Four nights will quickly dream away the time; .

Stir up the Athenian youth to merriments;
Awake the pert and nimble spirit of mirth;
Turn melancholy forth to funerals—
The pale companion is not for our pomp.—
[Exil PHILOSTRATE.

Hippolyta, I woo'd thee with my sword, And won thy love doing thee injuries; But I will wed thee in another key, With pomp with triumph, and with revelling. Two of the first, like coats in heraldry,
Due hut to one, and crowned with one crest.
And will you rent our ancient love asunder,
To join with men in scorning your poor friend?
It is not friendly, 'tis not maidenly:
Our sex, as well as I, may chide you for it,
Though I alone do feel the injury.

Her. I am amazed at your passionate words: I scorn you not; it seems that you scorn me.

Hel. Have you not sent Lysander, as in scorn, To follow me, and praise my eyes and face? And made your other love, Demetrius,— Who even but now did spurn me with his foot,— To call me goddess, nymph, divine, and rare, Precious, celestial? Wherefore speaks he this To her he hates? and wherefore doth Lysander Deny your love, so rich within his soul, And tender me, forsooth, affection, But hy your setting on, by your consent? What though I he not so in grace as you, So hung upon with love, so fortunate; But miserahle most, to love unlov'd? This you should pity, rather than despise.

Her. I understand not what you mean by this.

Hel. Ay, do persever, counterfeit sad looks, Make mows upon me when I turn my hack; Wink at each other; hold the sweet jest up: This sport, well carried, shall be chronicled. If you have any pity, grace, or manners, You would not make me such an argument. But, fare ye well: 'tis partly mine own fault; Which death, or ahsence, soon shall remedy.

Lys. Stay, gentle Helena; hear my excuse; My love, my life, my soul, fair Helena!

Hel. O excellent!

Her. Sweet, do not scorn her so.
Dem. If she cannot entreat, I can compel.
Lys. Thou canst compel no more than she entreat;

Thy threats have no more strength than her weak prayers.—

Helen, I love thee; by my life I do; I swear by that which I will lose for thee To prove him false that says I love thee not. Dem. I say I love thee more than he can do. Lys. If thou say so, withdraw, and prove it bem. Quick, come,—

Her. Lysander, whereto tends all this?

Lys. Away, you Ethiope!

Dem. No, no, sir:—he will Seem to break loose; take on as you would follow:

But yet come not. You are a tame man; go!

Lys. Hang off, thou cat, thou hurr: vile thing, let loose,

Or I will shake thee from me like a serpent.

Her. Why are you grown so rude? what change is this,

Sweet love?

Lys. Thy love? out, tawny Tartar, out!
Out, loath'd medicine! hated potion, hence!
Her. Do you not jest?

Hel. Yes, 'sooth; and so do you.

Lys. Demetrius, I will keep my word with thee.

Dem. I would I had your bond; for I perceive A weak hond holds you; I'll not trust your word. Lys. What! should I hurt her, strike her, kill her dead?

Although I hate her I'll not harm her so.

Her. What! can you do me greater harm than hate? | lloye?

Hate mel wherefore? O mel what news, my Am not I Hermia? Are not you Lysander? I am as fair now as I was erewhile. [left me: Since night you lov'd me; yet since night you Why, then, you left me.—O, the gods forbid!—In earnest, shall I say?

Lys. Ay, hy my life;
And nover did desire to see thee more.
Therefore he out of hope, of question, doubt,
Be certain, nothing truer; 'tis no jest
That I do hate thee and love Helena.

Her. O me! you juggler! you cankerhlossom! [night,
You thief of love! What! have you come hy
And stol'n my love's heart from him?

Hel. Fine, I' faith!
Have you no modesty, no maiden shame,
No touch of bashfulness? What! will you tear
Impatient answers from my gentle tongue?
Fie, fie! you counterfeit, you puppet, you!

Her. Puppet! why so? Ay, that way goes the game.

Now I perceive that she hath made compare Between our statures; she hath urg'd her height: And with her personage, her tall personage, Her height, forsooth, she hath prevail'd with him.—

And are you grown so high in his esteem Because I am so dwarfish and so low? How low am I, thou painted maypole? speak; How low am I? I am not yet so low

But that my nails can reach unto thine eyes.

Hel. I pray you, though you mock me, gentlemen,

Let her not hurt me. I was never curst;
I have no gift at all in shrewishness;
I am a right maid for my cowardice;
Let her not strike me. You perhaps may think Because she's something lower than myself,
That I can match her.

Her. Lower! hark, again.
I evermore did love you, Hermia;
Did ever keep your counsels; never wrong'd you;
Save that, in love unto Demetrius,
I told him of your stealth unto this wood:
He follow'd you; for love I follow'd him;
But he hath chid me hence, and threaten'd me
To strike me, spurn me, nay, to kill me too:
And now, so you will let me quiet go,
To Athens will I bear my folly hack,
And follow you no farther. Let me go:
You see how simple and how fond I am.

Her. Why, get you gone: who is't that hinders you?

Hel. A foolish heart that I leave here hehind.
Her. What! with Lysander?_____

Hel. With Demetrius. Lys. Be not afraid: she shall not harm thee,

Helena.

Dem. No, sir, she shall not, though you take her part. [shrewd: Hel. O, when she's angry, she is keen and he was a viven when she went to school;

She was a vixen when she went to school; And, though she he but little, she is fierce.

Lus. Or, if there were a sympathy in choice, War, death, or sickness, did lay siege to it, Making it momentary as a sound, Swift as a shadow, short as any dream; Brief as the lightning in the collied night That, in a spleen, unfolds both heaven and earth, And ere a man hath power to say, Behold! The jaws of darkness do devour it up: So guick bright things come to confusion.

Her. If, then, true lovers have heen ever cross'd.

It stands as an edict in destiny: Then let us teach our trial patience, Because it is a customary cross; sighs. As due to love as thoughts, and dreams, and Wishes, and tears, poor fancy's followers.

Lys. A good persuasion; therefore, hear me,

Hermia.

I have a widow aunt, a dowager Of great revenue, and she hath no child: From Athensis her house remote seven leagues; And she respects me as her only son. There, gentle Hermia, may I marry thee; And to that place the sharp Athenian law Cannot pursue us. If thou lov'st me, then, Steal forth thy father's house to-morrow night; And in the wood a league without the town, Where I did meet ee once with Helena, To do observance to a morn of May, There will I stay for thee.

My good Lysanderl I swear to thee by Cupid's strongest bow, By his best arrow with the golden head, By the simplicity of Venus's doves, By that which knitteth souls and prospers loves, And by that fire which hurn'd the Carthage queen, When the false Trojan under sail was seen, By all the vows that ever men have hroke, In number more than ever woman spoke, In that same place thou hast appointed me, To-morrow truly will I meet with thee.

Lys. Keep promise, love. Look, here comes

Helena.

Lysander and myself will fly this place.-Before the time I did Lysander see, Seem'd Athens like a paradise to me: O, then, what graces in my love do dwell, That he hath turn'd a heaven unto hell!

Lys. Helen, to you our minds we will unfold: To-morrow night, when Phoebe doth behold Her silver visage in the watery glass, Decking with liquid pearl the bladed grass,-A time that lovers' flights doth still conceal,-Through Athens' gates have we devis'd to steal.

Her. And in the wood where often you and I Upon faint primrose beds were wont to lie, Emptying our bosoms of their counsel sweet, There my Lysander and myself shall meet: And thence from Athens turn away our eyes, To seek new friends and stranger companies. Farewell, sweet playfellow: pray thou for us, And good luck grant thee thy Demetrius! Keep word, Lysander: we must starve our sight From lovers' food, till morrow deep midnight. Lys. I will, my Hermia. Exit HERMIA.

Helena adieu: As yon on him, Demetrius dote on you! Exit LYS.

Hel. How happy some o'er other some can bel Through Athens I am thought as fair as she. But what of that? Demetrius thinks not so: He will not know what all but he do know. And as he errs, doting on Hermia's eyes. So I, admiring of his qualities. Things base and vile, holding no quantity, Love can transpose to form and dignity. Love looks not with the eyes, but with the mind; And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted hlind. Nor hath love's mind of any judgment taste; Wings and no eyes figure unheedy haste: And therefore is love said to be a child, Because in choice he is so oft heguil'd. As waggish boys in game themselves forswear, So the hoy Love is perjur'd everywhere: For ere Demetrins look'd on Hermia's eyne, He hail'd down oaths that he was only mine; And when this hail some heat from Hermia felt, So he dissolv'd, and showers of oaths did melt. I will go tell him of fair Hermia's flight; Then to the wood will he to-morrow night

SCENE I .- The Wood.

Enter TITANIA and BOTTOM, Fairies attending; OBERON behind, unseen.

Tita. Come, sit thee down upon this flowery bed,

While I thy amiable cheeks do coy.

And stick musk-roses in thy sleek smooth head, And kiss thy fair large ears, my gentle joy. Bot. Where's Peasblossom?

Peas. Ready.

Bot. Scratch my head, Peasblossom. Where's Monsieur Cobweb?

Cob. Ready.

Bot. Monsieur Cobweb; good monsieur, get your weapons in your hand and kill me a redhipped humble-bee on the top of a thistle; and, good monsieur, bring me the honey-bag. Do not fret yourself too much in the action, monsieur; and, good monsieur, have a care the honey-bag break not; I would be loath to have you over-flown with a honey-bag, signior. Where's Monsieur Mustardseed?

Must. Ready. [seed. Bot. Give me your neif, Monsieur Mustard- O, how mine eyes do loathe his visage now! Pray you, leave your courtesy, good monsieur.

Must. What's your will?

Bot. Nothing, good monsieur, but to help Cavelero Cobweb to scratch. I must to the barber's monsieur; for methinks I am marvellous hairy about the face: and I am such a tender ass, if my hair do but tickle me I must scratch.

Tita. What, wilt thou hear some music, my sweet love?

Bot. I have a reasonable good ear in music; let us have the tongs and the bones.

Tita. Or say, sweet love, what thou desir'st to Bot. Truly, a peck of provender; I could munch your good dry oats. Metbinks I have a great desire to a bottle of hay: good hay, sweet hay, hath no fellow.

OBERON advances. Enter PUCK.

Obe. Welcome, good Robin. Seest thou this: sweet sight?

Her dotage now I do begin to pity. For, meeting her of late behind the wood, Seeking sweet savours for this hateful fool, I did upbraid her, and fall out with her: For she his hairy temples then had rounded With coronet of fresh and fragrant flowers; And that same dew, which sometime on the buds Was wont to swell like round and orient pearls, Stood now within the pretty flow'rets' eyes, Like tears that did their own disgrace bewail. When I had, at my pleasure, taunted her, And she, in mild terms, begg'd my patience, I then did ask of her her changeling child; Which straight she gave me, and her fairy sent To bear him to my bower in fairy-land. And now I have the boy, I will undo This hateful imperfection of her eyes. And, gentle Puck, take this transformed scalp From off the head of this Athenian swain: That he awaking when the other do,

And think no more of this night's accidents But as the fierce vexation of a dream. But first I will release the fairy queen. Be as thou wast wont to be;

Touching her eyes with an herb. See as thou wast wont to see: Dian's bud o'er Cupid's flower Hath such force and blessed power.

Now, my Titania; wake you, my sweet queen. Tita. My Oberon! what visions have I seen!

Methought I was enamour'd of an ass. Obe. There lies your love.

May all to Athens back again repair,

How came these things to pass? Obe. Silence awhile.-Robin, take off this head.

But they do square; that all their elves, for fear. Creep into acorn cups, and hide them there.

Fai. Either I mistake your shape and making quite, Or else you are that shrewd and knavish sprite Call'd Rohin Goodfellow: are you not he That frights the maidens of the villagery: Skim milk, and sometimes lahour in the quern, And hootless make the hreathless housewife

And sometime make the drink to bear no barm; Misleadnight-wanderers, laughing at their harm? Those that Hohgohlin call you, and sweet Puck, You do their work, and they shall have good luck: Are not you he?

Thou speak'st aright: Puck. I am that merry wanderer of the night. I jest to Oberon, and make him smile, When I a fat and hean-fed horse heguile, Neighing in likeness of a filly foal: And sometime lurk I in a gossip's howl, In very likeness of a roasted crah; And, when she drinks, against her lips I hoh. And on her wither'd dew-lap pour the ale. The wisest aunt, telling the saddest tale, Sometime for three-foot stool mistaketh me: Then slip I from her hum, down topples she, And tailor cries, and falls into a cough; And then the whole quire hold their hips and loffe,

And waxen in their mirth, and neeze, and swear A merrier hour was never wasted there.-But room, fairy, here comes Oheron.

Fai. And here my mistress.-Would that he were gone!

SCENE II.

Enter OBERON at one door, with his Train, and TITANIA, at another, with hers.

Obe. Ill met hy moonlight, proud Titania. Tita. What, jealous Oberon! Fairies, skip hence;

I have forsworn his hed and company.

Obe. Tarry, rash wanton: am not I thy lord? Tila. Then I must he thy lady: hut I know When thou hast stol'n away from fairy-land, And in the shape of Corin sat all day, Playing on pipes of corn, and versing love To amorous Phillida. Why art thou here, Come from the farthest steep of India? But that, forsooth, the houncing Amazon, Your huskin'd mistress and your warrior love, To theseus must he wedded; and you come To give their hed joy and prosperity.

Obe. How can'st thou thus, for shame,
Titania,

Glance at my eredit with Hippolyta. Knowing I know thy love to Theseus? Didst thou not lead him through the glimmering night. From Perigenia, whom he ravish'd? And make him with fair Aegle hreak his faith,

With Ariadne and Antiopa?

Tita. These are the forgeries of jealousy: And never, since the middle summer's spring, Met we on hill, in dale, forest, or mead, By paved fountain, or hy rushy brook, Or on the heached margent of the sea, To dance our ringlets to the whistling wind.

But with thy hrawls thou hast disturb'd our

Therefore the winds, piping to us in vain, As in revenge, have suck'd up from the sea Contagious fogs; which, falling in the land, Have every pelting river made so proud That they have overborne their continents: The ox hath therefore stretch'd his yoke in vain, The ploughman lost his sweat; and the green

Hath rotted ere his youth attain'd a beard: The fold stands empty in the drowned field, And crows are fatted with the murrain flock: The nine men's morris is fill'd up with mud; And the quaint mazes in the wanton green, For lack of tread, are undistinguishable: The human mortals want their winter here; No night is now with hymn or carol blest:-Therefore the moon, the governess of floods, Pale in her anger, washes all the air, That rheumatic diseases do ahound: And through this distemperature we see The seasons alter: hoary-headed frosts Fall in the fresh lap of the crimson rose; And on old Hyem's chin and icy crown An odorous chaplet of sweet summer huds Is, as in mockery, set: the spring, the summer, The childing autumn, angry winter, change Their wonted liveries; and the maz'd world, By their increase, now knows not which is which:

And this same progeny of evils comes From our dehate, from our dissension: We are their parents and original.

Obe. Do you amend it, then: it lies in you: Why should Titania cross her Oheron? I do hut heg a little changeling hoy To he my henchman.

Set your heart at rest; Tita. The fairy-land huys not the child of me. His mother was a vot'ress of my order: And, in the spiced Indian air, hy night, Full often hath she gossip'd hy my side; And sat with me on Neptune's yellow sands, Marking the emharked traders on the flood When we have laugh'd to see the sails conceive, And grow big-hellied with the wanton wind: Which she, with pretty and with swimming gait, Following,-her womh then rich with my young squire, Would imitate; and sail upon the land, To fetch me trifles, and return again, As from a voyage, rich with merchandise. But she, heing mortal, of that hoy did die; And for her sake I do rear up her hoy:

And for her sake I will not part with him.

Obe. How long within this wood intend you day.

Tita. Perchance till after Theseus' wedding-If you will patiently dance in our round, And see our moonlight revels, go with us; If not, shun me, and I will spare your haunts.

Obe. Give me that hoy and I will go with thee.

Tita. Not for thy fairy kingdom. Fairies, away:

We shall chide downright if I longer stay. Exit TITANIA and her Train. Obe. Well, go thy way: thou shalt not from Lords and Attendants.

Hip. 'Tis strange, my Theseus, that these lovers speak of.

The. More strange than true. I never may

These antique-fahles, nor these fairy toys. Lovers and madmen have such seething hrains Such shaping fantasies, that apprehend More than cool reason ever comprehends. The lunatic, the lover, and the poet Are of imagination all compact: One sees more devils than vast hell can hold; That is the madman: the lover, all as frantic, Sees Helen's heauty in a hrow of Egypt:

The poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling, Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth to heaven,

And, as imagination bodies forth The forms of things unknown, the poet's pen Turns them to shapes, and gives to airy nothing A local habitation and a name. Such tricks hath strong imagination, That, if it would but apprehend some joy, It comprehends some hringer of that joy;

Or in the night, imagining some fear, How easy is a bush supposed a bear? Hip. But all the story of the night told over, And all their minds transfigur'd so together, More witnesseth than fancy's images,

And grows to something of groat constancy; But, howsoever, strange and admirable.

Enter Lysander, Demetrius, Hermia, and HELENA.

The. Here come the lovers, full of joy and mirth. -Joy, gentle friends! joy and fresh days of love Accompany your hearts!

More than to usl Lys. Wait on your royal walks, your board, your bed! The. Come now; what masques, what dances shall we have,

To wear away this long age of three hours Between our after-supper and hed-time? Where is our usual manager of mirth?

They sleep.

Scene III .- Another part of the Wood. Enter TITANIA, with her Train.

Tita. Come, now, a roundel and a fairy song; Then, for the third part of a minute, hence; Some to kill cankers in the musk-rose buds; Some war with rere-mice for their leathern wings, To make my small elves coats; and some keep wonders back The clamorous owl, that nightly hoots and At our quaint spirits. Sing me now asleep; Then to your offices, and let me rest.

SONG.

I Fai. You spotted snakes, with double tongue Thorny hedgehogs, be not seen; Newts and blind-worms do not wrong; Come not uear our fairy queen:

CHORUS.

Philomel, with melody,
Sing in our sweet lullaby:
Lulla, lulla, lullahy; lulla, lulla, lullaby:
Never harm, nor spell, nor charm,
Come our lovely lady nigb;
So, good-night, with lullaby;

II.

2 Fai. Weaving spiders, come not here; Hence, you long-legg'd spinners, hence; Beetles black, approach not near; Worm nor snail do no offence.

CHORUS.

Philomel, with melody, &c.

r Fai. Hence, away; now all is well: One, aloof, stand sentinel. [Exeunt Fairies. TITANIA sleeps.]

Enter OBERON.

Obe. What thou seest, when thou dost wake, Squeezes the flower on TITANIA's cyclids. Do it for thy true-love take; Love and languish for his sake; Be it ounce, or cat, or bear, Pard, or boar with hristled hair, In thy eye that shall appear When thou wak'st, it is thy dear; Wake when some vile thing is near. [Exit.

Enter LYSANDER and HERMIA.

Lys. Fair love, you faint with wandering in the wood

And, to speak troth, I have forgot our way; We'll rest us, Hermia, if you think it good, And tarry for the comfort of the day.

Her. Be it so, Lysander: find you out a hed, For I upon this bank will rest my head. Lys. One turf shall serve as pillow for ns both;

One heart, one bed, two bosoms, and one troth. Her. Nay, good Lysander; for my sake, my dear.

Lie farther off yet, do not lie so near. Lys. O, take the sense, sweet, of my innocence; Love takes the meaning in love's conference. I mean, that my heart unto yours is knit; So that but one heart we can make of it: Two bosoms interchained with an oath; So then two hosoms and a single troth. Then by your side no bed-room me deny; For lying so, Hermia, I do not lie.

Her. Lysander riddles very prettily:-Now much beshrew my manners and my pride If Hermis meant to say Lysander lied. But, gentle friend, for love and courtesy Lie farther off; in human modesty, Such separation as may well be said Becomes a virtuous bachelor and a maid: So far be distant; and, good night, sweet friend: Thy love ne'er alter till thy sweet life end! Lys. Amen, amen, to that fair prayer, say I; And then end life when I end loyalty! Here is my bed: Sleep give thee all his rest!

Her. With half that wish the wisher's eyes be Enter Puck.

pressed!

Puck. Through the forest have I come, But Athenian found I none, On whose eyes I might approve This flower's force in stirring love. Night and silencel who is here? Weeds of Athens he doth wear: This is he, my master said, Despised the Athenian maid; And here the maiden, sleeping sound, On the dank and dirty ground. Pretty soul! she durst not lie Near this lack-love, this kill-courtesy. Churl, upon thy eyes I throw All the power this charm doth owe; When thon wak'st let love forbid Sleep his seat on thy eyelid: So awake when I am gone; For I must now to Oberon. Exit.

Enter DEMETRIUS and HELENA, running.

Hel. Stay, though thou kill me, sweet Demetrius.

Dem. I charge thee, hence, and do not haunt me thus.

Hel. O, wilt thon darkling leave me? do not so. Dem. Stay on thy peril; I alone will go.

Exil DEMETRIUS. Hel. O, I am out of breath in this fond chasel The more my prayer the lesser is my grace. Happy is Hermia, wheresoe'er she lies, For she hath blessed and attractive eyes. Howcamehereyessobright? Notwithsalttears: If so, my eyes are oftener wash'd than hers. No, no, I am as ngly as a bear; For heasts that meet me run away for fear: Therefore no marvel though Demetrius Do, as e monster, fly my presence thus. What wicked and dissembling glass of mine Mademecompare with Hermia's sphery cyne? But who is here?--Lysander! on the ground! Dead? or asleep? I see no blood, no wound. Lysander, if you live, good sir, awake.

Lys. And run through fire I will for thy sweet Waking. sake. Transparent Helena! Nature here shows art, That through thy bosom makes me see thy heart. Where is Demetrius? O, how fit a word Is that vile name to perish on my sword!

Hel. Do not say so, Lysander; say not so: What though he love your Hermia? Lord, what though?

Yet Hermis still loves you: then he content. Lys. Content with Hermia? No: I do repent The tedious minutes I with her have spent.

And Thishy, tarrying in mulherry shade,

His dagger drew, and died. For all the rest. Let Lion, Moonshine, Wall, and lovers twain At large discourse while here they do remain.

Exeunt PROL., THIS., LION, and MOON. The. I wonder if the lion he to speak,

Dem. No wonder, my lord: one lion may,

when many asses do.

Wall. In this same interlude it doth hefall That I, one Snout by name, present a wall: And such a wall as I would have you think That had in it a crannied hole or chink, Through which the lovers, Pyramus and Thishy, Did whisper often very secretly. This loam, this rough-cast, and this stone doth That I am the same wall; the truth is so: And this the cranny is, right and sinister, Through which the fearful lovers are to whisper. The. Would you desire lime and hair to speak hetter? Dem. It is the wittiest partition that ever I heard discourse, my lord.

- The. Pyramus draws near the wall: silence!

Enter PYRAMUS.

Pyr. O grim-look'd night! O night with hue so black!

O night, which ever art when day is not? O night, O night, alack, alack, alack,

I fear my Thisby's promise is forgot!-And thou, O wall, O sweet, O lovely wall,

That stand'st between her father's ground and mine:

Thou wall, O wall, O sweet and lovely wall, Show me thy chink, to hlink through with mine eyne.

[WALL holds up his fingers. Thanks, courteous wall: Jove shield thee well for this!

But what see I? No Thisby do I see.

O wicked wall, through whom I see no bliss; Curst be thy stones for thus deceiving me! The. The wall, methinks, being sensible, snould curse again.

Pyr. No, in truth, sir, he should not. Deceiving me in Thisby's cue: she is to enter now, and I am to spy her through the wall. You shall see it will fall pat as I told you.—Yonder she comes.

Enter THISBE.

This. O wall, full often hast thou heard my moans.

For parting my fair Pyramus and me: My cherry lips have often kiss'd thy stones: Thy stones with lime and hair knit up in thee. Pyr. I see a voice; now will I to the chink, To spy an I can hear my Thishy's face. Thisby!

This. My lovel thou art my love, I think. Pyr. Think what thou wilt, I am thy lover's grace:

And like Limander am I trusty still. This. And I like Helen, till the fates me kill. Pyr. Not Shafalus to Procrus was so true. This. As Shafalus to Procrus, I to you. Pyr. O, kiss me through the hole of this straightway?

This. 'Tide life, 'tide death, I come without

Wall. Thus have I, wall, my part discharged 80;

And, being done, thus wall away doth go. Exeunt WALL, PYR., and THIS.

The. Now is the mural down between the two neighbours.

Dem. No remedy, my lord, when walls are so wilful to hear without warning.

Hip. This is the silliest stuff that ever I heard. The. The hest in this kind are hut shadows: and the worst are no worse, if imagination amend them. not theirs.

Hip. It must be your imagination then, and The. If we imagine no worse of them than they of themselves, they may pass for excellent men. Here come two noble beasts in, a moon and a lion.

Enter Lion and Moonshine.

Lion. You, ladies, you, whose gentle hearts do fear

The smallest monstrous monse that creeps on May now, perchance, both quake and tremble here.

When lion rough in wildest rage doth roar. Then know that I, one Snug, the joiner, am A lion fell, nor else no lion's dam: For if I should as lion come in strife

Into this place, 'twere pity of my life. The. A very gentle beast, and of a good con-science. | e'er I saw.

Dem. The very hest at a beast, my lord, that Lys. This lion is a very for for his valour. The. True; and a goose for his discretion.

Dem. Not so, my lord; for his valour cannot carry his discretion; and the fox carries the goose

The. His discretion, I am sure, cannot carry his valour; for the goose carries not the for. It is well: leave it to his discretion, and let us listen to the moon.

Moon. This lantern doth the horned moon ihead.

Dem. He should have worn the horns on his The. He is no crescent, and his horns are invisible within the circumference.

Moon. This lantern doth the horned moon present;

Myself the man 'i the moon do seem to be. The. This is the greatest error of all the rest:

the man should be put into the lantern. How is it else the man i' the moon?

Dem. He dares not come there for the can-die: for, you see, it is already in snuff.

Hip. I am weary of this moon: would he would change! The. It appears, by his small light of discretion, that he is in the wane: hut yet, in courtesy, in all reason, we must stay the time.

Lys. Proceed, moon. Moon. All that I have to say, is to tell you that the lantern is the moon; I, the man in the moon; this thorn-bush, my thorn-bush; and vile wall.

This. I kiss the wall's hole, not your lips at all.

Pyr. Wilt thou at Ninny's tomb meet me lantern; for all these are in the moon. But, silence: here comes Thisbe.

So near the cradle of the fairy queen? What, a play toward! I'll he an auditor: An actor too, perhaps, if I see cause.

Quin. Speak, Pyramus.—Thishy, stand forth. Pyr. Thisby, the flowers of odious savours singet.

Ouin. Odours, odours.

-odours sovours sweet: Pyr.-So doth thy breath, my deorest Thisby dear. But hark, a voice! stay thou but here awhile, And by and by I will to thee appear. Exit.

Puck. A stranger Pyramus than e'er played here! Aside.—Exit.

This. Must I speak now?

Quin. Ay, marry, must you: for you must understand he goes hut to see a noise that he heard, and is to come again.

This. Most radiant Pyramus, most lily white of hue.

Of colour like the red rose on triumphantbrier, Most brisky juvenal, and eke most lovely Jew, As true as truest horse, that yet would never tire,

I'll meet thee, Pyramus, at Ninny's tomb. Quin. Ninus' tomb, man: why, you must not speak that yet: that you answer to Pyramus. You speak all your part at once, cues and all. Pyramus enter: your cue is past; it is, never tire.

Re-enter Puck, and Bottom, with an ass's head

This. O,—As true os truest horse, that yet would never tire.

Pyr. If I were foir, Thisby, I were only thine:-

Quin. O monstrous! O strange! we are haunted. Pray, masters! fly, masters!-Help! Exeunt Clowns.

Puck. I'll follow you; I'll lead you ahout a round, [through hrier;

Through hog, through hush, through hrake, Sometime a horse I'll be, sometime a hound,

A hog, a headless hear, sometime a fire; And neigh, and hark, and grunt, and roar, and hurn,

Like horse, hound, hog, hear, fire, at every turn. Exit.

Bot. Why do they run away? this is a knavery of them to make me afeared.

Re-enter SNOUT.

Snout. O Bottom, thou art hanged! what do I see on thee?

Bot. What do you see? you see an ass-head of your own, do you?

Re-enter OUNICE.

Quin. Bless thee, Bottom! hless thee! thou art translated. Exit.

Bot. I see their knavery; this is to make an ass of me; to fright me, if they could. But I will not stir from this place, do what they can: I will walk up and down here, and I will sing, that they shall hear I am not afraid. [Sings.

> The ousel-cock, so black of hue, With orange-tawny bill, The throstle with his note so true, The wren with little quill.

Tita. What angel wakes me from my flowery hed? Waking.

Bot. The finch, the sparrow, and the lark, The plain-song cuckoo gray, Whose note full many a man doth mark, And dares not answer nay; for, indeed, who would set his wit to so foolish a hird? who would give a hird the lie, though he cry cuckoo never so?

Tita. I pray thee, gentle mortal, sing again: Mine ear is much enamour'd of thy note. So is mine eye enthralled to thy shape; And thy fair virtue's force perforce doth move On the first view, fo say, to swear, I love thee. -Bot. Methinks, mistress, you should have little reason for that: and yet, to say the truth, reason and love keep little company together now-a-days: the more the pity that some honest neighbours will not make them friends. Nay, I can gleek upon occasion.

Tita. Thou art as wise as thou at a Bot. Not so, neither: hut if I had wit enough to serve to get out of this wood. I have enough to serve mine own turn. Tita. Out of this wood do not desire to go;

Thou shalt remain here whether thou wilt or no. I am a spirit of no common rate,-The summer still doth tend upon my state; And I do love thee: therefore, go with me. I'll give thee fairies to attend thee; And they shall fetch thee jewels from the deep, And sing, while thou on pressed flowers dost sleep: And I will purge thy mortal grossness so That thou shalt like an airy spirit go. Cohwehl Moth! and Mus-Peashlossom!

tardseed!

Enter Four Fairies.

I Fai. Ready.

2 Fai. And I. And I.

3 Fai. 4 Fai. Where shalt we go?

Tito. Be kind and courteous to this gentleman:

Hop in his walks and gambol in his eyes; Feed him with apricocks and dewherries. With purple grapes, green figs, and mulherries; The honey hags steal from the humble-hees, And, for night-tapers, crop their waxen thighs, And light them at the fiery glow-worm's eyes, To have my love to hed and to arise; And pluck the wings from painted hutterflies, To fan the moonheams from his sleeping eyes: Nod to him, elves, and do him courtesies.

1 Fai. Hail, mortal!

2 Fai. Hail!

3 Fai. Hail!

4 Fai. Hail!

Bot. I cry your worship's mercy heartily.-I heseech your worship's name. Cob. Cohweh.

Bot. I shall desire you of more acquaintance, good Master Cohweh. If I cut my finger I shall make hold with you .- Your name, honest gentleman?

Peas. Peashlossom.

Bot. I pray you, commend me to Mistress
Master Peascod, Squash, your mother, and to Master Peascod,

Exit

From the presence of the sun
Following darkness like a dream,
Now are frolic; not a mouse
Shall disturb this hallow'd house:
I am sent with broom before,
To sweep the dust behind the door.

Enter OBERON and TITANIA, with their Train.

Obe. Through this house give glimmering light,
By the dead and drowsy fire:
Every elf and fairy sprite
Hop as light as bird from brier:
And this ditty, after me,
Sing and dance it trippingly.
Tita. First, rehearse your song by rote,
To each word a warbling note,
Hand in hand, with fairy grace,

Song and Dance.

Will we sing, and bless this place.

Obe. Now, until the break of day,
Through this house each fairy stray,
To the best bride-bed will we,
Which by us shall blessed be;
And the issue there create
Ever shall be fortunate.
So shall all the couples three Ever true in loving be;
And the blots of Nature's hand

Shall not in their issue stand: Never mole, hare-lip, nor scar, Nor mark prodigious, such as are Despised in nativity, Shall upon their children be .-With this field-dew consecrate. Every fairy take his gate; And each several chamber bless. Through this palace, with sweet peace: E'er shall it in safety rest, And the owner of it blest. Trip away: Make no stay: Meet me all by break of day. [Exeunt OBE., TITA., and Train. Puck. If we shadows have offended. Think but this—and all is mended-That you have but slumber'd here · While these visions did appear. And this weak and idle theme, No more yielding but a dream, Gentles, do not reprehend; If you pardon, we will mead. And, as I'm an honest Puck, If we have unearned luck Now to 'scape the serpent's tongue, We will make amends ere long; Else the Puck a liar call:

So, good night unto you all.

Give me your hands, if we be friends.

And Robin shall restore amends.

All fancy-sick she is 'and pale of cheer. With sighs of love, that cost the fresh blood

By some illusion see thou bring her here; I'll charm his eyes against she do appear. Puck. I go, I go; look how I go,— Swifter than arrow from the Tartar's how. Exit.

Obe. Flower of this purple dye, Hit with Cupid's archery, Sink in apple of his eye! When his love he doth espy, Let her shine as gloriously As the Venus of the sky.— When thou wak'st, if she be by, Beg of her for remedy.

Re-enter Puck.

Puck. Captain of our fairy band, Helena is here at hand And the youth mistook me Pleading for a lover's fee; Shall we their fond pageant see? Lord, what fools these mortals he! Obe. Stand aside: the noise we make Will cause Demetrins to awake. Puck. Then will two at once woo one,-That must needs be sport alone; And those things do hest please me That befall preposterously.

Enter LYSANDER and HELENA.

Lys. Why should you think that I should woo in scorn?

Scorn and derision never come in tears. Look, when I vow, I weep; and vows so born, In their nativity all truth appears.

How can these things in me seem scorn to you, Bearing the hadge of faith, to prove them true? Hel. You do advance your cunning more and more.

When truth kills truth, O develish-holy fray! These vows are Hermia's: will you give her o'er?

Weigh oath with oath and you will nothing weigh:

Your vows to her and me, put in two scales, Will even weigh; and both as light as tales.

Lys. I had no judgment when to her I swore.

Hel. Nor none, in my mind, now you give her o'er. [70u.

Lys. Demetrius loves her, and he loves not Dem. [Awakening.] O Helen, goddess, nymph, perfect, divine]

To what, my love, shall I compare thine eyne? Crystal is middy. O, how ripe in show Thy lips, those kissing cherries, tempting grow! That pure congealed white, high Taurus' snow, Fann'd with the eastern wind, turns to a crow When thon held'st up thy hand: O let me kiss This princess of pure white, this seal of bliss!

Hel. O spitel O hell! I see you all are bent To set against me for your merriment. If you were civil, and knew courtesy, You would not do me thus much injury. Can you not hate me, as I know you do But you must join in souls to mock me too? If you were men, as men you are in show, You would not use a gentle lady so; To vow, and sweer, and superpraise my parts, So, with two seeming bodies, but one heart,

When I am sure you hate me with your hearts. Yon hoth are rivals, and love Hermia; And now both rivals, to mock Helena: A trim exploit, a manly enterprise. To conjure tears up in a poor maid's eyes With your derision! None of noble sort Would so offend a virgin, and extort A poor soul's patience, all to make you sport. Lys. You are unkind, Demetrins; be not so; For you love Hermia: this you know I know: And here, with all good will, with all my heart, In Hermia's love I yield you up my part; And yours of Helena to me hequeath,

Whom I do love, and will do to my death. Hel. Never did mockers waste more idle hreath. none: Lysander, keep thy Hermia; I will If e'er I lov'd her, all that love is gone. My heart with her but as guest-wise sojourn'd:

And now to Helen is it home return'd, There to remain. Helen, it is not so. Lys.

Dem. Disparage not the faith thon dost not know, Lest, to thy peril, thou aby it dear.-Look where thy love comes; youder is thy dear.

Enter HERMIA.

Her. Dark night, that from the eye his function takes,

The ear more quick of apprehension makes; Wherein it doth impair the seeing sense, It pays the hearing double recompense:-Thou art not by mine eye, Lysander, found; Mine ear, I thank it, brought me to thy sound. But why unkindly didst thou leave me so?

Lys. Why should he stay whom love doth press to go?

Her. What love could press Lysander from hide,my side? Lys. Lysander's love, that would not let him

Fair Helena. - who more engilds the night Than all you fiery oes and eyes of light.
Why seek'st thou me? could not this make thee know

The hate I hare thee made me leave thee so? Her. You speak not as you think; it cannot

Hel. Lo, she is one of this confederacyl Now I perceive they have conjoin'd all three To fashion this false sport in spite of me. Injurious Hermia! most ungrateful maid! Have you conspir'd, have you with these contriv'd

To bait me with this foul derision? Is all the counsel that we two have shar'd, The sisters' vows, the hours we have spent, When we have chid the hasty-footed time For parting us,—O, is all forgot? All school-days' friendship, childhood innocence? We, Hermia, like two artificial gods, Have with our neelds created both one flower Both on one sampler, sitting on one cushion, Both warhling of one song, both in one key; Asif our hands, our sides, voices, and minds Had been incorporate. So we grew together, Like to a double cherry, seeming parted; But yet a union in partition, Two lovely berries moulded on one stem:

Dum. My loving lord, Dumain is mortified: The grosser manner of these world's delights He throws upon the gross world's baser slaves: To love, to wealth, to pomp, I pine and die;

With all these living in philosophy.

Biron. I can but say their protestation over; So much, dear liege, I have already sworn, That is, to live and study here three years. But there are other strict observances; As, not to see a woman in that term; Which I hope well is not enrolled there: And one day in a week to touch no food, And but one meal on every day beside: The which I hope is not enrolled there: And then, to sleep hut three hours in the night, And not be seen to wink of all the day,-When I was wont to think no harm all night, And make a dark night too of half the day.-Which I hope well is not enrolled there: O, these are barren tasks, too hard to keep; Not to see ladies-study-fast-not sleep. King. Your oath is pass'd to pass away from these: Biron. Let me say no, my liege, an if you please; I only swore to study with your grace, And stay here in your court for three years' space. Long. You swore to that, Biron, and to the rest. ljest. Biron. By yea and nay, sir, then I swore in What is the end of study? let me know.

King. Why, that to know which else we should not know.

Biron. Things hid and barr'd, you mean, from common sense?

King. Ay, that is study's god-like recompense.

Biron. Come on, then, I will swear to study

To know the thing I am forhid to know; As thus,—to study where I well may dine, When I to feast expressly am forbid Or study where to meet some mistress fine,

When mistresses from common sense are hid:

Or, having sworn too-hard-a-keeping oath, Study to break it, and not break my troth. If study's gain he thus, and this be so, Study knows that which yet it doth not know: Swear me to this, and I will ne'er say no.

King. These be the stops that hinder study quite.

And train our intellects to vain delight. Biron. Why, all delights are vain; but that most vain

Which, with pain purchas'd, doth inherit pain: As painfully to pore upon a hook while

To seek the light of truth; while truth the Doth falsely blind the eyesight of his look;

Light, seeking light, dothlight of light beguile. So, ere you find where light in darkness lies, Your light grows dark hy losing of your eyes. Study me how to please the eye indeed, By fixing it upon a fairer eye.

Who dazzling so, that eye shall be his heed, And give him light that it was blinded hy. Study is like the heaven's glorious sun,

That will not be deep-search'd with saucy looks:

Small have continual plodders ever won. Save base authority from others' hooks These earthly godfathers of heaven's lights.

That give a name to every fixed star, Have no more profit of their shining nights

Than those that walk and wot not what they Too much to know is to know naught hut fame: And every godfather can give a name. King. How well he's read, to reason against reading! Dum. Proceeded well, to stop all good proceeding! Long. He weeds th corn, and still lets grow the weeding.

Biron. The spring is near, when green geese are a-breeding.

Dum. How follows that?

Biron.Fit in his place and time. Dum. In reason nothing.

Biron.

Something then in rhyme. Long. Biron is like an envious sneaping frost, That bites the first-born infants of the spring. Biron. Well, say I am; why should proud summer boast Before the birds have any cause to sing? Why should I joy in an abortive birth? At Christmas I no more desire a rose Than wish a snow in May's new-fangled shows: But like of each thing that in season grows.

So you, to study now it is too late, Climb o'er the house to unlock the little gate. King. Well, sit you out: go home, Biron:

stay with you: adieu. Biron. No, my good lord; I have swom to And, though I have for barbarism spoke more Than for that angel knowledge you can say,

Yet confident I'll keep what I have swore, And bide the penance of each three years' day. Give me the paper, let me read the same; And to the strict'st decrees I'll write my name. King. How well this yielding rescues thee from shamel Biron. (reads.) Item, That no woman shall come within a mile of my court.—

And hath this been proclaim'd? Long.

Four days ago. Biron. Let's see the penalty. [Reads.]—On pain of losing her tongue.

Who devis'd this?

Long. Marry, that did I. Biron. Sweet lord, and why? [penalty. Long. To fright them hence with that dread Biron. A dangerous law against gentility. [Reads.] Item, If any man be seen to talk with a woman within the term of three years, he shall endure such public shame as the rest of the court can possibly devise.

This article, my liege, yourself must break;
For well you know here comes in emhassy The French king's daughter, with yourself to speak, A maid of grace and complete majesty,—

About surrender-up of Aquitain. To her decrepit, sick, and bed-rid father: Therefore this article is made in vain,

Or vainly comes the admired princess hither. King. What say you, lords? why, this was quite forgot.

Her. Little again I nothing hut low and little-Why will you suffer her to flout me thus? Let me come to her.

Lys. Get you gone, you dwarf; You minimus, of hind'ring knot-grass made; You head, you acorn.

Dem. You are too officioua In her hehalf that scorns your services. Let her alone: speak not of Helena; Take not her part; for if thou dost intend Never so little show of love to her, Thou shalt aby it.

Lys. Now she holds me not; Now follow, if thou dar'st, to try whose right, Or thine or mine, is most in Helena.

Dem. Follow! nay. I'll go with thee, cheek by jole. [Exeunt Lys. and DEM. Her. You, mistress, all this coil is 'long of your Nay, go not hack.

Hel.

I will not trust you, I;

Nor longer stay in your curst company.

Your hands than mine are quicker for a fray;

My legs are longer though, to run away.

[Exit. Her. I am amaz'd, and know not what to say. [Exit, pursuing HELENA.

Obe. This is thy negligence: still thou mistak'st.

Or else commit'st thy knaveries wilfully.

Puck. Believeme, king of shadows, I mistook.

Did not you tell me I should know the man

By the Athenian garments he had on?

And so far hlameless proves my enterprise,

That I have 'nointed an Athenian's eyes:

And so far am I glad it so did sort,

As this their inspling I esteem a sport

As this their jangling I esteem a sport.

Obe. Thou seest these lovers seek a place to fight:

Hie therefore, Robin, overcast the night; The starry welkin cover thou anon With drooping fog, as black as Acheron And lead these testy rivals so astray, As one come not within another's way. Like to Lysander sometime frame thy tongue, Then stir Demetrius up with hitter wrong; And sometime rail thou like Demetrius; And from each other look thou lead them thus, Till o'er their brows death-counterfeiting sleep With leaden legs and batty wings doth creep: Then crush this herb into Lysander's eye; Whose liquor hath this virtuous property, To take from thence all error with his might, And make his eyehalls roll with wonted sight. When they next wake, all this derision Shall seem a dream and fruitless vision: And hack to Athens shall the lovers wend. [end With league whose date till death shall never Whiles I in this affair do thee employ, I'll to my queen, and beg her Indian boy; And then I will her charmed eye release From monster's view, and all things shall be peace.

Puck. My fairy lord, this must be done with haste.

For night's swift dragons cut the clouds full fast And yonder shines Aurora's harhinger, At whose approach ghosts, wandering here and there.

Troop home to churchyards: damned spirits all, That in cross-ways and floods have burial,

Already to their wormy beds are gone;
For fearlest day should look their shames upon
They wilfully exile themselves from light,
And must for aye consort with black-hrow'd night.

Obe. But we are spirits of another sort:
I with the morning's love have oft made sport;
And, like a forester, the groves may tread
Even till the eastern gate, all fiery-red,
Opening on Neptune with fair hlessed heams,
Turns into yellow gold his salt-green streams.
But, notwithstanding, haste; make no delay:
We may effect this husiness yet ere day.

[Exil Ober.]

Puck. Up and down, up and down; I will lead them up and down: I am fear'd in field and town; Gohlin, lead them up and down. Here comes one.

Enter LYSANDER.

Lys. Where art thou, proud Demetrius? speak thou now. [art thou? Puck. Here, villain; drawn and ready. Where Lys. I will he with thee straight. Puck. Follow me, then, To plainer ground.

[Exit Lys, as following the voice.

Enter DEMETRIUS.

Dem. Lysander! speak again.
Thou runaway, thou coward, art thou fied?
Speak. In some bush? where dost thou hide thy head? [stars.

Puck. Thou coward, art thou bragging to the Telling the bushes that thou look'st for wars, And wilt not come? Come, recreant; come, thou child;

I'll whip thee with a rod: he is defiled That draws a sword on thee.

Dem. Yea, art thou there?

Puck. Follow my voice; we'll try no manhood here. [Excunt.

Re-enter LYSANDER.

Lys. He goes hefore me, and still dares me on; When I come where he calls, then he is gone. The villain is much lighter heeled than I: I follow'd fast, hut faster he did fly; That fallen am I in dark uneven way, And here will rest me. Come, thou gentle day! [Lies down. For if hut once thou show me thy gray light.

For if but once thou show me thy gray light, I'll find Demetrius, and revenge this spite.

[Sleeps.

Re-enter PUCK and DEMETRIUS.

Puck. Ho, ho! ho, ho! Coward, why com'st thou not?

Dem. Ahide me if thou dar'st; for well I wot Thou runn'st before me, shifting every place; And dar'st not stand, nor look me in the face. Where art thou?

Puck. Come hither; I am here.

Dem. Nay, then, thou mock'st me. Thou shalt buy this dear,

If ever I thy face by daylight see:
Now, go thy way. Faintness constraineth me
To measure out my length on this cold hed.—
By day's approach look to he visited.

[Lies down and sleeps.]

King. [reads.] For Jaquenetta, -so is the weaker vessel called, which I apprehended with the aforesaid swain.-I keep her as a vessel of thy law's fury; and shall, at the least of thy sweet notice, bring her to trial. Thine, in all compliments of devoted and heart-burning heat of duty, DON ADRIANO DE ARMADO.

Biron. This is not so well as I looked for, but the best that ever I heard.

King. Ay, the best for the worst. sirrah, what say you to this?

Cost. Sir, I confess the wench.

King. Did you hear the proclamation?

Cost. I do confess much of the hearing it, but little of the marking of it.

King. It was proclaimed a year's imprisonment, to be taken with a wench.

Cost. I was taken with none, sir; I was taken with a damosel.

King. Well, it was proclaimed damosel. Cost. This was no damosel neither, sir; she was a virgin. (virgin.

King. It so varied too; for it was proclaimed Cost. If it were, I deny her virginity; I was taken with a maid.

King. This maid will not serve your turn, sir. Cost. This maid will serve my turn, sir.

King. Sir, I will pronounce your sentence: you shall fast a week with bran and water.

Cost. I had rather pray a month with mutton and porridge.

King. And Don Armado shall be your keeper .-

My Lord Biron, see him delivered over .-And go we, lords, to put in practice that

Which each to other hath so strongly sworn. Exeunt King, Long., and Dum.

Biron. I'll lay my head to any good man's

These oaths and laws will prove an idle scorn .- Sirrah, come on.

Cost. I suffer for the truth, sir: for true it is, I was taken with Jaquenetta, and Jaquenetta is a true girl; and therefore, Welcome the sour cup of prosperity! Affiiction may one day smile again, and till then. Sit thee down, sorrow!

Exeunt.

Scene II.—Another part of the Park.

Enter ARMADO and MOTH.

Arm. Boy, what sign is it when a man of great spirit grows melancholy?

Moth. A great sign, sir, that he will look sad. Arm. Why, sadness is one and the self-same thing, dear imp. Moth. No, no; O lord, sir, no.

Arm. How canst thou part sadness and melancholy, my tender juvenal?

Moth. By a familiar demonstration of the working, my tough senior.

Arm. Why tough senior? why tough senior? Moth. Why tender juvenal? why tender juvenal?

Arm. I spoke it, tender juvenal, as a congruent epitheton appertaining to thy young days, which we may nominate tender.

Moth. And I, tough senior, as an appertinent title to your old time, which we may name tough.

Arm. Pretty, and apt.

Moth. How mean you, sir; I pretty, and my saying apt? or I apt, and my saying pretty? Arm. Thou pretty, because little.

Moth. Little pretty, because little. Where-

Arm. And therefore apt, because quick. Moth. Speak you this in my praise, master?

Arm. In thy condign praise. Moth. I will praise an eel with the same praise.

Arm. What, that an eel is ingenious?

Moth. That an eel is quick.

Arm. I do say thou art quick in answers: thou heatest my blood.

Moth. I am answered, sir. Arm. I love not to be crossed.

Moth. He speaks the mere contrary; crosses love not him. Aside. Arm. I have promised to study three years with the duke.

Moth. You may do it in an hour, sir.

'Arm. Impossible.

Moth. How many is one thrice told? Arm. I am ill at reckoning; it fitteth the spirit of a tapster. Moth. You are a gentleman and a gamester, Arm. I confess both,—they are both the varnish of a complete man. Moth. Then, I am sure, you know how much the gross sum of deuce-ace amounts to. Arm. It doth amount to one more than two.

Moth. Which the base vulgar do call three.

Arm. True.

Moth. Why, sir, is this such a piece of study? Now here is three studied ere you'll thrice wink: and how easy it is to put years to the word three, and study three years in two words, the dancing horse will tell you.

Arm. A most fine figure! Moth. To prove you a cipher. [Aside.

Arm. I will hereupon confess I am in love: and as it is base for a soldier to love, so am I in love with a base wench. If drawing my sword against the humour of affection would deliver me from the reprobate thought of it, I would take desire prisoner, and ransom him to any French courier for a new devised courtesy. I think scorn to sigh; methinks I should out-Comfort me, boy: what great swear Cupid. men have been in love?

Moth. Hercules, master.

Arm. Most sweet Hercules!-More authority, dear boy, name more; and, sweet my child, let them be men of good repute and carriage.

Moth. Samson, master; he was a man of good carriage, great carriage,—for he carried the towngates on his back like a porter: and he was in love.

Arm. O well-knit Samson! strong-jointed Samsoni I do excel thee in my rapier as much as thou didst me in carrying gates. I am in love too:-who was Samson's love, my dear Moth?

Moth. A woman, master.

Arm. Of what complexion? Moth. Of all the four, or the three, or the two; or one of the four. Arm. Tell me precisely of what complexion. Moth. Of the sea-water green, sir.

Titania, mnsic call; and strike more dead
Than common sleep, of all these five, the sense.

Tita. Music, hol mnsic; such as charmeth sleep.

Puck. Now, when thou wak'st, with thine own fool's eyes peep.

Obe. Sound, music. [Still music.] Come, my queen, take hands with me, my queen, take hands with me, Androck the ground whereon these sleepers he. Now thou and I are new in amity, And will to-morrow midnight solemnly Dance in Duko Theseus' house triumphantly, And bless it to all tair posterity:

There shall the pairs of faithful lovers ho Wedded, with Theseus, all in jollity.

Puck. Fairy king, attend and mark;
I do hear the morning lark.

I do hear the morning lark.

Obc. Then, my queen, in silence sad,
Trip we after the night's shade:
We the globe can compass soon,
Swifter than the wand'ring moon.

Tita. Come, my lord; and in our flight, Tell me how it came this night That I sleeping here was found, With these mortals on the ground.

Exeunt. [Horns sound within.

Enter THESEUS, HIPPOLYTA, EGEUS, and Train

The. Go, one of you, find out the forester;—
For now our observation is perform'd;
And since we have the vaward of the day.
My love shall hear the music of my hounds,— Uncouple in the western valley; go:—
Despatch, I say, and find the forester.—
We will, fair queen, up to the mountain's top,
And mark the musical confusion
Of hounds and echo in conjunction.

Hip. I was with Hercules and Cadmus once, When in a wood of Crete they bay'd the bear With hounds of Sparta: never did I hear Such gallant chiding; for, hesides the groves, The skies, the fountains, every region near Seem'd all one mutual cry: I never heard

So musical a discord, such sweet thunder.

The. My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kind, So flew'd, so sanded; and their heads are hung With ears that sweep away the morning dew; Crook-kneed and dew-lap'd like Thessalian bulls;

Slow in pursuit, but match'd in mouth like bells,
Each under each. A cry more tuneable
Was never hella'd to, nor cheer'd with horn,
In Crete, in Sparta, nor in Thessaly:
Jndge when you hear.—But, soft, what nymphs are these? [asleep; Ege. My lord, this is my daughter here And this is Lysander; this Demetrius is; This Helena, old Nedar's Helena:

I wonder of their being here together.

The. No doubt, they rose up early to observe
The rite of May; and, hearing our intent,
Came here in grace of our solemnity.—
But speak Egens; is not this the day
That Hermia should give answer of her choice?

Ege. It is, my lord.

The. Go, bid the huntsmen wake them with their horns.

[Horns, and shout within. DEM., Lys., HER., and HEL., awake and start up. The. Good-morrow, friends. Saint Valentine is past;

Begin these wood-birds hut to couple now?

Lys. Pardon, my lord.

[He and the rest kneel to TRESEUS. I pray you all, stand up. I know you two are rival enemies; How comes this gentle concord in the world, That hatred is so far from jealousy To sleep by hate, and fear no enmity?

Lys. My lord, I shall reply amazedly, Half 'sleep, half waking; hut as yet, I swear,

Lys. My lord, I shan reply amazedly, Half 'sleep, half waking: hut as yet, I swear, I camot truly say how I came here:
But, as I think,—for truly would I speak—
And now I do bethink me, so it is,—
I came with Hermia hither: our intent [be Was to be gone from Athens, where we might Without the peril of the Athenian law.

Ege. Enough, enough, my lord; you have enough;

I beg the law, the law upon his head.—
They would have stol'n away, they would,
Demetrius,

Thereby to have defeated you and me:
You of your wife, and me of my consent,—
Of my consent that she should be your wife.
Dom. My lord, fair Helen told me of their stealth,

Of this their purpose hither to this wood;
And I in fury hither follow'd them,
Fair Helena in fancy following me.
But, my good lord, I wot not by what power,—
But by some power it is,—my love to Hermia
Melted as doth the snow—seems to me now
As the remembrance of an idle gawd
Which in my childhood I did dote upon:
And all the faith, the virtue of my heart,
The object and the pleasure of mine eye,
Is only Helena. To her, my lord,
Was I hetroth'd ere I saw Hermia:
But, like in sickness, did I loathe this food;

But, as in health, come to my natural taste,

Now do I wish it, love it, long for it,

And will for evermore be true to it.

The. Fair lovers, you are fortunately met:
Of this discourse we more will hear anon.—
Egeus, I will overbear your will;
For in the temple, by and by with us,
These couples shall eternally be knit.
And, for the morning now is something worn,
Our purpos'd hunting shall be set aside.—
Away with us to Athens three and three,
We'll hold a feast in great solemnity.—

Come, Hippolyta.

Exeunt THE., HIP., EGE., and Train.

Dem. These things seem small and undistinguishable.

Like far-off mountains turned into clouds.

Her. Methinks I see these things with parted eve.

When everything seems double.

Hel. So methinks:
And I have found Demetrius like a jewel.

Mine own, and not mine own.

. Dem.

It seems to me
That yet we sleep, we dream.—Do yon not think

The duke was here, and bid us follow him?

I am less proud to hear you tell of my worth Than you much willing to be counted wise In spending your wit in the praise of mine. But now to task the tasker:—good Boyet, You are not ignorant, all-telling fame Doth noise abroad, Navarre hath made a vow, Till painful study shall out-wear three years No woman may approach his silent court: Therefore to us seemeth it a needful course, Before we enter his forbidden gates, To know his pleasure; and in that behalf, Bold of your worthiness, we single you As our best-moving fair solicitor. Tell him the daughter of the King of France, On serious business, craving quick despatch, Importunes personal conference with his grace. Haste, signify so much; while we attend Like humbly-visag'd suitors, his high will. Boyet. Proud of employment, willingly I go.

Prin. All pride is willing pride, and yours is so.— [Exit Boyer. Who are the votaries, my loving lords,

That are vow-fellows with this virtuous duke?

Lord. Longaville is one.

Prin. Know him, madam; at a marriage feast, Between Lord Perigort and the beauteous heir Of Jaques Falconbridge, solemnized In Normandy, saw I this Longaville: A man of sovereign parts he is esteem'd; Well fitted in the arts, glorious in arms: Nothing becomes him ill that he would well. The only soil of his fair virtue's gloss,—If virtue's gloss will stain with any soil, Is a sharp wit matched with too blunt a will; Whose edge hath power to cut, whose will still wills

It should none spare that come within his power.

Prin. Some merry mocking lord, belike; is't so?

Mar. They say so most that most his humours know. (grow. Prin. Such short-liv'd wits do wither as they

Who are the rest?

Kath. Theyoung Dumain, a well-accomplished

youth,

Of all that virtue love for virtue lov'd:

Most power to do most harm, least knowing ill;

For he hath wit to make an ill shape good,

And shape to win grace though he had no wit.

I saw him at the Duke Alencon's once;

And much too little of that good I saw

Is my report to his great worthiness.

Ros. Another of these students at that time Was there with him; if I have heard a truth, Biron they call him; but a merrier man, Within the limit of becoming mirth, I never spent an hour's talk withal; His eye begets occasion for his wit; For every object that the one doth catch, The other turns to a mirth-moving jest; Which his fair tongue—conceit's expositor—Delivers in such apt and gracious words That aged ears play truant at his tales, And younger hearings are quite ravished; So sweet and voluble is his discourse.

Prin. God bless my ladies are they all in

That every one her own hath garnished With such bedecking ornaments of praise?

Mar. Here comes Boyet.

Re-enter BOYET.

Prin. Now, what admittance, lord?

Boyet. Navarre had notice of your fair approach;

And he and his competitors in oath
Were all address'd to meet you gentle lady,
Before Icame. Marry, thus much I havelearnt,—
He rather means to lodge you in the field,
Like one that comes here to besiege his court,
Than seek a dispensation for his oath,
To let you enter his unpeopled house.
Here comes Navarre. [The Ladies mask.

Enter King, Longaville, Dumain, Biron. and Attendants.

King. Fair princess, welcome to the court of Navarre.

Prin. Fair, I give you back again; and welcome I have not yet; the roof of this court is too high to be yours; and welcome to the wide fields too base to be mine. [court.

King. Hear me, dear lady,—I have sworn an Prin. Our lady help my lord! he'll be for-sworn.

King. Not for the world, fair madam, by my will.

Prin. Why, will shall break it; will, and nothing else.

King. Your ladyship is ignorant what it is.

Prin. Were my lord so, his ignorance were wise.

Where now his knowledge must prove ignorance. I hear your grace hath sworn-out housekeeping: 'Tis deadly sin to keep that outh, my lord, And sin to break it;

But pardon me, I am too sudden bold;
To teach a teacher ill beseemeth me.
Vouchsafe to read the purpose of my coming,
And suddenly resolve me in my suit.
[Gives a paper.

King. Madam, I will, if suddenly I may. Prin. You will the sooner that I were away; For you'll prove perjur'd if you make me stay. Biron. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?

Ros. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?

Biron. I know you did.
Ros. How needless was it then

To ask the question!

Biron.

You must not be so quick.

Ros. 'Tis 'long of you, that spur me with such questions.

Biron. Your wit's too hot, it speeds too fast, 'twill tire.

'twill tire.

Ros. Not till it leave the rider in the mire.

Biron. What time o' day?

Ros. The hour that fools should ask.

Biron. Now fair befall your mask!

Bron. Now terr betail your mass.

Ros. Fair fall the face it covers!

Bron. And send you many lovers!

Ros. Amen, so you be none.

Biron. Nay, then will I be gone. King. Madam, your father here doth inti-

To ease the anguish of a torturing hour?
Call Philostrate.

Philost. Here, mighty Theseus. The. Say, what abridgment have you for this evening?

What masque? what music? How shall we beguile

The lazy time, if not with some delight?

Philost. There is a brief how many sports are ripe;

Make choice of which your highness will see first. [Giving a paper.

The. [reads.] The battle with the Centaurs.

to be sung

By an Athenion eunuch to the harp.

We'll none of that: that I have told my love,

In glory of my kinsman Hercules.

The riot of the tipsy Bocchanals.

Teoring the Thracian singer in their rage.
That is an old device, and it was play'd
When I from Thebes came last a conqueror.

The thrice-three Muses mourning for the death
Of learning, late deceos'd in beggary.
That is some satire, keen and critical,
Not sorting with a nuptial ceremony.
A tedious brief scene of young Pyramus,

And his love Thisbe; very tragical mirth.
Merry and tragical! tedious and brief!
That is, hot ice and wondrous strange snow.
How shall we find the concord of this discord?

Philost. A play there is, my lord, some ten words long,

Which is as brief as I have known a play;
But by ten words, my lord, it is too long,
Which makes it tedious: for in all the play
There is not one word apt, one player fitted:
And tragical, my noble lord, it is;
For Pyramus therein doth kill himself:
Which when I saw rehears'd, I must confess,
Made mine eyes water; but more merry tears
The passion of loud laughter never shed.

The. What are they that do play it?

Philost. Hard-handed men that work in Athens here.

Which never labour'd in their minds till now; And now have toil'd their unbreath'd memories With this same play against your nuptial. The. And we will hear it.

Philost. No, my noble lord, It is not for you: I have heard it over, And it is nothing, nothing in the world; Unless you can find sport in their intents, Extremely stretch'd, and conn'd with cruel pain, To do you service.

The. I will hear that play;
For never anything can be amiss
When simpleness and duty tender it.
Go, bring them in: and take your places, ladies.

[Exit Philostrate.]

| Exit Philostrate. | Hip. I love not to see wretchedness o'er-charged,

And duty in his service perishing. [thing. The. Why, gentle sweet, you shall see no such Hip. He says they can do nothing in this kind. The. The kinder we, to give them thanks for nothing.

Our sport shall be to take what they mistake: And what poor duty cannot do, Noble respect takes it in might, not merit. Where I have come, great clerks have purposed

To greet me with premeditated welcomes; Where I have seen them shiver and look pale, Make periods in the midst of sentences, Throttle their practis'd accent in their fears, And, in conclusion, dumbly have broke off, Not paying me a welcome. Trust me, sweet, Out of this silence yet I pick'd a welcome And in the modesty of fearful duty I read as much as from the rattling tongue Of saucy and audacious eloquence. Love, therefore, and tongue-tied simplicity In least speak most to my capacity.

Enter PHILOSTRATE.

Philost. So please your grace, the prologue is address'd.

The. Let him approach.

Prol. If we offend, it is with our good will. That you should think we come not to offend But with good will. To show our simple skill, That is the true beginning of our end.

pent you. The actors are ot hand: and, by their show, You shall know all that you are like to know.

The. This fellow doth not stand upon points. Lys. He hath rid his prologue like a rough colt; he knows not the stop. A good moral, my lord: it is not enough to speak, but to speak true.

Hip. Indeed he hath played on this prologue like a child on a recorder; a sound, but not in government.

The. His speech was like a tangled chain; nothing impaired, but all disordered. Who is next?

Enter PYRAMUS and THISBE, WALL, MOON-SHINE, and LION, as in dumb show.

Prol. Gentles, perchance you wonder at this show; [plain.

But wonder on, till truth make all things This man is Pyramus, if you would know; This beauteous lady Thisby is, certain.

This man, with lime and rough-cast, doth present [sunder: Wall, that vile Wall which did these lovers And through Well's chink, poor souls they are

Wall, that vile Wall which did these lovers And through Wall's chink, poor souls, they are content To whisper, at the which let no man wonder.

This man, with lantern, dog, and bush of thorn,
Presenteth Moonshine: for, if you will know,
By moonshine did these lovers think no scorn
To meet at Ninus' tomb, there, there to woo.
This grisly beast, which by name Lion hight,
The trusty Thisby, coming first by night,

Did scare away, or rather did affright:
And as she fled, her mantle she did fall;
Which Lion vile with bloody mouth did stain;
Anon comes Pyramus, sweet youth and tall.

Anon comes Pyramus, sweet youth, and tall, And finds his trusty Thisby's mantle slain; Whereat with blade, with bloody blameful blade, He bravely broach'd his boiling bloody breast; All senses to that sense did make their repair. To feel only looking on fairest of fair:

Methought all his senses were lock'd in his eye, As jewels in crystal for some prince to buy; Who, tend'ring their own worth from where they were glass'd,

Did point you to buy them, along as you pass'd.

His face's own margent did quote such amazes That all eyes saw his eyes enchanted with gazes: I'll give you Aquitain, and all that is his, An you give him for my sake but one loving kiss.

ACT III.

Scene I .- A part of the Park.

Enter ARMADO and MOTH.

Arm. Warble, child; make passionate my sense of hearing.

.. Moth. Concolinel-[Singing. Arm. Sweet air!-Go, tenderness of years! take this key, give enlargement to the swain, bring him festinately hither; I must employ him in a letter to my love.

Moth. Master, will you win your love with a French brawl?

Arm. How mean'st thou? brawling in French? Moth. No, my complete master: but to jig off a tune at the tongue's end, canary to it with your feet, humour it with turning up your eyelids; sigh a note and sing a note; sometime through the throat, as if you swallowed love with singing love; sometime through the nose, as if you snuffed up love by smelling love; with your hat penthouse like, o'er the shop of your eyes; with your arms crossed on your thin bellydoublet, like a rabbit on a spit; or your hands in your pocket, like a man after the old painting; and keep not too long in one tune, but a snip and away. These are complements, these are humours; these betray nice wenches—that would be betrayed without these; and make them men of note,-do you note me?-that most are affected to these.

Arm. How past thou purchased this experi-Moth. By my penny of observation.

Arm. But O,-but O-

Moth. —the hobby-horse is forgot.

Arm. Callest thou my love hobby-horse? Moth. No, master; the hobby-horse is but a colt, and your love perhaps a hackney. But have you forgot your love?

Arm. Almost I had.

Moth. Negligent studentllearn her by heart. Arm. By heart and in heart, boy.

Moth. And out of heart, master; all those three I will prove.

Arm. What wilt thou prove? Moth. A man, if I live; and this, by, in, and without, upon the instant: by heart you love her, because your heart cannot come by her; in heart you love her, because you heart is in love with her; and out of heart you love her, being out of heart that you cannot enjoy her.

Arm. I am all these three.

Moth. And three times as much more, and yet nothing at all.

Arm. Fetch hither the swain; he must carry me a letter.

Moth. A message well sympathized: a horse to be ambassador for an ass!

Arm. Ha, ha! what sayest thou?

Moth. Marry sir, you must send the assupon the horse, for he is very slow-gaited. But I go. Arm. The way is but short: away. Moth. As swift as lead, sir.

Arm. Thy meaning, pretty ingenious? Is not lead a metal heavy, dull and slow?

Moth. Minime, honest master; or rather, master, no.

Arm. I say lead is slow. Moth. You are too swift, sir, to say so: Is that lead slow which is fired from a gun? Arm. Sweet smoke of rhetoric!

He reputes me a cannon; and the bullet, that's I shoot thee at the swain. Moth. Thump, then, and I fice.

Exit. Arm. A most acute juvenal; voluble and free of grace! llace: By thy favour, sweet welkin, I must sigh in thy Most rude melancholy, valour gives thee place.

Re-enter MOTH with COSTARD.

Moth. A wonder, master; here's a Costard broken in a shin.

Arm. Some enigma, some riddle: come,thy Penvoy; -begin.

Cost. No egma, no riddle, no Fenvoy;—no salve in the mail, sir: O, sir, plantain, a plain plantain; no Fenvoy, no Fenvoy, no salve, sir, but a plantain!

Arm. By virtue thou enforcest laughter; thy silly thought, my spleen; the heaving of my lungs provokes me to ridiculous smiling: O pardon me, my stars! Doth the inconsiderate take salve for Penvoy, and the word Penvoy for [l'envoy a salve? a salve?

Moth. Do the wise think them other? is not Arm. No, page: it is an epilogue or discourse, to make plain Iszia. Some obscure precedence that hath tofore been

I will example it:

My herald is return'd.

The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee Were still at odds, being but three.

There's the moral. Now the Penvoy. [again. Moth. I will add the l'envoy. Say the moral Arm. The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee Were still at odds, being but three:

Moth. Until the goose came out of door, And stay'd the odds by adding four. Now will I begin your moral, and do you follow with my l'envoy.

Enter THISBE.

This. This is old Ninny's tomb. Where is my love?

Lion. Oh! The LION rocts.-THISBE runs off.

Dem. Well roared, lion.
The. Well run, Thisbe.
Hip. Well shone, moon.—Truly, the moon shines with a good grace.

The. Well moused, lion.

[The LION tears THISBE'S mantle and exit. Dem. And so comes Pyramus.

Lys. And then the lion vanishes.

Enter Pyramus.

Pyr. Sweet moon, I thank thee for thy sunny beams; [bright: I thank thee, moon, for shining now so For, by thy gracious, golden, glittering streams,
. I trust to taste of truest Thisby's sight.

But stay; - O spite! But mark,--poor knight, What dreadful dole is bere! Eyes, do you see? How can it be? O dainty duck! O dear! Thy mantle good, What! stained with blood? Approach, ye furies fell!

O fates! come, come; Cut thread and thrum; Quail, rush, conclude, and quell!

The. This passion, and the death of a dear friend, would go near to make a man look sad.

Hip. Beshrew my heart, but I pity the man. Pyr. O wherefore, nature, didst thou lions frame?

Since lion vile hath here deflower'd my dear: Which is—no, no—which was the fairest dame
That liv'd, that lov'd, that lik'd, that look'd with cheer.

Come, tears, confound;

Out, sword, and wound The pap of Pyramus:

Ay, that left pap, Where heart doth hop:— Thus die I, thus, thus, thus. Now am I dead, Now am I fied; My soul is in the sky:

Tougue, lose thy light! Moon, take thy flight!

Now die, die, die, die, die.
[Dies.—Exit Moonshine] Dem. No die, but an ace, for him; for he is but one. the is nothing. Lys. Less than an ace, man; for he is dead; The. With the help of a surgeon he might yet recover and prove an ass.

Hip. How chance moonshine is gone before Thisbe comes back and finds her lover?

The. She will find him by starlight.—Here she comes; and her passion ends the play.

Enter THISBE.

Hip. Methinks she should not use a long one for such a Pyramus: I hope she will be

Dem. A mote will turn the belance, which Pyramus, which Thisbe, is the better.

Lys. She hath spied him already with those sweet eyes.

Dem. And thus she moans, videlicet .-

This. Asleep, my love? What, dead, my dove? O Pyramus, arise, Speak, speak. Quite of Dead, dead? A tomb Quite dumb?

Must cover thy sweet eyes. These lily brows,

This cherry nose, These yellow cowslip cheeks, Are gone, are gone: Lovers, make moan!

His eyes were green as leeks. O Sisters Three, Come, come to me, With hands as pale as milk;

Lay them in gore, Since you have shore With shears his thread of silk.

Tongue, not a word:-Come, trusty sword; Come, blade, my breast imbrue: And farewell, friends:—

Thus Thisby ends: Adieu, adieu, adieu. Dies.

The. Moonshine and lion are left to bury the dead.

Dem. Ay, and wall too.

Bot. No, I assure you; the wall is down that parted their fathers. Will it please you to see the epilogue, or to hear a Bergomask dance between two of our company.

The. No epilogue, I pray you; for your play needs no excuse. Never excuse; for when the players are all dead there need none to be blamed. Marry, if he that writ it had played Pyramus, and hanged himself in Thisbe's Pyramus, and hanged himself in Thisbe's garter, it would have been a fine tragedy: and so it is, truly; and very notably discharged. But come, your Bergomask: let your epilogue elene. (Here a dance of Clowns. The iron tongue of midnight hath told twelve: alone. Lovers, to bed; 'tis almost fairy time. I fear we shall out-sleep the coming morn,

As much as we this night have overwatch'd. This palpable-gross play hath well beguil'd The heavy gait of night. - Sweet friends, to bed.-A fortnight hold we this solemnity, In nightly revels and new jollity. Exeunt.

SCENE II.

Enter Puck.

Puck. Now the hungry iion roars, And the wolf behowls the moon; Whilst the heavy ploughman snores,

All with weary task fordone. Now the wasted brands do glow Whilst the scritch-owl, scritching loud

A Park, with a Palace SCENE I .- NAVARRE. in it.

Enter the King, Biron, Longaville, and Have sworn for three years' term to live with Dumain.

King Let fame, that all hunt after in their lives Live register'd upon our brazen tombs, And then grace us in the disgrace of death; When, spite of cormorant devouring time, The endeavor of this present breath may buy That honour which shall bate his scythe's keen edge, And make us heirs of all eterpity. Therefore, brave conquerors, -for so you are, That war against your own affections, And the huge army of the world's desires, Our late edict shall strongly stand in force:

Navarre shall be the wonder of the world; Our court shall be a little Academe, Still and contemplative in living art. You three, Biron, Dumain, and Longaville,

My fellow-scholars, and to keep those statutes

That are recorded in this schedule here: Your oaths are pass'd; and now subscribe your names,

That his own hand may strike his honour down That violates the smallest branch herein: If you are arm'd to do as sworn to do,

Subscribe to your deep oaths, and keep it too. Long. I am resolv'd; 'tis but a three years' fast:

The mind shall banquet though the body pine: Fat paunches have lean pates; and dainty bits Make rich the ribs, but bankrupt quite the wits. The praiseful princess pierc'd and prick'd a pretty pleasing pricket; Some say a sore; but not a sore, till now made sore with shooting. The dogs did yell; put I to sore, then sorel jumps from thicket;

. Or pricket, sore, or else sorel; the people fall a-hooting.

If sore be sore, then I to sore makes fifty sores; O sore I! [one more I.

Of one sore I an hundred make by adding but Nath. A rare talentl Dull. If a talent be a claw, look how he claws him with a talent.

Hol. This is a gift that I have, simple, simple; a foolish extravagant spirit, full of forms, figures, shapes, objects, ideas, apprehensions, motions, revolutions: these are begot in the ventricle of memory, nourished in the womb of pia mater, and delivered upon the mellowing of occasion. But the gift is good in those in whom it is acute, and I am thankful for it.

Nath. Sir, I praise the Lord for you; and so may my parishioners; for their sons are well tutored by you, and their daughters profit very greatly under you: you are a good member of the commonwealth.

Hol. Mehercle, if their sons be ingenious, they shall want no instruction: if their daughters be capable, I will put it to them: but, vir sapi qui pauca loquitur: a soul feminine saluteth 115.

Enter JAQUENETTA and COSTARD.

Jaq. God give you good-morrow, master person.

Hol. Master person,—quasi pers-on. A if one should be pierced, which is the one?

Cost. Marry, master schoolmaster, he that is likest to a hogshead.

Hol. Of piercing a hogshead! a good lustre of conceit in a turf of earth; fire enough for a flint, pearl enough for a swine; 'tis pretty; it is well.

Jaq. Good master person, be so good as read me this letter; it was given me by Costard, and sent me from Don Armado: I beseech you, read it.

Hol. Fauste, precor gelida quando pecus [Mantuan! omne sub umbra Nath. Ay, sir, and very learned.

Nath. [reads.] If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love? [vow'dl Ah, never faith could hold if not to beauty

Hol. You find not the apostrophes, and so miss the accent: let me supervise the canzonet. Here are only numbers ratified; but, for the elegancy, facility, and golden cadence of poesy, Ovidius Naso was the man: and why, indeed, Naso; but for smelling out the odenferous flowers of fancy, the jerks of invention? Jaq. Ay, sir, from one Monsieur Biron, one of the strange queen's lords.

Hol. I will overglance the superscript.

To the snow-white hand of the most beauteous Lady Rosaline.

I will look again on the intellect of the letter, for the nomination of the party writing to the person written unto:

Your Ladyship's in all desired employment, BIRON.

Sir Nathaniel, this Biron is one of the votarles with the king; and here he hath framed a letter to a sequent of the stranger queen's, which accidentally, or by the way of progression, hath miscarried.—Trip and go, my sweet; deliver this paper into the royal hand of the king; it may concern much. Stay not thy compliment; I forgive thy duty: adieu.

Jaq. Good Costard, go with me.-Sir, God save your life!

Cost. Have with thee, my girl.

[Exeunt Cost. and Jag. Nath. Sir, you have done this in the fear of God, very religiously; and, as a certain father saith.

Hol. Sir, tell me of the father; I do fear colourable colours. But to return to the verses:

did they please you, Sir Nathaniel?

Nath. Marvellous well for the pen. Hol. I do dine today at the father's of a certain pupil of mine; where if, before repast, it shall please you to gratify the table with a grace, I will, on my privilege I have with the parents of the foresaid child or pupil, undertake your ben venuto; where I will prove those verses to be very unlearned, neither savouring of poetry, wit, nor invention: I beseech your society.

Nath. And thank you too: for society, saith the text, is the happiness of life.

Biron. So study evermore is over-shot; While it doth study to have what it would, It doth forget to do the thing it should: And when it hath the thing it hunteth most, Tis won as towns with fire,—so won, so lost.

King. We must, of force, dispense with this decree;

She must lie here on mere necessity.

Biron. Necessity will make us all forsworn Three thousand times within this three years' space:

For every man with his affects is born; Not by might master'd but by special grace: If I hreak faith, this word shall speak for me, I am forsworn on mere necessity, So to the laws at large I write my name:

(Subscribes. And he that breaks them in the least degree Stands in attainder of eternal shame.

Suggestions are to others as to me: But I helieve, although I seem so loath; I am the last that will last keep his oath. But is there no quick recreation granted? King. Ah, that there is: our court, you know, is haunted

With a refined traveller of Spain;

A man in all the world's new fashion planted, That hath a mint of phrases in his brain: One whom the music of his own vain tongue

Doth ravish, like enchanting harmony; A man of complements, whom right and wrong Have chose as umpire of their mutiny: This child of fancy, that Armado hight,

For interim to our studies, shall relate, In high-horn words, the worth of many a knight From tawny Spain, lost in the world's debate. How you delight, my lords, I know not, I: But, I protest, I love to hear him lie,

And I will use him for my minstrelsy. Biron. Armado is a most illustrious wight, A man of fire-new words, fashion's own knight. Long. Costard, the swain, and he shall be our sport: And so to study-three years is but short.

Enter Dull with a letter, and COSTARD.

Dull. Which is the Duke's own person? Biron. This, fellow; what wouldst?

Dull. I myself reprehend his own person, for I am his grace's tharborough: but I would see his own person in flesh and blood.

Biron. This is he.

Dull. Signior Arme-Arme-commends you. There's villany abroad: this letter will tell you Cost. Sir, the contempts thereof are as touching me.

King. A letter from the magnificent Armado. Biron. How long soever the matter, I hope in God for high words.

Long. A high hope for a low heaven: God grant us patience!

Biron. To hear? or forhear laughing?

Long To hear meekly, sir, and to laugh moderately; or to forhear both.

Biron. Well, sir, be it as the style shall give as cause to climb in the merriness.

Cost. The matter is to me, sir, as concerning Jaquenetta.. The manner of it is, I was taken with the manner.

Biron. In what manner? Cost. In manner and form following, sir, all those three: I was seen with her in the manor house, sitting with her upon the form, and taken following her into the park; which, put together, is in manner and form following. Now, sir, for the manner,-it is the manner of a man to speak to a woman: for the form, -in some form.

Biron. For the following, sir?
Cost. As it shall follow in my correction; and God defend the right!

King. Will you hear this letter with attention?

Biron. As we would hear an oracle.

Cost. Such is the simplicity of man to hearken after the flesh.

King. [reads.] Great deputy, the welkin's vicegerent and sole dominator of Navarre, my soul's earth's God and body's fostering patron,-Cost. Not a word of Costard yet.

King. [reads.] So it is,— Cost. It may be so: hut if he say it is so, he is, in telling true, but so so. King. Peacel

King. [reads.] So it is, hesieged with sable-coloured melancholy, I did recommend the black-oppressing humour to the most wholesome physic of thy health-giving air; and, as I am a gentleman, betook myself to walk. The time when? Ahout the sixth hour; when heasts most graze, birds hest peck, and men sit down to that nourishment which is called supper: so much for the time when. Now for the ground which; which, I mean, I walked upon: it is ycleped thy park. Then for the place where; I mean, I did encounter that obscene and most preposterous event that draweth from my snowwhite pen the ebon-coloured ink, which here thou viewest, heholdest, surveyest, or seest: but to the place where,-it standeth northnorth-east and by-east from the west corner of thy curious-knotted garden. Him,—I as my ever esteemed duty pricks me on,—have sent to thee, to receive the meed of punishment, by thy sweet grace's officer, Antony Dull, a man of good repute, carriage, hearing, and estimation.

Dull. Me, an't shall please you; I am Antony Dull.

Long.

And I had mine! [Aside

King. And I mine too, good Lordl [Aside. Biron. Amen, so I had mine: is not that a good word? [Aside.

Dum. I would forget her; but a fever she Reigns in my blood, and will remember'd be. Biron. A fever in your blood? why, then incision

Would let her out in saucers: sweet misprision!

[Aside. Dum. Once more I'll read the ode that I have writ.

Biron. Once more I'll mark how love can vary wit.

[Aside.]

Dum. [reads.] On a day,—alack the day! Love, whose month is ever May Spied a blossom passing fair Playing in the wanton air: Through the velvet leaves the wind All unseen, can passage find; That the lover, sick to death, Wish'd himself the heaven's hreath. Air, quoth he, thy cheeks may blow: Air, would I might triumph so! But, alack, my hand is sworn Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn: Vow, alack, for youth unmeet; Youth so apt to pluck a sweet. Do not call it sin in me That I am forsworn for thee: Thou for whom even Jove would swear Juno but an Ethiope were; And deny himself for Jove, Turning mortal for thy love.-

This will I send; and something else more plain,
That shall express my true love's fasting pain.
O, would the King, Biron, and Longaville,
Were lovers tool Ill, to example ill,
Would from my forehead wipe a perjur'd note;
For none offend where all alike do dote.

Long. Dumain [advancing], thy love is far from charity, That in love's grief desir'st society: You may look pale, hut I should blush, I know,

To be o'erheard and taken napping so.

King. Come sir [advancing], you blush; as his your case is such;
You chide at him offending twice as much:
You do not love Maria; Longaville

Did never sonnet for her sake compile; Nor never lay his wreathed arms athwart His loving hosom, to keep down his heart. I have been closely shrouded in this bush,

And mark'd you hoth, and for you hoth did blush.

I heard your guilty rhymes, observ'd your Sawsighs reek from you noted well your passion:

Ah mel says one; O Jovel the other cries
One her hairs were gold, crystal the other's eyes;
You would for paradise hreak faith and troth;
[To LONG.

And Jove for your love would infringe an oath.

[To Dumain.

What will Biron say when that he shall hear A faith infring'd which such a zeal did swear? How will he scorn! how will he spend his wit! How will he triumph, leap, and laugh at it! For all the wealth that ever I did see I would not have him know so much by me.

Biron. Now step I forth to whip hypocrisy.—
[Descends from the tree.
Ah, good my liege, I pray thee pardon me.
Good heart, what grace hast thou, thus to reprove
These worms for loving, that art most in love?

Your eyes do make no coaches; in your tears There is no certain princess that appears: You'll not he perjur'd 'tis a hateful thing; Tush, none but minstrels like of sonneting. But are you not asham'd? nay, are you not, All three of you, to be thus much o'ershot? You found his mote; the king your mote did see; But I a beam do find in each of three. O, what a scene of foolery I have seen, Of sighs, of groans, of sorrow, and of teenl O me, with what strict patience have I sat

To see a king transformed to a gnat!
To see great Hercules whipping a gig,
And profound Solomon tuning a jig,
And Nestor play at push-pin with the boys,
And critic Timon laugh at idle toys!
Where lies thy grief, O, tell me, good Dumain?
And, gentle Longaville, where lies thy pain?
And where my lies 'c?' all about the becart.

And where my liege's? all about the breast:A caudle, ho!
King.
Too bitter is thy jest.
Are we betray'd thus to thy over-view?

Biron. Not you to me, but I betray'd by you; I, that am honest; I, that hold it sin To break the vow I am engaged in; I am hetray'd by keeping company With moon-like men of strange inconstancy. When shall you see me write a thing in rhyme? Or groan for Joan? or spend a minute's time

In pruning me? When shall you hear that I Will praise a hand, a foot, a face, an eye, A gait, a state, a brow, a hreast, a waist, A leg, a limb?—

King. Soft! whither away so fast? A true man or a thief that gallops so?

Biron. I post from love; good lover, let me

Enter JAQUENETTA and COSTARD.

Jag. God bless the king!
King. What present hast thou there?
Cost. Some certain treason.

King. What makes treason here? Cost. Nay, it makes nothing, sir.

King. If it mar nothing neither, The treason and you go in peace away together.

Jaq. I beseech your grace, let this letter be read;
Our parson misdoubts it; 'twas treason he said.

King. Biron, read it over.
[Giving him the letter.

Where hadst thou it?

Jag. Of Costard.

King. Where hadst thou it?

Cost. Of Dun Adramadio, Dun Adramadio.

King. How now! what is in you? why dost thou tear it?

Biron. A toy, my liege, a toy; your grace needs not fear it.

Long. It did move him to passion, and therefore let's hear it.

Dum. It is Biron's writing, and here is his name. [Picks up the pieces.

Arm. Is that one of the four complexions? Moth. As I have read, sir; and the best of them too.

Arm. Green, indeed, is the colour of overs; but to have a love of that colour, methinks Samson had small reason for it. He surely affected her for ber wit.

Moth. It was so, sir; for she had a green wit.

Arm. My love is most immaculate white and red.

Moth. Most maculate thoughts, master, are masked under such colours.

Arm. Define, define, well-educated infant. Moth. My father's wit and my mother's tongue, assist me!

Arm. Sweet invocation of a child; most pretty, and pathetical!

Moth. If she be made of white and red, Her faults will ne'er be known;

For blushing cheeks by faults are bred, And fears by pale white shown:

Then if she fear, or be to blame, By this you shall not know; For still ber cheeks possess the same

Which native she doth owe.

A dangerous rhyme, master, against the reason of white and red.

Arm. Is there not a ballad, boy, of the King and the Beggar.

Arm. I will have the subject newly writ o'er, that I may example my digression by some mighty precedent. Boy, I do love that counmighty precedent. Boy, I do love that country girl that I took in the park with the rational hind Costard: she deserves well.

Moth. To be whipped: and yet a better love than my master.

light wench.

Arm. I say, sing.

Moth. Forbear till this company be past.

Enter Dull, Costard, and Jaquenetta.

Dull. Sir, the duke's pleasure is, that you keep Costard safe: and you must let him take no delight nor no penance; but 'a must fast three days a-week. For this damsel, I must keep ber at the park: she is allowed for the day-woman. Fare you well. [Maid.

Arm. I do betray myself with blushing .-

Jco. Man.

Arm. I will visit thee at the lodge.

Jag. That's here by.

Arm. I know where it is situate.

Jaq. Lord, how wise you are!

Arm. I will tell thee wonders.

Jaq. With that face?

Arm. I love thee.

Jaq. So I heard you say.

Arm. And so farewell.

Jaq. Fair weather after you!

Arm. Villain thou shalt fast for thy offenses ere thou be pardoned.

Cost. Well, sir, I hope, when I do it I shall do it on a full stomach.

Arm. Thou shalt be heavily punished.

Cost. I am more bound to you than your fellows, for they are but lightly rewarded. Arm. Take away this villain; shut him up.

Moth. Come, you transgressing slave: away. Cost. Let me not be pent up, sir; I will fast, being loose.

Moth. No, sir; that were fast and loose: thon shalt to prison.

Cost. Well, if ever I do see the merry days of desolation that I have seen, some shall see-

Moth. What shall some see?

Cost. Nay, nothing, Master Moth, but what they look upon. It is not for prisoners to be too silent in their words: and therefore I will say nothing: I thank God I have as little patience as another man; and therefore I can be quiet. Exeunt MOTH and COSTARD.

Arm. I do affect the very ground, which is base, where her shoe, which is baser, guided by her foot, which is basest, doth tread. I shall be forsworn,-which is a great argument of false-hood,—if I love. And how can that be true love which is falsely attempted? Love is And the Beggar.

Moth. The world was very guilty of such a but love. Yet Samson was solomon ballad some three ages since; but, I think, now he had an excellent strength; yet was Solomon 'tis not to be found; or, if it were, it would so seduced,—and he had a very good without to be found; or, if it were, it would consider the world be had a very good with the world be without the world be seduced.

Cupid's butt-shaft is too hard for Hercules' a familiar; love is a devil: there is no evil angel iard's rapier. The first and second cause will not serve my turn; the passado he respects not, the duello he regards not; his disgrace is to be called boy; but his glory is to subdue men. Adieu, valour! rust, rapier! be still, drum! for an my master. [Aside. your manager is in love; yea, he loveth. As-Arn. Sing, boy; my spirit grows heavy in sist me, some extemporal god of rhyme, for I am sure I shall turn sonneteer. Devise, wit; Moth. And that's great marvel, loving a write, pen; for I am for whole volumes in folio.

ACT II.

Scene I .- Another part of the park. A Pavilion and Tents at a distance.

Enter the PRINCESS OF FRANCE, ROSALINE, MARIA, KATHARINE, BOYET, Lords, and other Attendants.

Boyet. Now, madam, summon up your dearest spirits:

Consider who the king your father sends;

To whom he sends; and what's his embassy: Yourself, held precious in the world's esteem, To parley with the sole inheritor Of all perfections that a man may owe, Matchless Navarre; the plea of no less weight

Than Aquitain,—a dowry for a queen. Be now as prodigal of all dear grace As nature was in making graces dear

When she did starve the general world beside, And prodigally gave them all to you.

Prin. Good Lord Boyet, my beanty, though but mean,

Needs not the painted flourish of your praise; Dull. Come, Jaquenetta, away.

[Excunt Dull and Jaquenerra.] Beauty is bought by judgment of the eye,

Not utter'd by base sale of chapmen's tongues:

Scarce show a harvest of their heavy toil; But love, first learned in a lady's eyes, Lives not alone immured in the brain, But, with the motion of all elements, Courses as swift as thought in every power. And gives to every power a double power Above their functions and their offices. It adds a precious seeing to the eye: A lover's eyes will gaze an eagle hlind; A lover's ear will hear the lowest sound; When the suspicious head of theft is stopp'd; Love's feeling is more soft and sensible Than are the tender horns of cockled snails; panion of the king's, who is intituled, nomin-Love's tongue proves dainty Bacchus gross in ated, or called, Don Adriano de Armado.

taste: For valour, is not love a Hercules, Still climbing trees in the Hesperides? Subtle as sphinx; as sweet and musical As hright Apollo's lute, strung with his hair? And when love speaks, the voice of all the gods affected, too odd, as it were, too peregrinate, Makes heaven drowsy with the harmony. Never durst poet touch a pen to write Until his ink were temper'd with love's sighs: O, then his lines would ravish savage ears, And plant in tyrants mild humility. From women's eyes this doctrine I derive: They sparkle still the right Promethean fire; They are the books, the arts, the academes, That show, contain, and nourish all the world, Else none at all in aught proves excellent. Then fools you were these women to forswear; Or, keeping what is sworn, you will prove fools. For wisdom's sake—a word that all men love, Or for love's sake-a word that loves all men, Or for men's sake, the authors of these women, Or women's sake, by whom we men are men, Let us once lose our oaths to find ourselves, Or else we lose ourselves to keep our oaths! It is religion to he thus forsworn; For charity itself fulfils the law, And who can sever love from charity? King. Saint Cupid, then! and, soldiers, to the field! Biron. Advance your standards, and upon them, lords;

Pell-mell, down with them! but he first advis'd In conflict that you get the sun of them.

Long. Now to plain-dealing; lay these glozes

Shall we resolve to woo these girls of France? King. And win them too; therefore let us; devise

Some entertainment for them in their tents. Biron. First, from the park let us conduct them thither;

Then homeward every man attach the hand Of his fair mistress: in the afternoon We will with some strange pastime solace them Such as the shortness of the time can shape; For revels, dances, masks, and merry hours, Forerunfair Love, strewing her way with flowers. King. Away, away! no time shall be omitted, That will be time, and may by us he fitted. Biron. Allons! Allons! -Sow'd cockle reap'd no corn; And justice always whirls in equal measure: Light wenches may prove plagues to men forsworn; If so, our copper buys no better treasure.

Enter Holofernes, Sir Nathaniel, and DULL.

Hol. Satis quod sufficit.

Prin. We are wise girls to mock our lovers so.

Ros. They are worse fools to purchase mocking so,

That same Biron I'll torture ere I go,
O that I knew he were but in by the week!
How I would make him fawn, and beg, and

That charge their breath against us? say, scout, Boyet. Under the cool shade of a sycamore I thought to close mine eyes some half an hour: When, lol to interrupt my purpos'd rest, Toward that shade I might behold addrest The king and his companions: warily I stole into a neighbour thicket by, And overheard what you shall overhear, That, by and by, disguis'd they will be here. Their herald is a pretty knavish page, That well by heart hath conn'd his embassage: Action and accent did they teach him there; Thus must thou speak and thus thy body bear: And ever and anon they made a doubt Presence majestical would put him out; For, quoth the king, an angel shall thou see; Yet fear not thou, but speak audaciously. The boy reply'd, An angel is not evil; I should have fear'd her had she been a devil. With that all laugh'd, and clapp'd him on the shoulder, Making the bold wag by their praises bolder.

Boyet. They do, they do; and are apparel'd Like Muscovites, or Russians, as I guess; Their purpose is to parle, to court, and dance; And every one his love-suit will advance Unto his several mistress; which they'll know By favours several which they did bestow.

Prin. And will they so? the gallants shall

For, ladies, we will every one be mask'd;
And not a man of them shall have the grace,

Cost. I shall know, sir, when I have done it.

Biron. Why, villain, thou must know first. Cost. I will come to your worship to-morrow morning.

Biron. It must be done this afternoon. Hark, slave, it is but this;— The princess comes to hunt here in the park, And in her train there is a gentle lady; When tongues speak sweetly, then they name

Exit COSTARD running.

Enter Holofernes, Sir Nathaniel, and DULL.

Nath. Very reverend sport, truly; and done in the testimony of a good conscience.

Hol. The deer was, as you know, sanguis,in blood; ripe as a pomewater, who now hang-; it argues facility.

Dull. I said the deer was not a houd credo;

'twas a pricket.

Hol. Twice sod simplicity, bis coctust-O thou monster Ignorance, how deformed dost Dull. What is Dictynna?

Nath. A title to Phoebe, to Luna, to the moon.

Hol. The moon was a month old when Adam was no more, five-score. And raught not to five weeks when he came to The allusion holds in the exchange.

Dull. 'Tis true indeed; the collusion holds in the exchange.

Hol. God comfort thy capacity! I say the allusion holds in the exchange.

Dull. And I say the pollusion holds in the exchange; for the moon is never but a month old; and I say beside, that 'twas a pricket that the princess killed.

Hol. Sir Nathaniel, will you hear an extemporal epitaph on the death of the deer? and, to humour the ignorant, I have called the deer the princess killed a pricket.

Noth. Perge, good Master Holofernes, gerge so it shall please you to abrogate scurrility. Hol. I will something affect the letter; for

The fairest is confession. Prin. Were you not here but even now, disguis'd? King. Madam, I was.

And were you well advis'd? King. I was, fair madam.

When you then were here, Prin. What did you whisper in your lady's ear?

King. That more than all the world I did respect her. (reject her.

Prin. When she shall challenge this you will King. Upon mine honour, no. Prin. Peace, peace, forbear;

Your oath once broke, you force not to forswear.

King. Despise me when I break this oath of mine.

Prin. I will; and therefore keep it:-Rosaline,

What did the Russian whisper in your ear? Ros. Madam, he swore that he did hold me dear Boyet. Full merrily Hath this brave manage, this career, been run. Biron. Lo, he is tilting straight! Peace; I have done.

Enter Costard.

Welcome, pure wit! thou partest a fair fray. Cost. O Lord, sir, they would know Whether the three worthies shall come in or no. Biron. What, are there but three?

Cost. No, sir; but it is vara fine, For every one pursents three.

And three times thrice is nine. Biron. Cost. Not so, sir; under correction, sir; I hope it is not so:

You cannot beg us, sir, I can assure you, sir: we know what we know:

Biron. How much is it?

Cost. O Lord, sir, the parties themselves, the actors, sir, will show whereuntil it doth amount; for my own part, I am, as they say, but to parfect one man in one poor man; Pompion the Great, sir, Biron. Art thou one of the worthies?

Cost. It pleased them to think me worthy of Pompion the Great; for mine own part, I know not the degree of the worthy; but I am to stand for him.

Scene III.—Another part of the Park. Enter Biron, with a paper.

Biron. The king he is hunting the deer; I am coursing myself: they have pitched a toil; I am toiling in a pitch,—pitch that defiles: defile! a foul word. Well, sit thee down, sorrow! for so they say the fool said, and so say I, and I the fool. Well proved, wit! By say I, and I the fool. the Lord, this love is as mad as Ajax: it kills sheep; it kills me, I a sheep: well proved again on my side! I will not love: if I do, hang me; i' faith, I will not. O, hut her eye,—by this light, hut for her eye I would not love her; yes, for her two eyes. Well, I do nothing in the world but lie, and lie in my throat. By heaven, I do love: and it hath taught me to rhyme, and to he melancholy; and here is part of my rhyme, and here my melancholy. Well, she hath one o' my sonnets already; the clown hore it, the fool sent it, and the lady hath it: sweet clown, sweeter fool, sweetest lady! society, The shape of Love's Tyburn that hangs up simplicity.

Long. I fear these stuhborn lines lack power to move:-

O sweet Maria, empress of my love!

These numbers will I tear and write in prose. Biron. [aside.] O, rhymes are guards on wanton Cupid's hose.

Disfigure not his slop.

Long. This same shall go .--He reads the sonnet.

Dum. A gilt nutmeg. Biron. Alemon.

Long. Stuck with cloves.

Dum. No, cloven. Arm. Peace!

The armipotent Mars, of lances the almighty, Gave Hector a gift, the heir of Ilion; Lye A man so breath'd, that certain he would fight, From morn till night, out of his pavilion. I am that flower, Dum.That mint.

Long. That columbine. Arm. Sweet Lord Longaville, rein thy tongue.

Long. I must rather give it the rein, for it runs against Hector.

Dum. Ay, and Hector's a greyhound.

Arm. The sweet war-man is dead and rotten; sweet chucks, beat not the bones of the buried: when he hreathed, he was a man.—But I will forward with my device. Sweet royalty (to the PRINCESS], hestow on me the sense of hearing. (BIRON whispers COSTARD.

Prin. Speak, brave Hector: we are much delighted.

. Arm. I do adore thy sweet grace's slipper.

Boyet. Loves her by the foot. Dum. He may not by the yard.

[bal,-Arm. This Hector far surmounted Hanni-Cost. The party is gone, fellow Hector: she s gone: she is two months on her way.

Arm. What meanest thou?

Cost. Faith, unless you play the honest Trojan, the poor wench is cast away: she's quick; the child brags in her belly already; 'tis

Dum. Hector will challenge him.

Biron. Ay, if he have no more man's hlood

Arm. Gentlemen and soldiers, pardon me; I

Dum. You may not deny it: Pompey hath made the challenge.

Arm. Sweet bloods, I both may and will.

Biron. What reason have you for't?

Arm. The naked truth of it is, I have no shirt; I go woolward for penance.

Boyet. True, and it was enjoined him in Rome for want of linen; since when, I'll be sworn, he wore none but a dish-clout of Jaquenetta's; and that'a wears next his heart for a favour.

Enter MERCADE.

Mer. God save you, madaml Prin. Welcome, Mercade;

But that thou interrupt'st our merriment. Mer. I am sorry, madam; for the news I

bring

Prepare, I say .- I thank you, gracious For all your fair endeavours; and entreat Out of a new-sad soul, that you vouchsafe, In your rich wisdom, to excuse or hide The liberal opposition of our spirits; If over-holdly we have home ourselves In the converse of breath, your gentleness Was guilty of it .- Farewell, worthy lord; A heavy heart bears not a nimble tongue: Excuse me so, coming so short of thanks

For my great suit so easily obtain'd. [form King. The extreme parts of time extremely All causes to the purpose of his speed; And often, at his very loose, decides That which long process could not arbitrate: And though the mourning brow of progeny Forhid the smiling courtesy of love The holy suit which fain it would convince, Yet, since love's argument was first on foot, Let not the cloud of sorrow justle it From what it purpos'd: since to wail friends lost Is not by much so wholesome-profitable As to rejoice at friends but newly found.

Prin. I understand you not: my griefs are dull.

Biron. Honest plain words best pierce the ear of grief;-

And by these hadges understand the king. For your fair sakes have we neglected time, Play'd foul play with our oaths; your heauty, ladies,

Hath much deform'd us, fashioning our humours Even to the opposed end of our intents: And what in us hath seem'd ridiculous,- Biron. Ah, you whoreson loggerhead [to COSTARD], you were born to do me Guilty, my lord, guilty; I confess, I confess.

King. What?

Biron. That you three fools lack'd me fool to make up the mess;

He, he, and you, my liege, and I, Are pick-purses in love, and we deserve to die. O, dismiss this audience, and I shall tell you more.

. Dum. Now the number is even.

True, true; we are four:-Biron. Will these turtles be gone?

Hence, sirs, away. King. Walk aside the true folk, and let the Cost. traitors stay.

[Exeunt Cost. and JAQ.

Biron. Sweet lords, sweet lovers, O let us embrace!

As true we are as flesh and blood can be: The sea will ebb and flow, heaven show his face: Young blood will not obey an old decree: We cannot cross the cause why we were born; Therefore of all hands must we be forsworn. King. What! did these rent lines show some-love of thine?

Biron. Did they, quoth you? Who sees the heavenly Rosaline

That, like a rude and savage man of Inde At the first opening of the gorgeous east Bows not his vassal head; and, strucken blind, Kisses the base ground with obedient breast. What peremptory eagle-sighted eye Dares look upon the heaven of her brow, That is not blinded by her majesty? King. What zeal, what fury hath inspir'd thee now? My love, her mistress, is a gracious moon, She an attending star, scarce seen a light. Biron. My eyes are then no eyes, nor I Biron:

O, but for my love, day would turn to night! Of all complexions the cull'd sovereignty Do meet, as at a fair, in her fair cheeks; Where several worthies make one dignity;

Where nothing wants that want itself doth seek.

Lend me the flourish of all gentle tongues. Fie, painted rhetoric! O, she needs it not; To things of sale a seller's praise belongs She passes praise: then praise too short doth blot. A wither'd hermit, five-score winters worn, Might shake off fifty, looking in her eye: Beauty doth varnish age, as if new-born, And gives the crutch the cradle's infancy.

O, 'tis the sun, that maketh all things shine! King. By heaven, thy love is black as ebony. Biron. Is ebony like her? O wood divine! A wife of such wood were felicity.

O, who can give an oath? where is a book? That I may swear beauty doth beauty lack If that she learn not of her eye to look: No face is fair that is not full so black. King. O paradox! Black is the badge of hell, The hue of dungeons, and the scowl of night; And beauty's crest becomes the heavens well.

Biron. Devils soonest tempt, resembling spirits of light.

O, if in black my lady's brow he deckt,

It mourns that painting and ursurping hair Should ravish doters with a false aspect: And therefore is she born to make black fair.

Her favour turns the fashion of the days; For native blood is counted painting now;

And therefore red, that would avoid dispraise, Paints itself black, to imitate her brow. Dum. To look like her are chimney-sweepers black. [bright. Long. And, since her time, are colliers counted King. And Ethiopes of their sweet complexion crack. Dum. Dark needs no candles now, for dark is light. Biron. Your mistresses dare never come in

For fear their colours should be washed away. King. Twere good yours did; for, sir, to tell you plain,

I'll find a fairer face not wash'd to-day. Biron. I'll prove her fair, or talk till doomsday here.

King. No devil will fright thee then so much as she. [dear.

Dum. I never knew man hold vile stuff so Long. Look, here's thy love: my foot and Showing his shoe. her face see.

Biron. O, if the streets were paved with thine eyes

Her feet were much too dainty for such tread! Dum. O vile! then, as she goes, what upward lies

The street should see as she walk'd over head. King. But what of this? are we not all in love?

Biron. O, nothing so sure; and thereby all forsworn.

King. Then leave this chat; and, good-Biron, now prove,

Our loving lawful, and our faith not torn. Dum. Ay, marry, there;—some flattery for this evil.

Long. O, some authority how to proceed; Some tricks, some quillets, how to cheat the devil.

Dum. Some slave for perjury. O, 'tis more than need!-Have you, then, affection's men-at-arms: Consider what you first did swear unto;-To fast -to study,-and to see no woman;-Flat treason 'gainst the kingly state of youth. Say, can you fast? your stomachs are too young, And abstinence engenders maladies. And where that you have vow'd to study, lords, In that each of you hath forsworn his book,-Can you still dream, and pore, and thereon look? Why, universal plodding prisons up The nimble spirits in the arteries, As motion and long-during action tires The sinewy vigour of the traveller. Now, for not looking on a woman's face, You have in that forsworn the use of eyes, And study, too, the causer of your vow: For when would you, my liege, or you, or you, In leaden contemplation, have found out Such fiery numbers as the prompting eyes Of beauteous tutors have enrich'd you with? Other slow arts entirely keep the brain, And therefore, finding barren practisers, King. Come, sir, it wants a twelvemonth and a day, And then 'twill end.

Вігоп.

That's too long for a play.

Enter ARMADO.

Arm. Sweet majesty, vouchsafe me,-Prin. Was not that Hector? Dum. The worthy knight of Troy.

Arm. I will kiss thy royal finger, and take leave: I am a votary; I have vowed to Jaquenetta to hold the plough for her sweet love three years. But, most esteemed greatness, will you hear the dialogue that the two learned men have compiled in praise of the owl and the cuckoo? it should have followed in the end of our show. King. Call them forth quickly, we will do so. Arm. Holla! approach.

- Enter Holofernes, Nathaniel, Moth, COSTARD, and others.

This side is Hiems, Winter—this Ver, the Spring; the one maintained by the owl, the other by the cuckoo. Ver, begin.

SONG.

Spring. When daisies pied, and violets blue, And lady smocks all silver-white, And cuckoo-buds of yellow hue Do paint the meadows with delight, The cuckoo then, on every tree, Mocks married men, for thus sings he Cuckoo;

Cuckoo, cuckoo,-O word of fear. Unpleasing to a married earl

When shepherds pipe on oaten straws, And merry larks are ploughmen's clocks, When turtles tread, and rooks and daws, And maidens bleach their summer smocks, The cuckoo then, on every tree. Mocks married men, for thus sings he-Cuckoo; Cuckoo,—O word of fear, Unpleasing to a married ear!

Winter. When icicles hang by the wall, And Dick the shepherd blows his nail, And Tom hears logs into the hall, And milk comes frozen home in pail When blood is nipp'd and ways he foul, Then nightly sings the staring owl-To-who:

Tn-whit, to-who, a merry note, While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

When all sloud the wind doth hlow. And coughing drowns the parson's saw, And birds sit brooding in the snow, And Marion's nose looks red and raw, When roasted crahs hiss in the bowl, Then nightly sings the staring owl-To-who:

Tu-whit, to-who, a merry note, While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

Arm. The words of Mercury are harsh after the songs of Apollo. You that way; we this way. [Exeunt. snip, snap, quick and home; it rejoiceth my tellect: true wit. [which is wit-old. Moth. Offered by a child to an old man; intellect: true wit.

Arm. Arts-man, procombulo; we will be singled from the barbarous. Do you not educate youth at the charge-house on the top of the mountain?

Itain. Hol. Or mons, the hill. Arm. At your sweet pleasure, for the moun-

Hol. I do, sons question.

Arm. Sir. it is the king's most sweet pleasure and affection to congratulate the princess at her pavilion, in the posteriors of this day; which the rude multitude call the afternoon.

Hol. The posterior of the day, most generous sir, is liable, congruent, and measurable for the afternoon: the word is well culled, choice; sweet and apt, I do assure you, sir, I do assure.

Arm. Sir, the king is a noble gentleman, and my familiar, I do assure you, very good friend: -For what is inward between us, let it pass:-I do beseech thee, remember thy courtesy:-I beseech thee, apparel thy head; -and among other importunate and most serious designs, and of great import indeed too; -but let that pass;-for I must tell thee, it will please his grace, by the world, sometime to lean upon my poor shoulder; and with his royal finger, thus, dally with my excrement, with my mustachio: but sweet heart, let that pass. By the world, I recount no fable; some certain special honours it pleaseth his greatness to impart to Armado, a soldier, a man of travel, that hath seen the world: but let that pass.—The very all of all is, -but, sweet heart, I do implore secrecy,-that the king would have me present the princess, sweet cbuck, with some delightful ostentation, or show, or pageant, or antic, or fire-work. Now, understanding that the curate and your sweet self are good at such eruptions and sudden breaking out of mirth, as it were, I have acquainted you withal, to the end to crave your assistance.

Hol. Sir, you shall present before her the nine worthies.—Sir Nathaniel, as concerning some entertainment of time, some show in the posterior of this day, to be rendered by our assistance,—the king's command, and this most gallant, illustrate, and learned gentleman, before the princess; I say, none so fit as to present the nine worthies.

Nath. Where will you find men worthy enough to present them?

Hol. Joshua, yourself; myself, or this gal-lant gentleman, Judas Maccabaeus; this swain. because of his great limb or joint, shall pass Pompey the Great; the page, Hercules.

Arm. Pardon, sir; error: he is not quantity enough for that worthy's thumb: he is not so big as the end of his club.

Hol. Shall I have audience? he shall present Hercules in minority: his enter and exit shall be strangling a snake; and I will have an apology for that purpose.

Moth. An excellent devicel so, if any of the audience hiss, you may cry: Well done, Hercules! now thou crushest the snake! that is the way to make an offence gracious, though few have the grace to do it.

Arm. For the rest of the worthies?—
Hol. I will play three myself.
Moth. Thrice-worthy gentleman! Arm. Shall I tell you a thing? Hol. We attend.

Arm. We will have, if this fadge not, an tic. I beseech you, follow. Hol. Vio, goodman Dull! thou hast spoken no word all this while.

Dull. Nor understood none neither, sir. Hol. Allons! we will employ thee.

Dull. I'll make one in a dance, or so; or I will play on the tabor to the worthies, and let them dance the hay.

Hol. Most dull, honest Dulli-to our sport. away. Exeunt.

Scene II .- Another part of the Park. Before the PRINCESS'S Pavilion.

Enter the Princess, Katharine, Rosaline and MARIA.

Prin. Sweet hearts, we shall be rich ere we depart.

If fairings come thus plentifully in: A lady wall'd about with diamonds!

Look you what I have from the loving king. Ros. Madam, came nothing else along with that? lin rbyme Prin. Nothing but this? yes, as much love As would be cramm'd up in a sheet of paper, Writ on both sides the leaf, margent and all; That he was fain to seal on Cupid's name.

Ros. That was the way to make his godhead wax:

For he hath been five thousand years a boy. Koth. Ay, and a shrewd unhappy gallows too. Ro You'll ne'er be friends with him; he kill'd your sister.

Kath. He made her melancholy, sad, and And so she died: had she been light, like you, Of such a merry, nimble stirring spirit, She might have been a grandam ere she died:

And so may you; for a light heart lives long. Ros. What's your dark meaning, mouse, of this light word?

Kath. A light condition in a beauty dark.
Ros. We need more light to find your meaning out. (snuff;

Kath. You'll mar the light by taking it in Therefore, I'll darkly end the argument.

Ros. Look what you do, you do it still i' the [wench. dark. Kath. So do not you; for you are a light And not bethink me straight of dangerous rocks.

Which, touching but my gentle vessel's side, Would scatter all her spices on the stream, Enrobe the roaring waters with my silks, And, in a word, but even now worth this, And now worth nothing? Shall I have the thought

To think on this; and shall I lack the thought That such a thing bechanc'd would make me sad?

But tell not me; I know Antonio

Is sad to think upon his merchandize. Ant. Believe me, no: I thank my fortune for My ventures are not in one bottom trusted, Nor to one place; nor is my whole estate Upon the fortune of this present year: Therefore my merchandize makes me not sad. Solan. Why, then you are in love.

Fie, fie! Ant. Solan. Not in love neither? Then let's say vou are sad Because you are not merry: and 'twere as easy For you to laugh, and leap, and say you are merry, (Janus,

Because you are not sad. Now, by two-headed Nature hath framed strange fellows in her time: Some that will evermore peep through their eyes,

And laugh, like parrots, at a bag-piper: And other of such vinegar aspect,

That they'll not show their teeth in way of smile,

Though Nestor swear the jest be laughable. Here comes Bassanio, your most noble kinsman, Gratiano and Lorenzo. Fare ye well; We leave you now with better company.

Salar. I would have stay'd till I had made you merry.

If worthier friends had not prevented me. Ant. Your worth is very dear in my regard. I take it your own business calls on you, And you embrace the occasion to depart.

Enter Bassanio, Lorenzo, and Gratiano.

Salar. Good-morrow, my good lords. Bass. Good signiors both, when shall we laugh? say, when? You grow exceeding strange: must it be so? Salar. We'll make our leisures to attend on yours. [Exeunt Salar. and Solan. Lor. My Lord Bassanio, since you have found Antonio,

We two will leave you; but at dinner-time, I pray you, have in mind where we must meet.

Bass. I will not fail you.
Gra. You look not well, Signior Antonio; You have too much respect upon the world: They lose it that do buy it with much care. Believe me, you are marvellously chang'd.

Ant. I hold the world but as the world, Gratiano-

A stage, where every man must play a part, And mine a sad one.

Gra. Let me play the fool: With mirth and laughter let old wrinkles come; A d let my liver rather heat with wine Than my heart cool with mortifying groans. Why should a man, whose blood is warm within,

Sit like his grandsire cut in alabaster? Sleep when he wakes? and creep into the iaundice

By being peevish? I tell thee what, Antonio,-I love thee, and it is my love that speaks,-There are a sort of men whose visages Do cream and mantle like a-standing pond, And do a willful stillness entertain, With purpose to be dress'd in an opinion Of wisdom, gravity, profound conceit; As who should say, I am Sir Oracle, And, when I ope my lips, let no dog bark! O, my Antonio, I do know of these. That therefore are only reputed wise For saying nothing; who, I am very sure, If they should speak, would almost damn those ears fools.

Which, hearing them, would call their brothers I'll tell thee more of this another time: But fish not, with this melancholy bait, For this fool's gudgeon, this opinion. Come, good Lorenzo. - Fare ye well awhile; I'll end my exhortation after dinner. ftime:

Lor. Well, we will leave you then till dinner-I must be one of these same dumb wise men. For Gratiano never lets me speak.

Gra. Well, keep me company but two years Thou shalt not know the sound of thine own tongue.

Ant. Farewell: I'll grow a talker for this gear. Gra. Thanks, i'faith; for silence is only commendable In a neat's tongue dried and a maid not ven-Exeunt GRA. and LOR.

Ant. Is that anything now?

Bass. Gratiano speaks an infinite deal of nothing, more than any man in all Venice. His reasons are as two grains of wheat hid in two bushels of chaff: you shall seek all day ere you find them; and when you have them, they are not worth the search.

Ant. Well; tell me now, what lady is this To whom you swore a secret pilgrimage, That you to-day promis'd to tell me of?

Bass. 'Tis not unknown to you, Antonio, How much I nave disabled mine estate By something showing a more swelling port Than my faint means would grant continuance: Nor do I now make moan to be abridg'd From such a noble rate; but my chief care Is to come fairly off from the great debts Wherein my time, something too prodigal, Hath left me gag'd. To you, Antonio, I owe the most, in money and in love; And from your love I have a warranty To unburthen all my plots and purposes How to get clear of all the debts I owe. [it, Ant. I pray you, good Bassanio, let me know

And if it stand, as you yourself still do, Within the eye of honour, be assur'd My purse, my person, my extremest means (shaft, Lie all unlock'd to your occasions.

Bass. In my school-days, when I had lost one I shot his fellow of the self-same flight The self-same way, with more advised watch, To find the other forth; and by advent'ring both I oft found both: I urge this childhood proof, Because what follows is pure innocence. I owe you much; and, like a wilful youth, That which I owe is lost: but if you please

Kath. But, in this changing, whet is your in- | King. Say to her we have measured many tent?

The effect of my intent is to cross theirs:

They do it but in mocking merriment; And mock for mock is only my intent. Their several counsels they unbosom shall To loves mistook; and so be mock'd withal Upon the next occasion that we meet With visages display'd to talk and greet.

Ros. But shall we dance if they desire us to 't?

Prin. No: to the death we will not move a Nor to their penn'd speech render we no grace: But while 'tis spoke, each turn away her face.

Boyet. Why, that contempt will kill the speaker's heart,

And quite divorce his memory from his part. Prin. Therefore I do it; and I make no doubt The rest will ne'er come in if he be ont.

There's no such sport as sport by sport o'er thrown; To make theirs ours, and ours none but our own: So shall we stay, mocking intended game;

And they, well mock'd, depart away with shame. [Trumpets sound within. Boyet. The trumpet sounds; be mask'd; the The Ledies mask. maskers come.

Enter the KING, BIRON, LONGAVILLE, and DUMAIN, in Russian habits and masked: Morn, Musicians, and Attendants.

Moth. All hail the richest beauties on the earth!

Boyet. Beauties no richer than rich taffets. Moth. A holy parcel of the fairest dames! [The Ladies turn their backs to him. That ever turn'd their-backs-to mortal views!

Biron. Their eyes, villian, their eyes. Moth. That ever turn'd their eyes to mortal views! Out-

Boyet. True; out indeed. [vouchsafe Moth. Out of your favours, heavenly spirits] Not to behold-

Biron. Once to behold, rogue.

Moth. Once to behold with your sun-beamed eyes,-with your sun-beamed eyes-

Boyet. They will not answer to that epithet; You were best call it daughter-beamed eyes. Moth. They do not mark me, and that brings me out. Biron. Is this your perfectness? be gone, you rogue. Exit MOTH.

Ros. What would these strangers? Know their minds, Boyet: If they do speak our language, 'tis our will

That some plain man recount our purposes: Know what they would.

Boyet. What would you with the princess?
Biron. Nothing but peace and gentle visitation.

Ros. What would they, say they? Ition. Boyet. Nothing but peace and gentle visita-Ros. Why, that they have; and bid them so be gone. gone.

Boyet. She says you have it, and you may be

To tread n measure with her on this grass. Boyet. They say that they have measured many a mile.

To tread a measure with you on this grass. Ros. It is not so. Ask them how many inches

Is in one mile: if they have measur'd many, The measure, then, of one is easily told.

Boyet. If to come hither you have measur'd miles

And many miles, the princess bids you tell How many inches do fill up one mile. steps. Biron. Tell her we measu Boyet. She hears herself. Tell her we measure them by weary Ros. How many weary steps, Of the many weary miles you have o'ergone, Are number'd in the travel of one mile?

Biron. We number nothing that we spend for you;

Our duty is so rich, so infinite, That we may do it still without accompt.

Vonchsafe to show the sunshine of your face, That we, like savages, may worship it.

Ros. My face is but a moon, and clouded too. King. Blessed are clouds, to do as such clouds dol

Vouchsafe, bright moon, and these thy stars, to shine,-

Those clouds removed,—upon our wat'ry eyne.
Ros. O vain petitioner! beg a greater matter; Thou now request'st but moonshine in the water.

King. Then, in our measure do but youthsafe one change:

Thou bid'st me beg; this begging is not strange. Ros. Play music, then: nay, you must do it soon. Music plays. Not yet; -no dance: -thus change I like the moon.

King. Will you not dance? How come you thus estrang'd?

Ros. You took the moon at full; but now she's chang'd. [man. Yet still she is the moon and I the The music plays; vouchsafe some motion to it.

Ros. Our ears vonchsafe it. But your legs should do it. King. Ros. Since you are strangers, and come here

King. Why take we hands, then? Only to part friends;-Ros. Court'sy sweet hearts; and so the measure

King. More measure of this measure; be not Ros. We can afford no more at such a price.

King. Prize you yourselves: what buys your company? Ros. Your absence only.

King. That can never be. Ros. Then cannot we be bought: and so adieu;

Twice to your visor and half once to you!

King. If you deny to dance, let's hold more chat.

Ros. In private then. I am best pleas'd with that. King. They converse apart.

better than a beast. An the worst fall that ever fell, I hope I shall make shift to go without him.

Ner. If he should offer to choose, and choose the right casket, you should refuse to perform your father's will if you should refuse to accept him.

Por. Therefore, for fear of the worst, I pray thee set a deep glass of Rhenish wine on the contrary casket: for, if the devil be within and that temptation without, I know he will choose I will do anything, Nerissa, ere I will be married to a sponge.

Ner. You need not fear, lady, the having any of these lords; they have acquainted me with their determinations; which is indeed, to return , to their home, and to trouble you with no more suit, unless you may be won by some other sort than your father's imposition, depending on the caskets.

Por. If I live to be as old as Sibylla, I will die as chaste as Diana, unless I be obtained by the manner of my father's will. I am glad this parcel of wooers are so reasonable: for there is not one among them but I dote on his very absence, and I pray God grant them a fair departure.

Ner. Do you not remember, lady, in your father's time, a Venetian, a scholar and a soldier, that came hither in company of the Marquis of Montferrat?

Por Yes, yes, it was Bassanio; as I think, so was he called. Ner. True, madam; he, of all the men that ever my foolish eyes looked upon, was the best deserving a fair lady.

Por. I remember him well; and I remember him worthy of thy praise.-

Enter a Servant.

How now! what news?

Serv. Thefourstrangersseekforyou, madam, to take their leave; and there is a forerunner come from a fifth, the prince of Morocco, who brings word, the prince his master will be here to-night.

Por. If I could bid the fifth welcome with so good heart as I can bid the other four farewell, I should be glad of his approach: if he have the condition of a saint and the complexion of a devil, I had rather he should shrive me than wive me.

Come. Nerissa.—Sirrah, go before.— Whiles we shut the gate upon one wooer, another knocks at the door. [Exeunt.

Scene III .- Venice. A Public Place.

Enter Bassanio and Shylock.

Shy. Three thousand ducats,—well. Bass. Ay, sir, for three months. Shy. For three months,—well.

Bass. For the which, as I told you, Antonio shall be bound.

Shy. Antonio shall become bound,—well. Bass. May you stead me? Will you pleasure me? Shall I know your answer?

Shy. Threethousandducats for three months, and Antonio bound. Bass. Your answer to that.

Shy. Antonio is a good man.

Bass. Have you heard any imputation to the

Shy. Ho, no, no; no, no; my meaning, in saying he is a good man, is to have you understand me that he is sufficient: yet his means are in supposition: he hath an argosy bound to Tripolis, another to the Indies; I understand. moreover, upon the Rialto, he hath a third at Mexico, a fourth for England,—and other ventures he hath, squandered abroad. But ships are but boards, sailors but men: there be land-rats and water-rats, water-thieves and land-thieves; I mean pirates; and then there is the peril of waters, winds, and rocks. The man is, notwithstanding, sufficient;—three thousand ducats:—I think I may take his bond.

Bass. Be assured you may. Shy. I will be assured I may; and, that I may be assured, I will bethink me. May I speak with Antonio?

Bass. If it please you to dine with us.

Shy. Yes, to smell pork; to eat of the habitation which your prophet, the Nazarite, conjured the devil into; I will buy with you, sell with you, talk with you, walk with you, and so following; but I will not eat with you, drink with you, nor pray with you.-What news on the Rialto?-Who is he comes here?.

Enter Antonio.

Bass. This is Signior Antonio. Shy. [Aside.] How like a fawning publican he looks!

I hate him for he is a Christian; But more for that, in low simplicity, He lends out money gratis, and brings down The rate of usance here with us in Venice. If I can catch him once upon the hip,-I will feed fat the ancient grudge I bear him. He hates our sacred nation; and he rails, Eventhere where merchants most do congregate, On me, my bargains, and my well-won thrift, Which he calls interest. Cursed be my tribe If I forgive him!

Shylock, do you hear? Shy. I am debating of my present store: And, by the near guess of my memory, I cannot instantly raise up the gross Of full three thousand ducats. What of that? Tubal, a wealthy Hebrew of my tribe, Will furnish me. But soft! how many months Do you desire?—Rest you fair, good signior: To Antonio.

Your worship was the last man in our mouths. Ant. Shylock, albeit I neither lend nor worrod

By taking nor by giving of excess, Yet, to supply the ripe wants of my friend, I'll break a custom.—Is he yet possess'd. How much he would?

Ay, ay, three thousand ducats. Shy. Ant. And for three months.

Shy. I had forgot,—three months; you told Well then, your bond; and, let me see,—

But hear you: Methought you said you neither lend nor borrow Upon advantage.

Ant. I do never ase it.

Shy. When Jacob graz'd his uncle Laban's sheep,

Had he heen Adam, he had tempted Eve: He can carve too, and lisp: why this is he That, kiss'd away his hand in courtesy; This is the ape of form, monsieur the nice, That, when he plays at tables, chides the dice In honourable terms; nay, he can sing A mean most meanly; and in ushering, Mend him who can: the ladies call him sweet; The stairs, as he treads on them, kiss his feet: This is the flower that smiles on every one, To show his teeth as white as whale's hone: And consciences that will not die in deht Pay him the due of honey-tongu'd Boyet.

King. A hlister on his sweet tongue, with my heart,

That put Armado's page out of his part! Biron. See where it comes!—Behaviour, what wert thou [now? Till this man show'd thee? and what art thou! That hid the worse and show'd the hetter face.

Re-enter the PRINCESS, ushered by BOYET; ROSALINE, MARIA, KATHARINE, and Attendants.

King. All hail, sweet madam, and fair time of dayl

Prin. Fair, in all hail, is foul, as I conceive.

Prin. Then wish me better, I will give you leave.

King. We came to visit you; and purpose now To lead you to our court: vouchsafe it then. Prin. This field shall hold me: and so hold your vow:

Nor God, nor I, delight in perjur'd men. King. Rebuke me not for that which you provoke; The virtue of your eye must hreak my oath. Prin. You nickname virtue: vice you should have spoke; For virtue's office never breaks men's troth. Now, by my maiden honour, yet as pure

As the unsullied fily; I protest, A world of torments though I should endure, I would not yield to be your house's guest: So much I hate a breaking cause to he Of heavenly oaths, vow'd with integrity. King. O, you have liv'd in desolation here,

Unseen, unvisited, much to our shame. Prin. Not so, my lord; it is not so, I swear; We have had pastime here, and pleasant game;

Ay, in truth, my lord; Trim gallants, full of courtship and of state. Ros. Madam, speak true.-It is not so, my lord; My lady,—to the manner of the days,-In courtesy, gives undeserving praise. We four, indeed, confronted here with four In Russian hahit; here they stay'd an hour And talk'd apace; and in that hour, my lord, They did not hless us with one happy word. I dare not call them fools; but this I think, drink. sweet, Biron. This jest is dry to me.-Fair, gentle Your wit makes wise things foolish; when we greet -

When they are thirsty, fools would fain have

With eyes best seeing heaven's flery eye, By light we lose light: your capacity Is of that nature, that to your huge store
Wise things seem foolish and rich things hut my eye. poor.

Ros. This proves you wise and rich, for in Biron. I am a fool, and full of poverty. Ros. But that you take what doth to you helong, It were a fault to snatch words from my tongue. Biron. O, I am yours, and all that I possess. Ros. All the fool mine?

Biron. I cannot give you less. Ros. Which of the visards was it that you wore? Biron. Where? when? what visard? why demand you this? [ous case

Ros. There, then, that visard; that superflu-King. We are described: they'll mock us now downright.

Dum. Let us confess, and turn it to a jest. Prin. Amaz'd, my lord? why looks your highness sad?

Ros. Help, hold his hrows! he'll swoon! Why look you pale?-

King. Construe my speeches hetter, if you Sea-sick, I think, coming from Muscovy.

may:

Biron. Thus pour the stars down plagues for perjury.

Can any face of brass hold longer out?-Here stand I, lady: dart thy skill at me; Bruise me with scorn, confound me with a flout;

Thrust thy sharp wit quite through my ignorance;

Cut me to pieces with thy keen conceit; And I will wish thee never more to dance, Nor never more in Russian hahit wait. O, never will I trust to speeches penn'd,

Nor to the motion of a school-boy's tongue; Nor never come in visard to my friend Nor woo in rhyme, like a hlind harper's song:

Taffeta phrases, silken terms precise, Three-pil'd hyperholes, spruce affectation, Figures pendantical: these summer-flies

Have blown me full of maggot ostentation;

I do forswear them: and I here protest, By this white glove, -how white the hand. God knows!-

Henceforth my wooing mind shall be express'd In russet yeas, and honest kersey noes: And, to begin, wench,—so God help me, lal-My love to thee is sound, sans crack or flaw.

Ros. Sans sans, I pray you. Yet I have a trick Biron. Of the old rage: - bear with me, I am sick; I'll leave it hy degrees. Soft, let us see; Write, Lord have mercy on us, on those three; They are infected; in their hearts it lies: They have the plague, and caught it of your eyes: These lords are visited; you are not free, For the Lord's tokens on you do I see.

Prin. No, they are free that gave these tokens to us. Biron. Our states are forfeit: seek not to Ros. It is not so; for how can this he true, That you stand forfeit, being those that sue? Biron. Peace; for I will not have to do with you.

Bring me the fairest creature northward born, Where Phoebus' fire scarce thaws the icicles, And let us make incision for your love, To prove whose blood is reddest, his or mine. I tell thee lady, this aspect of mine Hath fear'd the valiant; by my love, I swear, The best-regarded virgins of our clime

Have lov'd it too: I would not change this hue
Except to steal your thoughts, my gentle queen.

Por. In terms of choice I am not solely led

Por. In terms of choice I am not solely led By nice direction of a maiden's eyes:
Besides, the lottery of my destiny
Bars me the right of voluntary choosing
But, if my father had not scanted me,
And hedg'd me by his wit, to yield myself
His wife who wins me by that means I told you,
Yourself, renowned prince, then stood as fair
As any comer I have look'd on yet
For my affection.

Even for that I thank you; Mor. Therefore, I pray you, lead me to the caskets, To try my fortune. By this scimitar, That slew the Sophy, and a Persian prince That won three fields of Sultan Solyman, I would out-stare the sternest eyes that look, Out-brave the heart most daring on the earth, Pluck the young sucking cubs from the she-bear, Yea, mock the lion when he roars for prey, To win thee, lady. But, alas the while! If Hercules and Lichas play at dice Which is the better man, the greater throw May turn by fortune from the weaker hand: So is Alcides beaten by his page And so may I, blind fortune leading me, Miss that which one unworthier may attain, And die with grieving.

Por. You must take your chance; And either not attempt to choose at all, Or swear before you choose, if you choose wrong, Never to speak to lady afterward

In way of marriage; therefore be advis'd.

Mor. Nor will not; come, bring me unto my chance.

Por. First, forward to the temple: after dinner

Your hazard shall be made.

Mor. Good fortune then!
To make me blest or cursed'st among men.
[Cornets and exeunt.

Scene II.—Venice. A Street. Enter Launcelot Gobbo.

Laun. Certainly my conscience will serve me to run from this Jew, my master. The fiend is at mine elbow, and tempts me, saying to me, Gobbo, Launcelot Gobbo, good Launcelot, or good Gobbo, or good Launcelot Gobbo, use your legs, take the start, run away. My conscience says, -No; take heed, honest Launcelot; take heed, honest Gobbo: or as aforesaid, honest Launcelot Gobbo; do not run, scorn run-ning with thy heels. Well, the most couragening with thy heels. ous fiend bids me pack: Via! says the fiend; away! says the fiend, for the heavens; rouse up a brave mind, says the fiend, and run. Well, my conscience, hanging about the neck of my heart, says very wisely to me,-My honest friend, Launcelot, being an honest man's son, my father did something smack, something grow to, he had a kind of taste;—well, my conscience says, Launcelot, budge not. Budge, says the fiend. Budge not, says my conscience. Conscience, say I, you counsel well; fiend, say I, you counsel well; to be ruled by my conscience, I should stay with the Jew, my master, who (God bless the mark!) is a kind of devil; and, to run away from the Jew, I should be ruled by the fiend, who, saving your reverence, is the devil himself. Certainly the Jew is the very devil incarnation: and, in my conscience, my conscience is but a kind of hard conscience, to offer to counsel me to stay with the Jew. The fiend gives the more friendly counsel: I will run, fiend; my heels are at your commandment; I will run.

Enter Old GOBBO, with a basket.

Gob. Master young man, you, I pray you,

which is the way to master Jew's?

Laun. [Aside.] O heavens, this is my true begotten fatherl who, being more than sandblind, high-gravel blind, knows me not:—I will try confusions with him.

Gob. Master young gentleman, I pray you,

which is the way to Master Jew's?

Laun. Turn up on your right hand at the next turning, but, at the next turning of all, on your left; marry, at the very next turning, turn of no hand, but turn down indirectly to the Jew's house.

Gob. By God's sonties, 'twill be a bard way to hit. Can you tell me whether one Launcelot, that dwells with him, dwell with him or no?

Laun. Talk you of young Master Launcelot?

—[Aside.] Mark me now; now will I raise the waters.—Talk you of young Master Launcelot?

Gob. No master, sir, but a poor man's son: his father, though I say it, is an honest exceeding poor man, and, God be thanked, well to live.

Laun. Well, let his father be what 'a will, we talk of young Master Launcelot. [sir.

Gob. Your worship's friend, and Launcelot, Laun. But I pray you, ergo, old man, ergo, I beseech you, talk you of young Master Launcelot? [ship.

Gob. Of Launcelot, an't please your master-Laun. Ergo, Master Launcelot. Talk not of Master Launcelot, father; for the young gentleman,—according to Fates and Destinies, and such odd sayings, the Sisters Three, and such branches of learning,—is indeed deceased; or as, you would say in plain terms, gone to heaven.

Gob. Marry, God forbidl the boy was the Laun. Do I look like a cudgel or a hovelpost, a staff or a prop?—Do you know me, father?

Gob. Alack the day, I know you not, young gentleman: but, I pray you, tell me, is my boy (God rest his soul!) alive or dead?

Laun. Do you not know me, father? Gob. Alack, sir, I am sand-blind, I know

Enter Sir Nathaniel, armed, for Alexander. Nath. When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander;

By east, west, north, and south I spread my conquering might:

My'scutcheon plain declares that I am Alisander. Boyet. Your nose says, no, you are not; for it stands too right.

Biron. Your nose smells no in this, most tender-smelling knight.

Prin. The conqueror is dismay'd .- Proceed, good Alexander. Nath. When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander:-[sander. Boyet. Most true, 'tis right; you were so, Ali-Biron. Pompey the Great,-Cost. Your servant, and Costard.

Biron. Take away the conqueror, take away Alisander.

Cost, O, sir [to NATH.], you have overthrown Alisander the conqueror! You will be scraped out of the painted cloth for this: your lion, that holds his poll-ax sitting on a close stool, will be given to Ajax: he will be the ninth worthy. A conqueror and afeard to speak! run away for shame, Alisander. [Sir NATH. retires.] There, an't shall please you; a foolish mild man; an honest man, look you, and soon dashed lhe is a marvellons good neighbour, insooth; and a very good bowler: but, for Alisander,—alas, yon see, how 'tis,—a little o'erparted.—But there are worthies a-coming will speak their mind in some other sort.

Prin. Stand aside, good Pompey.

Enter Holofernes, armed, for Judas; and MOTH, armed, for Hercules.

Hol. Great Hercules is presented by this imp, Whose club kil'd Cerberus, that three-headed canus;

And when he was a babe, a child, a shrimp, Thus did he strangle serpents in his manns: Quoniam he seemeth in minority, Ergo I come with this apology. Keep some state in thy exit, and vanish. [MOTH retires.

Judas I am,-Dum. A Judas!

Hol. Not Iscariot, sir,—

Judas I am, yelped Maccabaeus.

Dum. Judas Maccabaeus clipt is plain Judas.

Biron. A kissing traitor. How art thou proved Judas?

Hol. Judas I am,—

Dum. The more shame for you, Judas. Dum. The more shame for you, June Hol. What mean you, sir?
Boyet. To make Judas hang himself.

Hol. Begin, sir; you are my elder. Biron. Well followed: Judas was hanged on an elder. Hol. I will not be put out of countenance.

Biron. Because thou hast no face. Hol. What is this? Boyet. A cittern head. Dum. The head of a bodkin.

Biron. A death's face in a ring. [seen. Long. The face of an old Roman coin, scarce Boyet. The pummel of Caesar's faulchion. Dum. The carv'd-bone face on a flask.

Biron. St. George's half-cheek in a brooch. Dum. Ay, and in a brooch of lead.

Biron. Ay, and worn in the cap of a toothdrawer:

And now, forward; for we have put thee in countenance.

Hol. You have put me ont of countenance. Biron. False: we have given thee faces. Hol. But you have outfaced them all.

Biron. An thou wert a lion we would do so. Boyet. Therefore, as he is an ass, let him go. And so adieu, sweet Judel nay, why dost thon stav? Dum. For the latter end of his name. Biron. For the ass to the Jude; give it him:-

Jnd-as, away. Hol. This is not generous, not gentle, not been humble. Boyet. A light for Monsieur Judas! it grows dark, he may stumble. Prin. Alas, poor Maccabaens, how hath he been baited!

Enter ARMADO, armed, for Hector.

Biron. Hide thy head, Achilles: here comes

Hector in arms. Dum. Though my mocks come home by me, will now be merry. King. Hector was but a Trojan in respect of Bass. Well, we shall see your bearing. Gra. Ray, but I bar to-night; you shall not gage me

By what we do to-night,

Bass No, that were pity; I would entreat you rather to put on Your boldest suit of mirth, for we have friends That purpose merriment. But fare you well: I have some business.

Gra. And I must to Lorenzo and the rest; But we will visit you at supper-time.

Exeunt.

Exit.

SCENE III.—The same. A Room in SHY-LOCE'S House.

Enter Jessica and LauriceLot.

Jes. I am sorry thou wilt leave my father so: Our house is hell; and thou, a merry devil, Didst rob it of some taste of tediousness. But fare thee well; there is a ducat for thee; And, Launcelot, soon at supper shalt thou see Lorenzo, who is thy new master's quest: Give him this letter; do it secretly; And so farewell: I would not have my father See me in talk with thee.

Loun. Adieu!-tears exhibit my tongue. Most beautiful pagan, most sweet Jew! if a Christian did not play the knave, and get thee, I am much deceived. But, adieu! these foolish drops do somewhat drown my mealy spirit;

adien!

Jes. Farewell, good Launcelot. Alack, what heinous sin is it in me To be asham'd to be my father's child! But though I am a daughter to his blood, I am not to his manners. O Lorenzo, If thou keep promise, I shall end this strife. Become a Christian, and thy loving wife. Exit.

Scene IV.—The same. A Street.

Enter Gratiano, Lorenzo, Salarino, and SOLATIO.

Lor. Way, we will slink away in supper-time; Disguise us at my lodging, and return All in an hour.

Scene V.—The same. Before Seylock's House.

Enter SHYLOCK and LAUNCELOT.

Shy. Well, thou shalt see; thy eyes shall be thy judge, The difference of old Shylock and Bassamo:-What, Jessica!—thou shalt not gormandize As thou hast done with me; -What, Jessica!-And sleep and snore, and rend apparel out;-Why, Jessica, I say!

Laun. Why, Jessica! [call. Shy. Who bids thee call? I do not bid thee Loun. Your worship was wont to tell me I could do nothing without bidding.

Enter JESSICA.

Jes. Call you? what is your will? Shy. I am bid forth to suppe Jessica: There are my keys. -But wherefore should I go? I am not bid for love; they flatter me: But yet I'll go in hate, to feed upon The prodigal Christian.—Jessica, my girl, Look to my house .- I am right louth to go; There is some ill a-brewing towards my rest, For I did dream of money-bags to-night.

Form'd hy the eye, and therefore, like the eye, Full of strange shapes, of hahits, and of forms, Varying in subjects as the eye doth roll To every varied object in his glance: Which party-coated presence of loose love Put on by us, if in your heavenly eyes Have mishecom'd our oaths and gravities, Those heavenly eyes that look into these faults Therefore, ladies, Suggested us to make. Our love heing yours, the error that love makes Is likewise yours: we to ourselves prove false, By being once false, for ever to he true To those that make us hoth-fair ladies, you! And even that falsehood, in itself a sin, Thus purifies itself and turns to grace. Hove;

Prin. We have receiv'd your letter, full of Your favours, the amhassadors of love; And, in our maiden council, rated them At courtship, pleasant jest, and courtesy, As homhast, and as lining to the time: But more devout than this in our respects Have we not been; and therefore met your

We did not quote them so. Ros. King. Now, at the latest minute of the hour, Grant us your loves.

Prin. A time, methinks, too short To make a world-without-end bargain in. no, my lord, your grace is perjur'd much, Full of dear guiltiness; and therefore this,-If for my love -as there is no such cause-You will do aught, this shall you do for me: Your oath I will not trust; but go with speed To some forlorn and naked hermitage, Remote from all the pleasures of the world; There stay until the twelve celestial signs Have brought about their annual reckoning. If this austere insociable life Change not your offer, made in heat of blood; If frosts and fasts, hard lodging and thin weeds, Nip not the gaudy blossoms of your love, But that it bear this trial, and last love, Then, at the expiration of the year, Come, challenge, challenge me hy these deserts.

And, hy this virgin palm now kissing thine, I will he thine; and, till that instant, shut My woeful self up in a mournful house, Raining the tears of lamentation For the remembrance of my father's death. If this thou do deny, let our hands part, Neither intitled in the other's heart.

King. If this, or more than this, I would deny, To flatter up these powers of mine with rest, The sudden hand of death close up mine eye! Hence ever, then, my heart is in thy breast. Biron. And what to me, my love? and what to me? Ros. You must be purged too; your sins are rank;

You are attaint with faults and perjury; Therefore, if you my favour mean to get, A twelvemonth shall you spend, and never rest, But seek the weary heds of people sick.

Dum. But what to me, my love? but what to me?

Kath. A wifel-A beard, fair health, and honesty;

With threefold love I wish you all these three. Dum. O, shall I say I thank you, gentle wife?

Kath. Not so, my lord;—a twelvemonth and a day I'll mark no words that smooth-fac'd wooers Come when the king doth to my lady come, Then, if I have much love I'll give you some.

Dum. I'll serve thee true and faithfully till

Mar. At the twelvemonth's end I'll change my hlack gown for a faithful friend. Long. I'll stay with patience; but the time is long.

Mar. The liker you; few taller are so young. Biron. Studies my lady? mistress, look on me;

Behold the window of my heart, mine eye, What humble suit attends thy answer there!

Ros. Oft have I heard of you, my Lord Biron,

Before I saw you: and the world's large tongue Proclaims you for a man replete with mocks, Full of comparisons and wounding flouts, Which you on all estates will execute That lie within the mercy of your wit. To weed this wormwood from your fruitful brain. And therewithal to win me, if you please,-Without the which I am not to be won, You shall this twelvemonth term from day to dav Visit the speechless sick, and still converse With groaning wretches; and your task shall be, With all the fierce endeavor of your wit To enforce the painted impotent to smile. Biron. To move wild laughter in the throat of death!

It cannot he; it is impossible: Mirth cannot move a soul in agony.

Ros. Why, that's the way to choke a gihing spirit,

Whose influence is begot of that loose grace Which shallow laughing hearers give to fools: A jest's prosperity lies in the ear Of him that hears it, never in the tongue Of him that makes it: then, if sickly ears, Deaf'd with the clamours of their own dear groans.

Will hear your idle scorns, continue them. And I will have you and that fault withal; But if they will not, throw away that spirit, And I shall find you empty of that fault, Right joyful of your reformation.

Biron. A twelvemonth! well, befall what will hefall,

I'll jest a twelvemonth in an hospital.

Prin. Ay, sweet my lord; and so I take my To the KING. leave. King. No, madam: we will bring you on [play; your way. Biron. Our wooing doth not end like an old Jack hath not Jill: these ladies' courtesy Might well have made our sport a comedy.

Who chooseth me shall gain what many men desire.

The second, silver, which this promise carries;— Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves.

This third, dull lead, with warning all as blunt;— Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he hath.

How shall I know if I do choose the right?

Por. The one of them contains my picture,
prince;

If you choose that, then I am yours withal.
Mor. Some god direct my judgment! Let me see.

I will survey the inscriptions back again: What says this leaden casket?-[hath. Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he Must give—for what? for lead? hazard for lead? This casket threatens: men that hazard all Do it in hope of fair advantages: A golden mind stoops not to shows of dross: I'll then nor give nor hazard aught for lead. What says the silver with her virgin hue? Who chooseth meshall get as much as he deserves. As much as he deserves !- Pause there, Morocco, And weigh thy value with an even hand; If thou be'st rated by thy estimation, Thou dost deserve enough; and yet enough May not extend so far as to the lady; And yet to be afeard of my deserving Were but a weak disabling of myself. As much as I deserve!—Why, that's the lady: I do in birth deserve her, and in fortunes, In graces, and in qualities of breeding; But more than these, in love I do deserve. What if I stray'd no further, but chose here?-Let's see once more this saying grav'd in gold. Who chooseth me shall gain what many men

Why, that's the lady: all the world desires From the four corners of the earth they come, To kiss this shrine, this mortal hreathing saint. The Hyrcanian deserts and the vasty wilds Of wide Arabia are as throughfares now For princes to come view fair Portia: The wat'ry kingdom, whose ambitious head Spits in the face of heaven, is no bar To stop the foreign spirits; but they come, As o'er a brook, to see fair Portia. One of these three contains her heavenly picture.

Is't like that lead contains her? 'Twere dam-lie there,

Then I am yours. [He opens the golden casket. Mor. O hell what have we here? A carrion Death, within whose empty eye There is a written scroll! I'll read the writing.

All that glisters is not gold,— Often have you heard that told; Many a man his life hath sold But my outside to behold; Gilded tombs do worms infold. Had you been as wise as bold, Young in limbs, in judgment old, Your answer had not been inscroll'd Fare you well; your suit is cold.

Cold indeed, and labour lost:
Then, farewell heat; and, welcome frost.—
Portia, adieu! I have too griev'd a heart
To take a tedious leave: thus losers part.

Por. A gentle riddance.—Draw the curtains, go.

Let all of his complexion choose me so.

SCENE VIII .- VENICE. A Street.

Enter Salarino and Solanio.

Salar. Why, man, I saw Bassanio under sail; With him is Gratiano gone along; And in their ship I am sure Lorenzo is not. Solan. The villain Jew with outcries rais'd the duke,

Who went with him to search Bassanio's ship.
Salar. He came too late, the ship was under sail:

But there the duke was given to understand
That in a gondola were seen together
Lorenzo and his amorous Jessica:

Lorenzo and his amorous Jessica: Besides, Antonio certify'd the duke They were not with Bassanio in his ship.

Solan. I never heard a passion so confused, So strange, outrageous, and so variable As the dog Jew did utter in the streets: As the daughter!—O my ducats!—O my daughter! Fled with a Christian!—O my Christian ducats!—

Justice! the law! my ducats and my daughter! A sealed bag, two sealed bags of ducats, Of double ducats, stolen from me by my daughter!

And jewels,—two stones, two rich and precious stones,

Stolen by my daughter!—Justice! find the girl!
She hath the stones upon her and the ducats!

Solan. Let good Antonio look he keep his day,

Or he shall pay for this.

Salar. Marry, well remember'd; I reason'd with a Frenchman yesterday, Who told me,—in the narrow seas that part The French and English, there miscarried A vessel of our country richly fraught: I thought upon Antonio when he told me, And wish'd in silence that it were not his.

Solan. You were best to tell Antonio what you hear;

Yet do not suddenly, for it may grieve him.

Salar. A kinder gentleman treads not the earth.

I saw Bassanio and Antonio part: Bassanio told him he would make some speed Of his return; he answer'd—Do not so;

PORTIA, a rich Heiress. NERISSA, her Waiting-maid. JESSICA, Daughter to SHYLOCK.

Magnificoes of Venice, Officers of the Court of Justice, Gaoler, Servants, and other Attendants.

Scene,-Partly at Venice, and partly at Belmont, the scat of Portia, on the Continent.

ACT I.

Scene I.—Venice. A Street.

- Enter Antonio, Salarino, and Solanio.

Ant. In sooth, I know not why I am so sad:
It wearies me; you say it wearies you;
But how I canght it, found it, or came by it,
What stuff 'tis made of, whereof it is born,
I am to learn;

And such a want-wit sadness makes of me That I have much ado to know myself.

Salar. Your mind is tossing on the ocean, There, where your argosies, with portly sail,—Like signiors and rich burghers of the flood, Or, as it were, the pageants of the sea,—Do overpeer the petty traffickers
That curt'sy to them, do them reverence, As they fly by them with their woven wings.

Solan. Believe me, sir, had I such venture forth,

The better part of my affections would Be with my hopes abroad. I should be still Plucking the grass, to know where sits the wind;

Peering in maps for ports, and piers, and roads; And every object that might make me fear Misfortune to my ventures, ont of donbt Would make me sad.

Salar. My wind, cooling my broth, Would blow me to an ague when I thought What harm a wind too great might do at sea. I should not see the sandy hour-glass run But I should think of shallows and of flats, And see my wealthy Andrew dock'd in sand, Vailing her high-top lower than her ribs, To kiss her burial. Should I go to church, And see the holy edifice of stone, Por. No more, I pray thee; I am half afcard Thou wilt say anon he is some kin to thee, Thou spend'st such high-day wit in praising him.

Come, come, Nerissa; for I long to see Quick Cupid's post, that comes so mannerly. Ner. Bassanio, lord Love, if thy will it hel Exeunt.

ACT III.

Scene I.—Venice. A Street

Enter Solanio and Salarino. Solan. Now, what news on the Rialto? Salar. Why, yet it lives there unchecked that Antonio hath a ship of rich lading wrecked on the narrow seas; the Goodwins I think they call the place; a very dangerous flat and fatal. where the carcases of many a tall ship lie buried. as they say, if my gossip report be an honest woman of her word.

Solon. I would she were as lying a gossip in that as ever knapped ginger or made her neighbours believe she wept for the death of a third husband. But it is true, -without any slips of prolixity or crossing the plain highway of talk, -that the good Antonio, the honest Antonio, O that I had a title good enough to keep his name companyl-

Solar. Come, the full stop. Solan. Ha, -what sayest thou? - Why the end is, he hath lost a ship.

Salar. I would it might prove the end of his lossesi

Solan. Let me say amen betimes, lest the devil cross my prayer; for here he comes in the likeness of a Jew.

Enter SHYLOCK.

How now, Shylock? what news among the merchants?

Shy. You knew, none so well, none so well as you, of my daughter's flight.

Salar. That's certain: I, for my part, knew the tailor that made the wings she flew withal. Solan. And Shylock, for his own part, knew the bird was fledg'd; and then it is the complexion of them all to leave the dam.

Shy. She is damned for it.

Salar. That's certain, if the devil may be her judge.

Shy. My own flesh and blood to rebell Solan. Ont upon it, old carrioul rebels it at these years? Shy. I say my daughter is my flesh and blood.

Salar. There is more difference between thy Hesh and hers than hetween jet and ivory; more between your bloods than there is hetween red wine and Rhenish .- But tell us, do you hear whether Antonio have had any loss at sea or no? Shy. There I have another bad match: a bankrupt, a prodigal, who dare scarce show his head on the Rialto; -a beggar, that was used to come so amug upon the mart;-let him look to his bond! he was wont to call me nsurer; lot him look to his bond! he was wont to lend money for a Christian courtesy;-let him look to his bond.

Salar. Why, I am sure if he forfeit thou wilt not take his flesh. What's that good for?

Shy. To bait fish withal: if it will feed nothing else it will feed my revenge. He hath disgraced me and hindered me of half a million: laughed at my losses, mocked at my gains, scorned my nation, thwarted my bargains. cooled my friends, heated mine enemies and what's his reason? I am a Jewl Hath not a Jew eyes? hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions? fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same winter and summer as a Christian is? If you prick us, do we not bleed? if you ticklo us, do we not laugh? if you poison us, do we not die? and if you wrong us, shall we not revenge? If we are like you in the rest, we will resemble you in that .- If a Jew wrong a Christian, what is his humility? revenge. If a Christian wrongs a Jew, what should his sufferance be by Christian example? why, revenge. Tho villany you teach me I will execute; and it shall go hard but . I will better the instruction.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Gentlemen, my master Antonio is at his house, and desires to speak with you both. Solar. We have been up and down to seek him

Solon. Here comes another of the tribe; a third cannot be matched unless the devil himself turn Tew.

Exeunt SOLAN., SALAR., and Serv.

Enter TUBAL.

Shy. How now, Tubal, what news from Genoa? hast thou found my daughter?

Tub. I often came where I did hear of her, ...

but cannot find her.

Shy. Why there, there, there, therel 2 diamond gone, cost me two thousand ducats in Frankfort! The curse never fell upon our nation till now; I never felt it till now:-two thousand ducats in that; and other precious, precious jewels.-I would my daughter were dead at my foot, and the jewels in her earl would she were hearsed at my foot, and the ducats in her coffin! No news of them?-Why. so: - and I know not what's spent in the search. Why, thou loss upon loss! the thief gone with so much, and so much to find the thief; and no satisfaction, no revenge: nor no ill luck stirring but what lights o'my shoulders; no sighs but o' my breathing; no tears but o' my shedding.

Tub. Yes, other men have ill luck too;
Antonio, as I heard in Genoa,
Shy. What, what, what? ill luck, ill luck? Tub. -hath an argosy cast away coming from Tripolis.

Shy. I thank God, I thank God.-Is it true? is it true?

Tub. I spoke with some of the sailors that escaped the wreck.

Shy. I thank thee, good Tubal.-Good news, good news: hal hal-Where? in Genoa?

Tub. Your daughter spent in Genoa, as I heard one night, fourscore ducats.

To shoot another arrow that self-way Which you did shoot the first, I do not donbt, As I will watch the aim, or to find hoth Or hring your latter hazard hack again, And thankfully rest debtor for the first. (time

Ant. You know me well, and herein spent hut To wind about my love with circumstance; And out of doubt you do me now more wrong, In making question of my uttermost, Than if you had made waste of all I have. Then do hut say to me what I should do, That in your knowledge may hy me he done, And I am press'd unto it: therefore, speak.

Bass. In Belmont is a lady richly left, And she is fair, and fairer than that word, Of wondrous virtues: sometimes from her eyes I did receive fair speechless messages: Her name is Portia; nothing undervalued To Cato's daughter, Brutus' Portia. Nor is the wide world ignorant of her worth; For the four winds blow in from every coast Renowned suitors, and her sunny locks Hang on her temples like a golden fleece; Which makes her seat of Belmont Colchos' strand, Neither have I money nor commodity To raise a present sum: therefore so forth; Try what my credit can in Venice do: That shall he rack'd, even to the uttermost, To furnish thee to Belmont, to fair Portia. Go, presently inquire, and so will I, Where money is; and I no question make To have it of my trust or for my sake.

Exeunt.

SCENE II .- BELMONT. A Room in PORTIA'S House.

Enter PORTIA and NERISSA.

Por. By my troth, Nerissa, my little hody is a-weary of this great world.

Ner. You would he, sweet madam, if your miseries were in the same abundance as your good fortunes are: and yet for aught I see, they are as sick as that surfeit with too much as they that starve with nothing. It is no mean happiness, therefore, to he seated in the mean: superfluity comes sooner by white hairs, but competency lives longer.

Por. Good sentences, and well pronounced. Ner. They would he hetter if well followed.

Por. If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had heen churches, and poor men's cottages princes' palaces. It is a good divine that follows his own instructions: I can easier teach twenty what were good to be done, than he one of the twenty to follow mine own teaching. The hrain may devise laws for the blood, but a hot temper leaps over a cold decree; such a hare is madness, the youth, to skip o'er the meshes of good council, the cripple. But this reasoning is not in the fashion to choose me a hushand.—O me, the word choosel I he is drunk; when he is hest he is a little worse may neither choose whom I would nor refuse than a man; and when he is worst, he is little whom I dislike; so is the will of a living daughter curhed by the will of a dead father .-Is it not hard, Nerissa, that I cannot choose one, nor refuse none?

Ner. Your father was ever virtuous; and holy men, at their death, have good inspirations; therefore, the lottery that he hath devised in these three chests of gold, silver, and lead, whereof who chooses his meaning chooses you, -will, no doubt, never he chosen hy any rightly hut one who you shall rightly love. But what warmth is there in your affection towards any of these princely suitors that are already come?

Por. I pray thee, over-name them; and as thou namest them, I will describe them; and according to my description, level at my affection.

Ner. First, there is the Neapolitan prince.

Por. Ay, that's a colt indeed, for he doth nothing but talk of his horse; and he makes it a great appropriation to his own good parts that he can shoe him himself: I am much afraid my lady his mother played false with a smith.

Ner. Then is there the County Palatine.

Por. He doth nothing hat frown: as who should say, An if you will not have me, choose: he hears merry tales and smiles not: I fear he will prove the weeping philosopher when he grows old, heing so full of numennerly sadness in his youth. Ner. How say you by the French lord, Monsieur Le Bon?

Por. God made him, and therefore let him pass for a man. In truth, I know it is a sin to be a mocker: hut, he! why, he hath a horse hetter than the Neapolitan's; a hetter had hahit of frowning than the Count Palatine: he is every man and no man; if a throstle sing he falls straight a-capering; he will fence with his own shadow: if I should marry him I should marry twenty husbands. If he would despise me I would forgive him; for if he love me to madness I shall never requite him.

Ner. What say you then to Falconbridge, the young baron of England?

Por. You know I say nothing to him; for he understands not me, nor I him: he hath neither Latin, French, nor Italian: and you will come into the court and swear that I have a poor pennyworth in the English. He is a proper man's picture; hut, alas! who can converse with a dumh show? How oddly he is suited! I think, he hought his doublet in Italy, his round hose in France, his honnet in Germany, and his hehaviour everywhere.

Ner. What think you of the Scottish lord, his neighbour?

Por. That he hath a neighbourly charity in him; for he horrowed a hox of the ear of the Englishman, and swore he would pay him again when he was able: I think the Frenchman hecame his surety, and sealed under for another. Ner. How like you the young German, the Duke of Saxony's nephew?

Por. Very vilely in the morning when he is soher; and most vilely in the afternoon when he is drunk; when he is hest he is a little worse To entrap the wisest. Therefore, thou gaudy gold,

Hard food for Midss, I will none of thee: Nor none of thee, thou pale and common drudge 'Tween man and man: but thou, thou meagre

I come by note, to give and to receive. Like one of two contending in a prize, That thinks he hath done well in people's eyes, Hearing applause and universal shout, Giddy in spirit, still gazing, in a doubt Whether those peals of praise be his or no, So, thrice, fair lady, stand I even so; As doubtful whether what I see be true, Until confirm'd, sign'd, ratified by you. Por. You see me, Lord Bassanio, where I stand. Such as I am: though for myself alone I would not be ambitious in my wish To wish myself much better; yet for you I would be trebled twenty times myself; A thousand times more fair, ten thousand times More rich;

That only to stand high in your account I might in virtues, beanties, livings, friends, Exceed account: but the full sum of me Is sum of something, which, to term in gross, But who comes here? Lorenzo and his infide Is an unlesson'd girl, unschool'd, unpractis'd: What, and my old Venetian friend, Solanio!

Happy in this, she is not yet so old But she may learn; and happier than this. She is not bred so dull but she can learn; Happiest of all is, that her gentle spirit Commits itself to yours to be directed, As from her lord, her governor, her king. Myself, and what is mine, to you and yours Is now converted: hut now I was the lord Of this fair mansion, master of my servants, Queen o'er myself; and even now, but now This house, these servants, and this same myself

Are yours, my lord; I give them with this ring. Which when you part from, lose, or give away, Let it presage the ruin of your love. And be my vantage to exclaim on you.

Bass. Madam, you have bereft me of all words;

Only my blood speaks to you in my veins: And there is such confusion in my powers, As, after some oration fairly spoke By a beloved prince, there doth appear Among the buzzing pleased multitude, Where every something, being blent together, Turns to a wild of nothing, save of joy, [ring Express'd, and not express'd. But when this Parts from this finger, then parts life from hence:

O, then, be bold to say Bassanio's dead.

Ner. My lord and lady, it is now our time That have stood by and seen our wishes prosper

To cry, good joy. Good joy, my lord and lady! Gra. My Lord Bassanio, and my gentle lady, I wish you all the joy that you can wish; For I am sure you can wish none from me: And, when your honours mean to solemnize The bargain of your faith, I do beseech you, Even at that time I may be married too.

Bass. With all my heart, so thou canst get a wife.

Gra. I thank your lordship; you have got me one.

My eyes, my lord, can look as swift as yours: You saw the mistress, I heheld the maid; You lov'd, I lov'd; for intermission No more pertains to me, my lord, than you. Your fortune stood npon the caskets there, And so did mine too, as the matter falls: For wooing here until I sweat again, And swearing till my very roof was dry With oaths of love, at last,—if promise last, I got a promise of this fair one here, To have her love provided that your fortune Achiev'd her mistress.

Is this true, Nerissa? Por. Ner. Madam, it is, so you stand pleas'd withal.

Bass. And do you, Gratiano, mean good faith?

Gra. Yes, faith, my lord.

Bass. Our feast shall be much honour'd in your marriage.

Gra. We'll play with them, the first boy for a thousand ducats.

Ner. What, and stake down?

Gra. No; we shall ne'er win at that sport, and stake down.-

But who comes here? Lorenzo and his infidel?

This Jacob from nur holy Abraham was— As his wise mother wrought in his hehalf— The third possessor; ay, he was the third,—
Ant. And what of him? did he take interest?

Shy. No, not take interest; not, as you would say,

Directly interest: mark what Jecoh did. When Lahan and himself were compromis'd That all the eanlings which were streak'd and pied frank. Should fall as Jacob's hire; the ewes, heing In end of autumn turned to the rams:

And when the work of generation was Between these wooly breeders in the act. The skilful shepherds peel'd me certain wands, And, in the doing of the deed of kind, He stuck them up hefore the fulsome ewes, Who, then conceiving, did in eaning time Fall party-colour'd lambs, and those were Jacoh's.

This was a way to thrive, and he was hlest; And thrift is blessing if men steal it not.

Ant. This was n venture, sir, that Jacob serv'd for; A thing not in his power to hring to pass, But sway'd and fashion'd by the hand of heaven. Was this inserted to make interest good?

Or is your gold and silver ewes and rams? Shy. I cannot tell; I make it breed as fast:-

But note me, signior.

Mark you this, Bassanio, Ant. The devil can cite scripture for his purpose. An evil soul producing boly witness Is like a villain with n smiling cheek-A goodly apple rotten at the heart O, what a goodly outside falsebood bathl to you? Shy. Signior Antonio, many n time and oft, In the Rialto, you have rated me About my moneys and my usances: Still have I horne it with n patient shrug; For sufferance is the hadge of all our tribe: Ynu call me misheliever, cut-throat dog, And spit upon my Jewish gaberdine, And all for use of that which is mine own. Well, then, it now appears you need my help: Go to, then; you come to me, and you say, Shylock, we would have moneys: -you say so; You, that did void your rheum upon my heard, And foot me na you apurn n atranger cur Over your threshold: moneys is your suit.

What should I say to you? Should I not say,
Hath a dog money? is it possible A cur can lend three thousand ducats? or Sball I bend low, and in n hondman's key, With 'hated broath and whispering humbleness, Say this?-Fair sir, you spit on me on Wednesday last. You spurn'd me such a day; another time

I'll lend you thus much moneys. Ant. I nm as like to call thee so again, To spit on thee again, to spurn thee ton. If thou wilt lend this money, lend it not As to thy friends, (for when did friendship take A breed for barren metal of his friend?)

You call'd me dog; and for these courtesies

But lend it rather to thine enemy, Who if he hreak, thou mayst with hetter face Exact the penalty

Shy. Why, look you, how you storm! I would be friends with you, and have your love.

Forget the shames that you have stain'd me with. Supply your present wants, and take no doit Of usance for my moneys, and you'll not hear me: This is kind I offer.

Bass. This were kindness.

Shy. This kindness will I show. -Go with mo to a notary, seal me there Your single hend; and, in a merry sport, If you repay me not nn such a day, In such a place, such a sum or sums as are Express'd in the condition, let the forfeit Be nominated for an equal pound Of your fair flesh, to he cut off and taken

Bass. You shall not seal to such a bond for me: I'll rather dwell in my necessity.

Ant. Why fear not, man; I will not forfeit Within these two months-that's n month hefore

This hand expires—I do expect return Of thrice three times the value of this bond. Shy. O fether Abraham, what these Christians are.

Whose own hard dealings teeches them suspect The thoughts of others! Pray you, tell me this; If he should break his day, what should I gain Shy. Three thousand ducats,—its n good by the executed of the local from a man, round sum.

To buy his favour I extend this friendsbip; If be will take it, so; if not, adieu;

And for my love, I pray you wrong me not.

Ant. Yes, Sbylock, I will seal unto this hond. Shy. Then meet me forthwith at the notary's; Give him direction for this merry head, And I will go and purse the ducats straight, See to my honse, left in the fearful guard Of an unthrifty knave, and presently

I will be with you. Ant. Hio thee, gentle Jew;

Exit SHYLOCK. This Hehrew will turn Christian: he grows hind. [mind.

Bass. I like not fair terms and a villain's Ant. Come on; in this there can be no diamay;

My ships come bome a month hefore the day. Excunt.

ACT II.

Scene L.-Belmont. A Room in Portia's House.

Flourish of Cornels. Enter the PRINCE OF MOROCCO and his Train; PORTIA, NERISSA and other of her Attendants.

Mor. Mislike me not for my complexion, The shadow'd livery of the burnish'd sun, To whom I am a neighbour, and near hred. This is the fool that lent out money gratis.—Gaoler, look to him.

Ant. Hear me yet, good Shylock. Shy. I'll have my hond: speak not against my hond.

I have sworn an oath that I will have my hond. Thou call dst me dog before thou hadst a cause: But, since I am a dog, beware my fangs: The duke shall grant me justice.—I do wonder, Thou naughty gaoler, that thou art so fond To come abroad with him at his request.

Ant. I pray thee, hear mo speak.

Shy. I'll have my bond; I will not hear thee speak:

I'll have my bond; and therefore speak no more.

I'll not he made a soft and dull-ey'd fool.
To shake the head, relent, and sigh, and yield
To Christian intercessors. Follow not;
I'll have no speaking: I will have my bond.
[Exit.

Solar. It is the most impenetrable cur. That ever kept with men.

Ant. Let him alone;
I'll follow him no more with bootless prayers.
He seeks my life; his reason well I know:
I oft deliver'd from his forfeitures
Many that have at times made moan to me;
Therefore he hates me.

Salar. I am sure the duke
Will never grant this forfeiture to hold.
Ant. The duke cannot deny the course of law;

For the commodity that strangers have
With us in Venice, if it be denied,
Will much impeach the justice of the state;
Since that tho trade and profit of the city
Consisteth of all nations. Therefore, go:
These griefs and losses have so hated me
That I shall hardly spare a pound of flesh
To-morrow to my hloody creditor.—
Well, gaoler, on.—Pray God, Bassanio come
To see me pay his debt, and then I care not!

SCENE IV.—BELMONT. A Room in PORTIA'S House.

Enter Portia, Nerissa, Lorenzo, Jessica and Balthazar.

Lor. Madam, although I speak it in your presence,

You have a noble and true conceit
Of god-like amity, which appears most strongly
In bearing thus the absence of your lord.
But if you knew to whom you show this honour,
How true a gentleman you send relief,
How dear a lover of my lord your husband,
I know you would be prouder of the work
Than customary bounty can enforce you.

Por. I never did repent for doing good,
Nor shall not now: for in companions
That do converse and waste the time together,
Whose souls do bear an equal yoke of love;
There must be needs a like proportion
Of lineaments, of manners, and of spirit,
Which makes me think that this Antonio,
Being the hosom lover of my lord.
Must needs be like my lord. If it he so,
How little is the cost I have bestow'd
In purchasing the semblance of my soul

From out the state of hellish cruelty!
This comes too near the praising of myself;
Therefore, no more of it: hear other things.
Lorenzo, I commit into your hands
The husbandry and manage of my house
Until my lord'a return: for mine own part,
I have toward heaven breath'd a secret vow
To live in prayer and contemplation,
Only attended by Nerissa here,
Until her husband and my lord's return:
There is a monastery two miles off,
And there we will abide. I do desire you
Not to deny this imposition,
The which my love and some necessity
Now lays upon you.

Lor. Madam, with all my heart I shall obey you in all fair commands.

Por. My people do already know my mind, And will acknowledge you and Jessica In place of Lord Bassanio and myself. So fare you well till we shall meet again.

Lor. Fair thoughts and happy hours attend on you?

Jes. I wish your ladyship all heart's content.

Por. I thank you for your wish, and am well pleas'd

To wish it back on you: fare you well, Jessica.—
[Exeunt JESSICA and LORENZO.

Now, Balthazar,
As I have ever found thee honest, true,
Solet me find thee still. Take this same letter,
And use thou all the endeavour of a man
In speed to Padua; see thou render this Into my cousin's hand, Doctor Bellario;
And, look, what notes and garments he doth give thee

Bring them, I pray thee, with imagin'd speed Unto the tranect, to the common ferry (words,
Which trades to Venice:—waste no time in
But get thee gone; I shall be there before thee.

Bulth. Madam, I go with all convenient speed. [Exit.

Por. Come on, Nerissa; I have work in hand That you yet know not of: we'll see our husbands

Before they think of us.

Shall they see us? Por. They shall, Nerissa; but in such a habit That they shall think we are accomplished With that we lack. I'll hold thee any wager, When we are both accouter'd like young men, . I'll prove the prettier fellow of the two, And wear my dagger with the hraver grace; And speak, between the change of man and boy, With a reed voice; and turn two mincing steps Into a manly stride; and speak of frays, Like a fine bragging youth: and tell quaint lies, How honourable ladies sought my love, Which I denying, they fell sick and died; I could not do withal: then I'll repent, And wish, for all that, that I had not kill'd them:

And twenty of these puny lies I'll tell,
That men shall sweer I have discontinued

Laun. In very brief, the suit is impertinent to myself, as your worship shall know by this honest old man; and, though I say it, though old man, yet, poor man, my father.

Lcun. Serve you, sir.

Gob. That is the very defect of the matter, sir. Bass. I know thee well; thou hast obtain'd thy suit:

Shylock, thy master, spoke with me this day, And hath preferr'd thee—if it be preferment To leave a rich Jew's service, to become The follower of so poor a gentleman

Duke. Go one, and call the Jew into the court. [my lord. Solan. He's ready at the door: he comes, Enter SHYLOCK.

Duke. Make room, and let him stand before our face.—

Shylock, the world thinks, and I think so too,
That thou but lead'st this fashion of thy malice
To the last hour of act; and then, 'tis thought, Thou'lt show thy mercy and remorse, more strange

Than is thy strange apparent cruelty;
And where thou now exact'st the penalty,—
Which is a pound of this poor merchant's flesh,—

Thou wilt not only lose the forfeiture, But, touch'd with human gentleness and love, Forgive a moiety of the principal, Glancing an eye of pity on his losses, That have of late so huddled on his back; Enough to press a royal merchant down, And pluck commiseration of his state From hrassy hosoms and rough hearts of flint, From stuhhorn Turks and Tartars, nevertrain'd To offices of tender courtesy. We all expect a gentle answer, Jew.

Shy. I have possess'd your grace of what I purpose: And hy our holy Sabhath have I sworn To have the due and forfeit of my hond. If you deny it, let the danger light Upon your charter and your city's freedom. You'll ask me why I rather choose to have A'weight of carrion flesh than to receive Three thousand ducats: I'll not answer that: But say, it is my humour. Is it answered? What if my house be troubled with a rat, And I be pleas'd to give ten thousand ducats To have it baned? What, are you answer'd yet? Some men there are love not a gaping pig; Some that are mad if they hehold a cat; And others, when the hagpipe sings i' the nose Cannot contain their urine; for affection, Master of passion, sways it to the mood Of what it likes or loathes. The slaves are ours:—So do I answer yon;

The pound of flesh which I demand of him
Is dearly bought, is mine, and I will havo it:
If you deny me, fie upon your law!
There is no force in the decrees of Venice.—
I stand for judgment: answer: shall I have it?
Duke. Upon my power I may dismiss this

To keep obliged faith unforfeited! [feast Gra. That ever holds; who riseth from a With that keen appetite that he sits down? Where is the horse that doth untread again His tedious measures with the unbated fire That he did pace them first? All things that are, Are with more spirit chased than enjoy'd. How like a yonker or a prodigal The scarfed bank puts from her native bay, Hngg'd and embraced by the strumpet wind! How like the prodigal doth she return, With over-weather'd ribs and ragged sails, Lean, rent, and beggar'd by the strumpet wind! Salar. Here comes Lorenzo; -more of this hereafter.

Enter LORENZO.

Lor. Sweet friends, your patience for my long abode; Not I, but my affairs, have made you wait: When you shall please to play the thieves for wives

I'll watch as long for you then.—Approach; Here dwells my father Jew .- Ho! who's within?

Enter Jessica, above, in boy's clothes Jes. Who are you? Tell me, for more certeinty, Albeit I'll swear that I do know your tongue.

Lor. Lorenzo, and thy love.

Jes. Lorenzo, certain; and my love indeed;
For who love I so much? and now who knows But you, Lorenzo, whether I am yours?

Lor. Heaven and thy thoughts are witness (pains. that thou art.

Jes. Here, catch this casket; it is worth the I am glad 'tis night, you do not look on me, For I am much asham'd of my exchange: But love is blind, and lovers cannot see The pretty follies that themselves commit; For if they could, Cupid himself would blush To see me thus transformed to a boy.

Lor. Descend, for you must be my torchbearer. [shames?

Jes. What I must I hold a candle to my They in themselves, good sooth, are too, too light.

Why 'tis an office of discovery, love; And I should be obscur'd.

Lor. So are you, sweet, Even in the lovely gamish of a boy. But come at once;

For the close night doth play the runsway, And we are stay'd for at Bassanio's feast. Jes. I will make fast the doors, and gild myself With some more ducats, and be with you

Exit, abore. streight. Gra. Now, by my hood, a Gentile, and no Jew.

Lor. Beshrew me, but I love her heartily: For she is wise, if I can judge of her; And fair she is, if that mine eyes be true And true she is, as she hath prov'd herself; And therefore, like herself, wise, fair, and true. Shall she be placed in my constant soul.

Enter JESSICA, below.

What, art thou come?—On, gentlemen, away; Our masquing mates by this time for us stay. Exit, with JES. and SALAR.

Enfer ANTONIO.

Ant. Who's there? Gra. Signior Antonio!

Ant. Fie, fie, Gratianol where are all the rest?

'Tis nine o'clock: our friends all stay for you:-No mask to-night; the wind is come about;

Bassanio presently will go aboard:

I have sent twenty ont to seek for you. Gra. I am glad on't; I desire no more delight Than to be under sail, and gone to-night. Exeunt.

Scene VIL-Belmont. A Room in PORTIA'S House.

Flourish of Cornets. Enter PORTIA, with the PRINCE OF MOROCCO, and their Trains.

Per. Go draw aside the curtains, and discover

The several caskets to this noble prince.— Now make your choice.

Mor. The first of gold, who this inscription bears;-

Por. Why then, thus it is. You must prepare your bosom for his knife:

Shy. O noble judge! O excellent young man! Por. For the intent and purpose of the law Hath full relation to the penalty,

Which here appeareth due upon the bond. Shy. 'Tis very true: O wise and upright judge,

How much more elder art thou than thy looks! Por. Therefore, lay bare your bosom.

Shy. Ay, his breast: So says the bond;—doth it not, noble judge?-Nearest his heart: those are the very words. Por. Itisso. Are there balance here to weigh

The flesh?

Shy. I have them ready. Por. Have by some surgeon, Shylock, on your charge,

To stop his wounds, lest he do bleed to death. Shy. Is it so nominated in the bond? Por. It is not so express'd; but what of that? 'Twere good you do so much for charity.

Shy. I cannot find it; 'tis not in the bond. Por. Come, merchant, have you anything to say? par'd.

Ant. But little; I am arm'd and well pre-Give me your hand, Bassanio; fare you well Grieve not that I am fallen to this for you; For herein fortune shows herself more kind Than is her custom: it is still her use To let the wretched man out-live his wealth, To view with hollow eye and wrinkled brow An age of poverty; from which lingering penance

Of such misery doth she cut me off. Commend me to your honourable wife: Fell her the process of Antonio's end; Say how I lov'd you; speak me fair in death; And, when the tale is told, bid her be judge Whether Bassanio had not once a love. Repent not you that you shall lose your friend. And he repents not that he pays your debt; For, if the Jew do cut but deep enough, I'll pay it instantly with all my heart.

Bass. Antonio, I am married to a wife Which is as dear to me as life itself; But life itself, my wife, and all the world Are not with me esteem'd above thy life; I would lose all, ay, sacrifice them all Here to this devil, to deliver you.

Por. Your wife would give you little thanks for that.

If she were by to hear you make the offer. Gra. I have a wife whom, I protest, I love; I would she were in heaven, so she could Entreat some power to change this currish Jew. Ner 'Tis well you offer it behind her back; The wish would make else an unquiet house.

Shy. These be the Christian husbands: I have a daughter;

Would any of the stock of Barrabas Had been her husband, rather than a Christianl [Aside.

We trifle time; -I pray thee, pursue sentence. Por. A pound of that same merchant's flesh is thine:

The court awards it and the law doth give it. Shy. Most rightful judgel [his breast; Por. And you must cut this flesh from off The law allows it and the court awards it.

Shu. Most learned judgel-A sentence; come prepare. Por. Tarry a little; there is something else. This bond doth give thee here no jot of blood; The words expressly are a pound of flesh: Take then thy bond, take thou thy pound of flesh;

But, in the cutting, if thou dost shed One drop of Christian blood, thy lands and goods

Are, by the laws of Venice, confiscate Unto the state of Venice. [learned judge! Gra. O upright judgel-Mark, Jew;-0 Shy. Is that the law?

Por. Thyself shall see the act; For, as thou urgest justice, be assur'd Thou shalt have justice, more than thou desir'st, Gra. O learned judgel-Mark, Jew:-learned judgel Ithrice, Shy. I take this offer then, pay the bond And let the Christian go.

Bass. Here is the money. Por. Soft; haste:-The Jew shall have all justice:-soft;-no He shall have nothing but the penalty.

Gra. O Jewl an upright judge, a learned judgel

Por. Therefore, prepare thee to cut off the Shed thou no blood; nor cut thou less nor more But just a pound of flesh: if thou tak'st more Or less than a just pound,—be it but so much As makes it light or heavy in the substance, Or the division of the twentieth part Of one poor scruple: nay, if the scale do turn But in the estimation of a hair,-

Thou diest, and all thy goods are confiscate. Gra. A second Daniel, a Daniel, Jewl . Now, infidel, I have thee on the hip.

Por. Why doth the Jew pause? take thy forfeiture.

Shy. Give me my principal, and let me go. Bass. I have it ready for thee; here it is. Por. He hath refus'd it in the open court;

He shall have merely justice, and his bond. Gra. A Daniel, still say II a second Daniell-I thank thee, Jew, for teaching me that word.

Shy. Shall I not have barely my principal?

Por. Thou shalt have nothing but the forfeiture

To be so taken at thy peril, Jew. Shy. Why, then the devil give him good of it! I'll stay no longer question. Tarry, Jew; Por.

The law hath yet another hold on you. It is enacted in the laws of Venice,-If it be prov'd against an alien, That by direct or indirect attempts He seck the life of any citizen, The party gainst the which he doth contrive Shall seize one half his goods; the other half Comes to the privy coffer of the state; And the offender's life lies in the mercy Of the duke only, 'gainst all other voice. In which predicament, I say, thou stand st; For it appears by manifest proceeding, That indirectly, and directly too, Thou hast contriv'd against the very life

Of the defendant; and thou hast incurr'd

The danger formerly by me rehears'd. Down, therefore, and beg mercy of the duke. Shibber not business for my sake, Bassanio, But stay the very riping of the time; And for the Jew's bond which he hath of me, Let it not enter in your mind of love: Be merry; and employ your chiefest thoughts To courtship, and such fair ostents of love As shall conveniently become you there. And even there, his eye heing hig with tears, Turning his face, he put his hand hehind him, And with affection wondrous sensible He wiung Bassanio's hand; and so they parted. Solan. I think he only loves the world for him.

I pray thee, let us go and find him out,
And quicken his embraced heaviness
With some delight or other.

Salar. Do we so. [Exeunt.

Scene IX.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's
House

Enter NERISSA, with a Servant.

Ner. Quick, quick, I pray thee; draw the curtain straight:
The Prince of Arragon hath ta'en his oath,

And comes to his election presently.

Flourish of Cornets. Enter the PRINCE OF

Flourish of Cornets. Enter the PRINCE OF ARRAGON, PORTIA, and their Trains. Por. Behold, there stand the caskets, noble

prince.
If you choose that wherein I am contain'd,
Straight shall our nuptial ritea he solemuiz'd:
But if you fail, without more speech, my lord,
You must he gone from hence immediately.

Ar. I am enjoin'd by oath to observe three things:

First, never to unfold to any one Which casket 'twas I chose; next, if I fail Of the right casket, never in my life To woo a maid in way of marriage; lastly, If I do fail in fortune of my choice, Immediately to leave you and he gone.

Por. To these injunctions every one doth

That comes to hazard for my worthless self.

Ar. And so have I address'd me. Fortune now [lead.

To my heart's hope!—Gold, silver, and hase
Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he hath:

You shall look fairer ere I give or hazard.
What says the golden chest? hallet me see:—
Who chooseth me shall gain what many men desire. [meant

What many men desire.—That many may he By the fool multitude, that choose by show, Not learning more than the fond eye doth teach; Which pries not to the interior, hut, like the martlet.

Builds in the weather on the outward wall, Even in the force and road of casualty. I will not choose what many men desire, Because I will not jump with common spirits, And rank me with the harharous multitudes. Why, then, to thee, thou silver treasure-house; Tell me once more what title thou dost hear: Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves:

And well said too; for who shall go about

To cozen fortune, and he honourable [sume Without the stamp of merit! Let none pre-To wear an undeserved dignity. O, that estates, degrees, and offices,

Were not deriv'd corruptlyl and that clear honour

Were purchas'd by the merit of the wearer!
How many then should cover that stand hare!
How many he commanded that command!
How much low peasantry would then he glean'd [honour

From the true seed of honour! and how much Pick'd from the chaff and ruin of the times, To he new varnish'd! Well, hut to my choice. Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves:

I will assume desert.—Give me a key for this, And instantly unlock my fortunes here. [He opens the silver casket.

Por. Too long a pause for that which you find there.

Ar. What's here? the portrait of a hlinking Presenting me a schedule! I will read it.

How much unlike art thou to Portial
How much unlike my hopes and my deservings!
Who chooseth me shall have as much as he deserves.

Did I deserve no more than a fool's head? Is that my prize? are my deserts no hetter? Por. To offend and judge are distinct offices And of opposed natures.

Ar. What is here?

The fire seven times tried this; Seven times tried that judgment is That did never choose amiss; Some there be that shadows kiss; Such bare but a shadow's bliss: There be fools alive, I wis, Silver'd o'er; and so was this. Take what wife you will to bed, I will ever be your head: So be gooe; you are sped.

Still more fool I shall appear
By the time I linger here:
With one fool's head I came to woo,
But I go away with two.—
Sweet, adieu! I'll keep my oath,
Patiently to hear mywroth.

[Exit with his Train.

Por. Thus hath the candle singed the moth.
O these deliherate fools! when they do choose,
They have the wisdom hy their wit to lose.

Ner. The ancient saying is no heresy,—

Hanging and wiving goes by destiny.

Por. Come, draw the curtain, Nerissa.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Where is my lady?
Por. Here; what would my lord?
Serv. Madam, there is alighted at your gate
A young Venetian, one that comes hefore
To signify the approaching of his lord:
From whom he bringeth sensible regrets;
To wit, hesides commends and courteons
breath,

Gifts of rich value. Yet I have not seen So likely an amhassador of love: A day in April never came so sweet, To show how costly summer was at hand, And this forespurrer comes hefore his lord. And so, I pray you, tell him. Furthermore, I pray you, show my youth old Shylock's house.

Gra. That will I do.

Ner. Sir, I would speak with you:—

Ner. Sir, I would speak with you:—
I'll see if I can get my husband's ring,
[To Portia.

Which I did make him swear to keep for ever.

Por. Thou mayst, I warrant. We shall have old swearing

That they did give the rings away to men; But we'll outface them, and outswear them too. Away, make haste; thou know'st where I will

Ner. Come, good sir, will you show mo to this house? [Exeunt.

ACT. V.

Scene I.—Belmont. Pleasure grounds of Portia's House.

Enter LORENZO and JESSICA.

Lor. The moon shines bright!—In such a night as this,

When the sweet wind did gently kiss the trees, And they did make no noise; in such a night, Troilus, methinks, mounted the Trojan walls, And sigh'd his soul toward the Grecian tents, Where Cressid lay that night.

Jes. In such a night Did Thisbe fearfully o'ertrip the dew, And saw the lion's shadow ere himself, And ran dismay'd away.

Lor. In such a night
Stood Dido with a willow in her hand
Upon the wild sea-banks, and wav'd her love
To come again to Carthage.

Jes. In such a night Medea gather'd the enchanted herbs That did renew old Aeson.

Lor. In such a night
Did Jessica steal from the wealthy Jew
And, with an unthrift love, did run from Venice
As far as Belmont.

Jes. In such a night
Did young Lorenzo swear he lov'd her well—
Stealing her soul with many vows of faith,
And ne'er a true one.

Lor. In such a night
Did pretty Jessica, like a little shrew,
Slander her love, and he forgave it her.
Jes. I would out-night you, did nobody come:

Jes. I would out-night you, did nobody come But, hark, I hear the footing of a man.

Enter STEPHANO.

Lor. Who comes so fast in silence of the night?

Steph. A friend.

Lor. A friend! what friend? your name, I pray you, friend?

Steph. Stephano is my name; and I bring word

My mistress will before the break of day Be here at Belmont; she doth stray about By holy crosses, where she kneels and prays For happy wedlock hours.

Lor. Who comes with her? Steph. None but a holy hermit and her maid. I pray you, is my master yet return'd?

Lor. He is not, nor we have not heard from him.—

But go we in, I pray thee, Jessica, And ceremoniously let us prepare Some welcome for the mistress of the house.

Enter LAUNCELOT.

Laun. Sola, sola, wo ha, ho, sola, solal Lor. Who calis?

Laun. Sola! did you see Master Lorenzo and Mistress Lorenzo? sola, sola!

Lor. Leave hollaing, man: here. Laun. Sola! where? where?

Lor. Here.

Laun. Tell him there's a post come from my master with his horn full of good news; my master will be here ere morning. [Exil.

Lor. Sweet soul, let's in, and there expect their coming.

And yet no matter;—why should we go in? My friend Stephano, signify, I pray you, Within the house, your mistress is at hand; And bring your music forth into the air.—

Exit STEPHANO.

How sweet the moonlight sleeps upon this bank!

Here will we sit, and let the sounds of music Creep in our ears; soft stillness and the night Become the touches of sweet harmony.

Sit, Jessica. Look how the floor of heaven Is thick inlaid with patines of bright gold; There's not the smallest orb which thou behold'st

But in his motion like an angel sings, Still quiring to the young ey'd cherubims: Such harmony is in immortal souls; But, whilst this muddy vesture of decay Doth grossly close it in, we cannot hear it.—

Enter Musicians.

Come, ho, and wake Diana with a hymn; With sweetest touches pierce your mistress'

ear,

And draw her home with music. [Music.

Jes. I am never merry when I hear sweet music.

Lor. The reason is, your spirits are attentive:

For do but note a wild and wanton herd,
Or race of youthful and unhandled colts,
Forthing med hounds hellowing and saighing

Fetching mad bounds, bellowing, and neighing loud,
Which is the hot condition of their blood—

If they but hear perchance a trumpet sound, Or any air of music touch their ears, You shall perceive them make a mutual stand, Their savage eyes turn'd to a modest gaze By the sweet power of music: therefore the poet

Did feign that Orpheus drew trees, stones, and floods;

Since naught so stockish, hard, and full of rage But music for the time doth change his nature. The man that hath no music in himself, Nor is not mov'd with concord of sweet sounds, Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils; The motions of his spirit are dull as night, And his affections dark as Erebus:

Let no such man be trusted.—Mark the music.

Enter PORTIA and NERISSA, at a distance.

Por. That the light we see is burning in my hall:

AII.

Shy. Thou stick'st a dagger in me:-I shall never see my gold again. Fourscore ducats at a citting | fourscore ducats |

Tub. There came divers of Antonio's creditor's in my company to Venice that awear he eannot choose but break.

Shr. I am very glad of it: I'll plague him; I'll terture him: I am slad of it.

Tub. One of them showed me a ring that he had of your daughter for a monkey.

Shy. Out upon her! Thou torturest Tubal. It was my turquoise: I had it of Leah when I was a bachelor: I would not have given it for a wilderness of monkeys.

Tub. But Antonio is certainly undone.

Shy. Nay, that's true: that's very true. Go. Tubal, fee mo an officer; bespeak him a fortnight before. I will have the heart of him if he forfeit; for, were he eut of Venice, I can make what merchandize I will. Go, go, Tubal, and meet me at our synagogue; go, good Tubal; at our synagogue, Tubal. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.-BELMONT. A Room in Portue House.

Enter Bassanio, Portia, Gratuno, KERUSA, end Attendants.

Por. I pray you, tarry: pause a day or two Before you hazard; for, in choosing wrong, Hore your company; therefore forbear awhile: There's something tells me, -but it is not love, -I would not lose you: and you know yourself Hate counsels not in such a quality: But lest you should not understand me well .-And yet a maiden hath no tengue but thought-I would detain you here some month or two Before you renture fer me. I could teach you How to chose right, but then I am foreworn: So will I never be; so may you miss me: But if you do, you'll make me wish a sin, That I had been foreworn. Beshrew your eyes, They have o'erlook'd me and divided me; One half of me is yours, the other half yours, Mine own, I would say; hut if mine, then yours. And so all yours. Of these naughty times Put bars between the owners and their rights; And so, though yours, not yours.—Prove it so, Hiding the grossness with fair ornament? Let fertune go to hell for it.—not I. There is no vice so simple hut assumen I speak too long; but 'tis to pelse the time. To eke it, and to draw it out in length, To stay you from election.

Let me choose; Bess. For, as I am, I live upon the rack,

Por. Upon the rack, Bassanio? then confess What treason there is mingled with your love.

Bass. None but that ugly treason of mistrust, Which makes me fear the enjoying of my love: There may as well he amity and life

Tween snow and fire, as treason and my love. Por. Ay, but I fear you speak upon the rack, Where men, enforced, do speak anything.

Bass. Promise me life, and I'll confess the truth.

Por. Well, then, confess and live. Bass. Confess and love Had heen the very sum of my confession: O happy torment, when my torturer Doth teach me answers for deliverance! But let me to my fortune and the caskets.

Por. Away, then. I am lock'd in one of them; If you do love me you will find mo out.

Nerissa and the rest, stand all aloof .-Let music sound while he doth make his choice; Then, if he lose, he makes a swan-like end, Fading in music: that the comparison fatream May stand more proper, my eye shall he the And wat'ry death-bed for him. He may win, And what is music then? then music is Even as the flourish when true subjects bow To a new-crowned monarch: such it is Are those dulcet sounds in hreak of day That creep into the dreaming bindegroom's ear Now he goes, And summon him to marriage. With no less presence but with much more love Than young Alcides when he did redeem The wirgin tribute paid by howling Troy
To the sea-monster. I stand for eacrifice: The rest aloof are the Dardanian wives, With bleared visages, come forth to view The issue of the exploit. Go, Hercules! Live thou, I live .- With much, much more dismay

I view the fight than theu that mak'st the frav.

Music and the following Song whilst Bassanio comments on the caskets to himself.

> Tell me, where is fancy bred, Or to the heart, or in the head? How begot, how nourished? Reply, reply. It is engender'd in the eyes. With gazing fed; and fancy dies In the cradie where it lies. Let us all ring fancy's knell; I'll begin it,—Ding, dong, bell. Ding, dong, bell.

Bass. So may the outward shows be least themselves:

The world is still deceiv'd with ornament. In law, what plex so tainted and corrupt But, being season'd with a gracious voice. Obscures the show of evil? In religion, What damned error but some soher hrow Well bless it, and approve it with a text, Some mark of virtue on his outward parts. How many cowards, whose hearts are all as false

As stairs of sand, wear yet upon their chins The beards of Hercules and frowning Mars; Who, inward search'd, have livers white as milk!

And these assume but valour's excrement To render them redounted. Look on beauty And you shall see 'tis purchas'd by the weight Which therein works a miracle in nature, Making them lightest that wear most of it: So are those criaped anaky golden locks Which make such wanton gambols with the wind, Upon supposed fairness, often known To be the dowry of a second head-The skull that bred them in the sepulchre. Thus craament is hut the guilded shore To a most dangerous sea; the beauteous scari Veiling an Indian heauty; in a word, [Curtain drawn from before the caskets.] The seeming truth which cunning times put on When naught would be accepted but the ring, You would abate the strength of your displeasure.

Por. If you had known the virtue of the ring, Or half her worthiness that gave the ring, Or your own honour to contain the ring. You would not then have parted with the ring. What man is there so much unreasonable. If you had pleas'd to have defended it With any terms of zeal, wanted the modesty To urge the thing held as a ceremony? Nerissa teaches me what to believe; I'll die for't, but some woman bad the ring.

Bass. No, by mine honour, madam, by my soul.

No woman had it, but a civil doctor, Which did refuse three thousand ducats of me. And begg'd the ring; the which I did deny him, And suffer'd him to go displeas'd away; Even he that had held up the very life Of my dear friend. What should I say, sweet lady?

I was enforc'd to send it after him;
I was beset with shame and courtesy:
My honour would not let ingratitude
So much besmear it. Pardon me, good lady;
For by these blessed candles of the night,
Had you been there, I think you would have begg'd

The ring of me to give the worthy doctor

Por. Let not that doctor e'er come near my house:

Since he heith got the jewel that I lov'd,
And that which you did swear to keep for me,
I will become as liberal as you;
I'll not deny him anything I have,
Ito, not my body, nor my husband's bed:
Know him I shall, I am well sure of it:
Lie not a night from home; watch me like

Argus:
If you do not, if I be left alone,
Now, by mine honour, which is yet mine own,
I'll have that doctor for my bedfellow.

Ner. And I his clerk; therefore be well ad-

How you do leave me to mine own protection.

Gra. Well, do you so: let not me take him then:

For, if I do, I'll mar the young clerk's pen.

Ant. I am the unhappy subject of these quarrels.

Por. Sir, grieve not you; you are welcome not withstanding.

Bass. Portia, forgive me this enforced wrong; And, in the hearing of these many friends, I swear to thee, even by thine own fair eyes, Bass.

Pardon this fault, and by my soul I swear,
I never more will break an oath with thee.

Ant. I once did lend my body for his wealth; Which, but for him that had your husband's

Had quite miscarried: I dare be bound again,

My soul upon the forfeit, that your lord Will never more break faith advisedly. Por. Then you shall be his surety: give him

this:
And bid him keep it better than the other.
Ant. Here, Lord Bassanio; swear to keep this ring. [doctor!

Bass. By heaven, it is the same I gave the

Por. I had it of him: pardon me, Bassanio;

For by this ring the doctor lay with me.

Ner. And pardon me, my gentle Gratiano; For that same scrubbed boy, the doctor's clerk, In lieu of this, last night did lie with me.

Gra. Why, this is like the mending of high-

In summer, where the ways are fair enough: What! are we cuckolds ere we have deserved it?

Por. Speak not so grossly.—You are all amaz'd:

Here is a letter, read it at your leisure; It comes from Padua, from Bellario: There you shall find that Portia was the doctor; Nerissa there, her clerk: Lorenzo here Shall witness I set forth as soon as you, And but even now return'd; I have not yet Enter'd my house.—Antonio, you are welcome; And I have better news in store for you Than yon expect: unseal this letter soon: There you shall find three of your argosies Are richly come to harbour suddenly: You shall not know by what strange accident I chanced on this letter.

Ant. I am dumb.

Bass. Were you the doctor; and I knew you not? [cuckold?

Gra. Were you the clerk that is to make me

Ner. Ay, but the clerk that never means to do it,

Unless he live until he be a man. [fellow; Bass. Sweet doctor, you shall be my bed-When I am absent, then lie with my wife.

Ant. Sweet lady, you have given me life and living;

For here I read for certain that my ships Are safely come to road.

Por. How now, Lorenzo?

My clerk hath some good comforts too for you.

Ner. Ay, and I'll give them him without a fee.—

There do I give to you and Jessica, Prom the rich Jew, a special deed of gift, After his death, of all he dies possess'd of. Lor. Fair ladies, you drop manna in the way

Of starved people.

Por.

It is almost morning,
And yet, I am sure, you are not satisfied
Of these events at full. Let us go in;

And charge us there upon inter gatories, And we will answer all things feithfully. Gra. Let it be so:—the first inter gatory That my Nerissa shall be sworn on is,

That my Nerissa shall be sworn on is, Whether till, the next night she had rather stay,

Or go to bed now, being two hours to day: But were the day come, I should wish it dark, That I were couching with the doctor's clerk. Well, while I live, I'll fear no other thing So sore as keeping safe Nerissa's ring. Enter LORENZO, JESSICA, and SOLANIO.

Bass. Lorenzo and Solanio, welcome hither, If that the youth of my new interest here Have power to bid you welcome.—By your leave,

I bid my very friends and countrymen. Sweet Portia, welcome.

So do I, my lord; They are entirely welcome.

llord. Lor. I thank your honour .- For my part, my My purpose was not to have seen you here; But meeting with Solanio by the way, He did entreat me past all saying nay, To come with him along

I did, my lord, Solan. And I have reason for it. Signior Antonio

Commends him to you.

Gives BASSANIO a letter. Ere I ope his letter, Rass. T pray you, tell me how my good friend doth. Solan. Not sick, my lord, unless it he in mind;

Nor well, unless in mind: his letter there Will show you his estate.

BASS, reads the letter. Gra. Nerissa, cheer youd stranger; bid her [Venice?

Your hand, Solanio: what's the news from How doth that royal merchant, good Antonio? I know he will be glad or our success:

We are the Jasons; we have won the fleece.

Solan. Would you had won the fleece that he hath lost! [same paper,

Por. There are some shrewd contents in youd That steal the colour from Bassanio's cheek; Some dear friend dead; else nothing in the world

Could turn so much the constitution [worse?-Of any constant man. What, worse and With leave, Bassanio; I am half yourself, And I must freely have the half of anything That this same paper brings you.

O sweet Portia, Boss. Here are a few of the unpleasant'st words That ever blotted paper! Gentle lady, When I did first impart my love to you I freely told you all the wealth I had Ran in my veins—I was a gentleman: And then I told you true: and yet, dear lady, Rating myself at nothing, you shall see How much I was a braggart. When I told you

That I was worse than nothing; for, indeed, I have engag'd myself to a dear friend, Engag'd my friend to his mere enemy, To feed my means. Here is a letter, lady, The paper as the hody of my friend, And every word in it a gaping wound, Issuing life-blood. But is it true, Solanio? Have all his ventures fail'd? What! not one · hit?

From Tripolis, from Mexico, and England; From Lishon, Barhary, and India?
And not one vessel 'scape the dreadful tonch Of merchant-marring rocks?

Solon. Not one, my lord. Besides, it should appear that if he had The present money to discharge the Jew

He would not take it. Never did I know A creature that did hear the shape of man So keen and greedy to confound a man: He plies the duke at morning and at night, And doth impeach the freedom of the state If they deny him justice: twenty merchants, The duke himself, and the magnificoes Of greatest port have all persuaded with him; But none can drive him from the envious plea Of forfeiture, of justice, and his hond.

Jes. When I was with him I have heard him

Swear To Tubal and to Chus, his countrymen, That he would rather have Antonio's flesh Than twenty times the value of the sum That he did owe him; and I know my lord, If law, authority, and power deny not, It will go hard with poor Antonio.

Por. Is it your dear friend that is thus in trouble?

Bass. The dearest friend to me, the kindest man.

The best condition'd and unwearied spirit In doing courtesies; and one in whom The ancient Roman honour more appears Than any that draws breath in Italy.

Por. What sum owes he the Jew?
Boss. For me, three thousand ducats. Por.

What! no more? Pay him six thousand, and deface the bond; Double six thousand, and then treble that, Before a friend of this description Shall lose a hair through Bassanio's fault. First, go with me to church, and call me wife, And then away to Venice to your friend; For never shall you lie by Portia's side With an unquiet soul. You shall have gold To pay the petty debt twenty times over; When it is paid bring your true friend along: My maid Nerissa and myself, meantime, Will live as maids and widows. Come away For you shall hence upon your wedding-day: Bid your friends welcome, show a merry cheer: Since you are dear hought, I will love you dear. But let me hear the letter of your friend. Bass. [Reods.] Sweet Bassanio, my ships have all miscarried, my creditors grow cruel, my estate is very low, my bond to the Jew is forfeit; and since, in poying it, it is impossible I should live, all debts are cleared between you and I, if I might but see you at my death: notwith-My state was nothing, I should then have told standing, use your pleosure; if your love do not persuode you to come, let not my letter. Por. O love, despatch all husiness, and be gone.

Boss. Since I have your good leave to go away, I will make haste: but, till I come again, No hed shall e'er be guilty of my stay, No rest be interposer 'twixt us twa Exeunt.

Adam. Youder comes my master, your brother.

Orl. Go apart, Adam, and thou shalt hear how he will shake me up. ADAM relires.

Enler OLIVER.

Oli. Now, sir! what make you here?

Orl. Nothing: I am not taught to make anything.

Oli. What mar you theu, sir?

Orl. Marry, sir, I am helping you to mar that which God made, a poor unworthy brother of yours, with idleness.

Oli. Marry, sir, be better employed, and be naught awhile.

Orl. Shall I keep your hogs, and eat husks with them? What prodigal portion have I spent that I should come to such penury?

Oli. Know you where you are, sir?

Orl. O, sir, very well: here in your orchard.
Oli. Know you before whom, sir?
Orl. Ay, better than him I am before knows me. I know you are my eldest brother: and in the gentle condition of blood you should so know me. The courtesy of nations allows you my better, in that you are the first-born; but the same tradition takes not away my blood, were there twenty brothers betwirt us: I have as much of my father in me as you; albeit, I confess, your coming before me is nearer to his reverence.

Oli. What, boy!

Orl. Come, come, elder brother, you are too young in this. Oli. Wilt thou lay hands on me, villain?

Orl. I am no villain: I am the youngest ! son of Sir Rowland de Bois: he was my father; and he is thrice a villain that says such a father begot villains. Wert thou not my brother I would not take this hand from thy throat till this other had pulled out thy tougue for saying so: thou hast railed on thyself.

Adam. [Coming forward.] Sweet masters, be patient; for your father's remembrance, be at accord.

Oli. Let me go, I say.

Oli. Call him in. [Exit Dennis.]-'Twill be a good way; and to-morrow the wrestling

Enfer CHARLES.

Cha. Good morrow to your worship. Oli. Good Monsieur Charles!-what's the new news at the new court?

Cha. There's no news at the court, sir, but the old news; that is, the old duke is banished by his younger brother the new duke; and three or four loving lords have put themselves into voluntary exile with him, whose lands and revenues enrich the new duke; therefore he gives them good leave to wander.

Oli. Can you tell Rosalind, the duke's daughter be banished with her father?

Cha. O no; for the duke's daughter, her consin, so loves her,—being ever from their cradles bred together,—that she would have followed her exile, or have died to stay behind her. She is at the court, and no less beloved of her uncle than his own daughter; and never two ladies loved as they do.

Oli. Where will the old duke live?

Cha. They say he is already in the forest of Arden, and a many meny men with him; and there they live like the old Robin Haad of Eugland: they say many young gentlemen flock to him every day, and fleet the time carelessly, as they did in the golden world.

Oli. What, you wrestle to-morrow before the new duke?

Cha. Marry, do I, sir; and I came to acquaint you with a matter. I am given, sir, secretly to understand that your younger brother, Orlando, hath a disposition to come in disguis'd against me to try a fall. Tomorrow, sir, I wrestle for my credit; and he that escapes me without some broken limb shall Orl. I will not, till I please: you shall hear acquit him well. Your brother is but young me. My father charged you in his will to give and teuder; and, for your love, I would be me good education: you have trained me like loath to foil him, as I must, for my own honour, yon, I came hither to acquaint you withal; that either you might stay him from his intendment, and altogether against my will.

Oli. Charles, I thank thee for thy love to me, which thou shalt find I will most kindly requite. I had myself notice of my brother's purpose herein, and have by underhand means be troubled with you: you shall have some purpose herein, and have by underhand means part of your will: I pray you, leave me.

Orl. I will no further offend you than beresolute. Pil tell thee, Charles, it is the stubbornest young fellow of France; full of embition, an envious emulator of every man's Adam. Is old dog my reward? Most true, good parts, a secret and villanous contriver I have lost my teeth in your service.—God be against me his natural brother; therefore use Oli. Is it even so? begin you to grow upon look to 't; for if thou dost him any slight dis-

Scene V .- The same. A Garden.

Enter LAUNCELOT and JESSICA.

Laun. Yes. truly;—for, look you, the sins of the father are to be laid upon the children; therefore, I promise you, I fear you. I was always plain with yon, and so now I speak my agitation of the matter: therefore, be of good cheer; for, truly, I think you are damned. There is but one bope in it that can do you any good; and that is but a kind of bestard hope neither.

Jes. And what hope is that, I pray thee? Loun. Marry, you may partly hope that your father got you not,-that you are not the Jew's daughter.

Jes. That were a kind of bastard hope, in-deed; so the sins of my mother should be visited upon me.

Laun. Truly then Hear you are damned both by father and mother: thus when I shun Scylla, your father, I fall into Charybdis, your mother; well, you are gone both ways.

Jes. I shall be saved by my husband; he hath made me a Christian.

Loun. Truly, the more to blame he: we were Christians enow before; e'en as many as could well live, one by another. This making of Christians will raise the price of hogs; if we grow all to be pork enters we shall not shortly bave a rasher on the coals for money.

Jes. I'll tell my husband, Launcelot, what you say; here he comes.

Enter LORENZO.

Lor. I shall grow jealons of you shortly, Launcelot, if you thus get my wife into corners. Jes. Nay, you need not fear for us. Lorenzo; Lanneelot and I are out: he tells me flatly there is no mercy for me in heaven, because I am a Jew's daughter: and he says you are no good member of the commonwealth; for, in converting Jews to Christians, you raise the price of pork.

Lor. I shall answer that better to the commonwealth than you can the getting up of the negro's belly; the Moor is with child by yon,

Launcelot

· Laun. It is much that the Moor should be more than reason: but if she be less than an honest woman, she is indeed more than I took her for.

Lor. How every fool can play npon the word! I think the best grace of wit will shortly turn into silence, and discourse grow commendable in none only but parrots.—Go, in, sirrah; bid them prepare for dinner. Loun. That is done, sir; they have all stomachs.

Lor. Goodly lord, what a wit-snapper are youl then bid them prepare dinner.

Laun. That is done too, sir: only, cover is the word

Lor. Will you cover, then, sir?

Laun. Not so, sir, neither; I know my duty.

Lor. Yet more quarrelling with occasion!

Wilt thon show the whole wealth of thy wit in an instant? I pray thee, understand a plain man in his plain meaning: go to thy fellows; bid them cover the table, serve in the meat, and we will come in to dinner.

Loun. For the table, sir, it shall be served in; for the meat, sir, it shall be covered; for your coming in to dinner, sir, wby, let it be as humours and conceits shall govern.

Lor. O dear discretion, how his words are suitedl

The fool bath planted in his memory An army of good words; and I do know A many fools that stand in better place, Garnish'd like him, that for a tricksy word Defy the matter. How cheer'st thou, Jessica? And now, good sweet, say thy opinion,— How dost thon like the Lord Bassanio's wife? Jes. Past all expressing. It is very meet The Lord Bassanio live an npright life; For, having such a blessing in his lady,

He finds the joys of beaven here on earth; And, if on earth be do not mean it, then In reason he should never come to heaven. Why, if two gods should play some heavenly match.

And on the wager lay two earthly women, And Portiz one, there must be something else Pawn'd with the other; for the poor rude world Hath not her fellow.

Even such a husband Lot. Hast thon of me as she is for a wife.

Jes. Nay, but ask my opinion too of that. Lor. I will anon; first let us go to dinner.

Jes. Nay, let me preise you while I have a stomach.

Lor. No. pray thee, let it serve for table-talk; Then, howsoe'er thou speak'st, 'mong other things I shall digest it.

Well, I'll set you forth. [Excunt. Jes.

ACT IV.

Scene I .- Venice. A Court of Justice.

Enter the DUKE, the Magnificoes: ANTONIO BASSANIO, GRATIANO, SALARINO, SOLANIO and others.

Duke. What, is Antonio here?
Ant. Ready, so please your grace.
Duke. I am sorry for thee; thou art come to answer

A stony adversary, an inhuman wretch Uncapable of pity, void and empty From any dram of mercy.

I have heard Your grace hath ta'en great pains to qualify His rigorous course; but since he stends obdurate,

And that no lawful means can carry me Out of his envy's reach, I do oppose My patience to his fary, and am arm'd To suffer, with a quietness of spirit, The very tyranny and rage of his.

Cel. Sport! of what colour?

Le Beau. What colour, madam? How shall I answer you?

Ros. As wit and fortune will.
Cel. Well said; that was laid on with a trowel. Touch. Nay, if I keep not my rank,-

Ros. Thou loosest thy old smell.

Le Beau. You amaze me, ladies: I would have told you of good wrestling, which you have lost the sight of.

Ros. Yet tell us the manner of the wrestling. Le Beau. I will tell you the beginning, and, if it please your ladyships, you may see the end; for the best is yet to do; and here, where you are, they are coming to perform it.

Cel. Well,-the beginning, that is dead and buried.

Le Beau. There comes an old man and his three sons,-

Ros. Alasi

Touch. But what is the sport, monsieur, that the ladies have lost?

Le Beau. Why, this that I speak of.

Touch. Thus men may grow wiser every day! It is the first time that ever I heard breaking of ribs was sport for ladies.

Cel. Or I, I promise thee.

Ros. But is there any else longs to see this broken music in his sides? is there yet another dotes upon rib-breaking?—Shall we see this wrestling, cousin?

Le Beau. You must, if you stay here: for here is the place appointed for the wrestling, and they are ready to perform it.

Cel. Yonder, sure, they are coming: let us now stay and see it.

Flourish. Enter DUKE FREDERICK, Lords, ORLANDO, CHARLES, and Attendants.

Duke F. Come on; since the youth will not be entreated, his own peril on his forwardness.

Ros. Is yonder the man?

Le Beau. Even he, madam. Cel. Alas, he is too young: yet he looks suc-

Cel. Call him hither, good Monsieur Le Beau. | Sir Rowland de Bois.

Duke F. Do so; I'll not be by.

[Duke F. goes apart.

Le Beau. Monsieur the challenger, the princesses call for you.

Orl. I attend them with all respect and duty. Ros. Youngman, have you challenged Charles the wrestler?

Orl. No, fair princess; he is the general challenger: I come but in, as others do, to try with him the strength of my youth.

Cel. Young gentleman, your spirits are too You have seen cruel proof bold for your years. of this man's strength: if you saw yourself with your eyes, or knew yourself with your judgment the fear of your adventure would counsel you to a more equal enterprise. We pray you, for your own sake, to embrace your own safety. and give over this attempt.

Ros. Do, young sir; your reputation shall not therefore be misprised: we will make it our suit to the duke that the wrestling might not go forward.

Orl. I beseech you, punish me not with your hard thoughts: wherein I confess me much guilty, to deny so fair and excellent ladies any-But let your fair eyes and gentle wishes go with me to my trial; wherein if I be foiled, there is but one shamed that was never gracious; if killed, but one dead that is willing to be so: I shall do my friends no wrong, for I have none to lament me: the world no injury, for in it I have nothing; only in the world I fill up a place, which may be better supplied when I have made it empty.

Ros. The little strength that I have, I would it were with you.

Cel. And mine to eke out hers. Ros. Fare you well. Pray heaven, I be deceived in youl Cel. Your heart's desires be with you.

Cha. Come, where is this young gallant that is so desirous to lie with his mother earth?

Orl. Ready, sir; but his will hath in it a more modest working.

Duke F. You shall try but one fall.

Cha. No; I warrant your grace, you shall not entreat him to a second, that have so mightily persuaded him from a first.

Orl. You mean to mock me after; you should not have mocked me before: but come your

Ros. O excellent young man! Cel. If I had a thunderbolt in mine eye, I can tell who should down.

[CHARLES is thrown. Shout.

Duke F. No more, no more. Orl. Yes, I beseech your grace; I am not yet well breathed.

Duke F. How dost thou, Charles? Le Beau. He cannot speak, my lord.

Duke F. Bear him away. [CHARLES is borne out.

He attendeth hero hard by, Ner. To know your answer, whether you'll admit him.

Duke. With all my heart:—some three or four of you Go give him courteous conduct to this place. Meantime, the court shall hear Bellario's letter.

Clerks rends., Your grace shall understand that, at the receipt of your letter, I am very sick; hut in the instant that your messenger came, in loving visitation was with me a young doctor of Rome; his name is Balthazar: I acquainted him with the cause in conversy hetween the Jew and Antonio the merchant: we turned o'er many books together: he is furnish'd with my opinion; which, hetter'd with his own learning (the greatness whereof I cannot enough commend), comes with him, at my importunity to fill up your grace's request in my stead. I beseech you, let his lack of years he no impediment to let him lack a reverend estimation; for I never knew so young a u reverend estimation; for I never knew so young a bedy with so old a head. I leave bim to your gracious acceptance, whose trial shall better publish his commendation.

Duke. You hear the learn'd Bellario, what he writes: And here, I take it, is the doctor come .-

Tell me whereon the likelihood depends.

Duke F. Thou art thy father's daughter;
there's enough.

Ros. So was I when your highness took his dukedom;

So was I when your highness banish'd him: Treason is not inherited, my lord: Or, if we did derive it from our friends, What's that to me? my father was no traitor! Then, good my liege, mistake me not so much To think my poverty is treacherous.

For, by this heaven, now at our sorrows pale, Say what thou canst, I'll go along with thee. Ros. Why, whither shall we go? Cel. To seek my uncle in the forest of Arden.

Ros. Alasi what danger will it be to us, Maids as we are, to travel forth so far? Beauty provoketh thieves sooner than gold.

Cel. I'll put myself in poor and mean attire, And with a kind of umber smirch my face; The like do you; so sball we pass along, And never stir assailants.

Ros. Were it not better, Because that I am more than common tall, That I did suit me all points like a man? A gallant curtle-are upon my thigh, A boar spear in my hand; and,—in my heart Lie there what hidden woman's fear there will,—We'll have a swashing and a martial outside, As many other manuish cowards have That do outface it with their semblances.

Ros. But, cousin, what if we assay'd to steal The clownish fool out of your father's court? Would he not be a comfort to our travel? Cel. He'll go along o'er the wide world with me;

Leave me alone to woo him. Let's away,
And get our jewels and our wealth together;
Devise the fittest time and safest way
To hide us from pursuit that will be made
After my flight. Now go we in content
To liberty, and not in banishment. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

Scene I .- The Forest of Arden.

Enter DUKE Senior, AMIENS, and other Lords, in the dress of Foresters.

Duke S. Now, my co-mates and brothers in exile, Hath not old custom made this life more sweet

Hath not old custom made this life more sweet Than that of painted pomp? Are not these woods More free from peril than the envious court?

Here feel we but the penalty of Adam,—
The seasons' difference: as the icy fang
And churlish chiding of the winter's wind,
Which when it bites and blows upon my body,
Even till I shrink with cold, I smile and say,
This is no flattery: these are counsellors
That feelingly persuade me what I am.
Sweet are the uses of adversity;
Which, like the toad, ugly and venemous,
Wears yet a precious jewel in his head;
And this our life, exempt from public haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks, Sermons in stones, and good in everything.

I would not change it.

Ami. Happy is your grace,
That can translate the stubbornness of fortune
Into so quiet and so sweet a style. [son?
Duke S. Come, shall we go and kill us veni-

Duke. That thou shalt see the difference of our I pardon thee thy life before thou ask it: For half thy wealth, it is Antonio's: The other half comes to the general state, Which humbleness may drive unto a fine.

Por. Ay, for the state; not for Antonio.

Shy. Nsy, take my life and all, pardon not thet:

You take my house when you do take the prop That doth sastain my house; you take my life When you do take the means whereby I live.

Por. Whatmercycan yourenderhim, Antonio? Gra. A helter gretis; nothing else; for God's

Ant. So please my lord the duke, and all the court,

To quit the fine for one half of his goods; I am content, so he will let me have
The other half in use, to render it,
Upon his deeth, unto the gentleman
That lately stole his daughter:
Two things provided more, —that for this favour,
He presontly become a Christian;
The other, thet he do record a gift,
Here in the court, of all he dies possoss'd

Unto his son Lorenzo and his daughter.

Duke. Ho shall do this; or else I do recant
The pardon that I late pronounced here.

Por. Art thon contonted, Jew? what dost thou ssy?

Shy. I am content.

Por. Clerk, draw e deed of gift, Shy. I pray you, give mo leave to go from hence:

I am not well; send the deed after me And I will sign it.

Duke. Get thee gone, but do it.

Gra. In christening, thou shalt heve two god fathers:

Had I been judge, thou shouldst have had ten more,

To bring theo to the gallows, not the font.

Duke. Sir, I entreat you home with me to dinner. [don;

Por. I humbly do desire your grace of par-I must awey this night toward Pedua; And it is meet I presently set forth.

Duke. I am sorry that your leisuro servos you not.

Antonio, gratify this gentleman;

For, in my mind, you are much bound to him.

[Exeun! DUKE, Magnificoes, and Train.

Bass. Most worthy gentleman, I and my friend

Have by your wisdom been this dsy acquitted Of grievous penalties; in lieu whereof, Three thousand ducats, due unto the Jew, We freely cope your courteous pains withal.

Ant. And stand indebted, over and above In love and service to you evormore.

Por. He is well paid that is well setisfied And I, delivering you, am satisfied, And therein do account myself well paid:

My mind was never yet more mercenary.

I pray you, know me when we meet again;

I wish you well, and so I take my leave.

Bass. Dear sir, of force I must attempt you

further;
Take some remembrance of us, as a tribute,
Not as a fee: grant me two things, I pray you,

Not to deny me, and to pardon me.

Por. You press me far, and therefore I will yield.

Give me your gloves, I'll wear them for your sake; And, for your love, I'll take this ring from

you:—
Do not draw back your hand; I'll take no more;

And you in love shall not deny me this.

Bass. This ring, good sir,—alas, it is a trifle;

I will not shame myself to give you this.

Por. I will have nothing else but only this;

And now, methinks, I have a mind to it.

Bass. There's more depends on this than on the value.

The dearest ring in Venice will I give you, And find it out by proclamation; Only for this, I pray you, pardon me.

Por. I see, sir, you are liberal in offers: You taught me first to beg; and now, methinks, You teech me how e beggar should be answer'd. Bass. Good sir, this ring was given me by my wife;

And, when she put it on, she made mo vow
Thet I should neither sell, nor give, not lose it.
Por. Thet 'scuse serves many men to save' their gifts.

An if your wife be not e med woman,
And know how well I have desory'd this ring,
She would not hold out enemy for ever,

For giving it to me. Well, peaco be with youl [Exeunt Portia and Nerissa.

Ant. My Lord Bassanie, let him have the ring:

Let his deservings, and my love withal,

Bo valued 'gainst your wife's commandment.

Bass. Go, Gratiano, run and overtake him,
Give him the ring; and bring him, if thou canst,
Unto Antonio's house;—awey, make hesto.

[Exit Gratiano.

Come, you and I will thither presently; And in the morning early will we both Fly toward Belmont. Come, Antonio.

Exeunt.

Scene II .- The same. A Street.

Enter PORTIA and NERISSA.

Por. Inquire the Jow's house out, give him this deed, And let him sign it; we'll away to-night,

And let him sign it; we'll away to-night,
And be a day before our husbands home.
This deed will be well welcome to Lorenzo.

Enfer GRATIANO.

Gra. Fair sir, you are well overta'en: My Lord Bessame, upon more advice, Hath sent you here this ring; and doth entreet Your company at dinner.

Por. That cannot be: His ring I do accopt most thankfully.

Be comfort to my age! Here is the gold: All this I give you. Let me be your servant; Though I look old, yet I am strong and lusty: For in my youth I never did apply Hot and rebellious liquors in my blood; Nor did not with unbashful forehead woo The means of weakness and debility; Therefore my age is as a lusty winter. Frosty, but kindly: let me go with you: I'll do the service of a younger man

In all your business and necessities. pears Orl. O good old man; how well in thee ap-The constant service of the antique world, When service sweat for duty, not for meed! Thou art not for the fashion of these times, Where none will sweat but for promotion; And having that, do choke their service up Even with the having: it is not so with thee. But, poor old man, thou prun'st a rotten tree, That cannot so much as a blossom yield In lieu of all thy pains and husbandry: But come thy ways, we'll go along together; And ere we have thy youthful wages spent We'll light upon some settled low content.

Adam. Master, go ou; and I will follow thee To the last gasp, with truth and loyalty. From seventeen years till now almost forescore Here lived I, but now live here no more. And seventeeu years many their fortunes seek; But at fourscore it is too ate a week: Yet fortune cannot recompeuse me better Than to die well, and not my master's debtor-

Scene IV .- The Forest of Arden.

Enler ROSALIND in boy's clothes, CELIA dressed like a shepherdess, and TOUCHSTONE

Ros. O Jupiter! how weary are my spirits!

Touch. I care not for my spirits if my legs were not weary.

Ros. I could find in my heart to disgrace my man's apparel, and to cry like a woman: but I must comfort the weaker vessel, as doublet and hose ought to show itself courageous to petticoat: therefore, courage, good Aliena.

Cel. I pray you, bear with me; I can go no farther.

Touch. For my part, I had rather bear with you than bear you: yet I should bear no cross if I did bear you: for, I think, you have no money in your purse.

Ros. Well, this is the forest of Arden. Touch. Ay, now am I in Arden: the more fool I; when I was at home I was in a better place; but travellers must be content.

Ros. Ay, he so, good Touchstone.—Look you, who comes here? a young man and an old in solemn talk.

Enter CORIN and SILVIUS.

Cor. That is the way to make her scorn you flove herl still. Sil. O Corin, that thou knew'st how I do Cor. I partly guess; for I have lov'd ere now. Sil. No. Corin, being old, thou canst not guess;

Though in thy youth thou wast as true a lover As ever sigh'd upon a midnight pillow: But if thy love were ever like to mine,-

As sure I think did never man love so,-How many actions most ridiculous Hast thou been drawn to by thy fantasy?

Cor. Into a thousand that I have forgotten, Sil. O, thou didst theu ne'er love so heartily; If thou remember'st not the slightest folly That ever love did make thee run into. Thou hast not lov'd: Or if thou hast not sat as I do now,

Wearying thy hearer in thy mistress' praise, Thou hast not lov'd:

Or if thou hast not broke from company Abruptly, as my passiou now makes me, Thou hast not lov'd: O Phebe, Phebe, Phebe!

Exit SILVIUS. Ros. Alas, poor shepherd! searching of thy wound.

I have by hard adventure found mine own.

Touch. And I mine. I remember, when I was in love, I broke my sword upon a stone, and bid him take that for coming a-night to Jane Smile: and I remember the kissing of her batlet, and the cow's dugs that her pretty chapp'd hands had milk'd: and I remember the wooing of a peascod instead of her; from whom I took two cods, and, giving her them again, said with weeping tears, Wear these for my sake. We that are true lovers run into strange capers; but as all is mortal in nature so is all nature in love mortal in folly.

Ros. Thou speak'st wiser than thou art ware Touch. Nay, I shall ne'er be 'ware of mine own wit till I break my shins against it.

Ros. Jove, Jovel this shepherd's passion.
Is much upon my fashion. [stale with m [stale with me. Touch. And mine: but it grows something Cel. I pray you, one of you question youd man If he for gold will give us any food:

I faint almost to death. Touch. Holla, you clown!

Ros. Peace, fool; he's not thy kinsman. Cor. Who calls?

Touch. Your betters, sir. Cor Else are they very wretched.

Peace, I say. Ros. Good even to you, frieud.

Cor. And to you, gentle sir, and to you all. Ros. I pr'ythee, shepherd, if that love or gold Can in this desert place buy entertainment, Bring us where we may rest ourselves and feed: Here's a young maid with travel much oppress'd,

And faints for succor. Fair, sir, I pity her, And wish, for her sake more than for mine own, My fortunes were more able to relieve her: But I am shepherd to another man, And do not shear the fleeces that I graze: My master is of churlish disposition, And little recks to find the way to heaven By doing deeds of hospitality: Besides, his cote, his flocks, and bounds of leed Are now on sale; and at our sheepcote now, By reason of his absence, there is nothing That you will feed on; but what is, come see, And in my voice most welcome shall you be. Ros. What is he that shall buy his flock and [but erewhile, pasture?

Cor. That young swain that you saw here

That little cares for buying anything.

How far that little candle throws his beamal So shines a good deed in a naughty world. Ner. When the moon shone we did not see the candle.

Por. So doth the greator glory dim the less: A substitute shines brightly as a king Until a king be hy; and then his state Empties itself, as doth an inland brook Into the main of waters. Musicl harkl

Ner. It is your music, madam, of the house.
Por. Nothing is good, I see, without respect; Methinks it sounds much sweeter than by day.

Ner. Silence hestows that virtue on it, madam.

Por. The crow doth sing as sweetly as the lark

When neither is attended; and, I think, The nightingale, if she should sing by day, When every goose is cackling, would be thought

No better a musician than the wren. How many things by season season'd are To their right praise and true perfection!-Peace, hol the moon sleeps with Endymion, Music ceases. And would not he awaked!

That is the voice. Lor.

Or I am much deceived, of Portia.

Por. He knows me, as the blind man knows the cuckoo.

By the bad voice.

Dear lady, welcome home. Lor. Por. We have heen praying for our husbands welfare.

Which speed, we hope, the hetter for our words.

Are they return'd? Madam, they are not yet; Lor.

But there is come a messenger before, To signify their coming.

Go in, Nerissa. Por. Give order to my servants that they take No note at all of our being absent hence;-Nor you, Lorenzo; - Jessica, nor you.

[A tucket sounds. Lor. Your husband is at hand, I hear his trumpet:

We are no tell-tales, madam; fear you not. Por. This night methinks is but the daylight sick-It looks a little paler; 'tis a day Such as the day is when the sun is hid.

Enter Bassanio, Antonio, Gratiano, and their followers.

Bass. We should hold day with the Antipodes If you would walk in absence of the sun.

Por. Let me give light, but let me not he light;

For a light wife doth make a heavy husband, And never he Bassanio so for me: But God sort alll-you are welcome home, my Bass. I thank you, madam; give welcome to my friend.

This is the man; this is Antonio, To whom I am so infinitely hound. [him, Por. You should in all sense he much bound to For, as I hear, he was much bound for you. Ant. Nor more than I am well acquitted of. Por. Sir, you are very welcome to our house: It must appear in other ways than words, Therefore, I scant this breathing courtesy. [GRA. and NER. seem to talk apart. Gra. By yonder moon, I awear you do me wrong;

In faith, I gave it to the judge's clerk: Would he were gelt that had it, for my part, Since you do take it, love, so much at heart.

Por. A quarrel, bo, already? What's the matter? Gra. About a hoop of gold, a paltry ring That ahe did give me; whose posy was, For all the world, like cutler's poetry

Upon a knife, Love me, and leove me not. Ner. What, talk you of the posy, or the value? You swore to me, when I did give it you, That you would wear it till your hour of death; And that it should lie with you in your grave: Though not for me, yet for your vehement oatbs You should have been respective, and have kept it.

Gave it a judge's clerk!-no, God's my judge, The clerk will ne'er wear hair on's face that had it.

Gra. Ho will, an if he live to be a man. Ner. Ay, if a woman live to he a man. Gra. Now, hy this hand, I gave it to a youth,

A kind of boy; a little scrubbed boy No higher than thyself, the judge's clerk; A prating hoy that begg'd it as a fee; I could not for my heart deny it him.

Por. You were to hlame, I must be plain with you,

To part so slightly with your wife's first gift; A thing stuck on with oaths upon your finger, And so riveted with faith unto your flesh. I gave my love a ring, and made him swear Never to part with it, and here he stands; I dare be sworn for him, he would not leave it Nor pluck it from his finger for the wealth That the world masters. Now, in faith Gratiano,

You give your wife too unkind a cause of grief; An 'twere to me, I should be mad at it. [off, Boss. Why, I were hest to cut my left hand And swear I lost the ring defending it. [Aside.

Cra. My Lord Bassanio gave his ring away Unto the judge that begg'd it, and, indeed, Deserv'd it too; and then the hoy, his clerk, That took some pains in writing, he begg'd mine:

And neither man nor master would take aught But the two rings.

What ring gave you, my lord?

Por What ring gave you, my lord?

Not that, I hope, which you receiv'd of me. Bass. If I could add a lie unto a fault

I would deny it; but you see my finger Hath not the ring upon it; it is gone.

Por. Even so void is your false heart of truth.

By heaven, I will ne'er come in your hed Until I see the ring.

Nor I in yours Ner. Till I again see mine.

Sweet Portia, Boss. If you did know to whom I gave the ring, If you did know for whom I gave the ring, And would conceive for what I gave the ring. And how unwillingly I left the ring,

'Tis but an hour ago since it was nine; And after one hour more 'twill be eleven; And so, from hour to hour, we ripe and ripe, And then, from hour to hour, we rot and rot; And thereby hangs a tale. When I did hear The motley fool thus moral on the time, My lungs began to crow like chanticleer, That fools should be So deep contemplative; And I did laugh, sans intermission, An hour by his dial.—O noble fool!

A worthy fool!—Motley's the only wear. Duke S. What fool is this? Jaq. O worthy fool! One that hath been a

And says, if ladies be but young and fair, They have the gift to know it: and in his brain,-Which is as dry as the remainder biscuit Aftera voyage,—hehath strange places cramm'd With observation, the which he vents In mangled forms .- O that I were a fool! I am ambitious for a motley coat.

Duke S. Thon shalt have one. It is my only suit, Provided that you weed your better judgments Of all opinion that grows rank in them That I am wise. I must have liberty Withal, as large a charter as the wind, To blow on whom I please; for so fools have: And they that are most galled with my folly, They most must laugh, And why, sir, must they so?

The why is plain as way to parish church: He that a fool doth very wisely hit Doth very foolishly, although he smart, Not to seem senseless of the bob; if not, The wise man's folly is anatomiz'd Even by the squandering glances of the fool. Invest me in my motley; give me leave Tospeak my mind, and I will through and through Cleanse the foul body of the infected world, If they will patiently receive my medicine. Duke S. Fie on thee! I can tell what thou wouldst do. Jag. What, for a counter, would I do but good? Duke S. Most mischievous foul sin, in chiding sin:

For thou thyself hast been a libertine, As sensual as the brutish sting itself; And all the embossed sores and headed evils That thou with license of free foot hast caught, Wouldst thou disgorge into the general world.

Jaq. Why, who cries out on pride, That can therein tax any private party? Doth it not flow as hugely as the sea Till that the weary very means do ebb? What woman in the city do I name When that I say, The city-woman bears The cost of princes on unworthy shoulders? Who can come in and say that I mean her, When such a one as she, such is her neighbour? Or what is he of basest function, That says his bravery is nevon my coast Thinking that I mean tim,—but therein suits His folly to the metal of my speech? There then; how then? what then? Let me see wherein My tongue hath wrong'd him: if it do him right, Then he hath wrong'd himself; if he be free, Why then, my taxing like a wild goose flies, Unclaim'd of any man.—But who comes here? Enter Orlando, with his sword drawn Orl. Forbear, and eat no more.

Jaa. Why, I have eat none yet Orl. Nor shalt not, till necessity be serve Jag. Of what kind should this cock come co Duke S. Art thou thus bolden'd, man, t, thy distress:

Or else a rude despiser of good manners, That in civility thou seem'st so empty? [point Orl. You touch'd my vein at first: the thous Of bare distress hath ta'en from me the store Of smooth civility: yet am I inland bred, And know some nurture. But forbear, I say, He dies that touches any of this fruit

Till I and my affairs are answered. Jaq. An you will not be answered with reason, I must die.

Duke S. What would you have? your gentle. ness shall force

More than your force move us to gentleness. Orl. I almost die for food, and let me have it. Duke S. Sit down and feed, and welcome to our table.

Orl. Speak you so gently? Pardon me, I pray I thought that all things had been savage here; And therefore put I on the countenance Of stern commandment. But whate'er you are That in this desert inaccessible, Under the shade of melancholy boughs, Lose and neglect the creeping hours of time: If ever you have look'd on better days, If ever been where bells have knoll'd to church, If ever sat at any good man's feast, If ever from your eyelids wip'd a tear, And know what 'tis to pity and be pitied, Let gentleness my strong enforcement be. In the which hope I blush, and hide my sword. Duke S. True is it that we have seen better days, And have with holy bell been knoll'd to church, And sat at good men's feasts, and wip'd our eyes Of drops that sacred pity hath engender'd; And therefore sit you down in gentleness, And take upon command what help we have, That to your wanting may be minister'd.

Orl. Then but for bear your food a little while, Whiles, like a doe, I go to find my fawn, And give it food. There is an old poor man, Who after me hath many a weary step Limp'd in pure love: till he be first suffic'd,... Oppress'd with two weak evils, age and hunger,-I will not touch a bit.

Go find him out, Duke 5. And we will nothing waste till your return, Orl. I thank ye; and be bless'd for your good

Orl. As I remember, Adam, it was upon this facility of the which his animals on his dung-this facility. a thousand crowns, and, as thou say'st, charged this nothing that he so plentifully gives me, my brother, on his blessing, to breed me well: the something that nature gave me, his countend there begins my sadness. My brother leading that nature gave me, his countend the seems to take from me: he lets me goldenly of his profit for my part, he keeps brother, and as much as in him lies, mines my gentility with my education. This is it, Adam, perly, stays me here at home unkept: for call that grieves me; and the spirit of my father, you that keeping for a gentleman of my birth which I think is within me, begins to mutiny that differs not from the stalling of an ox? His against this servitude: I will no longer endure Cor. No, truly.

Touch. Then thou art damned.

Cor. Nay, I hope,---

Touch. Truly, thou art damned; like an ill-roasted egg, all ou one side.

Cor. For not being at court? Your reason.

Touch. Why, if thou never wast at court thou never saw'st good manners; if thou never saw'st good manners, then thy manners must be wicked; and wickedness is sin, and sin is damnation. Thou art in a parlous state, shepherd.

Cor. Not a whit, Touchstone: those that are good manners at the court are as ridiculous in the country as the behaviour of the country is most mockable at the court. You told me you salute not at the court, but you kiss your hands; that courtesy would be uncleanly if courtiers were shepherds.

Touch. Instance, briefly; come, instance.

Cor. Why, we are still handling our ewes; and their fells, you know, are greasy.

Touch. Why, do not your courtier's hands sweat? and is not the grease of a mutton as wholesome as the sweat of a man? Shallow, shallow: a better instance, I say; come.

Cor. Besides, our hands are hard.

Touch. Your lips will feel them the sooner. Shallow again: a more sounder instance;

Cor. And they are often tarred over with the surgery of our sheep; and would you have us kiss tar? The courtier's hands are perfumed with civet.

Touch. Most shallow man! thou wormsmeat, in respect of a good piece of flesh, indeed!—Learn of the wise, and perpeud: civet is of a baser birth than tar,—the very uncleanly flux of a cat. Mend the instance, shepherd.

Cor. You have too courtly a wit for me:

I'll rest.

Touch. Wilt thou rest damned? God help thee, shallow man! God make incision in theel thou art raw.

Cor. Sir, I am a true labourer: I earn that I eat, get that I wear; owe no man hate, envy no man's happiness; glad of other men's good, coutent with my harm; and the greatest of my pride is, to see my ewes graze and my lambs

Touch. That is another simple sin in you; to bring the ewes and the rams together, and to offer to get your living by the copulation of cattle: to be bawd to a bell-wether; and to betray a she-lamb of a twelvemouth to a crooked-pated, old, cuckoldly ram, out of all reasonable match. If thou be'st not damned for this, the devil himself will have no shepherds; I cannot see else how thou shouldst 'scape.

Cor. Here comes young Master Ganymede, my new mistress' brother.

Enter ROSALIND, reading a paper.

Res. From the east to western Ind,
Ino jewel is like Rosalind.
Her worth, being mounted on the wind,
Through all the world bears Rosalind.
All the pictures fairest lin'd
Are but black to Rosalind.

Let no face be kept in mind But the fair of Rosalind.

Touch. I'll rhyme you so eight years together, dinners, and suppers, and sleeping hours excepted: It is the right butter-woman's rank to market.

Ros. Out, fool!
Touch. For a taste:---

If a hart do lack a hind,
Let him seek out Rosalind.
If the cat will after kind,
So, be sure, will Rosalind.
Winter garments must be lin'd,
So must slender Rosalind.
They that reap must sheaf and bind,—
Then to cart with Rosalind.
Sweetest nut hath sourest rind,
Such a nut is Rosalind.
He that sweetest rose will find
Must find love's prick, and Rosalind.

This is the very false gallop of verses: why do you infect yourself with them?

Ros. Peace, you dull fool! I found them on a tree.

Touch. Truly, the tree yields bad fruit.

Ros. I'll graff it with you, and then I shall graff it with a medlar: then it will be the earliest fruit in the country: for you'll be rotten ere you be half ripe, and that's the right virtue of the medlar.

Touch. You have said; but whether wisely or no, let the forest judge.

Enter CELIA, reading a paper.

Ros. Peace! Here comes my sister, reading: stand aside!

Cel. Why should this a desert be?

For it is unpeopled? No; Tongues I'll hang on every tree, That shall civil sayings show: Some, how brief the life of man Runs his erring pilgrimage, That the stretching of a span Buckles in his sum of age. Some, of violated vows 'Twint the souls of friend and friend; But upon the fairest boughs, Or at every sentence end, Will I Rosalinda write, Teaching all that read to know The quintessence of every sprite Heaven would in little show. Therefore heaven nature charg That one body should be fill'd With all graces wide enlarg'd;
Nature presently distill'd
Helen's cheek, but not her heart; Cleopatra's majesty; Atalanta's better part; Sad Lucretia's modesty. Thus Rosalind of many parts
By heavenly synod was devis'd, Of many faces, eyes, and hearts, To have the touches dearest priz'd. Heavenwould that she these gifts should have, And I to live and die her sizve.

Ros. O most gentle Jupiter!—what tedious homily of love have you wearied your parishioners withal, and never cried, Have patience, good people!

Cel. How now! back, frieuds; shepherd, go off a little:—go with him, sirrah.

grace, or if he do not mightily grace himself on thee, he will practise against thee by poison, entrap thee by some treacherous device, and never leave thee till he hath ta'en thy life hy some indirect means or other: for, I assure thee, and almost with tears I speak it, there is not one so young and so villanous this day living. I speak hnt hrotherly of him; hut should I anatomize him to thee as he is, I must blush and weep, and thon must look pale and wonder.

Cha. I am heartily glad I came hither to you. If he come to-morrow I'll give him his payment. If ever he go alone Pli never wrestle for prize more: and so, God keep vour worship! Oli. Farewell, good Charles .- Now will I stir this gamester: I hope I shall see an end of him; for my soul, yet I know not why, hates nothing more than he. Yet he's gentle; never schooled and yet learned; full of noble device; of all sorts enchantingly heloved; and, indeed, so much in the heart of the world, and especially of my own people, who best know him, that I am altogether misprised: hut it shall not he so tong; this wrestler shall clear all: nothing remains but that I kindle the hoy thither, which now I'll go about. Exit.

SCENE II .- A Laun before the Duke's Palace.

Enter ROSALIND and CELIA.

Cel. I pray thee. Rosalind, sweet my coz, be merry.

Ros. Dear Celia, I show more mirth than I am mistress of; and would you yet I were merrier? Unless you could teach me to forget a banished father, you must not learn me how to remember any extraordinary pleasure.

Cel. Hereiu I see thou lovest me not with the full weight that I love thee; if thy uncle, thy hauished father, had banished thy uncle the duke my father, so thou hadst heen still with me, I could have taught my love to take thy father for mine; so wouldst thou, if the truth of thy love to me were so righteously ! tempered as mine is to thee.
Ros. Well, I will forget the condition of my estate, to rejoice in yours.

Cel. You know my father bath no child but I, nor none is like to have; and, truly- when he dies thon shalt he his heir: for what he hath taken away from thy father perforce, I will render thee again in affection: by mine honour, I will: and when I break that oath, let me turn monster; therefore, my sweet Rose, my dear Rose, he merry.

Ros. From henceforth I will, coz. and devise sports: let me see; what think you of falling in love?

Cel. Marry, I pr'ythee, do, to make sport withal: hnt love no man in good earnest; nor no further in sport than with safety of a pure blash thon mayst in honour come off again. Ros. What shall he our sport, then?

Cel. Let us sit and mock the good housewife Fortune from her wheel, that her gifts may henceforth he hestowed equally,

Ros. I would we could do so; for her benefits are mightily misplaced: and the bountiful good sport.

blind woman doth most mistake in her gifts to women.

Cel. 'Tis true: for those that she makes fair she scarce makes honest; and those that she makes honest she makes very ill-favouredly.

Ros. Nay; now thon goest from fortune's office to nature's: fortune reigns in gifts of the world, not in the lineaments of nature.

Cel. No; when nature hath made a fair creature may she not by fortune fall into the fire?-Though nature bath given us wit to flout at fortune, hath not fortune sent in this fool to cut off the argument?

Enter Touchstone.

Ros. Indeed, there is fortune too hard for nature, when fortune makes nature's natural the cutter off of nature's wit.

Cel. Peradventure this is not fortune's work neither, but nature's, who perceiveth onr natural wits too dull to reason of such goddesses, and hath sent this natural for our whetstone: for always the dulness of the fool is the whetstone of the wits .- How now, wit? whither wander you?

Touch. Mistress, you must come away to your father.

Cel. Were you made the messenger?

Touch. No, hy mine honour; but I was hid to come for you.

Ros. Where learned you that oath, fool?

Touch. Of a certain knight that swore hy his honour they were good pancakes, and swore by his honour the mustard was naught: now, I'll stand to it, the pancakes were naught and the mnstard was good: and yet was not the knight forsworn.

Ros. Ay, marry, now unmuzzle your wisdom. Touch. Stand you both forth now: stroke your chins, and swear by your heards that I am a knave.

Cel. By our beards, if we had them, thou art. Touch. By my knavery, if I had it, then I were: hat if you swear by that that is not, you are not forsworn: no more was this knight, swearing by his honour, for he never had any; or if he had, he had sworn it away hefore ever he saw those pancakes or that mustard.

Cel. Pr'ythee, who is't that thon mean'st? Touch. One that old Frederick, your father, loves.

Cel. My father's love is enough to honour him enough: speak no more of him: you'll be whipp'd for taxation one of these days.

Touch. The more pity that fools may not speak wisely what wise men do foolishly.

Cel. By my troth, that say'st true: for since the little wit that fools have was silenced, the little foolery that wise men have makes a great show. Here comes Monsieur Le Bean.

Ros. With his month full of news.

Cel. Which he will put on us as pigeons feed their young.

Ros. Then shall we be news-crammed. Cel. All the better; we shall be the more marketable.

Enter LE BEAU.

Bon jour, Monsieur Le Bean. What's the news? Le Beau. Fair princess, you have lost much

LACT ITT.

Jag. By my troth, I was seeking for a fool when I found you.

Orl. He is drowned in the brook; look but in, and you shall see him.

Jaq. There I shall see mine own figure.
Orl. Which I take to be either a fool or a cipher.

Jaq. I'll tarry no longer with you: farewell, good Signior Love.

Monsieur Melancholy.

Exit JAQ.—CEL. and Ros. come forward. Ros. I will speak to him like a saucy lacquey, and under that habit play the knave with him. Do you hear, forester?

Oil. Very well: what would you?

Ros. I pray you, what is't o'clock?
Onl. You should ask me what time o'day;

there's no clock in the forest.

Ros. Then there's no true lover in the forest, else sighing every minute and groaning every hour would detect the lazy foot of time as well as a clock.

Orl. And why not the swift foot of time? had not that been as proper?

Ros. By no means, sir. Time travels in divers paces with divers persons. I will tell you who time ambles withal, who time trots withal, who time gallops withal, and who he stands still withal.

Orl. I pr'ythee, who doth he trot withal?

Ros. Marry, he trots hard with a young maid between the contract of her marriage and the day it is solemnized; if the interim be but a se'nnight, time's pace is so hard that it seems the length of seven years.

Orl. Who ambles time withal?

Ros. With a priest that lacks Latin and a rich man that hath not the gout: for the one sleeps easily, because he cannot study; and the other lives merrily, because he feels no pain; the one lacking the burden of lean and wasteful learning; the other knowing no burden of heavy tedious penury. These time amble Orl. Who doth he gallop withal? These time ambles withal.

Ros. With a thief to the gallows; for though he go as softly as foot can fall, he thinks himself too soon there.

Orl. Who stays it still withal?

Ros. With lawyers in the vacation; for they sleep between term and term, and then they perceive not how time moves.

Orl. Where dwell you, pretty youth?

Ros. With this shepherdess, my sister; here in the skirts of the forest, like fringe upon a petticoat.

Orl. Are you a native of this place?

Ros. As the coney, that you see dwell where she is kindled.

Orl. Your accent is something finer than you could purchase in so removed a dwelling.

Ros. I have been told so of many: but indeed an old religious uncle of mine taught me to speak, who was in his youth an inland man; one that knew courtship too well, for there he fantastical, apish, shallow, in constant, full of fell in love. I have heard him read many lectures against it; and I thank God I am not a woman, to be touched with so many giddy offences as he hath generally taxed their whole! sex withel.

Orl. Can you remember any of the principal evils that he laid to the charge of women?

Ros. There were none principal; they were all like one another as halfpence are; every one fault seeming monstrous till his fellow fault came to match it.

Orl. I pr'ythee, recount some of them.

Ros. No; I will not cast away my physic but on those that are sick. There is a man haunts Orl. I am glad of your departure: adieu, good the forest that abuses our young plants with consieur Melancholy. upon hawthorns, and elegies on brambles; all, forsooth, deifying the name of Rosalind: if I could meet that fancymonger I would give him some good counsel, for he seems to have the quotidian of love upon him.

Orl. I am he that is so love-shaked: I pray you, tell me your remedy.

Ros. There is none of my uncle's marks upon you: he taught me how to know a man in love; in which cage of rushes I am sure you are not prisoner.

Orl. What were his marks?

Ros. A lean cheek; which you have not: a blue eye and sunken; which you have not: an unquestionable spirit; which you have not: a beard neglected; which you have not: but I pardon you for that; for simply your having in beard is a younger brother's revenue:—then your hose should be ungartered, your bonnet unbanded, your sleeve unbuttoned, your shoe untied, and everything about you demonstrating a careless desolation. But you are no such man; you are rather point-device in your accoutrements; as loving yourself than seeming the lover of any other.

Orl. Fair youth, I would I could make thee believe I love.

Ros. Me believe it! you may as soon make her that you love believe it; which, I warrant, she is apter to do than to confess she does: that is one of the points in the which women still give the lie to their consciences. But, in good sooth, are you he that hangs the verses on the trees, wherein Rosalind is so admired?

Orl. I swear to thee, youth, by the white hand of Rosalind, I am that he, that unfortunate he.

Ros. But are you so much in love as your rhymes speak?

Orl. Neither rhyme nor reason can express

Ros. Love is merely a madness; and, I tell you, deserves as well a dark house and a whip as madmen do: and the reason why they are not so punished and cured is, that the lunacy is so ordinary that the whippers are in love too. Yet I profess curing it by counsel.

Orl. Did you ever cure any so?
Ros. Yes, one; and in this manner. He was to imagine me his love, his mistress; and I set him every day to woo me: at which time would I, being but a moonish youth, grieve, be effeminate, changeable, longing, and liking; proud, tears, full of smiles; for every passion something, and for no passion truly anything, as boys and women are for the most part cattle of this colour: would now like him, now loath him; then entertain him, then forswear him; now

The world esteem'd thy father honourable, But I did find him still mine enemy: ldeed Thou shouldst have hetter pleas'd me with this Hadst thou descended from another house. But fare thee well; thou art a gallant youth; I would thou hadst told me of another father.

[Exeunt DUKE F., Train, and LE BEAU. Cel. Were I my father, coz, would I do this? Orl. I am more proud to be Sir Rowland's [calling His youngest son; -and would not change that

To be adopted heir to Frederick.

Ros. My father loved Sir Rowland as his soul, And all the world was of my father's mind: Had I hefore known this young man his son, I should have given him tears unto entreaties, Ere he should thus have ventur'd Gentle cousin, Let us go thank him, and encourage him: My father's rough and envious disposition Sticks me at heart.—Sir, you have well deserv'd: If you do keep your promises in love But justly, as you have exceeded promise. Your mistress shall be happy.

Gentleman. Ros.

[Giving him a chain from her neck. Wear this for me; one out of suits with fortune, That could give more, but that her hand lacks means.

Shall we go, coz?

Cel. Ay,—Fare you well, fair gentleman. Orl. Can I not say, I thank you? My better Cel. Istands up

I'll ask him what he would .- Did you call, sir?-Sir, you have wrestled well, and overthrown More than your enemies

Will you go, coz? Cel. Ros. Have with you. -Fare you well.

[Exeunt ROSALIND and CELIA. Orl. What passion hangs these weights upon my tongue?

I cannot speak to her, yet she urg'd conference. O poor Orlandol thou art overthrown: Or Charles, or something weaker, masters thee.

Re-enter LE BEAU.

Le Beau. Good sir, I do in friendship counsel

To leave this place. Albeit you have deserv'd High commendation, true applause, and love, Yet such is now the duke's condition, That he misconstrues all that you have done. The duke is humorous; what he is, indeed, More suits you to conceive than I to speak of.

Orl. Ithank you, sir: and pray you, tell me this; Which of the two was daughter of the duke That here was at the wrestling? [manners;

Le Beau. Neither his daughter, if we judge by But yet, indeed, the smaller is his daughter: The other is daughter to the banish'd duke, And here detain'd hy her usurping uncle, To keep his daughter company; whose loves Are dearer than the natural hond of sisters. But I can tell you that of late this duke

Hath ta'en displeasure 'gainst his gentle niece. Grounded upon no other argument But that the people praise her for her virtues And pity her for her good father's sake; And, on my life, his malice 'gainst the lady Will suddenly break forth .- Sir, fare you well! Hereafter, in a hetter world than this, I shall desire more love and knowledge of yon.

Orl. I rest much hounden to you: fare you welll Exit LE BEAU. Thus must I from the smoke into the smother; From tyrant duke unto a tyrant brother:-But heavenly Rosalind 1

Scene III.—A Room in the Palace. Enter CELIA and ROSALIND.

Cel. Why, cousin; why, Rosalind;—Cupid have mercyl—Not a word?

Ros. Not one to throw at a dog.

Cel. No, thy words are too precious to he cast away upon curs, throw some of them at me; come, lame me with reasons.

Ros. Then there were two cousins laid up; when the one should be lamed with reasons and the other mad without any.

Cel. But is all this for your father Ros. No, some of it is for my father's child. O, how full of briers is this working-day world! Cel. They are hut burs, cousin, thrown upon thee in holiday foolery; if we walk not in the trodden paths our very petticoats will catch them. Ros. I could shake them off my coat: these burs are in my heart. Cel. Hem them away. have him. Ros. I would cry, if I could cry hem and Cel. Come, come, wrestle with thy affections.

Ros. O, they take the part of a better wrestler than myself.

Cel. O, a good wish upon you! you will try in time, in despite of a fall.—But, turning these jests out of service, let us talk in good earnest: is it possible, on such a sudden, you should fall into so strong a liking with old Sir Rowland's youngest son?

Ros. The duke my father loved his father Cel. Doth it therefore ensue that you should love his son dearly? By this kind of chase I should hate him, for my father hated his father dearly; yet I hate not Orlando.

Ros. No, 'faith, hate him not, for my sake.

Cel. Why should I not? doth he not deserve well?

Ros. Let me love him for that; and do you love him hecause I do .- Look, here comes the duke.

Cel. With his eyes full of anger.

Enter DUKE FREDERICK, with Lords.

Duke F. Mistress, despatch you with your safest haste,

And get you from our court.

Me, uncle? Ros. You, consin: Duke F. Within these ten days if that thou he'st found So near our public court as twenty miles, Thou diest for it.

Ros. I do beseech your grace, et me the knowledge of my fault hear with me: If with myself I hold intelligence,

Sir Oli. 'Tis no matter; ne'er a fantastical knave of them all shall flont me out of my calling. . [Exit.

Scene IV.—Another part of the Forest. Before a Cottage.

Enter ROSALIND and CELIA.

Ros. Never talk to me; I will weep. Cel. Do, I prythee; but yet have the grace to consider that tears do not become a man.

Ros. But have I not cause to weep? Cel. As good cause as one would desire; therefore weep.

Ros. His very hair is of the dissembling colour. Cel. Something browner than Judas's: marry, his kisses are Judas's own children.

Ros. I' faith, his hair is of a good colour. Cel. An excellent colour: your chestnut was ever the only colour.

Ros. And his kissing is as full of sanctity as the touch of holy bread.

Cel. He hath bought a pair of cast lips of Diana: a nun of winter's sisterhood kisses not more religiously; the very ice of chastity is in them.

Ros. But why did he swear he would come this morning, and comes not?

Cel. Nay, certainly, there is no truth in him.

Ros. Do you think so?

Cel. Yes; I think he is not a pickpurse nor a horse-stealer; but for his verity in love, I do think him as concave as a covered goblet or a worm-eaten nut.

Ros. Not true in love? [in. Cel. Yes, when he is in; but I think he is not

Ros. You have heard him swear downright he was.

Cel. Was is not is: besides, the oath of a lover is no stronger than the word of a tapster; they are both the confirmers of false reckonings. He attends here in the forest on the duke, your father.

Ros. I met the duke yesterday, and had much question with him. He asked me of what parentage I was; I told him, of as good as he; so he laughed and let me go. But what talk we of fathers when there is such a man as Orlando?

Cel. O, that's a brave man! he writes brave verses, speaks brave words, swears brave oaths, and breaks them bravely, quite traverse, athwart the heart of his lover; as a puny tilter, that spurs his horse but on one side, breaks his staff like a noble goose: but all's brave that youth mounts and folly guides.—Who comes here?

Enter CORIN.

Cor. Mistress and master, you have oft inquir'd

After the shepherd that complain'd of love,

Who you saw sitting by me on the turf

Who you saw sitting by me on the turf, Praising the proud disdainful shepherdess

That was his mistress.

Cel. Well, and what of him? Cor. If you will see a pageant truly play'd, Between the pale complexion of true love And the red glow of scorn and proud disdain, Go hence a little, and I shall conduct you, If you will mark it.

Ros. O, come, let us remove:
The sight of lovers feedeth those in love.
Bring us unto this sight, and you shall say
Pil prove a busy actor in their play. [Exeunt,
SCENE V.—Another part of the Forest.

Enter SILVIUS and PHEBE.

Sil. Sweet Phebe, do not scorn me: do not, Phebe: Say that you love me not; but say not so

In bitterness. The common executioner, Whose heart the accustom'd sight of death makes hard,

Falls not the axe upon the humbled neck But first begs pardon. Will you sterner be Than he that dies and lives by bloody drops?

Enter Rosalind, Celia, and Corin, at a distance.

Phe. I would not be thy executioner: I fly thee, for I would not injure thee. Thou tell'st me there is murder in mine eye: 'Tis pretty, sure, and very probable,

That eyes,—that are the frail'st and softest thing Who shut their coward gates on atomies,—Should be called tyrants, butchers, murderers! Now do I frown on thee with all my heart;

And if mine eyes can wound, now let them kill

thee:
Now counterfeit to swoon; why, now fall down;
Or, if thou canst not, O, for shame, for shame,
Lie not, to say mine eyes are murderers.
Now show the wound mine eye hath made in thee:
Scratch thee but with a pin, and there remains

Some scar of it; lean but upon a rush,
The cicatrice and capable impressure [eyes,
Thy palm some moment keeps; but now mine
Which I have darted at thee, hurt thee not;
Nor, I am sure, there is no force in eyes

That can do hurt.

Sil. O dear Phebe,
If ever,—as that ever may be near,—
You meet in some fresh cheek the power of fancy,
Then shall you know the wounds invisible
That love's keen arrows make.

'Phe. But till that time Come not thou near me; and when that time

Afflict me with thy mocks, pity me not; As till that time I shall not pity thee.

Ros. (Advancing.) And why, I pray you? Who might be your mother,

That you insult, exult, and all at once, Over the wretched? What though you have no beauty,—

As, by my faith, I see no more in you
Than without candle may go dark to bed,—
Must you be therefore proud and pitiless?
Why, what means this? Why do you look on me?
I see no more in you than in the ordinary
Of nature's sale-work:—Od's my little life,
I think she means to tangle my eyes tool—
No, faith, proud mistress, hope not after it;
'Tis not your inky brows, your black silk hair,
Your bugle eyeballs, nor your cheek of cream,
That can entame my spirits to your worship—
You foolish shepherd, wherefore do you follow her Like foggy south, puffing with wind and rain? Being native burghers of this desert city, Should, in their own confines, with forked heads Have their round haunches gor'd.

Indeed, my lord, x Lord. The melancholy Jaques grieves at that; And, in that kind, swears you do more usurp Than doth your brother, that hath banish'd you. To-day my lord of Amiens and myself Did steal behind him as he lay along Under an oak, whose antique root peeps ont Upon the brook that brawls along this wood: To the which place a poor sequester'd stag, That from the huuters' aim had ta'en a hurt, Did come to languish; and, indeed, my lord, The wretched animal heav'd forth such groans, That their discharge did stretch his leathern coat Almost to bursting; and the big round tears Cours'd one another down his innocent nose In piteous chase: and thus the hairy fool, Much marked of the melancholy Jaques Stood on the extremest verge of the swift brook, Augmenting it with tears.

Duke S. But what said Jaques? Did he not moralize the spectacle?

I Lord. O, yes, into a thousand similies. First, for his weeping into the ueedless stream; Poor deer, quoth he, thou mak'st a testament As worldlings do, giving thy sum of more To that which had too much: theu, being there aloue,

Left and abandou'd of his velvet friends;
'Tis right, quoth he; thus misery doth part The flux of company: anon, a careless herd, Full of the pasture, jumps along by him, And never stays to greet him;

Jaques, Sweep on, you fat and greasy citizens; 'Tis just the fashion: wherefore do you look Upon that poor and broken bankrupt there? Thus most invectively he pierceth through The body of the country, city, court, Yea, and of this our life: swearing that we Are mere usurpers, tyrants, and what's worse, To fright the animals, and to kill them up In their assign'd and native dwelling-place.

Duke S. And did you leave him in this cou-[menting templation?

2 Lord. We did, my lord, weeping and com-Upon the sobbing deer.

Duke S. Show me the place: I love to cope him in these sullen fits, For then be's full of matter.

2 Lord. I'll bring you to him straight.

Duke F. Send to his brother; fetch that gallant hither: If he be absent, bring his brother to me, I'll make him find him: do this suddenly; And let not search and inquisition quail To bring again these foolish runaways.

Scene III .- Before Oliver's House.

Enter Orlando and Adam, meeting.

Orl. Who's there? Adam. What! my young master?-O, my gentle master!

O, my sweet master! O you memory Of old Sir Rowland! wby, what make you bere? Why are you virtuous? why do people love you? And wherefore are you gentle, strong, and valiant?

Why would you be so fond to overcome The bony prizer of the bumorous duke? Your praise is come too swiftly home before you. Know you not, master, to some kind of men Their graces serve them but as enemies? No more do yours; your virtues, gentle master, Are sanctified and holy traitors to you. O, what a world is this, when what is comely Euveuoms him that bears it!

Orl. Why, what's the matter? O uubappy youth, Adam.Come not within these doors; within this roof The euemy of all your graces lives: Your brother,—no, uo brother; yet the son— Yet not the son; I will uot call him son— Of him I was about to call his father,-Hath heard your praises; and this night he means

To burn the lodging where you used to lie. And you within it: if he fail of that, He will have other means to cut you off; I overheard him and his practices. This is no place; this house is but a butchery: Abhor it, fear it, do not euter it. [me go? Orl. Why, whither, Adam, wouldst thou have Adam. No matter whither, so you come not

Ros. Farewell, monsieur traveller: look you lisp and wear strange suits; disable all the benefits of your own country; he out of love with your nativity, and almost chide God for making you that countenance you are; or I will scarce think you have swam in a gondola. Jaques. Why, how now, Orlandol where have you been all this while? You a lover!— An you serve me such another trick, never come in my sight more.

Oil. My fair Rosalind, I come within an hour of my promise.

Ros. Break an hour's promise in love! He that will divide a minute into a thousand parts. and break but a part of a thousandth part of a minute in the affairs of love, it may be said of him that Cupid hath clapped him o' the shoulder, but I warrant him heart-whole.

Orl. Pardon me, dear Rosalind.

Ros. Nay, an you be so tardy, come no more in my sight: I had as lief be woo'd of a snail.

Orl. Of a snail!

Ros. Ay, of a snail; for though he comes slowly, he carries his house on his head; a better jointure, I think, than you can make a woman: besides, he brings his destiny with him. Orl. What's that?

Ros. Why, horns; which such as you are fain to be beholden to your wives for: but he comes armed in his fortune, and prevents the slander of his wife.

Orl. Virtue is no horn-maker; and my Rosalind is virtuous.

Ros. And I am your Rosalind.
Cel. It pleases him to cell you so; but he hath a Rosalind of a better leer than you.

Ros. Come, woo me, woo me; for now I am in a holiday humour, and like enough to consent.-What would you say to me now, an I were your very very Rosalind?

Orl. I would kiss before I spoke.

Ros. Nay, you were better speak first; and when you were gravelled for lack of matter, you might take occasion to kiss. Very good orators, when they are out, they will spit; and for lovers lacking,—God warn us!—matter, the cleanliest shift is to kiss.

Orl. How if the kiss be denied?

Ros. Then she puts you to entreaty, and there begins new matter.

Orl. Who could be out, being before his be loved mistress?

Ros. Marry, that should you, if I were your mistress; or I should think my honesty ranker than my wit.
Orl. What, of my suit?

Ros. Not out of your apparel, and yet out of your suit. Am not I your Rosalind?

Orl. I take some joy to say you are, because I would be talking of her.

Ros. Well, in her person, I say, I will not have

Otl. Then, in mine own person, I die.

Ros. No, faith, die by attorney. The poor world is almost six thousand years old, and in all this time there was not any man died in his own person, videlicet, in a love-cause. had his brains dashed out with a Grecian club; [yet he did what he could to die before; and he | the casement; shut that, and it will out at the is one of the patterns of love. Leander, he would have lived many a fair year, though Hero had turned nun, if it had not been for a hot midsummer-night; for, good youth, he went but forth to wash him in the Hellespont, and, being taken with the cramp, was drowned; and the foolish chroniclers of that age found it was -Hero of Sestos. But these are all lies; men have died from time to time, and worms have eaten them, but not for love.

Orl. I would not have my right Rosalind of this mind; for, I protest, her frown might kill

Ros. By this hand, it will not kill a fly. But come, now I will be your Rosalind in a more coming-on disposition; and ask me what you will, I will grant it.

Orl. Then love me, Rosalind.

Ros. Yes, faith will I, Fridays and Saturdays, and all.

Oil. And wilt thou have me? Ros. Ay, and twenty such. Oil. What say'st thou?

Ros. Are you not good? Orl. I hope so.

Why, then, can one desire too much of Ros. a good thing? -- Come, sister, you shall be the priest, and marry us.—Give me your hand. Orlando:—What do you say, sister?

Orl. Pray thee, marry us. Cel. I cannot say the words.

Ros. You must begin, -- Will you, Orlando,-

Cel. Go to:--Will you, Orlando, have to wife this Rosalind? Orl. I will.

Ros. Ay, but when? Orl. Why, now; as fast as she can marry us. Ros. Then you must say,-I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.

Orl. I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.

Ros. I wight ask you for your commission; but,-I do take thee, Orlando, for my husband: -there's a girl goes before the priest; and, certainly, a woman's thoughts run before her actions.

Orl. So do all thoughts; they are winged. Ros. Now tell me how long you would have her, after you have possessed her. Orl. For ever and a day.

Ros. Say a day, without the ever. No, no, Orlando; men are April when they woo, December when they wed: maids are May when they are maids, but the sky changes when I will be more jealous of thee they are wives. than a Barbary cock-pigeon over his hen; more clamorous than a parrot against rain; more new-fangled than an ape; more giddy in my desires than a monkey: I will weep for nothing, like Diana in the fountain, and I will do that when you are disposed to be merry; I will laugh like a hyen, and that when thou art inclined to sleep

Orl. But will my Rosalind do so?

Ros. By my life, she will do as I do.

Orl. O, but she is wise. Ros. Or else she could not have the wit to Troilus do this: the wiser, the waywarder: make the doors upon a woman's wit, and it will out at Scene V .- Another part of the Forest.

Enter AMIENS, JAQUES, and others.

SONG.

Under the greenwood tree, Who loves to lie with me, And tune his merry note Unto the sweet bird's throst, Come hither, come hither, come hither; Here shall he seo Ami. No enemy, But winter and rough weather.

Jaq. More, more, I pr'ythee, more. Ami. It will make you melancholy, Monsieur Jaques.

Jaq. I thank it. More, I pr'ythee, more. I can snek melancholy ont of a song, as a weasel sucks eggs. More, I pr'ythee, more. Ami. My voice is ragged; I know I cannot please yon.

Jaq. I do not desire you to please me, I do desire you to sing. Come, more: another stanza: eall you them stanzas?

Ami. What you will, Monsieur Jaques. Jaq. Nay, I care not for their names; they owe me nothing. Will you sing? [myself. Ami. More at your request than to please Jaq. Well then, if ever I thank any man, I'll thank yon: but that they call compliment is like the encounter of two dog-apes; and when a man thanks me heartily, methinks I have given him a penny, and he renders me the beggarly thanks. Come, sing; and you that will not, hold your tongues.

Ami. Well, I'll end the song.—Sirs, cover the while: the duke will drink under this tree: he hath been all this day to look you.

Jaq. And I have been all this day to avoid m. He is too disputable for my company: I think of as many matters as he; but I give heaven thanks, and make no boast of them. Come, warble, come.

SONG.

Who doth ambition thun, [All together here. And loves to live i' the sun, Seeking the food he eats, And pleas'd with what he gets, Come hither, come hither, come hither; Here shall he see No enemy, But winter and rough weather.

Jeg. I'll give you a verse to this note, that I made yesterday in despite of my invention. Ami. And I'll sing it. Jag. Thus it goes:

If it do come to pass That any man turn ars,
Leaving his wealth and ease.
A stubborn will to please,
Ducdame, ducdame, ducdame;
Here shall he see Gross fools as he. An if he will come to Ami.

Ami. What's that ducdame?

Jaq. 'Tis a Greek invocation, to call fools into a circle. I'll go sleep, if I can; if I cannot, I'll rail against all the first-born of Egypt.

Ami. And I'll go seek the duke; his ban-Exeunt severally. onet is prepared.

Scene VI.—Another part of the Forest.

Enter Orlando and Adam.

Adam. Dear master, I can go no farther: O, I die for food! Here lie I down, and measure ont my grave. Farewell, kind master.

ont my grave. Farewell, kind master.
Oil. Why, how now, Adaml no greater heart in thee? Live a little; comfort a little; cheer thyself a little. If this uncouth forest yield anything savage, I will either be food for it or bring it for food to thee. Thy conceit is nearer death than thy powers. For my sake be comfortable: hold death awhile at the arm's end: I will here be with thee presently; and if I bring thee not something to eat, I'll give thee leave to die: but if thon diest before I come, thou art a mocker of my labour. said! thou look'st cheerily: and I'll be with thee quickly .- Yet thon liest in the bleak nir: come, I will bear thee to some shelter; and thou shalt not die for lack of a dinner if there live anything in this desert. Cheerily, good Adami

Scene VII .- Another part of the Forest. A Table set.

Enter DUKE Senior, AMIENS, and others.

Duke S. I think he be transform'd into a beast; For I can nowhere find him like a man.

I Lord. My lord, he is but even now gone hence;

Here was he merry, hearing of a song. Duke S. If he, compact of jars, grow musical, We shall have shortly discord in the spheres.

Go, seek him; tell him I would speak with him. I Lord. He saves my labour by his own approach.

Enter JAQUES.

Duke S. Why, how now, monsieurl what a life is this,

That your poor friends must woo your company? Whatl you look merrily.

Jaq. A fool, a fool!—I met a fool i' the forest, A motley fool;—a miserable worldi-As I do live by food, I met a fool, Who laid him down and bask'd him in the sun, And rail'd on Lady Fortune in good terms, In good set terms,—and yet a motley fool.
Good-morrow, fool, quoth I: No, sir, quoth he,
Call me not fool till heaven hath sent me fortune.

And then he drew a dist from his poke, And, looking on it with lack-lustre eye, Says very wisely, It is ten o'clock: Thus may we see, quoth he, how the world ways. Ros. She Phebes me: mark how the tyrant writes. [Reads.]

Art thou god to shepherd turn'd, That a maiden's heart hath burn'd?

Can a woman rail thus?

Sil. Call you this railing?

Ros. Why, thy godhead laid apart, Warr'st thon with a woman's heart?

Did you ever hear such railing?

Whiles the eye of man did woo me, That could do no vengeance to me.—

Meaning me a beast .-

If the scorn of your bright eyne Have power to raise such love in mine Alack, in me what strange effect Would they work in mild aspect? Whiles you chid me I did love; How then might your prayers move? He that brings this love to thee Little knows this love in me: And by him seal up thy mind; Whether that thy youth and kind Will the faithful offer take Of me, and all that I can make; Or else by him my love deny, And then I'll study how to die.

Sil. Call you this chiding? Cel. Alas, poor shepherd!

Ros. Do you pity him? no, he deserves no pity.—Wilt thou love such a woman?—What, to make thee an instrument, and play false strains upon thee! Not to be endured!—Well, go your way to her,—for I see leve hath made thee a tame snake,—and say this to her;—that if she love me, I charge her to love thee: if she will not, I will never have her, unless thou entreat for her.—If you be a true lover, hence, and not a word; for here comes more company. [Exil Silvius.

Enter OLIVER.

Oli. Good-morrow, fair ones: pray you, if you know

Where in the purlieus of this forest stands A sheep-cote fenc'd about with olive trees?

A sheep-cote fenc'd about with olive trees?

Cel. West of this place, down in the neighbour bottom:

The rank of osiers, by the murmuring stream, Left on your right hand, brings you to the place. But at this hour the house doth keep itself; There's none within.

Oli. If that an eye may profit by a tongue, Then should I know you by description; Such garments, and such years. Theboy is fair, Of female favour, and bestows himself Like a ripe sister: the woman low, And browner than her brother. Are not you

The owner of the house I did inquire for?

Cel. It is no boast, being ask'd, to say we are.

Oli. Orlando doth commend him to you both;

And to that youth he calls his Rosalind
He sends this bloody napkin:—are you he?
Ros. I am: what must we understand by
this?

Oli. Some of my shame; if you will know of

What man I am, and how, and why, and where This handkerchief was stain'd.

Cel. I pray you, tell it.
Oli. When last the young Orlando parted from you,

He left a promise to return again
Within an hour; and, pacing through the forest,
Chewing the food of sweet and bitter fancy,
Lo, what befell! he threw his eye aside,
And, mark, what object did present itself!
Under an oak, whose boughs were moss'd with

And high top bald with dry antiquity,
A wretched ragged man, o'ergrown with hair,
Lay sleeping on his back: about his neck
A green and gilded snake had wreath'd itself,
Who, with her head, nimble in threats, approach'd

The opening of his mouth; but suddenly,
Seeing Orlando, it unlink'd itself,
And with indented glides did slip away
Into a bush: under which bush's shade
A lioness, with udders all drawn dry,
Lay couching, head on ground, with cat-like watch,
!tis

When that the sleeping man should stir; for The royal disposition of that beast To prey on nothing that doth seem as dead: This seen, Orlando did approach the man, And found it was his brother, his elder brother.

Cel. O, I have heard him speak of that same brother:

And he did render him the most unnatural. That liv'd 'mongst men.

Oli. And well he might so do, For well I know he was unnatural.

Ros. But, to Orlando:—did he leave him

Food to the suck'd and hungry lioness?

Oli. Twice did he turn his back, and purpos'd so; But kindness, nobler ever than revenge.

And nature, stronger than his just occasion, Made him give battle to the lioness, Who quickly fell before him; in which hurtling From miserable slumber I awak'd.

Cel. Are you his brother?

Ros. Was it you he rescued?

Cel. Was't you that did so oft contrive to kill him?

Oli. 'Twas I; but 'tis not I: I do not shame
To tell you what I was, since my conversion
So sweetly tastes, being the thing I am.
Ros. But, for the bloody napkin?—

Oli. By and by. When from the first to last, betwixt us two, Tears our recountments had most kindly bath'd, As, how I came into that desert place;— In brief, he led me to the gentle duke, Who gave me fresh array and entertainment, Committing me unto my brother's love, Who led me instantly unto his cave, There stripp'd himself, and here upon his arm The lioness had torn some flesh away, Which all this while had bled; and now he fainted.

And cried, in fainting, upon Rosalind. Brief, I recover'd him, bound up his wound, And, after some small space, being strong at

heart,
He sent me hither, stranger as I am,
To tell this story, that you might excuse
His broken promise, and to give this napkin,
Dy'd in his blood, unto the shepherd-youth
That he in sport doth call his Rosalind.

Unwillingly to school. And then the lover. Sighing like furnace, with a woeful ballad Made to his mistress' eyebrow. Then a soldier, Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the pard. Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel. seeking the bubble reputation. Even in the cannou's mouth. And then the justice, in fair round belly with good capou lin'd. With eyes severe and beard of formal cut. Full of wise saws and modern instances; And so he plays his part. The sixth age shifts into the lean and slipper'd pantaloou, With spectacles on nose and pouch ou side; His youthful hose, well sav'd, a world too wide for his shrunk shank; and his big manly voice, Furning again toward childish treble, pipes and whistles in his sound. Last scene of all, That ends this strange eventful history, s second childishness and mere oblivion; lansteeth, sanseyes, sanstaste, sanseverything.

Re-enter ORLANDO with ADAM.

Duke S. Welcome. Set down your venerable burdeu, and let him feed.

Orl. I thank you most for him. Adom. So had you need:

i scarce can speak to thank you for myself. Duke S. Welcome; fall to: I will not trouble 2on

As yet, to question you about your fortunes .-Give us some music; and, good cousin, sing.

AMIENS sings.

SONG.

Blow, blow, thon winter wind, Thou art not so unkied As man's ingratitude; Thy tooth is not so keen Because thou art not seen,
Although thy breath be rude.
Heigh-ho! sing, heigh-ho! unto the green holly:

Most friendship is feigning, most loving mere folly: Then, beigh-ho, the holly! This life is most jolly.

Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky, That dost not bite so nigh As benefits forgot: Though thou the waters warp, Thy sting is not so sharp As friend remember'd not. Heigh-hol sing, heigh-ho! &c.

Duke S. If that you were the good Sir Rowland's sou. As you have whisper'd faithfully you were, And as mine eye doth his efficies witness Most truly limn'd and living in your face, Be truly welcome hither: I am the duke

That lov'd your father. The residue of your fortune, Go to my cave and tell me. - Good old man, Thou art right welcome as thy master is:

Support him by the arm.—Give me your hand, And let me all your fortunes understand.

ACT III.

SCENE I .- A Room in the Palace.

Enter DUKE FREDERICK, OLIVER, Lords, and Attendants.

Duke F. Not seen him since? Sir, sir, that cannot be:

But were I not the better part made mercy. I should not seek an abseut argument Of my reveuge, thou present. But look Find out thy brother wheresoe'er he is: But look to it: Seek him with candle; bring him dead or living With this twelvemouth, or turn thou no more To seek a living in our territory. Thy lands, and all things that thou dost call thine Worth seizure, do we seize into our hands. Till thou canst quit thee by thy brother's mouth Of what we think against thee.

Oli. O that your highness knew my heart in this!

I never lov'd my brother in my life. Duke F. More villain thou.—Well, push him out of doors,

And let my officers of such a nature Make an extent upon ms nouse _____ Do this expediently, and turn him going. [Execunt. Make an extent upon his house and lands:

Scene II .- The Forest of Arden.

Enter Orlando, with a paper.

Orl. Hang there, my verse, in witness of my love; (vey

And thou, thrice-crowned queen of night, sur-With thy chaste eye, from thy pale sphere above. Thyhuntress'name, that my full life doth sway. O Rosalind! these trees shall be my books.

And in their barks my thoughts I'll character, That overy eye which in this forest looks Shall see thy virtue witness'd everywhere. Run, run, Orlando; carve on every tree, The fair, the chaste, and unexpressive she. Exit.

Enter CORIN and TOUCHSTONE.

Cor. And how like you this shepherd's life,

Master Touchstone?

Touch. Truly, shepherd, in respect of itself, it is a good life; but in respect that it is a shepherd's life, it is naught. In respect that it is solitary, I like it very well; but in respect that it is private, it is a very vile life. Now in respect it is in the fields, it pleasethme well; but in respect it is not in the court, it is tedious. As it is a spare life, look you, it fits my humour well; but as there is no more plenty in it, it goes much against my stomach. Hast any philosophy in thee, sherherd?

Cor. No more but that I know the more one sickens the worse at ease he is; and that he that wants money, means, and content, is without three good friends; that the property of rain is to wet, and fire to burn; that good pasture makes fat sheep; and that a great cause of the night is lack of the sun; that he that hath learned no wit by nature nor art may complain of good breeding, or comes of a very dull kindred.

Touch. Such a one is a natural philosopher.

[Excunt. Wast ever in court, shepherd?

Ros. I thought thy heart had been wounded with the claws of a lion.

Orl. Wounded it is, but with the eyes of a lady.

Ros. Did your brother tell you how I counterfeited to swoon when he show'd me your handkercher.

Orl. Ay, and greater wonders than that. Ros. O, I know where yeu are:—nay, 'tis true: there was never anything so sudden but the fight of two rams and Caesar's thrasonical brag of—I came. saw, and overcame: for your brother and my sister no sooner met, but they looked; no sooner looked, but they loved; no sooner loved, but they sighed; no sooner sighed, but they asked one another the reason; no sooner knew the reason, but they sought the remedy: and in these degrees have they made a pair of stairs to marriage, which they will climb incontinent, or else be incontinent before marriage: they are in the very wrath of love, and they will together: clubs cannot part them.

Orl. They shall be married to-morrow; and I will bid the duke to the nuptial. But O, how bitter a thing it is to look into happiness through another man's eyes! By so much the more shall I to-morrow be at the height of heart-heaviness, by how much I shall think my brother happy in having what he wishes for.

Ros. Why, then, to-morrow I cannot serve your turn for Rosalind?

Orl. I can live no longer by thinking.

Ros. I will weary you, then, no longer with idle talking. Know of me, then,-for now I speak to some purpose,—that I know you are a gentleman of good conceit: I speak not this that you should bear a good opinion of my knowledge, insomuch I say I know you are; neither do I labour for a greater esteem than may in some little measure draw a belief from you, to do yourself good, and not to grace me. Believe, then, if you please, that I can do strange things: I have, since I was three year old, conversed with a magician, most profound in his art, and yet not damnable. If you do love Rosalind so near the heart as your gesture cries it out, when your brother marries Aliena, shall you marry her:-I know into what straits of fortune she is driven; and it is not impossible to me, if it appear not inconvenient to you, to set her before your eyes to-morrow, human as she is, and without any danger.

Orl. Speak'st thou in sober meanings? Ros. By my life, I do; which I tender dearly, though I say I am a magician. Therefore, put you in your best array, bid your friends; for if you will be married to-morrow, you shall; and to Rosalind, if you will. Look, here comes a lover of mine, and a lover of hers.

Enter SILVIUS and PHEBE.

Phe. Youth, you have done me much ungentleness,

To show the letter that I writ to you.

Ros. I care not, if I have: it is my study To seem despiteful and ungentle to you: You are there follow'd by a faithful shepherd; Look upon him, love him; he worships you. Phe Good shepherd, tell this youth what 'tis

Sil. It is to be all made of sighs and tears;—
And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And I for Ganymede. Orl. And I for Rosalind. Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of faith and service;

And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And I for Ganymede. Orl. And I for Rosalind. Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of fantasy, All made of passion, and all made of wishes; All adoration, duty, and obedience,

All humbleness, all patience, and impatience, All purity, all trial, all observance;—

And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And so am I for Ganymede.
Orl. And so am I for Rosalind.
Ros. And so am I for no woman.

Phe. If this be so, why blame you me to love you? [To ROSALIND. Sil. If this be so, why blame you me to love you? [To Phebe.

Orl. If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

Ros. Why do you speak too,—Why blame you me to love you? [hear.

Orl. To her that is not here, nor doth not Ros. Pray you, no more of this; 'tis like the howling of Irish wolves against the moon.—I will help you [to Shlvius] if I can:—I would love you [to Phebe] if I could.—To-morrow meet me all together.—I will marry you [to Phebe] if ever I marry woman, and I'll be married to-morrow:—I will satisfy you [to Orlando] if ever I satisfied man, and you shall be married to-morrow:—I will content you [to Shlvius] if what pleases you contents you, and you shall be married to-morrow.—As you [to Orlando] love Rosalind, meet;—as you [to Shlvius] love Phebe, meet; and as I love no woman, I'll meet.—So, fare you well; I have left you commands.

Sil. I'll not fail, if I live.

Phe.
Orl.
Nor I.
Nor I.

Exeunt.

SCENE III .- Another part of the Forest.

Enter Touchstone and Audrey.

Touch. To-morrow is the joyful day, Audrey; to-morrow will we be married.

Aud. I do desire it with all my heart; and I hope it is no dishonest desire to desire to be a woman of the world. Here come two of the banished duke's pages.

Enter two Pages.

1 Page. Well met, honest gentleman.
Touch. By my troth, well met. Come sit, sit, and a song.

z Page. We are for you: sit i' the middle. r Page. Shall we clap into't roundly, without hawking, or spitting, or saying we are hoarse, which are the only prologues to a bad voice?

Touch. Come, shepherd, let us make an honourable retreat; though not with bag and baggage, yet with scrip and scrippage.

[Exeunt CORIN and TOUCH. Cel. Didst thou hear these verses?

Ros. O yes, I heard them all, and more too; for some of them had in them more feet than the verses would bear.

Cel. That's no matter; the feet might bear the verses.

Ros. Ay, but the feet were lame, and could not bear themselves without the verse, and therefore stood lamely in the verse.

Cel. But didst thou hear without wondering how thy name should be hanged and carved upon these trees?

Ros. I was seven of the nine days out of the wonder before you came; for look bere what I found on a palm tree: I was never so berhymed since Pythagoras' time, that I was an Irish rat, which I can hardly remember.

Cel. Trow you who hath done this?

Ros. Is it a man? Cel. And a chain, that you once wore, about his neck. Change you colour?

Ros. I pray thee, who? Cel. O lord, lord! it is a hard matter for friends to meet; but mountains may be re-moved with earthquakes, and so encounter.

Ros. Nay, but who is it? Cel. Is it possible?

Ros. Nay, I pr'ythee now, with most petitionary vehemence, tell me who it is.

Cel. O wonderful, wonderful, and most wonderful wonderful and yet again wonderful, and after that, out of all whooping!

Ros. Good my complexion! dost thou think, though I am caparisoned like a man, I have a One inch doublet and hose in my disposition? of delay more is a South-sea of discovery. prythee, tell me, who is it? quickly, and speak apace. I would thou couldst stammer, that thou mightst pour this concealed man out of thy month, as wine comes out of a narrowmouthed bottle; either too much at once or none at all. I pr'ythee take the cork out of thy mouth, that I may drink thy tidings.

Cel. So you may put a man in your belly.
Ros. Is he of God's making? What manner of man? Is his head worth a hat or his chin worth a beard?

Cel. Nay, he hath but a little beard.

Ros. Why, God will send more if the man will be thankful: let me stay the growth of his beard if thou delay me not the knowledge of his chin.

Cel. It is young Orlando, that tripped up the wrestler's heels and your heart both in an instant.

Ros. Nay, but the devil take mocking: speak sad brow and true maid.

Cel. I' faith, coz, 'tis he.

Ros. Orlando? Cel. Orlando.

Ros. Alas the dayl what shall I do with my doublet and hose?-What did he when thou saw'st him? What said he? How look'd he? love.

Wherein went he? What makes he here? Orl. 'Tis a fault I will not che bid be ask for me? Where remains he? How best virtue. I am weary of you.

parted be with thee? and when shalt thou see him again? Answer me in one word.

Cel. You must borrow me Gargantua's mouth first: 'tis a word too great for any month of this age's size. To say ay and no to these particulars is more than to answer in a catechism.

Ros. But doth he know that I am in this forest, and in man's apparel? Looks he as freshly as he did the day he wrestled?

Cel. It is as easy to count atomies as to resolve the propositions of a lover:-but take a taste of my finding him, and relish it with good observance. I found him under a tree, like a dropped acorn.

Ros. It may well be called Jove's tree, when it drops forth such fruit.

Cel. Give me audience, good madam.

Ros. Proceed.
Cel. There lay he, stretched along like a wounded knight.

Ros. Though it be pity to see such a sight, it well becomes the ground.

Cel. Cry, holial to thy tongue, I prythee; it curvets unseasonably. He was furnished like a hunter.

Ros. O, ominous! he comes to kill my heart. Cel. I would sing my song without a burden: thou bring'st me ont of tune.

Ros. Do you not know I am a woman? when I think, I must speak. Sweet, say on. Cel. You bring me out.—Soft! comes he not here? Ros. 'Tis he: slink by, and note him.

[CELIA and ROSALIND retire.

Enter ORLANDO and JAQUES.

Jag. I thank you for your company; but, good faith, I had as lief bave been myself alone. Orl. And so had I; but yet, for fashion's sake, I thank you too for your society. [as we can. Jaq. God be with you: let's meet as little

Orl. I do desire we may be better strangers.

Jaq. I pray you, mar no more trees with writing love-songs in their barks.

Oil. I pray you, mar no more of my verses with reading them ill-favouredly.

Jag. Rosalind is your love's name?

Orl. Yes, just.

Jaq. I do not like her name. Orl. There was no thought of pleasing you when she was christened?

Jaq. What stature is she of?
Orl. Just as high as my heart.
Jaq. You are full of pretty answers. Have you not been acquainted with goldsmiths' wives, and conned them out of rings?

Orl. Not so; but I answer you right painted cloth, from whence you have studied your questions.

Jaq. You have a nimble wit: I think it was ade of Atalanta's heels. Will you sit down made of Atalanta's heels. with me? and we two will rail against our mistress the world, and all our misery.

Orl. I will chide no breather in the world but myself, against whom I know most faults. Jeq. The worst fault you have is to be in

Orl. 'Tis a fault I will not change for your sent him word again, it was not well cut, he would send me word he cut it to please himself: this is called the Quip modest. If again, it was not well cut, he disabled my judgment: this is called the Reply churlish. If again, it was not well cut, he would answer, I spake not true: this is called the Reproof valiant. If again, it was not well cut, he would say, I lie: this is called the Countercheck quarrelsome: and so, to the Lie circumstantial, and the Lie direct.

Jay. And how oft did you say his beard was not well cut?

Touch. I durst go no farther than the Lie circumstantial, nor he durst not give me the Lie direct; and so we measured swords and parted.

Jag. Can you nominate in order now the degrees of the lie?

Touch. O, sir, we quarrel in print by the book, as you have books for good manners: I will name you the degrees. The first, the Retort courteous; the second, the Qnip modest; the third, the Reply churlish; the fourth, the Reproof valiant; the fifth, the Countercheck quarrelsome; the sixth, the Lie with circumstance; the seventh, the Lie direct. All these you may avoid but the lie direct; and you may avoid that too with an II. I knew when seven justices could not take up a quarrel; but when the parties were met themselves, one of them thought but of an II, as II you said so, then I said so; and they shook hands, and swore brothers. Your II is the only peace-maker:—much virtue in II.

Jog. Is not this a rare fellow, my lord? he's as good as anything, and yet a fool.

Duke S. He uses his folly like a stalkinghorse, and under the presentation of that he shoots his wit.

Enter Hymen leading Rosalind in woman's clothes; and Cella.

Still Music.

Hym. Then is there mirth in heaven,
When earthly things made even Atone together.
Good duke, receive thy daughter:
Hymen from heaven brought her,
Yes, brought her hither,
That thou mightst join her hand with his,
Whose heart within her bosom is.

Ros. To you I give myself, for I am yours. [To Duke S.

To you I give myself, for I am yours.

Duke S. If there be truth in sight, you are my danghter.

Orl. If there be truth in sight, you are my Rosalind.

Phe. If sight and shape be true,

Why, then, my love, adieu!

Ros. I'll have no father, if you be not he:—
[To Duke S.

I'll have no husband, if you be not he:—

Hym. Peace, ho! I bar confusion:
'Tis I must make conclusion
Of these most strange events:

Here's eight that must take hands,
To join in Hymen's bands,
If truth holds true contents.
You and you no cross shall part:
[To Oplando and Rosalind.

You and you are heart in heart:
[To Oliver and Celia.
You to his love must accord, [To Phere.

Or have a woman to your lord:—
You and you are sure together,
[To Touchstone and Audrey.
As the winter to foul weather.

Whiles a wedlock-hymn we sing, Feed yourselves with questioning, That reason wonder may diminish, How thus we met, and these things finish.

SONG.

Wedding is great Juno's crown;
O blessed bond of board and bedl.
'Tis Hymen peoples every town;
High wedlock, then, he honoured;
Honour, high honour and renown,
To Hymen, god of every town!

Duke S. O my dear niece, welcome thou art to me!

Even daughter, welcome in no less degree.

Phe. I will not eat my word, now thou are
mine:

Thy faith my fancy to thee doth combine.
[To Silvius.

Enter JAQUES DE BOIS.

Jaq. de B. Let me have andience for a word or two;

I am the second son of old Sir Rowland,
That bring these tidings to this fair assembly:—
Duke Frederick, hearing how that every day
Men of great worth resorted to this forest, Address'd a mighty power; which were on foot,

In his own conduct, purposely to take His brother here, and put him to the sword: And to the skirts of this wild wood he came; Where, meeting with an old religions man, After some question with him, was converted Both from his enterprise and from the world; His crown bequeathing to his banish'd brother, And all their lands restored to them again That were with him exil'd. This to be true I do engage my life.

Duke S. Welcome, young man:
Thou ofier'st fairly to thy brother's wedding:
To one, his lands withheld; and to the other,
A land itself at large, a potent dukedom.
First, in this forest, let us do those ends
That here were well begun and well begot:
And after, every of this happy number,
That have endnr'd shrewd days and nights with

Shall share the good of our returned fortune, According to the measure of their states. Meantime, forget this new-fall'n dignity, And fall into our rustic revelry:— [all, Plzy, music!—and you, brides and bridegrooms With measure heap'd enjoy, to the measures fall. [rightly.

Jcg. Sir, by your patience. If I heard you The dake hath put on a religious life. And thrown into neglect the pompous court?

weep for him, then spit at him; that I drave my suitor from his mad humour of love to a loving humour of madness; which was, to forswear the full stream of the world, and to live in a nook nearly monastic. And thus I cured him; and this way will I take upon me to wash your liver as clean as a sound sheep's heart, that there shall not be one spot of love in't. Orl. I would not be cured, youth.

Ros. I would cure you if you would but call me Rosalind, and come every day to my cote and woo me.

Orl. Now, by the faith of my love, I will:

tell me where it is.

Ros. Go with me to it, and I'll show it you: and, by the way, you shall tell me where in the forest you live. Will you go? forest you live. Will you go?
Orl. With all my heart, good youth.

Ros. Nay, you must call me Rosalind.-Come, sister, will you go? [Exeum Exeunt.

Scene III.—Another part of the Forest.

Enter Touchstone and Audrey: Jaoues at a distance observing them.

Touch. Come apace, good Audrey; I will fetch up your goats, Audrey. And how, Audrey? am I the man yet? Doth my simple feature content you?

Aud. Your features! Lord warrant ns! what features?

Touch. I am here with thee and thy goats, as the most capricious poet, honest Ovid, was among the Goths.

Jaq. O knowledge ill-inhabited! worse than Jore in a thatch'd house. Aside.

Touch. When a man's verses cannot be understood, nor a man's good wit seconded with the forward child understanding, it strikes a man more dead than a great reckoning in a little room.-Truly, I would the gods had made thee poetical.

Aud. I do not know what poetical is: is it honest in deed and word? is it a true thing?

Touch. No, truly: for the truest poetry is the most feigning; and lovers are given to poetry; and what they swear in poetry may be said, as lovers, they do feign.

Aud. Do you wish, then, that the gods had made me poetical?

Touch. I do, truly, for thou swear'st to me thou art honest; now, if thon wert a poet I might have some hope thon didst feign.

Aud. Would you not have me honest? Touch. No, truly, unless thou wert hardfavoured; for honesty coupled to beauty is to have honey a sance to sugar.

Jaq. A material fool! [Aside Aud. Well, I am not fair; and therefore I pray the gods make me honest!

Touch. Truly, and to cast away honesty npon a foul slut were to put good meat into an unclean dish.

Aud. I am not a sint, though I thank the gods I am foul.

Touch. Well, praised be the gods for thy foulness! sluttishness may come hereafter. But be it as it may be, I will marry thee and to that end I have been with Sir Oliver Martert, the vicar of the next village; who hath promised to meet me in this place of the forest, and to comple us.

Jaq. I would fain see this meeting. [Aside. Aud. Well, the gods give us joy!

Touch. Amen. A man may, if he were of a fearful heart, stagger in this attempt; for here we have no temple but the wood, no assembly buthorn-beasts. But what though? Courage! As horns are odious, they are necessary. It is said,—Many a man knows no end of his goods: right; many a man has good horns and knows no end of them. Well, that is the dowry of his wife; 'tis none of his own getting. Horns? Ever to poor men alone?—No, no; the noblest deer hath them as huge as the rascal. Is the single man therefore blessed? No: as a walled town is more worthier than a village, so is the forehead of a married man more honourable than the bare brow of a bachelor; and by how much defence is better than no skill, by so much is a horn more precious than to want. Here comes Sir Oliver.

Enter Sir Oliver Martext.

Sir Oliver Martext, you are well met. Will you despatch us here under this tree, or shall we go with you to your chapel? Iwoman? Sir Oli. Is there none here to give the Touch. I will not take her on gift of any man. Sir Oli. Truly, she must be given, or the marriage is not lawful.

Jaq. [Discovering himself.] Proceed, proceed; I'll give her.

Touch. Good even, good Master What-ye-call'tt. how do yon, sir? You are very well met: God 'ild you for your last company: I am very glad to see you:—even a toy in hand here, sir:—nay; pray be covered.

Jaq. Will you be married, motley?

Touch. As the ox hath his bow, sir, the horse his curb, and the falcon her bells, so man hath his desires; and as pigeons bill, so wedlock would be nibbling.

Jag. And will you, being a man of your breeding, be married under a bush, like a beggar? Get you to church and have a good priest that can tell you what marriage is: this fellow will but join you together as they join wainscot: then one of you will prove a shrunk panel, and like green timber, warp warp.

Touch. I am not in the mind but I were better to be married of him than of another: for he is not like to marry me well; and not being well married, it will be a good excuse for me hereafter to leave my wife. Aside.

Jag. Go thou with me, and let me counsel

Touch. Come, sweet Andrey; We must be married or we must live in bawdry. Farewell, good master Oliver!—Not,— Count. In delivering my son from me, I bury a second husband.

Count. What hope is there of his majesty's amendment?

Laf. He hath abandoned his physicians, madam; under whose practices he hath persecuted time with hope; and finds no other advantage in the process but only the losing of hope by time.

Count. ACT IV.

Scene I .- Forest of Arden.

Enter ROSALIND, CELIA, and JAQUES.

Jag. I pr'ythee, pretty youth, let me be better acquainted with thee.

Ros. They say you are n melancholy fellow. Jaq. I am so; I do love it better than laughing. Ros. Those that are in extremity of either aro abominable fellows, and betray themselves to every modern censure worse than drunkards.

Jaq. Why, 'tis good to he sad and say nothing.
Ros. Why, then, 'tis good to be a post.
Jag. I have neither the scholar's melancholy, which is emulation; nor the musician's, which is fantastical; nor the courtier's, which is proud; nor the soldiers, which is amhitious; nor the lawyer's which is politic; nor the lady's, which is nice; nor the lover's, which is all these: hut it is a melancholy of mine own, compounded of many simples, extracted from many objects: and, indeed, the sundry contemplation of my travels, in which my often rumination wraps me in a most humorous sadness.

Ros. A traveller! By myfaith, you have great reason to be sad: I fear you have sold your own lands to see other men's; then, to have seen much, and to have nothing, is to have rich eyes and poor hands.

Jaq. Yes, I have gained my experience. Ros. And your experience makes you sad: I had rather have a fool to make me merry than experience to make me sad; and to travel for it too.

Enter ORLANDO.

Orl. Good day, and happiness, dear Rosalindl Jaq. Nay, then, God he wi' you, an you talk in hlank verse.

of self-love; which is the most inhibited sin in the canon. Keep it not; you cannot choose but lose by't: out with't! within ten years it will make itself ten, which is a goodly increase; and the principal itself not much the worse: away with it!

Hel. How might one do, sir, to lose it to her own liking?

Par. Let me see: marry ill, to like him that ne'er it likes. 'Tis a commodity will lose the gloss with lying; the longer kept, the less worth: off with't while 'tis vendible: answer the time of request. Virginity, like an old courtier, wears her cap out of fashion; richly suited, but unsuitable: just like the brooch and the toothpick which wear not now. Your date is better in your pie and your porridge than in your cheek. And your virginity, your old virginity, is like one of our French withered pears; it looks ill, it eats drily; marry, 'tis a withered pear; it was formerly better; marry, yet 'tis a withered pear. Will you anything with it?

Hel. Not my virginity yet. There shall your master have a thousand loves, A mother, and a mistress, and a friend, A phoenix, captain, and an enemy, A guide, a goddess, and a sovereign, A counsellor, a traitress, and a dear: His humble ambition, proud humility His jarring concord, and his discord dulcet, His faith, his sweet disaster; with a world Of pretty, fond, adoptious christendoms, That blinking Cupid gossips. Now shall he I know not what he shall:-God send him well!-

The court's a learning-place;—and he is one,—

Par. What one, i' faith?

Hel. That I wish well.—'Tis pity—

Par. What's pity?

Hel. That wishing well had not a body in't Which might be felt; that we, the poorer born, Whose baser stars do shut us up in wishes, Might with effects of them follow our friends, And show what we alone must think; which never Returns us thanks.

Page. Monsieur Parolles, my lord calls for you. (Exit Page.

Par. Little Helen, farewell: if I can remember thee, I will think of thee at court.

Hel. Monsieur Parolles, you were born under a charitable star.

Par. Under Mars, I.

Hel. I especially think, under Mars.

Par. Why under Mars? Hel. The wars have so kept you under that you must needs be born under Mars.

Par. When he was predominant. Hel. When he was retrograde, I think, rather. fight. Par. Why think you so? [fight.] Hel. You go so much backward when you

Par. That's for advantage.

Hel. So is running away, when fear proposes the safety: but the composition that your valour and fear makes in you is a virtue of a good wing, and I like the wear well.

Par. I am so full of businesses I cannot answer thee acutely. I will return perfect cour- As when thy father and myself in friendship

When thou hast leisure, say thy prayers; when thou hast none, remember thy friends: get thee a good husband, and use him as he uses thee: so, farewell.

Hel. Our remedies oft in ourselves do lie. Which we ascribe to heaven: the fated sky Gives us free scope; only doth backward pull Our slow designs when we ourselves are dull.

What power is it which mounts my love so high -That makes me see, and cannot feed mine eve? The mightiest space in fortune nature brings To join like likes, and kiss like native things. Impossible be strange attempts to those That weigh their pains in sense, and do suppose What hath been cannot be: who ever strove To show her merit that did miss her love? Orl. And what wit could wit have to excuse Ros. Marry, to say, -- he came to seek you there. You shall never take her without her answer, unless you take her without her tongue. O, that woman that cannot make her fault her husband's occasion, let her never nurse her child herself, for she will breed it like a fool.

Orl. For these two hours, Rosalind, I will leave thee.

Ros. Alas, dear love, I cannot lack thee two hours!

Orl. I must attend the duke at dinner: by two o'clock I will be with thee again.

Ros. Ay, go your ways, go your ways; I knew what you would prove; my friends told me as much, and I thought no less:-that flattering tongue of yours won me:—'tis but one cast away, and so,—come, death!—Two o'clock is your hour?

Orl. Ay, sweet Rosalind.

Ros. By my troth, and in good earnest, and so God mend me, and by all pretty oaths that are not dangerous, if yon break one jot of your promise, or come one minute behind your hour, I will think you the most pathetical break-promise, and the most hollow lover, and the most unworthy of her you call Rosalind, that may be chosen out of the gross hand of the unfaithful: therefore beware my censure, and keep your promise.

Cel. You have simply misus'd our sex in your love-prate: we must have your donblet and hose plucked over your head, and show the world what the bird hath done to her own nest.

Ros. O coz, coz, coz, my pretty little coz, that thon didst know how many fathom deep I am in love! But it cannot be sounded: my affection hath an unknown bottom, like the bay of Portugal.

Cel. Or rather, bottomless; that as fast as you pour affection in, it runs ont.

Ros. No; that same wicked bastard of Venns, that was begot of thought, conceived of spleen, and born of madness; that blind rascally boy, that abuses every one's eyes, because his own are out, let bim be judge how deep I am in love:—I'll tell thee, Aliena, I cannot be out of the sight of Orlando: I'll go find a shadow, and sigh till he come.

Cel. And I'll sleep. Exeunt.

Scene II.—Another part of the Forest.

Enter JAQUES and Lords, in the habit of Foresters.

Joq. Which is he that killed the deer? I Lord. Sir, it was L.

Jaq. Let's present him to the duke, like a Roman conqueror; and it would do well to set the deer's horns upon his head for a branch of victory.—Have you no song, forester, for this purpose?

2 Lord. Yes, sir. Jaq. Sing it; 'tis no matter how it be in tune, so it make noise enough.

SONG.

What shall he have that kill'd the deer? 2. His leather skin and horns to wear. Then sing him home:

[The rest shall bear this burden.

Take thou no scorn to wear the horn; It was a crest ere thou wast born.

1. Thy father's father wore it;

2. And thy father bore it;

AU. The horn, the lusty horn, Is not a thing to laugh to scorn. Exeunt.

Scene III.—Another part of the Forest.

Enter ROSALIND and CELIA.

Ros. How say you now? Is it not past two o'clock? And here much Orlando!

Cel. I warrant you, with pure love and troubled brain, he hath ta'en his bow and arrows, and is gone forth-to sleep. Look, who comes here.

Enter SILVIUS.

Sil. My errand is to you, fair youth;-My gentle Phebe bid me give you this: [Giving a letter. .

I know not the contents; but, as I guess By the stern brow and waspish action Which she did use as she was writing of it,

It bears an angry tenor: pardon me,
I am but as a guiltless messenger. [letter,
Ros. Patience herself would startle at this And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all: She says I am not fair; that I lack manners;

She calls me proud, and that she could not love me, Were man as rare as Phoenix. Od's my will! Her love is not the hare that I do hunt:

Why writes she so to me?-Well, shepherd, well, This is a letter of your own device. Sil. No, I protest, I know not the contents:

Phebe did write it. Come, come, you are a fool,

And turn'd into the extremity of love. I saw her hand: she has a leathern hand A freestone-colour'd hand: I verily did think That her old gloves were on, but 'twas her hands;

She has a huswife's hand: but that's no matter: I say she never did invent this letter:

This is a man's invention, and his hand. Sil. Sure, it is hers.

Ros. Why, 'tis a boisterons and a cruel style; A style for challengers: why, she defies me, Like Turk to Christian: woman's gentle brain Could not drop forth such giant-rude invention, Such Ethiop words, blacker in their effect Than in their countenance.—Will you hear the letter? Sil. So please yon, for I never heard it yet; Yet heard too much of Phebe's cruelty.

Clo. [Singing.] Was this fair face the cause, quoth

Why the Grecians sacked Troy?
Fond done, done fond,
Was this King Priam's joy?
With that she sighed as she stood,
With that she sighed as she stood,
And gave this sentence then:—
Among nine bad if one be good,
Among nine bad if one be good,
There's yet one good in ten.

Count. What, one good in ten? you corrupt the song, sirrah.

Clo. One good woman in ten, madam, which is a purifying o' the song: would God would serve the world so all the year! we'd find no fault with the tithe-woman if I were the parson: one in ten, quoth a'! an we might have a good woman born but for every blazing star, or at an earthquake, 'twould mend the lottery well: a man may draw his heart out ere he pluck one.

Count. You'll he gone, sir knave, and do as I command you!

Clo. That man should be at woman's command, and yet no hurt done!—Though honesty be no puritan, yet it will do no hurt; it will wear the surplice of humility over the hlack gown of a big heart.—I am going, forsooth: the husiness is for Helen to come hither.

Exit.

Count. Well, now.

Stew. I know, madam, you love your gentlewoman entirely.

Count. Faith, I do: her father hequeathed her to me; and she herself, without other advantage, may lawfully make title to as much love as she finds: there is more owing her than is paid; and more shall be paid her than she'll demand.

Slew. Madam, I was very late more near her than I think she wished me: alone she was, and did communicate to herself her own words to her own ears; she thought, I dare vow for | her, they touched not any stranger sense. Her matter was, she loved your son: Fortune, she said, was no goddess, that had put such difference betwixt their two estates; Love no god, that would not extend his might only where qualities were level: Diana no queen of virgius, that would suffer her poor knight surprise, without rescue in the first assault, or ransom after-This she delivered in the most bitter touch of sorrow that e'er I heard virgin ex-claim in: which I held my duty speedily to acquaint you withal; sithence, in the loss that may happen, it concerns you something to know

Count. You have discharged this honestly; keep it to yourself: many likelihoods informed me of this before, which hung so tottering in the halance that I could neither believe not misdoubt. Pray you, leave me: stall this in your hosom; and I thank you for your honest care: I will speak with you further anon.

[Exit Steward. Count. Even so it was with me when I was young: [thorn

If ever we are nature's, these are ours; this
Doth to our rose of youth rightly helong;

Our blood to us, this to our blood is born: It is the show and seal of nature's truth, Where love's strong passion is impress'd in youth:

By our remembrances of days foregone,

Such were our faults:—or then we thought them none.

Enter HELENA.

Her eye is sick on't;—I ohserve her now.

Hel. What is your pleasure, madam?

Count.

You know, Helen,

I am a mother to you.

Hel. Mine honourable mistress.

Count. Nay, a mother: Why not a mother? When I said a mother, Methought you saw a serpent: what's in

Yet I express to you a mother's care:—
God's mercy, maiden! does it curd thy blood
To say I am thy mother? What's the matter,
That this distemper'd messenger of wet,
The many-colour'd iris, rounds thine eye?
Why,—that you are my daughter?

Hel. That I am not. Count. I say, I am your mother.

Hel. Pardon, madam;
The Count Rousillon cannot be my hrother:
I am from humhle, he from honour'd name;
No note upon my parents, his all noble;
My master, my dear lord he is; and I
His servant live, and will his vassal die:
He must not he my brother.

Count.

Nor I your mother?

Hel. You are my mother, madam; would you were,—

So that my lord your son were not my brother.—

So that my lord your son were not my hrother,— Indeed my mother!—or were you hoth our mothers,

I care no more for than I do for heaven, So I were not his sister. Can't no other, But, I your daughter, he must he my brother?

Par. Mars dote on you for his novices! [Exeunt Lords.] What will ye do?

Ber. Stay; the king-

Par. Use a more spacious ceremony to the noble lords; you have restrained yourself within the list of too cold an adieu: be more expressive to them; for they wear themselves in the cap of the time; there do muster true gait, eat, speak, and move under the influence of the most received star; and though the devil lead the measure, such are to be followed: after them, and take a more dilated farewell.

Ber. And I will do so. Par. Worthy fellows; and like to prove most sinewy sword-men.

[Exeunt BERTRAM and PAROLLES.

Enter LAFEU.

Laf. Pardon, my lord [kneeling], for me and for my tidings.

King. Ill fee thee to stand up.

Lof. Then here's a man stands that has bought his pardon. mercy; I would you had kneel'd, my lord, to ask me And that, at my bidding, you could so stand up. King. I would I had; so I had broke thy pate,

And ask'd thee mercy for't. Good faith, across; Laf.But, my good lord, 'tis thus: Will you be cured If your infirmity?

No. King.

Laf. O, will you eat No grapes, my royal fox? yes, but you will My noble grapes, and if my royal fox Could reach them: I have seen a medicine That's able to breathe life into a stone, Quicken a rock, and make you dance canary With spritely fire and motion; whose simple touch

Is powerful to araise King Pipin, nay, To give great Charlemain a pen in his hand

And write to her a love-line.

What her is that? King.Laf. Why, doctor she: my lord, there's one arriv'd. (honour, If you will see her, -now, by my faith and If seriously I may convey my thoughts In this my light deliverance, I have spoke With one that in her sex, her years, profession, Wisdom, and constancy hath amaz'd me more Than I dare blame my weakness: will you see [ness? her,

That done, laugh well at me.

Now, good Lafeu, For that is her demand,—and know her busi-

Bring in the admiration; that we with thee

May spend our wonder too, or take off thine By wondering how thou took'st it. Laf.

Nay, I'll fit you. And not be all day neither. Exit LAFEU. King. Thus he his special nothing ever prologues.

Re-enter LAFEU with HELENA.

Laf. Nay, come your ways.

King. This haste hath wings indeed. Laf. Nay, come your ways;

This is his majesty: say your mind to him: A traitor you do look like; but such traitors His majesty seldom fears: I am Cressid's uncle, That dare leave two together: fare you well.

Exit. King. Now, fair one, does your business follow us? [was Hel. Ay, my good lord. Gerard de Narbon My father; in what he did profess well found.

King. I knew him. Hel. The rather will I spare my praises towards him. Knowing him is enough. On his bed of death Many receipts he gave me; chiefly one, Which, as the dearest issue of this practice, And of his old experience the only darling,

He bade me store up as a triple eye, Safer than mine own two, more dear: I have And, hearing your high majesty is touch'd With that malignant cause wherein the honour Of my dear father's gift stands chief in power,

I come to tender it, and my appliance, With all bound humbleness.

King. We thank you, maiden: But may not be so credulous of cure,-When our most learned doctors leave us, and The congregated college have concluded That labouring art can never ransom nature From her inaidable estate, -I say we must not So stain our judgment, or corrupt our hope, To prostitute our past-cure malady To empirics; or, to dissever so

Our great self and our credit, to esteem A senseless help, when help past sense we deem.

Hel. My duty, then, shall pay me for my pains:

I will no more enforce mine office on you; Humbly entreating from your royal thoughts. A modest one to bear me back again.

King. I cannot give thee less, to be call'd grateful. Thou thought'st to help me; and such thanks As one near death to those that wish him live: But what at full I know, thou know'st no part;

I knowing all my peril, thou no art. Hel. What I can do can do no hurt to try, Since you set up your rest 'gainst remedy. He that of greatest works is finisher

Oft does them by the weakest minister: So holy writ in babes hatb judgment shown, When judges have been babes. Great floods have flown From simple sources; and great seas have dried When miracles have by the greatest been denied.

Oft expectation fails, and most oft there Where most it promises; and oft it hits Where hope is coldest, and despair most fits.

King. I must not hear thee: fare thee well, kind maid;

SONG.

ī.

It was a lover and his lass, With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino, That o'er the green corn-field did pass In the spring time, the only pretty ring time, When birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding: Sweet lovers love the spring.

Between the acres of the rye, With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino, These pretty country folks would lie, In the spring time, &c.

This carol they began that hour, With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino, How that a life was out a flower In the spring time, &c.

IV.

And therefore take the present time, With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino, For love is crowned with the prime In the spring time, Bc.

Touch. Truly, young gentlemen, though there was no great matter in the ditty, yet the note was very untimeable.

1 Page. You are deceived, sir; we kept time, we lost not our time.

Touch. By my troth, yes; I count it hut time lost to hear such a foolish song. God he with you; and God mend your voices! Come, Audrey. Exeunt.

Scene IV.—Another part of the Forest.

Enter Duke Senior, Amiens, Jaques, Or-. LANDO, OLIVER, and CELIA.

Duke S. Dost thou believe, Orlando, that the hoy.

Enter Rosalind, Silvius, and Phese.

Ros. Patience once more, whiles our compact is urg'd:-

You say, if I bring in your Rosalind,

You will hestow her on Orlando here?

Duke S. That would I, had I kingdoms to give with her.

Ros. And you say you will have her, when [To ORLANDO. I hring her? Orl. That would I, were I of all kingdoms

[To PHEBE. Phe. That will I, should I die the hour after. Ros. But if you do refuse to marry me, You'll give yourself to this most faithful shepherd?

Phe. So is the bargain. Ros. You say that you'll have Phebe, if she will?

Sil. Though to have her and death were hoth one thing.

Ros. I have promis'd to make all this matter even.

Keep you your word, O duke, to give your daughter;

You yours, Orlando, to receive his daughter; Keep you your word, Phehe, that you'll marry me;

Or else, refusing me, to wed this shepherd:— Keep your word, Silvius, that you'll marry her If she refuse me:—and from hence I go, To make these doubts all even.

[Exeunt ROSALIND and CELIA. Duke S. I do remember in this shepherdhoy

Some lively touches of my daughter's favour. Orl. My lord, the first time that I ever saw him, Methought he was a hrother to your daughter: But, my good lord, this hoy is forest-born, And hath been tutor'd in the rudiments Of many desperate studies hy his uncle, Whom he reports to he a great magician, Ohscured in the circle of this forest.

Jaq. There is, sure, another flood toward, and these couples are coming to the nrk. Here comes a pair of very strange beasts, which in all tongues are called fools.

Enter Touchstone and Audrey.

Touch. Saintation and greeting to you all! Joq. Good my lord, bid him welcome. This is the motley-minded gentleman that I have so often met in the forest: he hath heen a courtier, he swears.

Touch. If any man doubt that, let him put me to my purgation. I have trod a measure; I have flattered a lady; I have been politic with my friend, smooth with mine enemy; I have undone three tailors; I have had four quarrels, and like to have fought one.

Jaq. And how was that ta'en up?

Touch. Faith, we met, and found the quarrel was upon the seventh cause.

Jaq. How seventh cause? Good my lord, like this fellow.

Duke S. I like him very well.

Touch. God 'ild you, sir; I desire you of the I press in here, sir, amongst the rest of the country copulatives, to swear and to forswear; according as marriage hinds and hlood brenks:-A poor virgin, sir, an ill-favoured thing, sir, but mine own; a poor humour of mine, sir, to take that that no man else will: rich honesty dwells like a miser, sir, in a poorhouse; as your pearl in your foul oyster.

Duke S. By my faith, he is very swift and sententious.

Touch. According to the fool's holt, sir, and such dulcet diseases.

Jaq. But, for the seventh cause; how did you find the quarrel on the seventh cause? Touch. Upon a lie seven times removed;-

Clo. O Lord, sirl-Why, there't serves well again.

Count. An end, sir, to your business. Give

Helen this,

And urge her to a present answer back: Commend me to my kinsmen and my son: This is not much.

Clo. Not much commendation to them. Count. Not much employment for you: you understand me?

Scene III.—Parts. A Room in the King's Palace.

Enter BERTRAM, LAFEU, and PAROLLES.

Laf. They say miracles are past; and we have our philosophical persons to make modern and familiar things supernatural and causeless. Hence is it that we make trifles of terrors, ensconcing ourselves into seeming knowledge when we should submit ourselves to an unknown fear.

Par. Why, 'tis the rarest argument of wonder that hath shot out in our latter times.

Ber. And so 'tis. Laf. To be relinquish'd of the artists,-

Par. So I say; both of Galen and Paracelsus. Laf. Of all the learned and authentic fellows.

Laf. Generally thankful.

Par. I would have said it; you say well. Here comes the king.

Enter King, Helena, and Attendants.

Laf. Lustic, as the Dutchman says: Pll like a maid the better, whilst I have a tooth in my head: why, he's able to lead her a coranto. Par. Mort du Vinaigre! is not this Helen?

Laf. Fore God, I think so.
King. Go, call before me all the lords in court.-Exit on Attendant. Sit, my preserver, by thy patient's side; And with this healthful hand, whose banish'd sense

Thou hast repeal'd, a second time receive The confirmation of my promis'd gift, Which but attends thy naming.

Enter several Lords.

Let the white death sit on thy cheek for ever;

We'll ne'er come there again.

Make choice; and, see, King. Who shuns thy love shuns all his love in me. Hel. Now, Dian, from thy altar do I fly, And to imperial Love, that god most high, Do my sighs stream.—Sir, will you hear my suit?

I Lord. And grant it.

Thanks, sir; all the rest is mute. Hel. Laf. I had rather be in this choice than throw ames-ace for my life.

Hel. The honour, sir, that flames in your fair Before I speak, too threateningly replies: Love make your fortunes twenty times above Her that so wishes, and her humble love!

Duke S. Stay, Jaques, stay.

Jaq. To see no pastime I: what you would have

I'll stay to know at your abandou'd cave.

[Exil.

Duke S. Proceed, proceed: we will begin these rites, As we do trust they'll end, in true delights.

EPILOGUE.

Ros. It is not the fashion to see the lady the epilogue; but it is no more unhandsome than to see the lord the prologue. If it be true that good wine needs no bush, 'tis true that a good play needs no epilogue. Yet to good wine they do use good bushes; and good plays prove the better by the help of good epilogues. What a case am I in, theu, that am neither a good epilogue nor cannot insinuate with you in the behalf of a good play! I am not furnished like a beggar; therefore to beg will not become me: my way is to coultie you; and I'll begin with the women. I charge you, O women, for the love you bear to men, to like as much of this play as please you: and I charge you, O men, for the love you bear to women,—as I perceive by your simpering, none of you hates them, that between you and the women the play may please. If I were a woman, I would kiss as many of you as had beards that pleased me, complexions that liked me, and breaths that I defied not: and, I am sure, as many as bave good beards, or good faces, or sweet breaths, will, for my kind offer, when I make curtsy, bid me farewell.

Re-enter LAFEU.

Laf. Sirrah, your lord and master's married; . . 's news for you; you have a new mistress. Par. I most unfeignedly beseech your lordship to make some reservation of your wrongs: he is my good lord: whom I serve above is my master.

Laf. Who? God?

Par. Ay, sir.

Laf. The devil it is that's thy master. Why dost thou garter up thy arms o' this fashion? dost make hose of thy sleeves? do other servants so? Thou wert best set thy lower part where thy nose stands. By mine honour, if I were but two hours younger I'd beat thee: methink'st thou art a general offence, and every man should beat thee. I think thou wast created for men to breathe themselves upon thee.

Par. This is hard and undeserved measure,

my lord.

Laf. Go to, sir; you were beaten in Italy for picking a kernel out of a pomegranate; you are a vagabond, and no true traveller: you are more saucy with lords and honourable personages than the heraldry of your birth and virtue gives You are not worth another you commission. word, else I'd call you knave. I leave you.

Exit. Par. Good, very good; it is so then. Good, very good; let it be concealed awhile.

Enter BERTRAM.

Ber. Undone, and forfeited to cares for ever! Par. What is the matter, sweet heart? Ber. Although before the solemn priest I have sworn,

I will not bed her.

· Par. What, what, sweet heart? Ber. O my Parolles, they have married mel-I'll to the Tuscan wars, and never bed her.

Par. France is a dog-hole, and it no more merits

The tread of a man's foot:—to the wars!

Ber. There's letters from my mother; what the import is

I know not yet.

Par. Ay, that would be known. To the wars, my boy, to the wars!

He wears his honour in a box unseen That hugs his kicksy-wicksy here at home. Spending his manly marrow in her arms. Which should sustain the bound and high curvet Of Mars's fiery steed. To other regions! France is a stable; we, that dwell in't, jades; Therefore, to the warl

Par. Why, these balls bound; there's noise in it. 'Tis.hard;

A young man married is a man that's marr'd: Therefore away, and leave her bravely; go: The king has done you wrong: but, hush! 'tis - Exeunt. SO.

Scene IV .- The same. Another Room in the same.

Enter HELENA and Clown.

Hel. My mother greets me kindly: is she well?

Clo. She is not well; but yet she has her health; she's very merry; but yet she is not well: but thanks be given, she's very well, and wants nothing i' the world; but yet she is not well.

Hel. If she be very well, what does she ail, that she's not very well? Clo. Truly, she's very well indeed, but for two things. Hel. What two things?

Clo. One, that she's not in heaven, whither God send her quicklyl the other, that she's in earth, from whence God send her quicklyl

Enfer PAROLLES.

Par. Biess you, my fortunate ladyl Hel. I hope, sir, I have your good will to have mine own good fortunes.

Par. You had my prayers to lead them on; and to keep them on, have them still. O, my knave,-how does my old lady?

Laf. He was excellent, indeed, madam: the king very lately spoke of him admiringly and mourningly: be was skilful enough to have lived still, if knowledge could be set up against mortality.

Ber. What is it, my good lord, the king lenguishes of?

Laf. A fistula, my lord.

Ber. I heard not of it before. Laf. I would it were not notorious.—Was this gentlewoman the daughter of Gerard de Narbon? Count. His sole child, my lord; and bequeathed to my overlooking. I have those bopes of her good that her education promises: ber dispositions she inherits, which make fair gifts fairer; for where an unclean mind carries virtuons qualities, there commendations go with pity,-they are virtues and traitors too: in her they are the better for their simpleness; she derives her honesty, and achieves her good-

Count. 'Tis the best brine a maiden can season her praise in. The remembrance of her father never approaches her heart but the tyranny of her sorrows takes all livelihood from her cheek. No more of this, Helena,-go to, no more; lest it be rather thought you affect a sorrow than to have.

Hel. I do affect a sorrow indeed; but I have it too.

Lof. Moderate lamentation is the right of the dead; excessive grief the enemy to the living.

Count. If the living be enemy to the grief, the excess makes it soon mortal.

Ber. Madam, I desire your holy wishes.
Lof. How understand we that?

Count. Be thon blest, Bertraml and succeed thy father

In manners, as in shape! thy blood and virtue Contend for empire in thee, and thy goodness Share with thy birthright! Love all, trust a few, Do wrong to none: be able for thine enemy Rather in power than use; and keep thy friend Under thy own life's key: be check'd for silence, But never tax'd for speech. What heaven more

He cannot want the best Laf.

That shall attend his love.

Count. Heaven bless him!—Farewell, Bertram. [Exit Countess.

Ber. The best wishes that can be forged in your thoughts [to HELENA] be servants to you! Be comfortable to my mother, your mistress, and make much of her.

Lof. Farewell, pretty lady: you must hold the credit of your father.

Exeunt BER. and LAF. Hel. O, were that all!—I think not on my father; Imore

I have forgot him; my imagination

Carries no favour in't but Bertram's. I am undone: there is no living, none, If Bertram be away. It were all one That I should love a bright particular star, And think to wed it, be is so above me: In his bright radiance and colleteral light Must I be comforted, not in his sphere. The ambition in my love thus plagues itself: The hind that would be mated by the lion Must die for love. 'Twas pretty, though a plague,

To see him every hour; to sit and draw His arched brows, his hawking eye, his curls, In our heart's table, -heart too capable Of every line and trick of his sweet favour: But now be's gone, and my idolatrous fancy Must sanctify his relics. Who comes here? One that goes with him: I love him for his sake;

And yet I know him a notorious liar, Think him a great way fool, solely a coward: Yet these fix'd evils sit so fit in him That they take place when virtue's steely bones Look bleak i' the cold wind: withal, full oft we see

Cold wisdom waiting on superfinous folly.

Enter PAROLLES.

Par. Save you, fair queen! Hel. And you, monarch! Par. No.

Hel. And no.

Par. Are you meditating on virginity? Hel. Ay. You bave some stain of soldier in yon: let me ask you a question. Manis enemy to virginity; how may we berricado it against him?

Par. Keep him ont. Hel. Buthe assails; and our virginity, though valiant in the defence, yet is weak: unfold to us some warlike resistance.

Par. There is none: man, sitting down before yon, will undermine you, and blow you up, Hel. Bless our poor virginity from under-

Par. Virginity being blown down, man will quicklier be blown np: marry, in blowing him down again, with the breach yourselves made. you lose your city. It is not politic in the commonwealth of nature to preserve virginity. Loss of virginity is rational increase; and there was never virgin got till virginity was first lost. That you were made of is metal to make virgins. Virginity, by being once lost, may be ten times found; by being ever kept, it is ever lost: 'tis too cold a companion; away with it!

Hel. I will stand for't a little, though therefore I die a virgin. Par. There's little can be said in't; 'tis against the rule of nature. To speak on the part of virginity is to accuse your mothers; which is most infallible disobedience He that hangs himself is a virgin: virginity murders itself; and should be buried in highways, ont of all sanctified limit, as a desperate offendress against nature. ACT III.

SCENE L.—FLORENCE. A Room in the DUKE'S Palace.

Flourish. Enter the DUKE OF FLORENCE, attended; two French Lords, and Soldiers.

Duke. So that, from point to point, now have you heard The fundamental reasons of this war; Whose great decision hath much blood let forth,

And more thirsts after. Holy seems the quarrel ı Lord. Upon your grace's part; black and fearful

On the opposer. France Duke. Therefore we marvel much our cousin

Would, in so just a business, shut his bosom

Against our borrowing prayers.

· r Lord. Good my lord, The reasons of our state I cannot yield, But like a common and an outward man That the great figure of a council frames By self-unable motion: therefore dare not Say what I think of it, since I have found Myself in my uncertain grounds to fail As often as I guess'd.

Be It his pleasure. Duke.2 Lord. But I am sure the younger of our nature, That surfeit ou their ease, will day by day

Come here for physic. Welcome shall they be; Duke.

And all the honours that can fly from us Shall on them settle. You know your places well:

When better fall, for your avails they fell: [Flourish. Exeunt. To-morrow to the field.

Scene II.—Rousillon. A Room in the COUNTESS'S Palace.

Enter COUNTESS and CLOWN.

Count. It hath happened all as I would have had it, save that he comes not along with her. Clo. By my troth, I take my young lord to be a very melancholy man.

Count. By what observance, I pray you?

Clo. Why, he will look upon his boot and sing; mend the ruff and sing; ask questions and sing; pick his teeth and sing. I know a man that had this trick of melancholy sold a goodly manor for a song.

Count. Let me see what he writes, and when he means to come. (Opening a letter.

Clo. I have no mind to Isbel, since I was at court: our old ling and our Isbels o' the conntry are nothing like your old ling and your Isbels o' the court: the braius of my Cnpid's knocked out; and I begin to love, as an old man loves money, with no stomach.

Count. What have we here?

Clo. E'en that you have there. Exit. Count. [Reads.] I have sent you a daughterin-law: she hath recovered the king and undone me. I have wedded her, not bedded her; and sworn to make the not eternal. You shall hear I am run away: know it before the report come. If there be breadth enough in the world I will hold a long distance. My duty to you. Your unfortunate son,

This is not well, rash and unbridled boy, To fly the favours of so good a king; To pluck his indignation on thy head By the misprizing of a maid too virtuous For the contempt of empire.

Re-enter Clown.

Clo. O madam, yonder is heavy news within, between two soldiers and my young lady. Count. What is the matter?

Clo. Nay, there is some comfort in the news, some comfort; your sou will not be killed so soon as I thought he would.

Count. Why should he be killed? Clo. So say I, madam, if he run away, as I hear he does: the danger is in standing to't; that's the loss of men, though it be the getting of children. Here they come will tell you more: for my part, I only hear your son was {Exit. run away.

Enter HELEKA and two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Save you, good madam.

Hel. Madam, my lord is goue, for ever gone. [gentlemen,-2 Gent. Do not say so.

Count. Think npon patience. Pray you, I have felt so many quirks of joy and grief That the first face of ueither, ou the start, Can woman me unto't.—Where is my sou, I of Florence: pray you? 2 Gent. Madam, he's gone to serve the duke We met him thitherward; for theuce we came,

And, after some despatch in hand at court, [passport. Thither we bend again. Hel. Look on his letter, madam; here's my [Reads.] When thou canst get the ring upon my finger, which never shall come off, and show me a child begotten of thy body that I am father to, then call me husband; but in such a then I write a never.

This is a dreadful senteuce.

Count. Brought you this letter, gentlemeu? Ay, madam; I Gent. And, for the contents' sake, are sorry for our pains.

She might have been o'erta'en; and yet she writes,

Pursuit would be but vain.

Count. What angel shall Bless this unworthy husband? he cannot thrive, Unless her prayers, whom heaven delights to hear.

And loves to grant, reprieve him from the wrath, Of greatest justice.—Write, write, Rinaldo, To this unworthy husband of his wife:
Let every word weigh heavy of her worth,
That he does weigh too light: my greatest grief,

Though little he do feel it, set down sharply.
Despatch the most convenient messenger:—
When, haply, he shall hear that she is gone
He will return; and hope I may that she,
Hearing so much, will speed her foot again,
Led hither by pure love: which of them both
Is dearest to me I have ns skill in senselger:—
To make distinction:—provide this messenMy heart is heavy, and mine age is weak;
Grief would have tears, and sorrow bids me
speak.

SCENE V .- Without the Walls of FLORENCE.

Enter an old Widow of Florence, DIANA, VIO-LENTA, MARIANA, and other Citizens.

Wid. Nay, come; for if they do approach the city we shall lose all the sight.

Dia. They say the French count has done most honourable service.

Wid. It is reported that he has taken their greatest commander; and that with his own hand he slew the duke's brother. [A tucket afar off.] We have lost our labour; they are gone a contrary way: hark! you may know by their trumpets.

Mar.-Come, let's return again, and suffice ourselves with the report of it. Well, Diana, take heed of this French earl: the honour of a naid is her name; and no legacy is so rich as honesty.

Wid. I have told my neighbour how you have been solicited by a gentleman his companion.

Mar. I know that knave; hang him! one Parolles: a filthy officer he is in those suggestions for the young earl.—Beware of them, Diana; their promises, enticements, oaths, tokens, and all these engines of lust, are not the things they go under: many a maid hath been seduced by them; and the misery is, example, that so terrible shows in the wreck of maidenhood, cannot for all that dissuade succession, but that they are limed with the twigs that threaten them. I hope I need not to advise you further; but I hope your own grace will keep you where you are, though there were no further danger known but the modesty which is so lost.

Dia. You shall not need to fear me.

Wid. I hope so.—Look, here comes a pilgrim: I know she will lie at my house: thither they send one another; I'll question her.—

Enter HELENA, in the dress of a pilgrim.

God save you, pilgrim1 Whither are you bound?

Hel. To Saint Jaques-le-Grand.

Where do the palmers lodge, I do beseech you?

Wid. At the Saint Francis here, beside the port.

Hel. Is this the way?

Wid. Ay, marry, is it.—Hark you! They come this way. [A march afar of, If you will tarry, holy pilgrim,

But till the troops come by,

I will conduct you where you shall be lodg'd; The rather for I think I know your hostess As ample as myself.

Hel. Is it yourself?
Wid. If you shall please so, pilgrim.

Hel. I thank you, and will stay upon your leisure.

Wid. You came, I think, from France?

Wid. Here you shall see a countryman of yours

That has done worthy service.

Hel. His name, I pray you.

Dia. The Count Rousillon: know you such a one? [of him:

Hel. But by the ear, that hears most nobly

His face I know not.

Dia. Whatsoe'er he is,
He's bravely taken here. He stole from France,

As 'tis reported, for the king had married him Against his liking: think you it is so?

Hel. Ay, surely, mere the truth; I know his lady. [count Dia. There is a gentleman that serves the Reports but coarsely of her.

Hel. What's his name?

Dia. Monsieur Parolles.

Hel. O, I believe with him,
In argument of praise, or to the worth
Of the great count himself, she is too mean
To have her name repeated; all her deserving
Is a reserved honesty, and that

I have not heard examin'd.

Dia. Alas, poor lady!
'Tis a hard bondage to become the wife

Of a detesting lord.

Wid. Ay, right; good creature, wheresoe'er she is

Her heart weighs sadly: this young maid might do her

A shrewd turn if she pleas'd.

Hel. How do you mean?

May be, the amorous count solicits her In the unlawful purpose.

Wid. He does, indeed; And brokes with all that can in such a suit Corrupt the tender honour of a maid; But she is arm'd for him, and keeps her guard In honestest defence.

Mar. The gods forhid elsel

Wid. So, now they come:—

Enter with a drum and colours, a party of the Florentine army, BERTRAM, and PAROLLES.

That is Antonio, the duke's eldest son;
That, Escalus.

Hel. Which is the Frenchman?

Dia.

He;
That with the plume: 'tis a most gallant fellow.
I would he lov'd his wife: if he were honester
He were much goodlier:—is't not a handsome gentleman?

Count. Love you my son?

Hel. Do not you love him, madam? Count. Go not about; my love hath in't a bond, [disclose Whereof the world takes note: come, come, The state of your affection; for your passions Have to the full appeach'd.

Then I confess,

. Here on my knee, before high heaven and you, That before you, and next unto high heaven, I love your son:-My friends were poor, but honest; so's my love:

Be not offended; for it hurts not him That he is lov'd of me: I follow him not By any token of presumptuous suit; Nor would I have him till I do deserve him; Yet never know how that desert should be. I know I love in vain, strive against hope: Yet in this captions and intenible sieve I still pour in the waters of my love, And lack not to lose still: thus, Indian-like. Religions in mine error, I adore The sun, that looks upon his worshipper, But knows of him no more. My dearest madam, Let not your hate encounter with my love, For loving where you do; but, if yourself, Whose aged honours cites a virtuous youth. Did ever, in so true a frame of liking, Wish chastely, and love dearly, that your Dian Was both herself and love; O, theu, give pity To her whose state is such that cannot choose But lend and give where she is sure to lose: That seeks not to find that her search implies, But, riddle-like, lives sweetly where she dies!

Count. Had you not lately an intent, - speak truly,

To go to Paris?

Hel. Madam, I had.

Wherefore? tell true. Count. Hel. I will tell truth; by grace itself I swear. You know my father left me some prescriptions Of rare and prov'd effects, such as his reading And manifest experience had collected For general sovereignty; and that he will'd me In heedfulest reservation to bestow them. As notes whose faculties inclusive were More than they were in note: amongst the rest There is a remedy, approv'd, set down, To cure the desperate languishings whereof

The king is render'd lost. Count. This was your motive

For Paris, was it? speak.

Hel. My lord your son made me to think of Else Paris, and the medicine, and the king, Had from the conversation of my thoughts Haply been absent then.

But think you, Helen, Count. If you should tender your suppos'd aid, He would receive it? He and his physicians Are of a mind; he, that they cannot help him, They, that they cannot help: how shall they credit

A poor unlearned virgin, when the schools, Embowell'd of their doctrine, have left off The danger to itself?

Hel. There's something in't More than my father's skill, which was the greatest

Of his profession, that his good receipt

Shall, for my legacy, be sanctified By the luckiest stars in heaven: and, would your honour

But give me leave to try success, I'd venture The well-lost life of mine on his grace's cure By such a day and hour. Count.

Dost thou believe't? Hel. Ay, madam, knowingly. Count. Why, Helen, thou shalt have my leave, and love, Means, and attendants, and my loving greetings To those of mine in court: I'll stay at home, And pray God's blessings into thy attempt: Be gone to-morrow; and be sure of this, What I can help thee to thou shalt not miss. Exeunt.

ACT II.

Scene L.—Paris. A Room in the KING'S Palace.

Flourish. Enter KING, with young Lords taking leave for the Florentine war; BER-TRAM, PAROLLES, and Attendants.

King. Farewell, young lord; these warlike [farewell:principles Do not throw from you:—and you, my lord, Share the advice betwixt you; if both gain all, The gift doth stretch itself as 'tis received, And is enough for both.

It is our hope, sir, 1 Lord. After well-enter'd soldiers, to return

And find your grace in health.

King. No, no, it cannot be; and yet my heart Will not confess he owes the maindy Thatdothmylifebesiege. Farewell, younglords: Whether I live or die, be you the sons Of worthy Frenchmen; let higher Italy,-Those bated that inherit but the fall Of the last monarchy,—see that you come Not to woo houour, but to wed it; when The bravest questant shrinks, find what you seek.

That fame may cry you loud: I say, farewell. 2 Lord. Health, at your bidding, serve your majesty!

King. Those girls of Italy, take heed of them: They say our French lack language to deny, If they demand: beware of being captives Before yon serve.

Our hearts receive your warnings. Both. King. Farewell.-Come hither to me. The KING retires to a couch.

I Lord. O my sweet lord, that you will stay behind us!

Par. 'Tis not his fault; the spark—
2 Lord.

O, 'tis brave wars! Par. Most admirable: I have seen those with.

Ber. I am commanded here, and kept a coil Too young, and the next year, and 'tis too early. Par. An thy mind stand to it, boy, steal away bravely. (smock,

Ber. I shall stay here the forehorse to a Creaking my shoes on the plain masonry, Till honour be bought np, and no sword worn But one to dance with! By heaven, I'll steal away.

I Lord. There's honour in the theft. Par. Commit it, count.

I Lord. None in the world; but return with an invention, and clap upon you two or three probable lies: but we have almost embossed him,—you shall see his fall to-night: for indeed he is not for your lordship's respect.

2 Lord. We'll make you some sport with the fox ere we case him. He was first smoked by the old Lord Lafeu: when his disguise and he is parted, tell me what a sprat you shall find him; which you shall see this very night.

I Lord. I must go look my twigs; he shall be caught.

Ber. Your brother, he shall go along with me. I Lord. As't please your lordship: I'll leave you.

Ber. Now will I lead you to the house, and show you The lass I spoke of.

But you say she's honest. 2 Lord. Ber. That's all the fault: I spoke with her but once, And found her wondrous cold; but I sent to

By this same coxcomb that we have i' the wind. Tokens and letters which she did re-send; And this is all I have done. She's a fair creature:

Will you go see her?

With all my heart, my lord. 2 Lord. Exeunt.

A Room in the Scene VII.-FLORENCE. Widow's House.

Enter HELENA and Widow.

Hel. If you misdoubt me that I am not she, I know not how I shall assure you further, But I shall lose the grounds I work upon.

Wid. Though my estate be fallen, I was well born,

Nothing acquainted with these businesses; And would not put my reputation now

In any staining act.

Hel. Nor would I wish you. First give me trust, the count he is my husband, And what to your sworn counsel I have spoken Is so from word to word; and then you cannot, By the good aid that I of you shall borrow, Err in bestowing it.

Wid. I should believe you; For you have show'd me that which well approves

You're great in fortune.

Take this purse of gold, And let me buy your friendly help thus far. Which I will over-pay, and pay again,

When I have found it. The count he wooes your daughter,

Lays down his wanton siege before her beauty, Resolv'd to carry her: let her, in fine, consent, As we'll direct her how 'tis best to bear it, Now his important blood will naught deny That she'll demand: a ring the county wears, That downward hath succeeded in his house From son to son, some four or five descents Since the first father wore it: this ring he holds In most rich choice; yet, in his idle fire, To buy his will, it would not seem too dear, Howe'er repented after.

Now I see The bottom of your purpose.

Hel. You see it lawful then: it is no more But that your daughter, ere she seems as won, Desires this ring; appoints him an encounter: In fine, delivers me to fill the time, Herself most chastely absent; after this, To marry her, I'll add three thousand crowns To what is past already.

Wid. I have yielded: Instruct my daughter how she shall persever. The time and place, with this deceit so lawful May prove coherent. Every night he comes With musics of all sorts, and songs compos'd To her unworthiness: it nothing steads us To chide him from our eaves; for he persists.

As if his life lay on't.

Why, then, to-night Hel.Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed. Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed, And lawful meaning in a lawful act Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact: But let's about it. Exeunt.

ACT IV.

Scene I .- Without the FLORENTINE Camb. Enter first Lord, with five or six Soldiers in ambush.

I Lord. He can come no other way but by this hedge-corner. When you sally upon him, speak what terrible language you will; though you understand it not yourselves, no matter: for we must not seem to understand him, unless some one among us, whom we must produce for an interpreter.

I Sold. Good captain, let me be the interpreter.

I Lord. Art not acquainted with him? knows he not thy voice?

I Sold. No, sir, I warrant you.

I Lord. But what linsey-woolsey hast thou to speak to us again?

I Sold. Even such as you speak to me.

r Lord. He must think us some band of strangers i' the adversary's entertainment. Now he hath a smack of all neighbouring languages; therefore we must every one be a man of his own fancy, not to know what we speak to one another; so we seem to know, is to know straight our purpose: chough's language, gabble enough, and good enough. As for you, interpreter, you must seem very politic. But couch, ho! here he comes; to beguile two hours in a sleep, and then to return and swear the lies he forges.

Enter PAROLLES.

Par. Ten o'clock: within these three hours 'twill be time enough to go home. What shall I say I have done? It must be a very plausive invention that carries it: they begin to smoke me: and disgraces have of late knocked too often at my door. I find my tongue is too foolhardy; but my heart hath the fear of Mars before it, and of his creatures, not daring the reports of my tongue.

I Lord. This is the first truth that e'er thine own tongue was guilty of.

Par. What the devil should move me to undertake the recovery of this drum; being not ignorant of the impossibility, and knowing I Thy pains, not used, must by thyself he paid: Proffers, not took, reap thanks for their reward.

Hel. Inspired merit so by breath is harred: It is not so with Him that all things knows, As 'tis with us that square our guess by shows: But most it is presumption in us when The help of heaven we count the act of men. Dear sir, to my endeavours give consent: Of heaven, not me, make an experiment. I am not an imposter, that proclaim Myself against the level of mine aim; But know I think, and think I know most sure. My art is not past power nor you past cure. King. Art thou so confident? Within what space Hop'st thou my cure?

Hel. The greatest grace lending grace, Ere twice the horses of the sun shall bring Their fiery torcher his diurnal ring; Ere twice in murk and occidental damp Moist Hesperus hath quench'd his sleepy lamp; Or four-and-twenty times the pilot's glass Hath told the thievish miuntes how they pass; What is infirm from your sound parts shall fiy, Health shall live free, and sickness freely die. King. Upon thy certainty and confidence,

What dar'st thou venture?

Hel. Tax of impudence,-A strumpet's boldness, a divulged shame.-Traduc'd by odious ballads; my maiden's name Sear'd otherwise; ne worse of worst extended, With vilest torture let my life he ended.

King. Methinks in thee some blessed spirit doth speak;

His powerful sound within an organ weak: And what impossibility would slay In common sense, sense saves another way. Thy life is dear; for all that life can rate Worth name of life in thee hath estimate: Youth, beauty, wisdom, courage, ell That happiness in prime can happy call; Thou this to hazard needs must intimate Skill infinite, or monstrous desperate. Sweet practiser, thy physic I will try: That ministers thine own death if I die.

Hel. If I break time, or flinch in property Of what I spoke, unpitied let me die; And well deserv'd. Not helping death's my

But, if I help, what do you promise me?

King. Make thy demand.

Hel. But will you make it even? King. Ay, by my sceptre and my hopes of heaven. hand, Hel. Then shalt thon give me, with thy kingly What hushand in thy power I will command: Exempted be from me the arrogance To choose from forth the royal blood of France. My low and humble name to propagate With any branch or image of thy state: But such a one, thy vassal, whom I know Is free for me to ask, thee to bestow.

King. Here is my hand; the premises observ'd,

Thy will by my performance shall be serv'd; So make the choice of thy own time, for I, Thy resolv'd patient, on thee still rely. More should I question thee, and more I must,-

Though more to know could not be more to trust,

From whence thou cam'st, how tended on .hut rest

Unquestion'd welcome and undoubted blest.-Give me some help here, ho!—If thou proceed As high as word, my deed shall match thy deed. Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE IL-ROUSHLON. A Room in the COUNTESS'S Palece.

Enter Countess and CLOWN.

Count. Come on, sir; I shall now put you to the height of your breeding.

Clo. I will show myself highly fed and lowly taught: I know my business is but to the court. Count. To the court! why, what place make you special, when you put off that with such contempt? But to the court!

Clo. Truly, madam, if God have lent a man any manners, he may easily put it off at court: he that cannot make a leg, put off's cap, kiss his hand, and say nothing, has neither leg, hands, lip, nor cap; and, indeed, such a fellow, to say precisely, were not for the court: hut, for me, I have an enswer will serve all men.

Count. Marry, that's a bountiful answer that fits all questious.

Clo. It is like a barber's chair, that fits all buttocks,-the pin-buttock, the quatch-buttock, the hrawn-bnttock, or any hnttock.

Count. Will your answer serve fit to all questions?

Clo. As fit as ten groats is for the hand of an attorney, as your French crown for your tallets punk, as Tib's rush for Tom's forefinger, as a pancake for Shrove-Tnesday, a morris for Mayday, as the nail to his hole, the cuckold to his horn, as a scolding quean to a wrangling knave, as the nnn's lip to the friar's mouth; nay, as the pudding to his skin.

Count. Have you, I say, an answer of such fitness for all questions?

Clo. From below your duke to beneath your constable, it will fit any question.

Count. It must be an answer of most monstrous size that must fit all demands.

Clo. But a trifle neither, in good faith, if the learned should speak truth of it: here it is, and all that helongs to't. Ask me if I am a courtier: it shall do you no harm to learn.

Count. To be young again, if we could: I will he a fool in question, hoping to he the wiser by your answer. I pray yon, sir, are you a courtier?

Clo. O Lord, sir!-There's a simple putting off;-more, more, a hundred of them.

Count. Sir, I am a poor friend of yours, that Ime. loves you.

Clo. O Lord, sir!—Thick, thick; spare not Count. I think, sir, you can eat none of this homely meat.

Clo. O Lord, sir!-Nay, put me to't, I warrant you.

Count. You were lately whipped, sir, as I think.

Clo. O Lord, sir!-spare not me.

Count. Do you cry, O Lord, sir! at your whipping, and spare not me? Indeed, your O

Ber. It is an honour 'longing to our house. Bequeathed down from many ancestors; Which were the greatest obloquy it the world In me to lose.

Mine honour's such a ring: Dia. My chastity's the jewel of our house, Bequeathed down from many ancestors; Which were the greatest obloquy i' the world In me to lose. Thus your own proper wisdom Brings in the champion honour on my part, Against your vain assault.

Here, take my ring: Ber. My house, mine honour, yea, my life be thine, And I'll be bid by thee.

Dia. When midnight comes knock at my chamber-window:

I'll order take my mother shall not hear. Now will I charge you in the band of truth, When you have conquer'd my yet maiden-bed, Remain there but an hour, nor speak to me: My reasons are most strong; and you shall know them When back again this ring shall be deliver'd; And on your finger, in the night, I'll put Another ring; that what in time proceeds May token to the future our past deeds. Adieu till then; then fail not. You have won A wife of me, though there my hope be done.

Ber. A heaven on earth I have won by wooing thee.

Dig. For which live long to thank both heaven and me! You may so in the end.

My mother told me just how he would woo, As if she sat in his heart; she says all men Have the like oaths: he hath sworn to marry me When his wife's dead; therefore I'll lie with him When I am buried. Since Frenchmem are so braid, Marry that will, I'll live and die a maid: Only, in this disguise, I think't no sin To cozen him that would unjustly win.

Scene III .- The Florentine Camp.

Enter the two French Lords, and two or three Soldiers.

I Lord. You have not given him his mother's letter?

2 Lord. I have delivered it an hour since: there is something in't that stings his nature; for, on the reading it, he changed almost into another man.

r Lord. He has much worthy blame laid upon him for shaking off so good a wife and so sweet a lady.

- 2 Lord. Especially he hath incurred the everlasting displeasure of the king, who had even tuned his bounty to sing happiness to him. will tell you a thing, but you shall let it dwell darkly with yon.
- r Lord. When you have spoken it, 'tis dead, and I am the grave of it.
- 2 Lord. He hath perverted a young gentlewoman here in Florence, of a most chaste renown; and this night he fleshes his will in the spoil of her honour: he hath given her his monumental ring, and thinks himself made in the unchaste composition.

r Lord. Now, God delay our rebellion: as we are ourselves, what things are we!

2 Lord. Merely our own traitors. And as in the common course of all treasons, we still see them reveal themselves, till they attain to their abhorred ends; so he that in this action contrives against his own nobility, in his proper stream o'erflows himself.

r Lord. Is it not meant damnable in us to be trumpeters of our unlawful intents? We shall not then have his company to-night?

2 Lord. Not till after midnight; for he is dieted to his hour.

r Lord. That approaches apace: I would gladly have him see his company anatomized, that he might take a measure of his own judgments, wherein so curiously he had set this counterfeit.

2 Lord. We will not meddle with him till he come; for his presence must be the whip of the other.

I Lord. In the meantime, what hear you of these wars?

2 Lord. I hear there is an overture of peace. r Lord. Nay, I assure you, a peace con-

2 Lord. What will Count Rousillon do then? will he travel higher, or return again into France? I Lord. I perceive, by this demand, you are not altogether of his council. 2 Lord. Let it be forbid, sir; so should I be a great deal of his act.

I Lord. Sir, his wife, some two months since, fled from his house: her pretence is a pilgrim-age to St Jaques-le-Grand; which holy undertaking, with most austere sanctimony, she accomplished; and, there residing, the tendemers of her nature became as a prey to her grief; in fine, made a groan of her last breath; and now she sings in heaven.

2 Lord. How is this justified?

I Lord. The stronger part of it by her own letters, which make her story true even to the point of her death; her death itself which could not be her office to say is come, was faithfully confirmed by the rector of the place.

2 Lord. Hath the count all this intelligence? I Lord. Ay, and the particular confirmations, point from point, to the full arming of the verity.

2 Lord. I am heartily sorry that he'll be glad of this.

I Lord. How mightily, sometimes, we make us comforts of our losses!

2 Lord. And how mightily, some other times, we drown our gain in tears! The great dignity that his valour hath here acquired for him shall at home be encountered with a shame as ample.

r Lord. The web of our life is of a mingled yarn, good and ill together: our virtues would be proud if our faults whipped them not; and our crimes would despair if they were not cherished by our virtues .--

Enter a Servant.

How now? where's your master?

Serv. He met the dake in the street, sir; of whom he hath taken a solemn leave: his lordship will next morning for France. The duke I'll never do you wrong for your own sake: Blessing upon your vows! and in your bed Find fairer fortune, if you ever wed!

Laf. These boys are boys of ice; they'll none have her: sure, they are bastards to the English; the French ne'er got them. [good Hel. You are too young, too happy, and too [good

To make yourself a son out of my blood.

A Lord. Fair one, I think not so.

Laf. There's one grape yet,—I am sure thy father drank wine.—But if thou beest not an ass, I am a youth of fourteen; I have known thee already.

Hel. [To BERTRAM.] I dare not say I take you; but I give Me and my service, ever whilst I live,

Into your guiding power.—This is the man.
King. Why, then, young Bertram, take her;

she's thy wife.

Ber. My wife, my liege! I shall beseech your highness.

In such a business give me leave to use The help of mine own eyes.

King.

Know'st thou not, Bertram, What she has done for me? Ber. Yes, my good lord: But never hope to know why I should marry her. King. Thou know'st she has rais'd me from my sickly bed. Ber. But follows it, my lord, to bring me down Must answer for your raising? I know her well; She had her breeding at my father's charge: A poor physician's daughter my wife!—Disdain

Rather corrupt me ever! [the which King. 'Tis only title thou disdain'st in her, I can build up. Strange is it that our bloods, Of colour, weight, and heat, pour'd all together, Would quite confound distinction, yet stand off In differences so mighty. If she be

All that is virtuous,—save what thou dislik'st, A poor physician's daughter,—thou dislik'st Of virtue for the name: but do not so:

From lowest place when virtuous things proceed, The place is dignified by the doer's deed: Where great additions swell's, and virtue none, It is a dropsied honour: good alone

Is good without a name; vileness is so: The property by what it is should go, Not by the title. She is young, wise, fair; In these to nature she's immediate heir;

And these breed honour: that is honour's scorn

Which challenges itself as honour's born. And is not like the sire: honours thrive, When rather from our acts we them derive

Than our fore-goers: the mere word's a slave. Debauch'd on every tomb; on every grave A lying trophy; and as oft is dumb Where dost and damn'd oblivion is the tomb

Of honour'd bones indeed. What should be said?

If thou canst like this creature as a maid. I can create the rest: virtue and she Is her own dower; honour and wealth from me. Ber. I cannot love her, nor will strive to do't.

King. Thou wrong'st thyself, if thou shouldst strive to choose. fam glad:

Hel. That you are well restor'd, my lord, I Let the rest go .

King. My honour's at the stake; which to defeat, I must produce my power. Here, take her Proud scornful boy, unworthy this good gift; That dost in vile misprision shackle up My love and her desert; that canst not dream We, poising us in her defective scale, Shall weigh thee to the beam; that wilt not know It is in us to plant thine honour where We please to have it grow. Check thy contempt:

Obey our will, which travails in thy good: Believe not thy disdain, but presently Do thine own fortunes that obedient right Which both thy duty owes and our power claims Or I will throw thee from my care for ever Into the staggers and the careless lapse Of youth and ignorance; both my revenge and Loosing upon thee in the name of justice, Without all terms of pity. Speak!-thine answer! Ber. Pardon, my gracions lord; for I submit My fancy to your eyes: when I consider What great creation, and what dole of honour Flies where you bid it, I find that she, which late

Was in my nobler thoughts most base, is now The praised of the king; who, so ennobled, Is as 'twere born so.

King. Take her by the hand, And tell her she is thine; to whom I promise A counterpoise; if not to thy estate.

A balance more replete.

Ber. I take her hand. King. Good fortune and the favour of the king Smile upon this contract; whose ceremony Shall seem expedient on the now-born brief And be perform'd to-night: the solemn feast Shall more attend upon the coming space Expecting absent friends. As thou lov'st her, Thy love's to me religious; else, does err.

[Exeunt King, Ber., Hel., Lords, and Attendants.

Laf. Do you hear, monsieur? a word with you.

Par. Your pleasure, sir?
Laf. Your lord and master did well to make his recantation.

Par. Recantation!—My lord! my master. Laf. Ay; is it not a language I speak?

Par. A most harsh one, and not to be understood without bloody succeeding. My master! Laf. Are you companion to the Count Rousillon? fis man.

Par. To any count; to all counts; to what Laf. To what is count's man: count's master is of another style.

Par. You are too old sir; let it satisfy yon, you are too old. Laf. I must tell thee, sirrah, I write man;

to which title age cannot bring thee.

Par. What I dare too well do, I dare not do.

Laf. I did think thee, for two ordinaries, to be a pretty wise fellow; thon didst make tolerable vent of thy travel; it might pass; yet the scarfs and the bannerets about thee did manifoldly dissuade me from believing thee a vessel of too great a burden. I have now found thee when I lose thee again I care not: yet art tho day to turn him out o' the band: I think I have his letter in my pocket.

r Sold. Marry, we'll search.

Par. In good sadness, I do not know; either it is there or it is upon a file, with the duke's other letters, in my tent.

1 Sold. Here 'tis; here's a paper. Shall I read it to you?

Par. I do not know if it be it or no. Ber. Our interpreter does it well.

I Lord. Excellently.

I Sold. [Reads.] Dian, the Count's a fool, and full of gold, Par. That is not the duke's letter, sir; that is an advertisement to a proper maid in Florence, one Diana, to take heed of the allurement of one Count Rousillon, a foolish, idle boy, but, for all that, very ruttish: I pray you, sir, put it up again.

I Sold. Nay, I'll read it first, by your favour. Par. My meaning in't, I protest, was very honest in the behalf of the maid; for I knew the young count to be a dangerous and lascivious boy, who is a whale to virginity, and devours up all the fry it finds.

Ber. Damnable! both sides rogue!

r. Sold. [Reads.] When he swears oaths, bid him drop gold, and take it:

After he scores, he never pays the score: Half won is match well made; match, and well make it; He ne'er pays after-debts, take it before; And say a soldier, Dian, told thee this, Men are to mell with, boys are not to kiss; Men are to mell with, boys are not to MASS;

For count of this, the count's a fool, I know it,
Who pays before, but not when he does owe it.
Thine, as he vow'd to thee in thine ear,
PAROLLES.

Ber. He shall be whipped through the army i this rhyme in his forehead.

2 Lord. This is your devoted friend sir, the manifold linguist, and the armipotent soldier.

Ber. I could endure anything before but a cat, and now he's a cat to me.

1 Sold. I perceive, sir, by our general's looks we shall be fain to hang you.

Par. My life, sir, in any case: not that I am afraid to die, but that, my offences being many, I would repent out the remainder of nature: let me live, sir, in a dungeon, i' the stocks, or anywhere, so I may live.
I Sold. We'll see what may be done, so you confess freely; therefore, once more to this Captain Dumain: you have answered to his reputation with the duke, and to his valour: what is his honesty?

Par. He will steal, sir, an egg out of a cloister; for rapes and ravishments he parallels Nessus. He professes not keeping of oaths; in breaking them he is stronger than Hercules. He will lie, sir, with such volubility that you would think truth were a fool: drunkenness is his best virtue, for he will be swine-drunk; and in his sleep he does little harm, save to his bedclothes about him; but they know his conditions and lay him in straw. I have but little more to say, sir, of his honesty; he has everything that an honest man should not have; what an honest man should have he has nothing.

I Lord. I begin to love him for this.

Ber. For this description of thine honesty? A pox upon him for me; he is more and more

I Sold. What say you to his expertness in war?

Par. Faith, sir, has led the drum before the English tragedians,—to belie him I will not. and more of his soldiership I know not, except in that country he had the honour to be the officer at a place there called Mile-end, to instruct for the doubling of files: I would do the man what honour I can, but of this I am not certain.

I Lord. He hath out-villainied villainy so far that the rarity redeems him.

Ber. A pox on him! he's a cat still.

1 Sold. His qualities being at this poor price, I need not to ask you if gold will corrupt him

Par. Sir, for a quart d'ecu he will sell the fee-simple of his salvation, the inheritance of it; and cut the entail from all remainders, and a perpetual succession for it perpetually. I Sold. What's his brother, the other Captain Dumain?

2 Lord. Why does he ask him of me?

I Sold. What's he?

Par. E'en a crow of the same nest; not altogether so great as the first in goodness, but greater a great deal in evil. He excels his brother for a coward, yet his brother is reputed one of the best that is: in a retreat he outruns any lackey; marry, in coming on he has the cramp.

I Sold. If your life be saved, will you undertake to betray the Florentine?

Par. Ay, and the captain of his horse, Count Rousillon.

I Sold. I'll whisper with the general, and know his pleasure.

Par. I'll no more drumming; a plague of all drums! Only to seem to deserve well, and to beguile the supposition of that lascivious young boy, the count, have I run into this danger: yet who would have suspected an ambush where I was taken?

I Sold. There is no remedy, sir, but you must die: the general says, yon that have so traitorously discovered the secrets of your army, and mad such pestiferous reports of men very nobly held, can serve the world for no honest use; therefore you must die. Come, heads-man, off with his head. Par. O Lord sir, let me live, or let me see my death.

I Sold. That shall you, and take your leave Unmuffling him. of all your friends. So look about you: know you any here?

Ber. Good morrow, noble captain.

2 Lord. God bless you, Captain Parolles.
1 Lord. God save you, noble captain.
2 Lord. Captain, what greeting will you to my Lord Lafeu? I am for France.

I Lord. Good captain, will you give me a copy of the sonnet you writ to Diana in behalf of the Count Rousillon? an I were not a very coward I'd compel it of you; but fare you well. [Exeunt BERTRAM, Lords, & c.

r Sold. You are undone, captain: all but your scarf; that has a knot on't yet.

Clo. So that you had her wrinkles and I her money, I would she did as you say.

Par. Why, I say nothing.

Par. Why, I say nothing.
Clo. Marry, you are the wiser man; for many a man's tongue shakes out his master's undoing: to say nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to have nothing, is to he a great part of your title; which is within a very little of nothing.

Par. Away! thou'rt a knave.

Clo. You should have said, sir, hefore a knave thou art a knave; that is, hefore me thou art a knave: this had heen truth, sir. Par. Go to, thou art a witty fool: I have found thee.

Clo. Did you find me in yourself, sir? or were you taught to find me? The search, sir, was profitable; and much fool may you find in you, even to the world's pleasure and the increase of laughter.

Laf. I like him well; 'tis not amiss. And I was about to tell you, since I heard of the good lady's death, and that my lord your son was upon his return home, I moved the king my master to speak in the behalf of my daughter: which, in the minority of them both, his majesty, out of a self-gracious remembrance, did first propose: his highness hath promised me to do it: and, to stop up the displeasure he heth conceived against your son, there is no fitter matter. How does your ladyship like it?

Count. With very much content, my lord; and I wish it happily effected.

Laf. His highness comes post from Marseilles, of as able body as when he numbered thirty; he will be here to-morrow, or I am deceived by him that in such intelligence hath seldom failed.

Count. It rejoices me that I hope I shall see him ere I die. I have letters that my son will be here to-night: I shall be eech your lordship to remain with me till they meet together.

Laf. Madam, I was thinking with what manners I might safely be admitted.

Count. You need but plead your honourable privilege.

Laf. Lady, of that I have made a bold charter; but, I thank my God, it holds yet.

Re-enter Clown.

Clo. O madam, yonder's my lord your son with a patch of velvet on's face; whether there be a scar under it or no, the velvet knows; but 'tis a goodly patch of velvet: his left cheek is a cheek of two pile and a half, but his right cheek is worn bare.

Laf. A scar nobly got, or a noble scar, is a good livery of honour; so belike is that.

Clo. But it is your carbonadoed face.

Laf. Let us go see your son, I pray you; I long to talk with the young noble soldier.

Clo. Faith, there's a dozen of 'em, with delicate fine hats, and most courteous feathers, which bow the head and nod at every man. Exeunt.

Enter COUNTESS and Steward.

Count. Alas! and would you take the letter of her? [done, Might you not know she would do as she has By sending me a letter? Read it again.

Stew. [Reads.]I am St. Jaques' pilgrim, thither gone:

Ambitious love hath so in me offended
That barefoot plod I the cold ground upon
With sainted vow my faults to have amended.
Write; write, that from the bloody course of war
My dearest master, your dear son, may hie:

Bless him at home in peace, whilst I from far His name with zealous fervour sanctify: His taken labours bid him me forgive; I, his despiteful Juno, sent him forth From courtly friends, with camping foes to live,

Where death and danger dog the heels of worth:

He is too good and fair for death and me; Whom I myself embrace, to set him free. Count. Ah, what sharp stings are in her mildest words!—

Rinaldo, you did never lack advice so much
As letting her pass so; had I spoke with her,
I could have well diverted her intents,
Which thus she hath prevented.

Stew. Pardon me, madam:

If I had given you this at over-night,

Laf. Come on, my son, in whom my house's name

Must be digested, give a favour from you, To sparkle in the spirits of my daughter, That she may quickly come.—

That she may quickly come.—
[BERTRAM gives a ring to LAFEU.
By my old beard,
And every hair that's on't, Helen, that's dead,
Was a sweet creature: such a ring as this,
The last that e'er I took her leave at court,
I saw upon her finger.

Ber. Her's it was not.

King Now, pray you, let me see it; for mine eye,

While I was speaking, oft was fasten'd to it.—
This ring was mine, and when I gave it Helen
I bade her, if her fortunes ever stood
Necessitated to help, that by this token
I would relieve her. Had you that craft to "reave her

Of what should stead her most?

Ber. My gracious sovereign, Howe'er it pleases you to take it so, The ring was never hers.

Count. Son, on my life, I have seen her wear it; and she reckon'd it At her life's rate.

Laf. I'm sure I saw her wear it.

Ber. You are deceiv'd, my lord; she never saw it:

In Florence was it from a casement thrown me, Wrapp'd in a paper, which contain'd the name Of her that threw it: noble she was, and thought

thought
I stood engag'd: but when I had subscrib'd
To mine own fortune, and inform'd her fully could not answer in that course of honour
As she had made the overture, she ceas'd,
In heavy satisfaction, and would never Receive the ring again.

King. Plutus himself,
That knows the tinct and multiplying medicine,
Hath not in nature's mystery more science
Than I have in this ring: 'twas mine, 'twas Helen's,

Whoever gave it you. Then, if you know That you are well acquainted with yourself, Confess 'twas hers, and by what rough enforcement

You got it from her: she call'd the saints to surety

That she would never put it from her finger Unless she gave it to yourself in bed,— Where you have never come,—or sent it us Upon her great disaster.

Ber. She never saw it.

King. Thou speak'st it falsely, as I love mine honour;

And mak'st conjectural fears to come into me Which I would fain shut out. If it should prove That thou art so inhuman,—'twill not prove

And yet I know not:-thou didst hate her deadly.

And she is dead; which nothing, but to close Her eyes myself, could win me to believe More than to see this ring.—Take him away.— [Guards seize BERTRAM

My fore-past proofs, howe'er the matter fall, Shall tax my fears of little vanity,

Having vainly fear'd too little.—Away with him;—

We'll sift this matter further.

Ber. If you shall prove
This ring was ever hers, you shall as essy
Prove that I husbanded her bed in Florence,
Where yet she never was. [Exit, guarded,
King. I am wrapp'd in dismal thinkings.

Enter a Gentleman.

Gent. Gracious sovereign, Whether I have been to blame or no, I know not:

Here's a petition from a Florentine, Who hath, for four or five removes, come short To tender it herself. I undertook it, Yanquish'd thereto by the fair grace and speech Of the poor suppliant, who by this, I know, Is here attending: her business looks in her With an importing visage; and she told me, In a sweet verbal brief, it did concern Your highness with herself.

King. [Reads.] Upon his many protestations to marry me, when his wife was dead, I blush to say it, he won me. Now is the Count Rousillon a widower; his vows are forfeited to me, and my honour's paid to him. He stole from Florence, taking no leave, and I follow him to his country for justice: grant it me, O king; in you it best lies; otherwise a seducer flourishes; and a poor maid is undone.

DIANA CAPULET.

Laf. I will buy me a son-in-law in a fair, and toll this: I'll none of him.

King. The heaven's have thought well on thee, Lafeu,

To bring forth this discovery.—Seek these suitors:—

Go speedily, and bring again the count. [Exeunt Gentleman, and some Attendants, I am afeared the life of Helen, lady, Was foully snatch'd.

Count. Now, justice on the doers!

Enter BERTRAM, guarded.

King. I wonder, sir, since wives are monsters to you,

And that you fly them as you swear the lordship,

Yet you desire to marry.—What woman's that? Re-enter Gentleman, with Widow and DIANA. Dia. I am, my lord, a wretched Florentine, Derived from the ancient Cspulet; My suit, as I do understand, you know, And therefore know how far I may be pitied.

And therefore know how far I may be pitied.

Wid. I am her mother, sir, whose age and honour

Both suffer under this complaint we bring, And both shall cease, without your remedy.

King. Come hither, count; do you know these women?

Ber. Mylord, I neither can nor will deny But that I know them: do they charge me further? [wife.

Dia. Why do you look so strange upon your Ber. She's none of mine, my lord.
Dia.

If you shall marry,

Dia. It you snau man, You give away this hand, and that is mine; You give away heaven's vows, and those are mine;

Díα. I never gave it him. Laf. This woman's an easy glove, my lord; she goes off and on at pleasure.

King. This ring was mine, I gave it his first wife. know.

Dia. It might be yours or hers, for aught I King. Take her away, I do not like her now; To prison with her: and away with him. Unless thou tell'st me where thou hadst this ring, Thou diest within this hour.

I'll never tell you. Dia. King. Take her away.

I'll put in bail, my liege. Dia. King. I think thee now some common customer.

Dia. By Jove, if ever I knew man, 'twas you. King. Wherefore hast thou accus'd him all this while?

Dia. Because he's guilty, and he is not guilty: He knows I am no maid, and he'll swear to't: I'll swear I am a maid, and he knows not. Great king, I am no strumpet, by my life; I am either maid, or else this old man's wife. [Pointing to LAFEU.

King. She does abuse our ears; to prison with her. sir;

Dia. Good mother, fetch my ball. - Stay, royal Exit Widow.

The jeweller that owes the ring is sent for, And he shall surety me. But for this lord, Who hath abus'd me, as he knows himself, Though yet he never harm'd me, here I quit him:

He knows himself my bed he hath defil'd; And at that time he got his wife with child. Dead though she be, she feels her young one kick;

So there's my riddle—One that's dead is quick; And now behold the meaning.

Re-enter Widow with HELENA.

Is there no exorcist - King. Beguiles the truer office of mine eyes? Is't real that I see?

No, my good lord; Hel. 'Tis but the shadow of a wife you see-The name, and not the thing.

Both, both; O, pardon

Hel. O, my good lord, when I was like this maid:

I found you wondrous kmd. There is your ring, And, look you, here's your letter. This it says,

When from my finger you can get this ring, And are by me with child, &c.—This is done: Will you be mine, now you are doubly won?

Ber. If she, my liege, can make me know this clearly,

I'll love her dearly, ever, ever dearly. Hel. If it appear not plain, and prove untrue, Deadly divorce step between me and you!-O, my dear mother, do I see you living?

Lof. Mine eyes smell onious; I shall weep anon:—Good Tom Drum [to PAROLLES], lend me a handkercher: so, I thank thee; wait on me home, I'll make sport with thee: let thy courtesies alone, they are scurvy ones-

King. Let us from point to point this story know,

To make the even truth in pleasure flow:-If thou be'st yet a fresh uncropped flower, (To Diana.

Choose thou thy husband, and I'll pay thy dower;

For I can guess that, by thy honest aid, Thou kept'st a wife herself, thyself a maid.-Of that and all the progress, more and less, Resolvedly more leisure shall express: All yet seems well; and if it end so meet, The bitter past, more welcome is the sweet.

Flourish. The king's a beggar, now the play is done: All is well-ended if this suit be won, That you express content; which we will pay, With strife to please you, day exceeding day: Ours be your patience then, and yours our parts; Your gentle hands lend us, and take our hearts Exeunt. [Aside.

had no such purpose? I must give myself some hurts, and say I got them in exploit: yet slight ones will not carry it: they will say, Came you off with so little? and great ones I dare not give. Wherefore, what's the instance? Tongue I must put you into a butter-woman's mouth, and buy myself another of Bajazet's mule, if you prattle me into these perils.

I Lord. Is it possible he should know what he is, and be that he is? [Aside.

Par. I would the cutting of my garments would serve the turn, or the breaking of my Spanish sword.

I Lord. We cannot afford you so. [Aside. Par. Or the baring of my beard; and to say it was in stratagem.

I Lord. 'Twould not do.

[Aside. Par. Or to drown my clothes, and say I was stripped.

[Aside. I Lord. Hardly serve. Par. Though I swore I leaped from the window of the citadel,

I Lord. How deep? Par. Thirty fathom.

I Lord. Three great oaths would scarce make that be believed. [Aside.

Par. I would I had any drum of the enemy's: I would swear I recovered it.

I Lord. You shall hear one anon. [Aside. Par. A drum now of the enemy's!

[Alarum within 1 Lord. Throca movousus, cargo, cargo, cargo. All. Cargo, cargo, cargo, villianda par corbo, corgo.

Par. O! ransom, ransom:-Do not mine eyes. [They seize and blindfold him.]

1 Sold. Boskos thromuldo boskos.

Par. I know you are the Musko's regiment, And I shall lose my life for want of language: If there be here German or Dane, low Dutch, Italian, or French, let him speak to me; I will discover that which will undo The Florentine.

Boskos vauvado:-2 Sold. I understand thee, and can speak thy tongue:--Sir, Kerelybonto:-

Betake thee to thy faith, for seventeen poniards Are at thy bosom.

Par.

I Sold. O, pray, pray, pray.

Manka revania dulche. 1 Lord. Oscorbi dulchos volivorco x Sold. The general is content to spare thee yet; And, hoodwink'd as thou art, will lead thee

To gather from thee: haply thou mayst inform Something to save thy life.

Par. O, let me live, And all the secrets of our camp I'll show,

Their force, their purposes: nay, I'll speak that Which you will wonder at.

z Sold. But wilt thou faithfully? Par. If I do not, damn me.

I Sold. Acordo linta.-Come on; thou art granted space.

[Exit, with PAROLLES guarded. x Lord. Go, tell the Count Rousilion and my brother We have caught the woodcock, and will keep him muffled

Till we do hear from them.

Captain, I will. 2 Sold. I Lord. He will betray us all unto ourselves:-Inform 'em that.

2 Sold. So I will, sir.

I Lord. Till then I'll keep him dark, and safely lock'd. [Exeunt.

SCENE IL.—FLORENCE. A Room in the Widow's House.

Enter BERTRAM and DIANA

Ber. They told me that your name was Fontibell.

Dia. No, my good lord, Diana.

Ber. Titled goddess: And worth it, with addition! But, fair soul, In you fine frame hath love no quality? If the quick fire of youth light not your mind You are no maiden, but a monument; When you are dead, you should be such a one As you are now, for you are cold and stern; And now you should be as your mother was When your sweet self was got.

Dig. She then was honest

Ber. So should you be. Dia. No: My mother did but duty; such, my lord,

As you owe to your wife. Ber. No more of that! I prythee, do not strive against my vows:

I was compell'd to her; but I love thee By love's own sweet constraint, and will for ever Do thee all rights of service

Ay, so you serve us Till we serve you: but when you have our roses You barely leave our thorns to prick ourselves, And mock us with our bareness.

Ber. How have I sworn? Dia. 'Tis not the many oaths that make the truth, But the plain single vow that is vow'd true.

What is not holy, that we swear not by, But take the Highest to witness: then, pray you, tell me, If I should swear by Jove's great attributes

I lov'd you dearly, would you believe my oaths, When I did love you ill? this has no holding, To swear by him whom I protest to love, That I will work against him: therefore your oaths

Are words and poor conditions; but unseal'd,— At least in my opinion.

Change it, change it; Be not so holy-cruel: love is holy; And my integrity ne'er knew the crafts off.

My love as it begins shall so persever. [case, Dia. I see that men make hopes, in such a That we'll forsake ourselves. Give me that ring. Ber. I'll lend it thee, my dear, but have no power To give it from me.

Will you not, my lord? Dia.

He cried upon it at the merest loss, And twice to-day pick'd out the dullest scent: Trust me, I take him for the better dog.

Lord. Thou art a fool: if Echo were as fleet,

I would esteem him worth a dozen such. But sup them well, and look unto them all: To-morrow I intend to hunt again.

I Hun. I will, my lord.

Lord. What's here? one dead, or drunk? See, doth he breathe?

2 Hun. He breathes, my lord. Were ne not warm'd with ale,

This were a bed but cold to sleep so soundly. Lord. O monstrous beast! how like a swine he lies. image! Grim death, how foul and loathsome is thine Sirs, I will practise on this drunken man. What think you, if he were convey'd to bed Wrapp'd in sweet clothes, rings put upon his fingers, A most delicious banquet by his bed, And brave attendants near him when he wakes, Would not the beggar then forget himself?

I Hun. Believe me, lord, I think he cannot choose.

2 Hun. It would seem strange unto him when he wak'd. [less fancy.

Lord. Even as a flattering dream or worth-Then take him up, and manage well the jest:-Carry him gently to my fairest chamber. And hang it round with all my wanton pictures: Balm his foul head in warm distilled waters, And burn sweet wood to make the lodging sweet:

Procure me music ready when he wakes, To make a dulcet and a heavenly sound; And if he chance to speak, be ready straight, And, with a low, submissive reverence, Say,—What is it your honour will command? Let one attend him with a silver basin Full of rose-water and bestrew'd with flowers; Another bear the ewer, the third a diaper, And say, - Will't please your lordship cool your hands?

Some one be ready with a costly suit, And ask him what apparel he will wear; Another tell him of his hounds and horse, And that his lady mourns at his disease: Persuade him that he hath been lunatic; And, when he says he is, say that he dreams, For he is nothing but a mighty lord. This do, and do it kindly, gentle sirs: It will be pastime passing excellent, If it be husbanded with modesty. [our part,

Belike, some noble gentleman, that means, Travelling some journey, to repose him here.

Re-enter a Servant.

How now! who is it? An it please your honour, Players that offer service to your lordship. Lord. Bid them come near.

Enter Players.

Now, fellows, you are welcome. I Play. We thank your honour.

Lord. Do you intend to stay with me tonight?

2 Play. So please your lordship to accept our duty. Lord. With all my heart.—This fellow I re-

Since once he play'd a farmer's eldest son:-'Twas where you woo'd the gentlewoman so well:

I have forgot your name; but, sure, that part Was actly fitted and naturally perform'd.

I Play. I think 'twas Soto that your honour means.

Lord. 'Tis very true: thou didst it excellent .-Well, you are come to me in happy time: The rather for I have some sport in hand, Wherein your cunning can assist me much. There is a lord will hear you play to-night. But I am doubtful of your modesties; Lest, over-eying of his odd behaviour, For yet his honour never heard a play,-You break into some merry passion, And so offend him; for I tell you, sirs, If you should smile, he grows impatient.

I Play. Fear not, my lord; we can contain ourselves,

Were be the veriest antic in the world. Lord. Go, sirrah take them to the buttery, And give them friendly welcome every one: Let them want nothing that my house affords.

Exeunt Servant and Players. Sirrah, go vou to Barthol'mew my page To a Servant.

And see him dress'd in all suits like a lady: That dore, conduct him to the drunkard's chamber;

And call him madam, do him obeisance. Tell him from me,—as he will win my love,-He bear himself with honourable action, Such as he bath observ'd in noble ladies. Unto their lords, by them accomplished: Such duty to the drunkard let him do, With soft low tongue and lowly courtesy; And say, -What is't your honour will command.

Wherein your lady and your humble wife May show her duty and make known her love? And then, -with kind embracements, tempting kisses,

And with declining head into his bosom,-Bid him shed tears, as being overjoy'd To see her noble lord restor'd to bealth, Who for this seven years hath esteemed him No better than a poor and loathsome beggar: And if the boy have not a woman's gift, To rain a shower of commanded tears, An onion will do well for such a shift; Which in a napkin being close conveyed, Shall in despite enforce a watery eye. 2 Lord. They shall be no more than needful there, if they were more than they can commend.

I Lord. They cannot be too sweet for the king's tartness. Here's his lordship now.

Enter BERTRAM.

How now, my lord, is't not after midnight?

Ber. I have to-night despatched sixteen businesses, a months' length a-piece, by an abstract of success: I have conge'd with the duke, done my adieu with his nearest; buried a wife, mourned for her; writ to my lady-mother I am returning; entertained my convoy; and, be-tween these main parcels of despatch, effected many nicer needs: the last was the greatest, but that I have not ended yet.

2 Lord. If the business be of any difficulty, and this morning your departure hence, it requires haste of your lordship.

Bcr. I mean, the business is not ended, as fearing to hear of it hereafter. But shall we have this dialogue between the fool and the soldier?—Come, bring forth this counterfeit model: has deceived me like a double-meaning prophesier.

2 Lord. Bring him forth. [Exeunt Soldiers. Has sat in the stocks all night, poor gallant knave. Ber. No matter; his heels have deserved it, in usurping his spurs so long. How does he carry himself?

I Lord. I have told your lordship already; the stocks carry him. But to answer you as you would be understood; he weeps like a wench that had shed her milk; he hath confessed himself to Morgan, whom he supposes to be a friar, from the time of his remembrance to this very instant disaster of his setting i' the stocks: and what think you he hath confessed? Ber. Nothing of me, has he?

2 Lord. His confession is taken, and it shall be read to his face: if your lordship be in't, as I believe you are, you must have the patience to hear it.

Re-enter Soldiers, with PAROLLES.

Ber. A plague upon him! mnfiled! he can say nothing to me; hush, hush!

I Lord. Hoodman comes! Porto tartarossa. I Sold. He calls for the tortures: what will you say without 'em?

Par. I will confess what I know without constraint; if ye pinch me like a pasty I can say no more.

r Sold. Bosko chimurco.

I Lord. Boblibindo chicumurco.

I Sold. You are a merciful general:—Our general bids you answer to what I shall ask you out of a note.

Par. And truly, as I hope to live. 1 Sold. First demond of him how many horse

The duke is strong. What say you to that?

Par. Five or six thousand; but very weak nd unserviceable: the troops are all scattered, nd the commanders very poor rogues, upon my reputation and credit, and as I hope to live.

I Sold. Shall I set down your answer so?

Par. Do; I'll take the sacrament on't, how and which way you will.

Ber. All's one to him. What a past-saving slave is this!

I Lord. You are deceived, my lord; this is Monsieur Parolles, the gallant militarist (that was his own phrase), that had the whole theoric of war in the knot of his scarf, and the practice in the chape of his dagger.

2 Lord. I will never trust a man again for keeping his sword clean; nor believe he can have everything in him by wearing his apparel neatly.

1 Sold. Well, that's set down.

Par. Five or six thousand horse, I said,-I will say true, -or thereabouts, set down, -for I'll speak truth.

I Lord. He's very near the truth in this. Ber. But I con him no thanks for't in the nature he delivers it.

Par. Poor rogues, I pray you say. I Sold. Well, that's set down.

Por. I humbly thank you, sir: a truth's a truth, the rogues are marvellous poor.

1 Sold. Demond of him of whot strength they are a-foot. What say you to that?

Par. By my troth, sir, if I were to live this present hour I will tell true. Let me see: Spurio a hundred and fifty, Sebastian so many, Corambus so many, Jacques so many; Guiltian, Cosmo, Lodowick, and Gratii, two hundred fifty each: mine own company, Chitopher, fifty each: mine own company, Chitopher, Vaumond, Bentii, two hundred fifty each: so that the muster-file, rotten and sound, upon my life, amounts not to fifteen thousand poll; half of the which dare not shake the snow from off their cassocks lest they shake themselves to pieces.

Ber. What shall be done to him?

I Lord. Nothing, but let him have thanks. Demand of him my condition, and what credit

I have with the duke.

I Sold. Well, that's set down. You shall demand of him whether one Captain Dumain be i' the comp, a Frenchman; what his reputotion is with the duke, what his volour, honesty, expertness in wars; or whether he thinks it were not possible, with well-weighing sums of gold, to corrupt him to a revolt.

What say you to this? what do you know of it? Par. I beseech you, let me answer to the particular of the inter'gatories: demand them singly.

I Sold. Do you know this Captain Dumain?

him he was a botcher's prentice in Paris, from whence he was whipped for getting the shrieve's fool with child: a dumb innocent that could not say him nay.

Is Lord lifts up his hand in anger. Ber. Nay, by your leave, hold your hands; though I know his brains are forfeit to the next tile that falls.

r Sold. Well, is this captain in the Duke of Florence's camp?

Par. Upon my knowledge, he is, and lousy. I Lord. Nay, look not so upon me; we shall hear of your lordship anon.

r Sold. What is his reputation with the duke? Par. The duke knows him for no other but a poor officer of mine; and writ to me this other

Page. My husband and my lord, my lord and husband;

I am your wife in all obedience.

To pardon me yet for a night or two: Or, if not so, until the sun be set: For your physicians have expressly charg'd. In peril to incur your former malady, That I should yet absent me from your bed: I hope this reason stands for my excuse.

Siy. Ay, it stands so, that I may hardly tarry so long. But I would be loath to fall into my dreams again: I will therefore tarry, in despite of the flesh and the blood.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Your honour's players, hearing your amendment.

Are come to play a pleasant comedy; For so your doctors hold it very meet, Seeing too much sadness hath congeal'd your blood,

And melancholy is the nurse of frenzy: Therefore they thought it good you hear a play, And frame your mind to mirth and merriment Which bars a thousand harms and lengthens life.

Sly. Marry, I will; let them play it. Is not a commonty a Christmas gambol or a tumblingtrick?

Page. No, my good lord; it is more pleasing Sly. What, household stuff?

Sly. What, household fistory.

Page. It is a kind of history.

We'll see't. Come, madam wife, sit by my side, and let the world slip: we shall ne'er be younger. (They sit down.

ACT I

Scene I .- Padua. A public Place.

Enter Lucentio and Tranio.

Luc. Tranio, since, for the great desire I had To see fair Padua, nursery of arts, I am arriv'd for fruitful Lombardy, The pleasant garden of great Italy; And, by my father's love and leave, am arm'd With his good-will and thy good company, My trusty servant, well approv'd in all; Here let us breathe, and haply institute A course of learning and ingenious studies. Pisa, renowned for grave citizens, Gave me my being, and my father first, A merchant of great traffic through the world, Vincentio, come of the Bentivolii Vincentio's son, brought up in Florence, It shall become, to serve all hopes conceiv'd, To deck his fortune with his virtuous deeds:

And therefore, Tranio, for the time I study, Virtue and that part of philosophy Will I apply that treats of happiness By virtue specially to be achiev'd. Tell me thy mind; for I have Pisa left, And am to Padua come, as he that leaves A shallow plash to plunge him in the deep, And with satiety seeks to quench his thirst.

Tra. Mi perdonate, gentle master mine, I am in all affected as yourself; Glad that you thus continue your resolve To suck the sweets of sweet philosophy. Only, good master, while we do admire This virtue and this moral discipline. Let's be no stoics nor no stocks, I pray; Or so devote to Aristotle's ethics As Ovid be an outcast quite abjurd: Balk logic with acquaintance that you have, And practise rhetoric in your common talk; Music and poesy use to quicken you The mathematics and the metaphysics, Fall to them as you find your stomach serves you:

No profit grows where is no pleasure ta'en: In brief, sir, study what you most affect. Luc. Gramercies, Tranio, well dost thou

If Biondello now were come ashore We could at once put us in readiness, And take a lodging fit to entertain Such friends as time in Padua shall beget. But stay awhile: what company is this?

Tra. Master, some show, to welcome us to town.

Enter BAPTISTA. KATHARDIA, GREMIO, and HORTENSIO LUCENTIO and TRANIO stand aside.

Bap. Gentlemen, Importune me no further. For how I firmly am resolv'd you know; That is, not to bestow my youngest daughter Before I have a husband for the elder: . If either of you both love Katharina, Because I know you well, and love you well, Leave shall you have to court her at your pleasure for me.-

Gre. To cart her rather: she's too rough There, there, Hortensio, will you any wife?

Kath. [To BAP.] I pray you sir, is it your

To make a stale of me amongst these mates? Hor. Mates, maid! how mean you that? no mates for you,

Unless you were of gentler, milder mould. Kath. I' faith, sir, you shall never need to fear; I wis it is not helf-way to her heart, But if it were, doubt not her care should be To comb your noddle with a three-legg'd stool, And paint your face, and use you like a fool.

Hor. From all such devils, good Lord deliver us!

Gre. And me too, good Lord! Tra. Hush, master! here is some good pastime toward; That wench is stark mad, or wonderful froward.

Luc. But in the other's silence do I see Maid's mild behaviour and sobriety.

Peace, Tranio! Tra. Well said, mester; mum! and gaze: Por. Wh cannot be crushed with a plot?

r Sold. If you could find out a country where but women were that had received so much shame, you might begin an impudent nation. Fare you well, sir; I am for France too: we shall speak of you there. [Exit. Exit.

Por. Yet I am thankful: if my heart were great, 'Twould burst at this. Captain I'll be no more:

But I will eat and drink, and sleep as soft As captain shall: simply the thing I am Shall make me live. Who knows himself a Shall make me live.

braggart,

Let him fear this; for it will come to pass That every braggart shall be found an ass. Rust, sword! cool, blushes! and, Parolles, live Safest in shame! being fool'd, by foolery thrive! There's place and means for every man alive. Exit. I'll after them.

Scene IV .- Florence. A Room in the Widow's House.

Enter HELENA, Widow, and DIANA.

Hel. That you may well perceive I have not wrong'd you,

One of the greatest in the Christian world Shall be my surety; 'fore whose throne 'tis needful,

Ere I can perfect mine intents, to kneel: Time was I did him a desired office, Dear almost as his life; which gratitude Through flinty Tartar's bosom would peep forth, And answer, thanks: I duly am informed His grace is at Marseilles; to which place We have convenient convoy. You must know I am supposed dead: the army breaking, My husband hies him home; where, heaven aiding,

And by the leave of my good lord the kind,

We'll be before our welcome.

Gentle madam, You never had a servant to whose trust Your business was more welcome.

Nor you, mistress, Ever a friend whose thoughts more truly labour To recompense your love: doubt not but heaven Hath brought me up to be your daughter's dower,

As it hath fated her to be my motive And helper to a husband. But, O strange men!

That can such sweet use make of what they

When saucy trusting of the cozen'd thoughts Defiles the pitchy night! so lust doth play With what it loathes, for that which is away: But more of this hereafter .- You, Diana, Under my poor instructions yet must suffer Something in my behalf.

Dia. Let death and honesty Go with your impositions, I am yours

Upon your will to suffer.

Hel. Yet, I pray you: But with the word the time will bring on summer,

When briers shall have leaves as well as thorns, And be as sweet as sharp. We must away: Our waggon is prepar'd, and time revives us:

All's well that ends well: still the fine's the crown:

Whate'er the course, the end is the renown. Exeunt.

Scene V.—Rousillon. A Room in the COUNTESS'S Palace.

Enter Countess, Lafeu, and Clown.

Laf. No, no, no, your son was misled with a snipt-taffeta fellow there, whose villanous saffron would have made all the unbaked and doughy youth of a nation in his colour: your daughter-in-law had been alive at this hour, and your son here at home, more advanced by the king than by that red-tailed humble-bee I speak of.

Count. I would I had not known him! it was the death of the most virtuous gentlewoman that ever nature had praise for creating: if she had partaken of my flesh, and cost me the dearest groans of a mother, I could not have owed her a more rooted love.

Laf. 'Twas a good lady, 'twas a good lady: we may pick a thousand salads ere we light on such another herb.

Clo. Indeed, sir, she was the sweet marjoram of the salad, or rather, the herb of grace. Laf. They are not salad-herbs, you knave;

they are nose-herbs. Clo. I am no great Nebuchadnezzar, sir; I have not much skill in grass.

Laf. Whether dost thou profess thyself,—a knave or a fool? Clo. A fool, sir, at a woman's service, and a knave at a man's.

Laf. Your distinction? Clo. I would cozen the man of his wife, and do his service. [deed.

Laf. So you were a knave at his service, in-Clo. And I would give his wife my bauble, sir, to do her service.

Laf. I will subscribe for thee; thou art both knave and fool.

Clo. At your service.
Laf. No, no, no.
Clo. Why, sir, if I cannot serve you, I can serve as great a prince as you are.

Laf. Who's that? a Frenchman? Clo. Faith, sir, 'a has an English name; but his phisnomy is more hotter in France than there.

Laf. What prince is that? Clo. The black prince, sir; olias, the prince of darkness; olias, the devil.

Laf. Hold thee, there's my purse: I give thee not this to suggest thee from thy master thou talkest of; serve him still.

Clo. I am a woodland fellow, sir, that always loved a great fire; and the master I speak of ever keeps a good fire. But, sure, he is the prince of the world; let his nobility remain in his court. I am for the house with the narrow gate, which I take to be too little for pomp to enter: some that humble themselves may; but the many will be too chill and tender; and they'll be for the flow'ry way that leads to the broad gate and the great fire.

Laf. Go thy ways, I begin to be a-weary of thee; and I tell thee so before, because I would Tra. Not possible; for who shall bear your part,

And be in Padua here Vincentio's son; Keep house, and ply his book; welcome his friends:

Visit his countrymen and banquet them?

Luc. Basta; content thee; for I have it full.

We have not yet been seen in any house;

Nor can we be distinguished by our faces

For man or master: then it follows thus:—

Thou shalt be master, Tranio, in my stead,

Keep house, and port, and servants, as I should:

I will some other be; some Florentine,

Some Neapolitan, or meaner man of Pisa.
'Tis hatch'd, and shall be so:—Tranio, at once
Uncase thee; take my colour'd hat and cloak:
When Biondello comes he waits on thee;
But I will charm him first to keep his tongue.

Tra. So you had need.

[They exchange habits.]
In brief, then, sir, sith it your pleasure is,
And I am tied to be obedient,—
For so your father charg'd me at our parting;
Be serviceable to my son, quoth he,
Although, I think, 'twas in another sense,—
I am content to be Lucentio,
Because so well I love Lucentio.

Luc. Tranio, he so, because Lucentio loves: And let me be a slave, to achieve that maid Whose sudden sight hath thrall'd my wounded eye.

Here comes the rogue.

Enter BIONDELLO.

Sirrah, where have you been?

Bion. Where have I been? Nay, how now!
where are you?

Master, has my fellow Tranio stolen your clothes? [news?

Or you stolen his? or both? pray, what's the Luc. Sirrah, come hither; 'tis no time to jest, And therefore frame your manners to the time. Your fellow Tranio here, to save my life, Puts my apparel and my countenance on, And I for my escape have put on his; For in a quarrel, since I came ashore, I kill'd a man, and fear I was descried. Wait you on him, I charge you, as becomes, While I make way from hence to save my life: You understand me?

Bion. I, sirl ne'er a whit.

Luc. And not a jot of Tranio in your mouth;

Tranio is chang'd into Lucentio. [tool

Bion. The better for him; would I were so Tra. So could I, faith, boy, to have the next wish after,— [daughter.
That Lucentio indeed had Baptista's youngest

That Lucentio indeed had Baptista's youngest But, sirrah,—not for my sake, but your masters I advise [companies:

You use your manners discreetly in all kind of When I am alone, why, then I am Tranio; But in all places else, your master Lucentio.

Luc. Tranio, let's go:—
One thing more rests, that thyself execute,—
To make one among those wooers. If thou ask me why,—

Sufficeth, my reasons are both good and weighty. [Exeunt. I Serv. My lord, you nod; you do not mind the play.

Sly. Yes, by Saint Anne do I. A good matter, surely; comes there any more of it?

Page. My lord, 'tis but begun.

Sly. 'Tis a 'very excellent piece of work madam lady; would 'twere done!

Scene II.—The same. Before Hortensio's House.

Enter PETRUCHIO and GRUMIO.

Pet. Verona, for awhile I take my leave, To see my friends in Padua; but, of all My best beloved and approved friend, Hortensio; and, I trow, this is his house:—Here, sirrah Grumio; knock I say.

Gru. Knock, sir! whom should I knock? is there any man has rebused your worship?

Pet. Villain, I say, knock me here soundly.
Gru. Knock, you here, sir? why, sir, what am I sir, that I should knock you here, sir?
Pet. Villain, I say, knock me at this gate,

And rap me well, or I'll knock your knave's pate.

Gru. My master is grown quarrelsome: I should knock you first,

And then I know after who comes by the worst. Pet. Will it not be?

Faith, sirrah, an you'll not knock I'll wring it: I'll try how you can sol, fa, and sing it.

[He wrings GRUMIO by the ears.
Gru. Help, masters, help! my master is mad.
Pet. Now, knock when I bid you; sirrah villain!

Enter HORTENSIO.

Hor. How now! what's the matter?—My old friend Grumio! and my good friend Petruchio!—How do you all at Verona?

Pet. Signior Hortensio, come you to part the fray? Con tutto il core bene trovato, may I say.

Hor. Alla nostra casa bene venuto, molto honorato Signor mio Petruchio.

Rise, Grumio, rise; we will compound this quarrel.

Gru. Nay 'tis no matter, sir, what he 'leges in Latin.—If this he not a lawful cause for me to leave his service,—look you, sir,—he bid me knock him, and rap him soundly, sir: well was it fit for a servant to use his master so; being perhaps,—for ought I see,—two and thirty,—a pip out?

Whom would to God I had well knock'd at first, Then had not Grumio come by the worst Pet. A senseless villain!—Good Hortensio, Pet. A senseless villain!—Good Hortenso I bade the rascal knock upon your gate, And could not get him for my heart to do it.

Gru. Knock at the gatel—O heavens!

Spake you not these words plain,—Sirrah, knock me here, [soundly? Rap me here, knock me well, and knock me And come you now with—knocking at the gate

Pet. Sirrah, be gone, or talk not, I advise you. [pledge: Hor. Petruchio, patience; I am Grumio's Why, this' a heavy chance 'twixt him and you, Your ancient, trusty, pleasant servant Grumio. And tell me now, sweet friend, what happy gale

Blows you to Padua here from old Verona?

Pet. Such wind as scatters young men through the world, into the unclean fishpond of her displeasure. and, as he says, is muddled withal: pray you, sir, use the carp as you may; for he looks like a poor, decayed, ingenious, foolish, rascally knave. I do pity his distress in my smiles of comfort, and leave him to your lordship. (Exit.

Par. My lord, I am a man whom fortune hath cruelly scratched.

Laf. And what would you have me to do? 'tis too late to pare her nails now. Wherein have you played the knave with fortune, that she should scratch you, who of herself is a goodlady, and would not have knaves thrive long under her? There's a quart d'ecu for you: let the justices make you and fortune friends: I am for other business.

Par. I beseech your honour to hear me one single word.

Laf. You beg a single penny more: come, you shall ha't: save your word. Par. My name, my good lord, is Parolles.

Laf. You beg more than one word then .-Cox' my passion! give me your hand:—how does your drum?

Par. O my good lord, you were the first that found me.

Laf. Was I, in sooth? and I was the first that lost thee.

Par. It lies in you, my lord, to bring me in some grace, for you did bring me out. Laf. Ont upon thee, knave! dost thon put upon me at once both the office of God and the devil? one brings thee in grace. and the other brings thee out. [Trumpets sound.] The king's coming; I know by his trumpets. Sirrah, inquire further after me; I had talk of you last night: though you are a fool and a knave, you shall eat: go to; follow.

Par. I praise God for you. Exeunt.

SCENE III .- The same. A Room in the COUNTESS'S Palace.

Flourish. Enter King, Countess, Lafeu, Lords, Gentlemen, Guards, &c.

King. We lost a jewel of her; and our esteem Was made much poorer by it: but your son, As med in folly, leck'd the sense to know

Her estimation home. 'Tis past, my liege: Count. And I beseech your majesty to make it Natural rebellion, done i' the blaze of youth, When oil and fire, too strong for reason's force, O'erbears it, and burns on.

My honour'd lady, King.I have forgiven and forgotten all;

Though my revenges were high bent upon him, And watch'd the time to shoot.

Laf. This I must say, But first, I beg my pardon,—the young lord Did to his majesty, his mother, and his lady, Offence of mighty note; but to himself The greatest wrong of all: he lost a wife Whose beauty did astonish the survey Of richest eyes; whose words all ears took captive; Whose dear perfection hearts that scorn'd to serve Humbly call'd mistress.

King. Praising what is lost Makes the remembrance dear .- Well, call him hither:

We are reconcil'd, and the first view shall kill All repetition:-let him not ask our pardon; The nature of his great offence is dead, And deeper than oblivion do we bury The incensing relics of it; let him approach, A stranger, no offender; and inform him,

So 'tis our will he should. Gent. I shall, my liege. Exit Gentleman.

King. What says he to your deughter? have you spoke?

Les. All that he is beth reference to your highness. King. Then shall we have a match. I have letters sent me That set him high in fame.

Enter BERTRAM.

Laf. He looks well on't. King. I am not a day of season, For thou meyst see a sunshine and a hail In me at once; but to the brightest beams Distracted clouds give way; so stand thou forth, The time is fair again.

Ber. My high-repented blames, Dear sovereign, pardon to me.

King. All is whole; Not one word more of the consumed time. Let's take the instant by the forward top; For we are old, and on our quick'st decrees The inaudible and noiseless foot of time Steals ere we can effect them. You remember The daughter of this lord?

Ber. Admiringly, my liege: at first I stuck my choice upon her, ere my heart Durst make too bold a herald of my tongue: Where the impression of mine eye infixing, Contempt his scornful perspective did lend me, Which warp'd the line of every other favour; Scorned a fair colonr, or express'd it stolen; Extended or contracted all proportions To a most hideous object: thence it came That she whom all men prais'd, and whom myself, Since I have lost, have lov'd, was in mine eve

The dust that did offend it.

Well excus'd: King. That thou didst love her, strikes some scores flete, awey From the great compt: but love that comes too

Like a remorseful pardon slowly carried, To the great sender turns a sour offence, That's good that's gone. Our rash Crying, faults

Make trivial price of serious things we have, Not knowing them until we know their grave: Oft our displeasures, to ourselves unjust Destroy our friends, and after weep their dust: Our own love waking cries to see what's done, While shameful hate sleeps out the afternoon. Be this sweet Helen's knell, and now forgether. Send forth your amorous token for fair Maudlin: The main consents are had; and here we'll stay

To see our widower's second marriage-dey. Count. Which better than the first, O dear heaven, bless!

Or, ere they meet, in me, O nature, cesse!

Hor. 'Tis well; and I have met a gentleman Hath promis'd me to help me to another. A fine musician to instruct our mistress: So shall I no whit be behind in duty To fair Bianca, so belov'd of me.

Gre. Belov'd of me, - and that my deeds shall prove.

Gru. And that his bags shall prove. [Aside. Hor. Gremio, 'tis now no time to vent our love:

Listen to me, and if you speak me fair I'll tell you news indifferent good for either. Here is a gentleman, whom by chance I met, Upon agreement from us to his liking, Will undertake to woo curst Katharine; Yea, and to marry her, if her dowry please.

Gre. So said, so done, is well:— Hortensio, have you told him all her faults? Pet. I know she is an irksome brawling scold:

If that be all, masters, I hear no harm. say'st me so, friend? Gre. No.

countryman? Pet. Born in Verona, old Antonio's son: My father dead, my fortune lives for me; And I do hope good days and long to see.

Gre. O, sir, such a life, with such a wife, were strange:

But if you have a stomach, to't o' God's name You shall have me assisting you in all. But will you woo this wild-cat?

Pet. Will I live? Gru. Will he woo her? ay, or I'll hang her. Pet. Why came I hither but to that intent? Think you a little din can daunt mine ears? Have I not in my time heard lions roar? Have I not heard the sea, puff'd up with winds, Rage like an angry boar chafed with sweat? Have I not heard great ordnance in the field, And heaven's artillery thunder in the skies? Have I not in a pitched battle heard Loud 'larums, neighing steeds, and trumpets And do you tell me of a woman's tongue; That gives not half so great a blow to hear, As will a chestnut in a farmer's fire? Tush! tush! fear boys with bugs.

Gru. For he fears none.

Gre. Hortensio, hark:

This gentleman is happily arriv'd,

My mind presumes, for his own good and ours. Hor. I promis'd we would be contributors, And bear his charge of wooing, whatsoe'er-

Gre. And so we will-provided that he win

Gru. I would I were as sure of a good dinner.

Enter TRANIO, bravely apparelled, and BIONDELLO.

Tra. Gentlemen, God save yon! If I may be bold, Tell me, I beseech yon, which is the readiest To the house of Signior Baptista Minola? Bion. He that has the two fair daughters:-

is't [aside to TRANIO] he you mean?

Tra. Even he, Biondellol Gre. Hark you, sir; you mean not her to,-Tra. Perhaps, him and her, sir; what have (pray. you to do? Pet. Not her that chides, sir, at any hand, I Tra. I love no chiders, sir; Biondello, let's away.

Luc. Well begun, Tranio. Aside.

Hor. Sir, a word ere you go;∸ Are you a suitor to the maid you talk of, yes or no?

Tra. An if I be, sir, is it any offence?

Gre. No; if without more words you will get yon hence.

Tra. Why, sir, I pray, are not the streets as free.

For me as for you?

But so is not she Gre. Tra. For what reason, I beseech you? Gre. For this reason, if you'll know,

That she's the choice love of Signior Gremio. Hor. That she's the chosen of Signier Hortensio.

Tra. Softly, my mastersl if you be gentle-

Do me this right,—hear me with patience. Baptista is a noble gentleman, To whom my father is not all unknown. And, were his daughter fairer than she is. She may more suitors have, and me for one. Fair Leda's daughter had a thousand wooers: Then well one more may fair Bianca have: And so she shall; Lucentio shall make one, Though Paris came in hope to speed alone.

Gre. What! this gentleman will out-talk us ali. fjæde.

Luc. Sir, give him head; I know he'll prove a Pet. Hortensio, to what end are all these words?

Hor. Sir, let me be so bold as ask you, Did you ever see Baptista's daughter? Tra. No, sir; but hear I do that he hath

The one as famons for a scolding tongue As is the other for beauteous modesty.

Pet. Sir, sir, the first's for me; let her go by. Gre. Yea, leave that labour to great Hercules; And let it be more than Alcides' twelve.

Pet. Sir, understand you this of me, in sooth: The youngest daughter, whom you hearken for, Her father keeps from all access of suitors, And will not promise her to any man Until the elder sister first be wed?

The younger then is free, and not before. Tra. If it be so, sir, that you are the man Must stead us all, and me amongst the rest; And if you break the ice, and do this feat,-Achieve the elder, set the younger free Por our access,—whose hap shall be to have

Will not so graceless be to be ingrate. Hor. Sir, you say well, and well you do conceive:

And since yon do profess to be a suitor, You must, as we do, gratify this gentleman, To whom we all rest generally beholding. [of, Tra. Sir, I shall not be slack: in sign where-

Please ye we may contrive this afternoon, And quaff caronses to our mistress' health; And do as adversaries do in law,-Strive mightily, but eat and drink as friends.

Gru. Bion. O excellent motion! Fellows, let's be gone.

Hor. The motion's good indeed, and be it Petruchio, I shall be your ben venuto. [Exeunt.

You give away myself, which is known mine; For I by vow am so embodied yours That she which marries you must marry me, Either both or none.

Lef. [To BERTRAM.] Your reputation comes too short for my daughter; you are no husband for her.

Ber. My lord, this is a fond and desperate creature

Whom sometimes I have laugh'd with:letyour | Ont of a casement. highness Lay a more noble thought upon mine honour

Than for to think that I would sink it here. King. Sir, for my thoughts, you have them ill to friend

Till your deeds gain them: fairer prove your honour

That in my thought it lies!

Good, my lord, Dia. Ask him upon his oath, if he does think He had not my virginity. King. What say'st thon to her?

She's impudent, my lord; Ber. And was a common gamester to the camp.

Dia. He does me wrong, my lord; if I were

He might have bought me at a common price: Do not believe him. O, behold this ring, Whose high respect and rich validity Did lack a parallel; yet, for all that, He gave it to a commoner o' the camp, If I be one.

Count. . He blushes, and 'tis it: Of six preceding ancestors, that gem, Conferr'd by testament to the sequent issue Hath it been ow'd and worn. This is his wife;

That ring's a thousand proots. Methought you said King. You saw one here in court could witness it. Dia. I did, my lord, but loath am to produce So bad an instrument; his name's Parolles.

Laf. I saw the man to-day, if man he be. King. Find him, and bring him hither.

Exit on Attendant. What of him?

He's quoted for a most perfidious slave, With all the spots o' the world tax'd and debosh'd:

Whose nature sickens but to speak a truth: Am I or that or this for what he'li utter, That will speak anything?

She hath that ring of yours King. Ber. I think she has: certain it is I lik'd her,

And boarded her i' the wanton way of youth: She knew her distance, and did angle for me, Madding my eagerness with her restraint, As all impediments in fancy's course Are motives of more fancy; and, in fine, Her infinite coming with her modern grace, Subdued me to her rate: she got the ring; And I had that which any inferior might At market-price have bought.

Dia.I must be patient: You that have turn'd off a first so noble wife May justly diet me. I pray you yet,— Since you lack virtue, I will lose a husband, Send for your ring, I will return it home,

And give me mine again.

I have it not.

King. What ring was yours, I pray you?

Dia. Sir, much like

The same upon your finger.

King. Know you this ring? this ring was his of late.

Dic. Andthis was it I gave him, being a-bed King. The story, then, goes false you threw it him

Dia. I have spoke the truth. Ber. Mylord, I do confess the ring was hers. King. You boggle shrewdly; every feather starts you.-

Re-enter Attendant, with PAROLLES.

Is this the man you speak of?

Ay, my lord. Dia. King. Tell me sirrah, but tell me true, I charge you, Not fearing the displeasure of your master, Which, on your just proceeding, I'll keep off,-By him and by this woman here what know

you?

Par. So please your majesty, my master hath been an honourable gentleman; tricks he hath had in him, which gentlemen have. King. Come, come, to the purpose: did he love this woman?

Par. Faith, sir, he did love her; but how?

King. How, I pray you? Par. He did love her, sir, as a gentleman loves a woman.

King. How is that?
Par. He loved her, sir, and loved her not. King. As thou art a knave and no knave.-

What an equivocal companion is this! Per. I am a poor man, and at your majesty's command Lof. He's a good drum, my lord, but a naughty orator. Dic. Do you know he promised me marriage? Par. Faith, I know more than I'll speak.

King. But wilt thou not speak all thon know'st?

Par. Yes, so please your majesty; I did go between them, as I said; but more than that, he loved her,-for, indeed, he was mad for her, and talked of Satan, and of limbo, and of furies, and I know not what: yet I was in that credit with them at that time that I knew of their going to bed; and of other motions, as promising her marriage, and things which would derive me ill-will to speak of; therefore I will not speak what I know.

King. Thon hast spoken all already, unless thon canst say they are married; but thou art too fine in thy evidence; therefore stand aside.

This ring, you say, was yours? Ay, my good lord. Dia.King. Where did you buy it? or who gave lit. it you? Dia. It was not given me, nor I did not buy King. Who lent it you?

Dia. It was not lent me neither.

King. Where did you find it then? Dia. I found it not.

King. If it were yours by none of all these ways,

How could you give it him?

Take you [to Hor.] the lute, and you [to Luc.] | the set of books; You shall go see your pupils presently.

Holla, within!

Enter a Servent.

Sirrah, lead these gentlemen To my daughters; and tell them both, These are their tutors; bid them use them well. [Exit Serv., with Hon., Luc., and Bion. We will go walk a little in the orchard, And then to dinner. You are passing welcome, And so I pray you all to think yourselves.

Pet. Signior Baptista, my business asketh haste,

And every day I cannot come to woo. You knew my father well; and in him, me, Left solely heir to all his lands and goods, Which I have better'd rather than decreas'd: Then tell me,-if I get your daughter's love, What dowry shall I have with her to wife?

Bap. After my death, the one half of my lands

And, in possession, twenty thousand crowns. Pet. And for that dowry, I'll assure her of Her widowhood, -be it that she survive me, -In all my lands and leases whatsoever: Let specialties be therefore drawn between us, That covenants may be kept on either hand.

Bap. Ay, when the special thing is well obtain'd.

That is, her love; for that is all in all. Pet. Why, that is nothing; for I tell you, father,

I am as peremptory as she proud-minded; And where two raging fires meet together, They do consume the thing that feeds their fury:

Though little fire grows great with little wind, Yet extreme gusts will blow out the fire and all: So I to her, and so she yields to me; For I am rough, and woo not like a babe.

Bap. Well mayst thou woo, and happy be thy speed!

But be thou arm'd for some unhappy words. Pet. Ay, to the proof; as mountains are for winds.

That shake not though they blow perpetually. Re-enter HORTERSIO, with his head broken. Bap. How now, my friend! why dost thou look so pale?

Hor. For fear, I promise you, if I look pale. Bap. What, will my daughter prove a good musician?

Hor. I think she'll sooner prove a soldier: Iron may hold with her, but never lutes. Bap. Why, then thou canst not break her to the lute? Hor. Why, no; for she hath broke the lute to me.

I did but tell her she mistook her frets. And bow'd her hand to teach her fingering, When, with a most impatient devilish spirit, Frets, call you these? quoth she; I'll fume with them: And, with that word, she struck me on the head, And through the instrument my pate made way; And there I stood amazed for awhile, As on a pillory, looking through the lute, While she did call me rascal fiddler

And twangling Jack, with twenty such vile terms.

As she had studied to misuse me so.

Pet. Now, by the world, it is a lusty wench; I love her ten times more than e'er I did: O, how I long to have some chat with her!

Bab. Well, go with me, and be not so discomfited:

Proceed in practice with my younger daughter: She's apt to learn, and thankful for good turns.

Signior Petruchio, will you go with us, Or shall I send my daughter Kate to you? Pet. I pray you do; I will attend her here, (Exeunt BAP., GRE., TRA., and HOR. And woo her with some spirit when she comes. Say that she rail; why, then I'll tell her plain She sings as sweetly as a nightingale: Say that she frown; I'll say she looks as clear As morning roses newly washed with dew: Say she be mute, and will not speak a word; Then I'll commend her volubility, And say she uttereth piercing eloquence: If she do bid me pack, I'll give her thanks, As though she bid me stay by her a week: If she deny to wed, I'll crave the day When I shall ask the banns, and when be married .-

But here she comes; and now, Petruchio, speak.

Enter KATHARINA.

Good-morrow, Kate; for that's your name, I hear.

Kath. Well have you heard, but something hard of hearing:

They call me Katharine that do talk of me. Pet. You lie, in faith; for you are call'd plain Kate,

And bonny Kate, and sometimes Kate the curst But, Kate, the prettiest Kate in Christendom, Kate of Kate-Hall, my super-dainty Kate, For dainties are all cates; and therefore, Kate, Take this of me, Kate of my consolation;-Hearing thy mildness prais'd in every town, Thy virtues spoke of, and thy beauty sounded,-Yet not so deeply as to thee belongs,— Myself am mov'd to woo thee for my wife.

Kath. Mov'd! in good time: let him that mov'd you hither

Remove you hence: I knew you at the first

You were a movable. Why, what's a movable? Pet. Kath. A joint-stool.

Thou hast hit it: come, sit on me. Pet. Kath. Asses are made to bear, and so are

Pet. Women are made to bear, and so are Kath. No such jade as bear you, if me you

Pet. Alas, good Kate, I will not burden thee! For, knowing thee to be but young and light,-Kath. Too light for such a swain as you to catch:

And yet as heavy as my weight should be. Pet. Should be! should buzz.

Well ta'en, and like a buzzard. Kath. Pet. O, slow-wing'd turtle! shall a buzzard take thee?

Kath. Ay, for a turtle,—as he takes a buz-

Bap. I know not what to say: but give me your hands;

God send you joy, Petruchiol 'tis a match.

Gre. Tra. Amen, say we; we will be witnesses.

Pet. Father, and wife, and gentlemen, adieu; I will to Venice; Sunday comes apace:—
We will have rings, and things, and fine array; And, kiss me, Kate, we will be married o' Sunday.

(Exeunt Per. and Kath., severally.

Gre. Was ever match clapp'd up so suddenly?

Bap. Faith, gentlemen, now I play a merchant's next chant's part,

And venture madly on a desperate mart.

Tra. 'Twas a commodity lay fretting by you;

'Twill bring you gain, or perish on the seas.

Bap. The gain I seek is quiet in the match.

Gre. No doubt but he hath got a quiet catch.

But now, Baptista, to your younger daughter;—

Now is the day we long have looked for;

I am your neighbor, and was suitor first.

Tra. And I am one that loves Bianca more Than words can witness or your thoughts can guess. [as I

Bap. Content you, gentlemen; I'll compound 'Tis deeds must win the prize; and he, of both, That can assure my daugnter greatest dower Shall have Bianca's love.—

Say, Signior Gremio, what can you assure her?

Gre. First, as you know, my house within the city

Is richly furnished with plate and gold;
Basins and ewers, to lave her dainty hands;
My hangings all of Tyrian tapestry:
In ivory coffers I have stuff'd my crowns;
In cypress chests my arras counterpoints,
Costly apparel, tents, and canopies,
Fine linen, Turkey cushions boss'd with pearl,
Valance of Venice gold in needle-work,
Pewter and brass, and all things that belong
To house or housekeeping: then, at my farm,
I have a hundred milch-kine to the pail,
Six score fat oxen standing in my stalls,
And all things answerable to this portion.
Myself am struck in years, I must confess;
And, if I die to-morrow this is hers:
If, whilst I live, she will be only mine.

Tra. That only came well in.—Sir, list to I am my father's heir and only son:

If I may have your daughter to my wife,
I'll leave her houses three or four as good,
Within rich Pisa's walls, as any one
Old Signior Gremio has in Padua;
Besides two thousand ducats by the year
Of fruitful land, all which shall be her join-what, have I pinch'd you, Signior Gremio?

Gre. Two thousand ducats by the year of land!

My land amounts not to so much in all: That she shall have; besides an argosy, That now is lying in Marseilles' road:— What, have I chok'd you with an argosy? Tra. Gremio, 'tis known my father hath no less Than three great argosies; besides two galliasses,

And twelve tight galleys: these I will assure her,

And twice as much, whate'er thou offer'st next.

Gre. Nay, I have offer'd all,—I have no more:

And she can have no more than all I have:—
If you like me, she shall have me and mine.
Tra. Why, then the maid is mine from all the world,

By your firm promise: Gremio is out-vied.

Bap. I must confess your offer is the best;

And, let your father make her the assurance, She is your own; else, you must pardon me:

If you should die before him, where's her dower?

Tra. That's but a cavil; he is old, I young.

Gre. And may not young men die as well.

as old?

Bap. Well, gentlemen, I am thus resolv'd:—On Sunday next you know My daughter Katharine is to be married: Now, on the Sunday following shall Bianca Be bride to you, if you make this assurance; If not, to Signior Gremio:

And so I take my leave, and thank you both. Gre. Adieu, good neighbour.—

[Exit Baptista.

Now I fear thee not:
Sirrah, young gamester, your father were a fool
To give thee all, and in his waning age
Set foot under thy table. Tutl a toy!
And old Italian fox is not so kind, my boy.

[Exit.

Tra. A vengeance on your crafty wither'd hide!
Yet I have faced it with a card of ten.
'Tis in my head to do my master good:—
I see no reason but suppos'd Lucentio Must get a father, call'd—suppos'd Vincentio; And that's a wonder: fathers commonly Do get their children; but in this case of wooing,

A child shall get a sire, if I fail not of my cunning. [Exil.

Luc. Fiddler, forbear; you grow too forward, sir: Have you so soon forgot the entertainment Her sister Katharine welcom'd you withal?

Her sister Kathanne welcom'd you within Hor. But, wrangling pedant, this is The patroness of heavenly harmony: Then give me leave to have prerogative; And when in music we have spent an hour, Your lecture shall have leisure for as much.

Luc. Preposterous ass! that never read so far

To know the cause why music was ordain'd! Was it not to refresh the mind of man After his studies or his usual pain? I'll in to counsel them: haply my presence May well abate the over-merry spleen, Which otherwise would grow into extremes. [Exeunt.

SLY is discovered in a rich nightgown, with Attendants; some with apparel, others with basin, ewer, and other appurtenances. Enter Lord, dressed like a Servant.

Sly. For God's sake, n pot of small ale. 1 Serv. Will't please your lordship drink a cup of sack? [these conserves? 2 Serv. Will't please your honour teste of 3 Serv. What raiment will your honour wear to-day?

Sly. I am Christophero Sly; call not me honour nor lordship: I ne'er drank sack in my life; and if you give me any conserves, give me conserves of heef; ne'er ask me what raiment I'll wear; for I have no more doublets than backs, no more stockings than legs, nor no more shoes than feet, -nay, sometime more feet than shoes, or such shoes as my toes look through the overleather. [honour!

Lord. Heaven cease this idle humour in your O, that n mighty man, of such descent, Of such possessions, and so high esteem, Should be infused with so foul a spirit!

Sly. What, would you make me mad? not I Christopher Sly, old Sly's son of Burton-heath; by birth a pedler, by education a cardmaker, by transmutation a bear-herd, and now by present profession a tinker? Ask Marian Hacket, the fat ale-wife of Wincot, if she know me not: if she say I am not fourteen-pence on the score for sheer ale, score me up for the What! I am lyingest knave in Christendom. not bestraught: here's-[mourn] x Scrv. O, this it is that makes your lady 2 Serv. O, this it is that makes your servants (your house, droop!

Lord. Hence comes it that your kindred shuns As heaten hence by your strange lunacy. O noble lord, hethink thee of thy hirth! Call home thy ancient thoughts from banishment,

And hanish hence these abject lowly dreams. Look how thy servants do attend on thee, Each in his office ready at thy beck. Wilt thou have music? hark! Apollo plays

And twenty caged nightingales do sing: Or wilt thou sleep? we'll have thee to a couch Softer and sweeter than the lustful bed On purpose trimm'd up for Semiramis. Say thou wilt walk; we will bestrew the ground: Or wilt thou ride? thy horses shall he trapp'd, Their harness studded all with gold and pearl. Dost thou love hawking? thou hast hawks will

Above the morning lark: or wilt thon hunt? Thy hounds shall make the welkin answer them,

And fetch shrill echoes from the hollow earth. I Serv. Say thon wilt course; thy greyhounds are as swift

As breathed stags; sy, fleeter than the roe.

2 Serv. Dost thou love pictures: we will fetch thee straight Adonis painted by a running brook, And Cytherea all in sedges hid, breath, Which seem to move and wanton with her Even as the waving sedges play with wind.

Lord. We'll show thee Io as she was n maid, And how she was heguiled and surpris'd,

As lively painted as the deed was done. 3 Serv. Or Daphne roaming through a thorny wood,

Scratching her legs, that one shall swear she bleeds; And at that sight shall sad Apollo weep,

So workmanly the blood and tears are drawn. Lord. Thou art a lord, and nothing hut a lord:

Thou hast a lady far more beautiful Than any woman in this waning age. [for thee, r Serv. And, till the tears that she bath shed Like envious floods, o'er-run her lovely face, She was the fairest creature in the world;

And yet she is inferior to none. Sly. Am I a lord? and have I such a lady? Or do I dream? or have I dream'd till now? I do not sleep: I see, I hear, I speak; I smelt sweet savours, and I feel soft things:-

Upon my life, I am a lord indeed; And not a tinker, nor Christophero Sly. Well, bring our lady hither to our sight;

And once again, a pot o' the smallest ale.

2 Serv. Will't please your mightiness to wash your hands?

[Servants present a ewer, basin, and napkin." O, how we joy to see your wit restor'd! O, that once more you knew hut what you are! These fifteen years you have been in n dream; Or, when you wak'd, so wak'd as if you slept. Sly. These fifteen years! by my fay, a goodly nap. But did I never speak of all that time? r Serv. O yes, my lord; but very idle words: For though you lay bere in this goodly chamber, Yet would you say, ye were heaten out of door;

And rail upon the hostess of the house; And say, you would present her at the leet, Because she brought stone jugs and no seal'd quarts: Sometimes you would call out for Cicely Hacket. Sly. Ay, the woman's maid of the house.

3 Serv. Why, sir, you know no house, nor no such maid;

Nor no such men as you have reckon'd np,-As Stephen Sly, and old John Naps of Greece, And Peter Turf, and Henry Pimpernell; And twenty more such names and men as these. Which never were, nor no man ever saw.

Sly. Now, Lord be thanked for my good amends.

All. Amen.

Sly. I thank thee: thou shalt not lose by it. Enter the Page as a lady, with Attendants. Page. How fares my noble lord? lenough. Sly. Marry, I fare well; for here is cheer Where is my wife?

Page. Here, noble lord: what is thy will with her? Sly. Are you my wife, and will not call me hushand? man.

My men should call me lord: I am your good-

Kath. Would Katharine had never seen him though!

[Exit, weeping, followed by BIANCA and others. Bap. Go, girl; I cannot blame thee now to

For such an injury would vex a very saint, Much more a shrew of thy impatient humour.

Enter BIONDELLO.

Bion. Master, master! old news, and such news as you never heard of!

Bap. Is it new and old too? how may that Bion. Why, is it not news to hear of Petruchio's coming?

Bap. Is he come? Bion. Why, no, sir. Bap. What then?

Bion. He is coming.

Bap. When will he be here?

Bion. When he stands where I am. and sees you there.

Tra. But, say, what to thine old news?

Bion. Why, Petruchio is coming, in a new hat and an old jerkin; a pair of old breeches thrice turn'd; a pair of boots that have been candle-cases, one buckled, another laced; an old rusty sword ta'en out of the town armoury, with a broken hilt, and chapeless; with two broken points: his horse hipped with an old mothy saddle, and stirrups of no kindred; besides, possessed with the glanders, and like to mose in the chine; troubled with the lampass, infected with the fashions, full of wind-galls, sped with spavins, rayed with the yellows, past cure of the fives, stark spoiled with the staggers, begnawn with the bots, swayed in the back, and shoulder-shotten; ne'er legged before, and with a half-checked bit, and a head-stall of sheep's leather, which, being restrained to keep him from stumbling, hath been often burst, and now repaired with knots; one girth six times pieced, and a woman's crupper of velure, which hath two letters for her name, fairly set down in studs, and here and there pieced with packthread.

Bap. Who comes with him?

Bion. O, sir, his lackey, for all the world caparisoned like the horse; with a linea stock on one leg and a kersey boot-hose on the other gartered with a red and blue list; an old hat, and The humour of forty fancies pricked in 't for a feather: a monster, a very monster in apparel; and not like a Christian footboy or a [this fashion: gentleman's lackey. Tra. 'Tis some odd humour pricks him to

Yet oftentimes he goes but mean apparell'd.

Bap. I am glad he is come, howsoe'er he comes. Bion. Why, sir, he comes not.

Bap. Didst thou not say he comes? Bion. Who? that Petruchio came?

Bap. Ay, that Petruchio came. Bion. No, sir; I say his horse comes with him on his back.

Bap. Why, that's all one. Bion. Nay, by saint Jamy, I hold you a penny, A horse and a man Is more than one, And yet not many.

Enter PETRUCHIO and GRUMIO.

Pet. Come, where be these gallants? who's at home?

Bap. You are welcome, sir.

Pet. And yet I come not well. Bap. And yet you halt not.

Tra. Not so well apparell'd As I wish you were.

Pet. Were it better, I should rush in thus. But where is Kate? where is my lovely bride? How does my father?—Gentles, methinks you frown:

And wherefore gaze this goodly company As if they saw some wondrous monument,

Some comet or unusual prodigy?. Bap. Why, sir, you know this is your wedding-day:

First were we sad, fearing you would not come: Now sadder, that you come so unprovided. Fie, doff this habit, shame to your estate, An eye-sore to our solemn festival!

Tra. And tell us, what occasion of import Hath all so long detain'd you from your wife,

And sent you hither so unlike yourself? Pet. Tedious it were to tell, and harsh to hear:

Sufficeth, I am come to keep my word, Though in some part enforced to digress: Which, at more leisure, I will so excuse As you shall well be satisfied withal. But where is Kate? I stay too long from her:

The morning wears, 'tis time we were at church. Tra. See not your bride in these unreverent robes: Go to my chamber, put on clothes of mine. Pet. Not I, believe me: thus I'll visit her. Bap. But thus, I trust, you will not marry her. Pet. Good sooth, even thus; therefore ha' done with words; To me she's married, not unto my clothes Could I repair what she will wear in me, As I can change these poor accoutrements, 'Twere well for Kate, and better for myself. But what a fool am I to chat with you, When I should bid good-morrow to my bride, And seal the title with a lovely kiss!

Exeunt PETRUCHIO and GRUMIO Tra. He hath some meaning in his mad attire. We will persuade him, be it possible, To put on better ere he go to church.

Bap. I'll after him, and see the event of this. [Exeunt Bap., Grem., and Bion.

Tra. But, sir, to her love concerneth us to

Her father's liking: which to bring to pass, As I before imparted to your worship, I am to get a man,—whate'er he be, It skills not much; we'll fit him to our turn,-And he shall be Vincentio of Pisa; And make assurance, here in Padua, Of greater sums than I have promised. So shall you quietly enjoy your hope, And marry sweet Bianca with consent.

Luc. Were it not that my fellow-schoolmaster Doth watch Bianca's steps so narrowly, 'Twere good, methinks, to steal our marriage; Which once perform'd, let all the world say no, I'll keep mine own, despite of all the world.

Bop. Gentlemen, that I may soon make good What I have said, -Bianca, get you in: And let it not displease thee, good Bianca; For I will love thee ne'er the less, my girl.

Koth. A pretty peatl it is best

Put a finger in the eye,-an she knew why. Bian. Sister, content you in my discontent. Sir, to your pleasure humbly I subscribe: My books and instruments shall be my company,

On them to look, and practise by myself.

Luc. Hark. Tranio! thou mayst hear Luc. Hark, Minerva speak. Aside. Hor. Signior Baptista, will you be so strange?

Sorry am I that our good-will effects

Bianca's grief. Gre. Why will you mew her up. Signior Baptista, for this fiend of hell,

And make her bear the penance of her tongue? Bap. Gentlemen, content ye; I am resolv'd:-Exit BIANCA. Go in, Bianca:-And for I know she taketh most delight

In music, instruments, and poetry, Schoolmasters will I keep within my house, Fit to instruct her youth.—If you, Hortensio,-Or, Signior Gremio, you,—know any such, Prefer them hither; for to cunning men I will be very kind, and liberal

To mine own children in good bringing-np: And so, farewell. Katharina, you may stay;

For I have more to commune with Bianca. [Exit. Kath. Why, and I trust I may go too, may I not? [belike, What! shall I be appointed hours; as though,

I knew not what to take and what to leave? Hal Gre. You may go to the devil's dam; your gifts are so good here is none will hold you. Their love is not so great, Hortensio, but we may blow our nails together, and fast it fairly out; our cake's dough on both sides. Farewell;—yet, for the love I bear my sweet Bianca, if I can by any means light on a fit man to teach her that wherein she delights, I will wish him to her father.

Hor. So will I, Signior Gremio; but a ord, I pray. Though the nature of our word, quarrel yet never brooked parle, know now, upon advice, it toucheth us both—that we may yet again have access to our fair mistress, and be happy rivals in Bianca's love -to labour and effect one thing specially.

Gre. What's that, I pray? sister. Hor. Marry, sir, to get a husband for her Gre. A husbandl a devil.

Hor. I say, a husband.
Gre. I say, a devil. Thinkest thou, Hortensio, though her father be very rich, any man is so very a fool to be married to hell?

Hor. Tush, Gremio, though it pass your patience and mine to endure her loud alarums. why, man, there be good fellows in the world, an a man could light on them, would take her with all faults and money enough.

Gre. I cannot tell; but I had as lief take her dowry with this condition,—to be whipped at the high-cross every morning.

Hor. Faith, as you say, there's small choice in rotten apples. But, come; since this bar in law makes us friends, it shall be so far forth friendly maintained, till, by helping Baptista's eldest daughter to a hasband, we set his youngest free for a hasband, and then have to't afresh.—Sweet Bianca!—Happy man be his dole! He that runs fastest gets the ring. How say you, Signior Gremio? Gre. I am agreed: and would I had given him the best horse in Padua to begin his wooing, that would thoroughly woo her, wed her, and bed her, and rid the house of her. Come Exeunt GRE. and HOR.

Tro. [Advoncing.] I pray, sir, tell me,-is it possible

That love should of a sudden take such hold?
Luc. O Tranio, till I found it to be true, I never thought it possible or likely; But seel while idly I stood looking on I found the effect of love in idleness: And now in plainness do confess to thee,-That art to me as secret and as dear As Anna to the Queen of Carthage was, Tranio, I burn, I pine, I perish, Tranio, If I achieve not this young modest girl: Counsel me, Tranio, for I know thou canst; Assist me, Tranio, for I know thon wilt.

Tra. Master, it is no time to chide you now; Affection is not rated from the heart; If love have touch'd you, nought remains but Redime te coptum quam queos minimo.

Luc. Gramercies, lad; go forward; this contents:

The rest will comfort, for thy counsel's sound. Tra. Master, you look'd so longly on the maid,

Perhaps you mark'd not what's the pith of all. Luc. O yes, I saw sweet beauty in her face. such as the daughter of Agenor had, hand, That made great Jove to humble him to her When with his knees he kiss'd the Cretan strand.

Tro. Saw you no more? mark'd you not how her sister

Began to scold, and raise up such a storm, That mortal ears might hardly endure the din? Luc. Tranio, I saw her coral lips to move,

And with her breath she did perfume the air; Sacred and sweet was all I saw in her.

Tra. Nay, then, 'tis time to stir him from his trance. If you love the maid, I pray, awake, sir.

Bend thoughts and wits to achieve her. Thus it stands:

Her eldest sister is so curst and shrewd That, till the father rid his hands of her, Master, your love must live a maid at home; And therefore has he closely mew'd her up,

Because she will not be annoy'd with suitors.

Lus. Ah, Tranio, what a cruel father's hel But art thou not advis'd he took some care To get her cunning schoolmasters to instruct [plotted. her? Tra. Ay, marry, am I, sir; and now 'tis Luc. I have it, Tranio.

Tro. Master, for my hand,

Tro. Both our inventions meet and jump in one.

Luc. Tell me thine first. You will be schoolmaster, and undertake the teaching of the maid: That's your device.

Luc. It is: may it be done? Lucentio, you shall supply the bridegroom's place:

And let Bianca take her sister's room. Tra. Shall sweet Bianca practise how to bride Bap. She shall, Lucentio.—Come, gentle-men. let's go. [Exeunt. men, let's go.

ACT IV.

Scene I.-A Hall in Petruchio's Country House.

Enter GRUMIO.

Gru. Fie, fie on all tired jades, on all mad masters, and all foul ways! Was ever man so beaten? was ever man so rayed? was ever man so weary? I am sent before to make a fire, and they are coming after to warm them. Now, were not I a little pot, and soon hot, my very lips might freeze to my teeth, my tongue to the roof of my mouth, my heart in my belly, ere I should come by a fire to thaw me:-but I, with blowing the fire, shall warm myself; for, considering the weather, a taller man than I will take cold .- Holla, ho! Curtisl

Enter CURTIS.

Curt. Who is that calls so coldly?

Gru. A piece of ice: if thou doubt it, thou mayst slide from my shoulder to my heel with no greater a run but my head and my neck. A fire, good Curtis.

Curt. Is my master and his wife coming.

Grumio.

Gru. O, ay, Curtis, ay: and therefore fire, fire; cast on no water.

Curt. Is she so hot a shrew as she's reported?

Gru. She was, good Curtis, before this frost; but, thou knowest, winter tames man, woman, and beast; for it hath tamed my old master. and my new mistress, and myself, fellow Curtis.

Curt. Away, you three-inch fool! I am no beast. Gru. Am I but three inches? why, thy horn is a foot; and so long am I, at the least. But wilt thou make a fire, or shall I complain on thee to our mistress, whose hand, -she being now at hand,-thou shalt soon feel, to thy cold comfort, for being slow in thy hot office?

Curt. I pr'ythee, good Grumio, tell me, how goes the world?

Gru. A cold world, Curtis, in every office but thine; and, therefore, fire: do thy duty, and have thy duty; for my master and mistress are almost frozen to death.

Curt. There's fire ready; and, therefore, good Grumio, the news?

Gru. Why, Jack boy! ho, boy! and as much news as thou wilt.

Curt. Come, you are so full of coney-catch-Gru. Why, therefore, fire; for I have caught extreme cold. Where's the cook? is supper ready, the house trimmed, rushes strewed, cobwebs swept; the serving-men in their new fustian, their white stockings, and every officer his wedding-garment on? Be the jacks fair within, the jills fair without, the carpets laid, and everything in order? [news?

Curt. All ready; and, therefore, I pray thee, I hear my master.

Gru. First, know, my horse is tired; my master and mistress fallen out.

Curt. How?

Gru. Out of their saddles into the dirt; and thereby hangs a tale.

Gurt. Let's ha't, good Grumio.

Gru. Lend thine ear.

Curt. Here.

Gru. There.

Curt. This is to feel a tale, not to hear a tale. Striking him.

Gru. And therefore 'tis called a sensible tale: and this cuff was but to knock at your ear, and beseech listening. Now I begin: Imprimis, we came down a foul hill, my master riding behind my mistress:-

Curt. Both of one horse? Gru. What's that to thee?

Curt. Why, a horse.
Gru. Tell thou the tale:—but hadst thou not crossed me, thou shouldst have heard now her horse fell, and she under her horse; thou shouldst have heard, in how miry a place; how she was bemoiled; how he left her with the. horse upon her; how he beat me because her horse stumbled; how she waded through the dirt to pluck him off me; how he swore; how she prayed—that never pray'd before; how I cried; how the horses ran away; how her bridle was burst; how I lost my crupper; with many things of worthy memory; which now shall die in oblivion, and thou return unexperienced to thy grave. Curt. By this reckoning, he is more shrew than she.

Gru. Ay; and that thou and the proudest of you all shall find when he comes home. But what talk I of this?—Call forth Nathaniel, Joseph, Nicholas, Philip, Walter, Sugarsop, and the rest: let their heads be sleekly combed, their blue coats brushed, and their garters of an indifferent knit: let them curtsy with their left legs; and not presume to touch a hair of my master's horse-tail till they kiss their hands. Are they all ready?

Curt. They are.

Gru. Call them forth.

Curt. Do you hear, ho? you must meet my master, to countenance my mistress.

Gru. Why, she hath a face of her own. Curt. Who knows not that? Gru. Thou, it seems, that callest for company to countenance her. Curt. I call them forth to credit her.

Gru. Why, she comes to borrow nothing of them.

Enter several Servants.

Nath. Welcome home, Grumio! Phil. How now, Grumio! Jos. What, Grumio!

Nich. Fellow Grumio!

Nath. How now, old lad? Gru. Welcome, you; --how now, you; what you;-fellow, you;-and thus much for greeting. Now, my spruce companions, is all ready, and all things neat?

Nath. All things is ready. How near is our

Gru. E'en at hand, alighted by this; -and therefore be not,-Cock's passion, silencel-

To seek their fortunes further than at home, Where small experience grows. But, in a few Signior Hortensio, thus it stands with me:-But, in a few, Antonio, my father, is deceas'd; And I have thrust myself into this maze, Haply to wive and thrive as hest I may: Crowns in my purse I have, and goods at home, And so am come ahroad to see the world.

Hor. Petruchio, shall I then come roundly to thee,

And wish thee to a shrewd ill-favour'd wife? Thou'dst thank me hut a little for my connsel And yet I'll promise thee she shall be rich, And very rich:-hut thou'rt too much my friend,

And I'll not wish thee to her.

Pet. Signior Hortensio, 'twixt such friends as Few words suffice; and, therefore, if thou know One rich enough to he Petruchio's wife,-As wealth is hurden of my wooing dance, Be she as foul as was Florentius' love, As old as Sibyl, and as curst and shrewd As Socrates' Xantippe, or a worse, She moves me not, or not removes, at least, Affection's edge in me-were she as rough As are the swelling Adriatic seas: I come to wive it wealthily in Padua; If wealthily, then happily in Padua.

Gru. Nay, look you, sir, he tells you flatly what his mind is: why, give him gold enough and marry him to a puppet or an aglet-baby; or an old trot with ne'er a tooth in her head, though she have as many diseases as two and fifty horses: why, nothing comes amiss, so money comes withal. [far in,

Hor. Petruchio, since we have stepp'd thus I will continue that I broach'd in jest. I can, Petruchio, belp thee to a wife With wealth enough, and young and beauteous;

Brought up as hest hecomes a gentlewoman; Her only fault,—and that is faults enough,-Is—that she is intolerably curst,

And shrewd, and forward; so beyond all measure,

That, were my state far worser than it is, I would not wed her for a mine of gold.

Pet. Hortensio; peace! thou know'st not gold's effect:-

Tell me her father's name, and 'tis enough; For I will hoard her though she chide as loud As thunder, when the clouds in autumn crack. Hor. Her father is Baptista Minola,

An affable and courteous gentleman: Her name is Katharina Minola, Renown'd in Padua for her scolding tongue. Pet. I know her father, though I know not

And he knew my deceased father well: I will not sleep, Hortensio, till I see her; And therefore let me be thus hold with you, To give you over at this first encounter,

Unless you will accompany me thither.

Gru. I pray you, sir, let him go while the humour lasts. O' my word, an she knew him as well as I do, she would think scolding would do little good upon him. She may, perhaps, call him half a score knaves, or so: why, that's nothing; an he hegin once, he'll rail in his rope-I'll tell you what, sir, -an she stand face, and so disfigure her with it that she shall have no more eyes to see withal than a cat. You know him not, sir.

Hor. Tarry, Petruchio, I must go with thee; For in Baptista's keep my treasure is: He hath the jewel of my life in hold, His youngest daughter, beautiful Bianca; And her withholds from me, and other more, Suitors to her and rivals in my love:

Supposing it a thing impossible,—
For those defects I have before rehears'd,—
That ever Katharina will he woo'd, Therefore this order hath Baptista ta'en; That none shall have access unto Bianca

Till Katharine the curst have got a hushand. Gru. Katharine the curstl A title for a maid, of all titles the worst.

Hor. Now shall my friend Petruchio do me grace; And offer me disguis'd in soher rohes To old Baptista as a schoolmaster Well seen in music, to instruct Bianca;

That so I may, hy this device, at least Have leave and leisure to make love to her, And, unsuspected, court her hy herself. Gru. [Aside.] Here's no knavery! heguile the old folks, how the young folks lay their heads together!

Master, master, look about you: who goes there, ha? Hor. Peace, Grumiol'tis the rival of my love. Petruchio, stand by awhile.

Gru. A proper stripling, and an amorous! They retire.

Gre. O, very well: I have perused the note. Hark you, sir; I'll have them very fairly bound:

All books of love, see that at any hand: And see you read no other lectures to her: You understand me:-over and besides Signior Baptista's liberality, I'll mend it with a largess:—take your papers too, And let me have them very well perfum'd; For she is sweeter than perfume itself, [her? To whom they go to. What will you read to

Luc. Whate'er I read to her I'll plead for yon

As for my patron,—stand you so assur'd,-As firmly as yourself were still in place: Yea, and perhaps with more successful words Than you, unless you were a scholar, sir.

Gre. O this learning! what a thing it isl. Gru. O this woodcock! what an ass it isl. Pet. Peace, sirrahl Hor. Grumio, muml-[Coming forward.] God save you, Signior Gremiol Gre. And you're well met, Signior Hortensio.

Trow you whither I am going?-To Baptista Minola.

I promis'd to inquire carefully About a schoolmaster for the fair Bianca: And, by good fortune, I have lighted well On this young man, for learning and hehaviour Fit for her turn; well read in poetry him but a little, he will throw a figure in her And other books, good ones, I warrant you.

Enter BIANCA and LUCENTIO.

Luc. Now, mistress, profit you in what you

Bian. What, master, read you? first resolve me that. Luc. I read that I profess, the Art to Love. Bian. And may you prove, sir, master of

Hor. Quick proceeders, marryl Now, tell me, I pray, You that durst swear that your Mistress Bianca Lov'd none in the world so well as Lucentio. Tra. O despiteful love! unconstant woman-kind!-I tell thee, Licio, this is wonderful.

Hor. Mistake no more: I am not Licio, Nor a musician, as I seem to be; But one that scorn to live in this disguise, For such a one as leaves a gentleman, And makes a god of such a cullion: Know, sir, that I am call'd Hortensio.

Tra. Signior Hortensio, I have often heard Of your entire affection to Bianca: And since mine eyes are witness of her lightness,

I will with you, -if you be so contented,-Forswear Bianca and her love for ever.

Hor. See, how they kiss and court!-Signior Lucentio

Here is my hand, and here I firmly vow Never to woo her more; but do forswear her, As one unworthy all the former favours That I have fondly flatter'd her withal.

Tra. And here I take the like unfeigned oath, Never to marry with her though she would entreat:

Fie on her! see, how beastly she doth court Hor. Would all the world but he had quite forewornl For me, that I may surely keep mine oath, I will be married to a wealthy widow Ere three days pass, which hath as long lov'd

As I have lov'd this proud disdainful haggard: And so farewell, Signior Lucentio. Kindness in women, not their beauteous looks, Shall win my love: and so I take my leave.

In resolution as I swore before.

Exit Hor.-Luc. and Bian. advance. Tra. Mistress Bianca, bless you with such grace As 'longeth to a lover's blessed casel Nay, I have ta'en you napping, gentle love; And have forsworn you with Hortensio.

Bian. Tranio, you jest; but have you both forsworn me?

Tra. Mistress, we have.

Then we are rid of Licio. Luc. Tra. I' faith, he'll have a lusty widow now, That shall be woo'd and wedded in a day.

Bian. God give him joyl Tra. Ay, and he'll tame her.

He says so, Tranio. Bian. Tra. Faith, he is gone unto the taming-school. Bian. The taming-schooll what, is there such [master; a place? Tra. Ay, mistress, and Petruchio is the The patron of my life and liberty.

That teacheth tricks eleven and twenty long, To tame a shrew and charm her chattering tongue.

Enter BIONDELLO.

Bion. O master, master, I have watch'd so long

That I'm dog-weary; but at last I spied An ancient angel coming down the hill, Will serve the turn.

What is he, Biondello? Tra. Bion. Master, a mercatante, or a pedant,

I know not what; but formal in apparel, In gait and countenance surely like a father. Luc. And what of him, Tranio?

Tra. If he be credulous, and trust my tale, I'll make him glad to seem Vincentio, And give assurance to Baptista Minola, As if he were the right Vincentio. Take in your love, and then let me alone.

[Exeunt Lucentio and Bianca.

Enter a Pedant.

Ped. God save you, sirl

And you, sirl you are welcome. Travel you far on, or are you at the furthest? Ped. Sir, at the furthest for a week or two:

But then up further, and as far as Rome And so to Tripoli, if God lend me life. Tra. What countryman, I pray?

Ped. Of Mantua. Tra. Of Mantua, sir?-marry, God forbidl And come to Padua, careless of your life? [hard.

Ped. My life, sirl how, I pray? for that goes Tra. 'Tis death for any one in Mantua To come to Padua. Know you not the cause? Your ships are stay'd at Venice; and the duke,-For private quarrel 'twixt your duke and him,-Hath publish'd and proclaim'd it openly: 'Tis marvel, but that you are but newly come, You might have heard it else proclaim'd about.

Ped. Alas, sir, it is worse for me than sol For I have bills for money by exchange From Florence, and must here deliver them.

Tra. Well, sir, to do you courtesy, This will I do, and this I will advise you: First, tell me, have you ever been at Pisa?

Ped. Ay, sir, in Pisa have I often been: Pisa, renowned for grave citizens.

Tra. Among them know you one Vincentio? Ped. I know him not, but I have heard of him;

A merchant of incomparable wealth. Tra. He is my father, sir; and, sooth to say, In countenance somewhat doth resemble you.

Bion. As much as an apple doth an oyster, Aside. and all one.

Tra. To save your life in this extremity, This favour will I do for you for his sake; And think it not the worst of all your fortunes That you are like to Sir Vincentio. His name and credit shall you undertake,

And in my house you shall be friendly lodg'd:-Look that you take upon you as you should; You understand me, sir:—so shall you stay Till you have done your business in the city:

If this be courtesy, sir, accept of it.

Ped. O, sir, I do; and will repute you ever

ACT II.

Scene L-The same. A Room in Bap-TISTA'S House.

Enter KATHARINA and BIANCA.

Bian. Good sister, wrong me not, nor wrong yourself.

To make a bondmaid and a slave of me That I disdain: but for these other gawds. Unhind my hands, I'll pull them off myself, Yea, all my raiment, to my petticoat; Or what you will command me will I do, So well I know my duty to my elders.

Kath. Of all thy suitors, here I charge thee, tell

Whom thon lov'st hest: see thou dissemble not. Bion. Believe me, sister, of all the men alive, I never yet heheld that special face

Which I could fancy more than any other.

Kath. Minion, thon liest; is't not Hortensio?

Bian. If you affect him, sister, here I swear I'll plead for you myself, but you shall have him.

Koth. O then, helike, you fancy riches more; You will have Gremio to keep you fair. Bian. Is it for him you do envy me so? Nay, then you jest; and now I well perceive You have hut jested with me all this while: I prythee, sister Kate, untie my hands. Koth. If that he jest, then all the rest was so.

(Strikes her.

Enter BAPTISTA.

Bap. Why, how now, dame! whence grows this insolence?— Bianca, stand aside; -- poor girl! she weeps:-Go ply thy needle; meddle not with her. For shame, thou hilding of a devilish spirit, Why dost thou wrong her that did ne'er wrong thee?

When did she cross thee with a bitter word? Roth. Her silence flouts me, and I'll be reveng'd. [Flies ofter Bianca.

Bop. What, in my sight?—Bianca, get thee in. [Exit BIANCA. Koth. What, will you not suffer me? Nay, now I see She is your treasure, she must have a husband; I must dance bare-foot on her wedding-day, And for your love to her lead apes in hell.

Talk not to me; I will go sit and weep, Till I can find occasion of revenge. Exit KATHARINA. Bap. Was ever gentleman thus griev'd as I?

But who comes here?

Enter GREMIO, with LUCENTIO in the hobit of a meon mon; PETRUCHIO, with HOR-TENSIO as a musicion; and TRANIO, with BIONDELLO bearing o lute and books.

Gre. Good-morrow, neighbour Baptista. Bop. Good-morrow, neighbour Gremio: God save you, gentlement [a danghter

Pet. And yon, good sir! Pray, have you not Call'd Katharina, fair and virtuons?

Bop. I have a daughter, sir, call'd Katharina.

Gre. You are too blunt: go to it orderly.

Pet. You wrong me, Signior Gremio: give me leave.--

I am a gentleman of Verona, sir. That,-hearing of her heauty and her wit, Her affability and hashful modesty, Her wondrons qualities and mild hehaviour,-An bold to show myself a forward guest Within your honse, to make mine eyes the witness

Of that report which I so oft have heard. And, for an entrance to my entertainment, I do present you with a man of mine, Presenting HORTERSIO. Cunning in music and the mathematics, To instruct her fully in those sciences, Whereof I know she is not ignorant: Accept of him, or else you do me wrong: His name is Licio, horn in Mantua.

Bop. You're welcome, sir; and he for your good sake:

But for my daughter Katharine, -this I know, She is not for your turn, the more my grief. Pet. I see you do not mean to part with her;

Or else you like not of my company.

Bap. Mistake me not, I speak hnt as I find. Whence are you, sir? what may I call your name? Pet. Petruchio is my name; Antonio's son, A man well known throughout all Italy. Bap. I know him well: you are welcome for his sake. Gre. Saving your tale, Petruchio, I pray, Let us, that are poor petitioners, speak too:

Baccare! you are marvellous forward. Pet. O, pardon me, Signior Gremio; I would fain he doing.

Gre. I doubt it not, sir: hut you will curse your wooing.

Neighbour, this is a gift very grateful, I am sure of it. To express the like kindness myself that have been more kindly beholding to you than any, I freely give unto you this young scholar [presenting LUCENTIO], that hath been long studying at Rheims; as cunning in Greek, Latin, and other languages, as the other in music and mathematics: his name is Cambio; pray, accept his service.

Bop. A thousand thanks, Signior Gremio: welcome, good Camhio.—But, gentle sir [fo Tranio], methinks you walk like a stranger. May I be so bold to know the cause of your coming? own: Tro. Pardon me, sir, the boldness is mine That, heing a stranger in this city here, Do make myself a suitor to your daughter,

Unto Bianca, fair and virtuous. Nor is your firm resolve unknown to me, In the preferment of the eldest sister. This liberty is all that I request,—
That, upon knowledge of my parentage,
I may have welcome 'mongst the rest that woo,

And free access and favour as the rest. And, toward the education of your daughters, I here bestow a simple instrument,

And this small packet of Greek and Latin hooks:

If you accept them, then their worth is great. Bob. Lucentio is your name? of whence, I pray?

Tro. Of Pisa, sir; son to Vincentio. Bop. A mighty man of Pisa: by report I know him well: you are very welcome, sir. Pet. Marry, and did; but if you be remember'd,

I did not bid you mar it to the time. Go, hop me over every kennel home,

For you shall hop without my custom, sir: I'll none of it: hence! make your best of it.

Kath. I never saw a better-fashion'd gown, More quaint, more pleasing, nor more commendable:

Belike you mean to make a puppet of me.

Pet. Why, true; he means to make a puppet of thee. [a puppet of her.

Tai. She says your worship means to make Pet. O monstrous arrogance! Thou liest, thou thread, Thou thimble, Thou yard, three-quarters, half-yard, quarter, Thou flea, thou nit, thou-winter-cricket thoul-Brav'd in mine own house with a skein of thread?

Away, thou rag, thou quantity, thou remnant; Or I shall so be-mete thee with thy yard, As thou shalt think on prating whilst thou liv'st!

I tell thee, I, that thou hast marr'd her gown. Tai. Your worship is deceiv'd; the gown is made

Just as my master had direction:

Grumio gave order how it should be done.

Gru. I gave him no order; I gave him the stuff. made?

Tai. But how did you desire it should be

Gru. Marry, sir, with needle and thread.

Tai. But did you not request to have it cut? Gru. Thou hast faced many things.

Tai. I have.

Gru. Face not me: thou hast braved many men; brave not me; I will neither be faced nor braved. I say unto thee, I bid thy master cut out the gown, but I did not bid him cut it to testify. pieces: ergo, thou liest.

Tai. Why, here is the note of the fashion to said so.

Pet. Read it. Gru. The note lies in his throat, if had Imprimis, a loose-bodied gown: The note lies in his throat, if he say I

Gru. Master, if ever I said loose-bodied gown, sew me in the skirts of it, and beat me to death with a bottom of brown thread: I said a gown.

Pet. Proceed.

Tai. With a small compassed cape:

Gru. I confess the cape. Tai. With a trunk sleeve: Gru. I confess two sleeves.

Tai. The sleeves curiously cut.

Pet. Ay, there's the villany.

Gru. Error i' the bill, sir; error i' the bill. I commanded the sleeves should be cut out, and sewed up again; and that I'll prove upon thee, though thy little finger be armed in a thimble.

Tai. This is true that I say: an I had thee in place where, thou shouldst know it.

Gru. I am for thee straight: take thou the bill, give me thy mete-yard, and spare not me. Hor. God-a-mercy, Grumiol then he shall have no odds.

Pet. Well, sir, in brief, the gown is not for Gru. You are i' the right, sir; 'tis for my mistress.

Pet. Go, take it up unto thy master's use. Gru. Villain, not for thy life! Take up my mistress' gown for thy master's use!

Pet. Why, sir, what's your conceit in that?

Gru. O, sir, the conceit is deeper than you think for:

Take up my mistress' gown to his master's use! O fie, fie, fie!

Pet. Hortensio, say thou wilt see the tailor Go take it hence; be gone, and say no more. Hor. Tailor, I'll pay thee for thy gown tomorrow. Take no unkindness of his hasty words:

Away, I sayl commend me to thy master. [Exeunt Tailor and Haberdasher. Pet. Well, come, my Kate; we will unto your father's Even in these honest mean habiliments: Our purses shall be proud, our garments poor; For 'tis the mind that makes the body rich;

And as the sun breaks through the darkest clouds, So honour peereth in the meanest habit. What, is the jay more precious than the lark Because his feathers are more beautiful?

Or is the adder better than the eel, Because his painted skin contents the eye? O no, good Kate; neither art thou the worse For this poor furniture and mean array. If thou account'st it shame, lay it on me; And therefore frolic: we will hence forthwith. To feast and sport us at thy father's house.-Go, call my men, and let us straight to him;

And bring our horses unto Long-lane end; There will we mount, and thither walk on foot. Let's see; I think 'tis now some seven o'clock, And well we may come there by dinner-time.

Kath. I dare assure you, sir, 'tis almost two; And 'twill be supper-time ere you come there. Pet. It shall be seven ere I go to horse:

Look, what I speak, or do, or think to do, You are still crossing it.—Sirs, let't alone: I will not go to-day; and ere I do, It shall be what o'clock I say it is.

Hor. Why, so, this gallant will command the [Exeunt.

SCENE IV .- PADUA. Before BAPTISTA'S House.

Enter TRANIO, and the Pedant dressed like VINCENTIO:

Tra. Sir, this is the house: please it you that I call?

Ped. Ay, what else? and, but I be deceived, Signior Baptista may remember me, Near twenty years ago, in Genoa, where

We were lodgers at the Pegasus. . Tra. 'Tis well; and hold your own, in any With such austerity as longeth to a father.

Ped. I warrant you. But, sir, here comes your boy;

'Twere good he were school'd.

Enter BIONDELLO.

Tra. Fear you not him.-Sirrah Biondello, Now do your duty throughly, I advise you: Imagine 'twere the right Vincentio.

Kath.

Pet. Come, come, you wasp; i' faith, you are too angry. Kath. If I be waspish, best beware my sting.

Pet. My remedy is then, to pluck it ont. Kath. Ay, if the fool could find it where it [wear his sting? Pet. Who knows not where a wasp doth

In his tail.

Kath. In his tongue.

Whose tongue? Pet. Kath. Yours, if you talk of tails; and so farewell. come again,

What, with my tongue in your tail? nay, Good Kate; I am a gentleman.

That I'll try.

Striking him. Pet. I swear I'll cuff you, if you strike again. Kath. So may you lose your arms: If you strike me, you are no gentleman;

And if no gentleman, why then no arms. Pet. A herald, Kate? O, put me in thy books!

Kath. What is your crest? a coxcomb? . Pet. A combless cock, so Kate will be my hen. Kath. No cock of mine; you crow too like [look so sour. a craven.

Pet. Nay, come, Kate, come; you must not Kath. It is my fashion, when I see a crab. Pet. Why, here's no crab; and therefore look not sour.

Kath. There is, there is. Pet. Then show it me.

Rath. Had A Company face?

Rath. Well aim'd of such a young one.

George, I am too young for you.

Kath. Yet you are wither'd.

Pet. 'Tis with cares. Kath. I care not. Pet. Nay, hear you, Kate: in sooth, you

'scape not so. Kath. I chafe you, if I tarry; let me go. . Pet. No, not a whit: I find you passing gentle. 'Twas told me you were rough, and coy, and sullen,

And now I find report a very liar; Steous; For thou art pleasant, gamesome, passing cour-But slow in speech, yet sweet as spring-time flowers:

Thou canst not frown, thou canst not look askance,

Nor hist the lip, as angry wenches will; Nor hast thou pleasure to be cross in talk; But thou with mildness entertain'st thy wooers, With gentle conference, soft and affable. Why does the world report that Kate doth limp? O slanderous world! Kate, like the hazel-twig, Is straight and slender; and as brown in hue As hazel-nuts, and sweeter than the kernels. O, let me see thee walk: thou dost not halt.

Kath. Go, fool, and whom thou keep'st command.

Pet. Did ever Dian so become a grove As Kate this chamber with her princely gait? O, be thon Dian, and let her be Kate; And then let Kate be chaste, and Dian sportfull I will be sure my Katharine shall be fine.

Kath. Where did you study all this goodly speech? It is extempore, from my mother-wit.

Kath. A witty motherl witless else her son. Pet. Am I not wise?

Kath. Yes; keep you warm. Pet. Marry, so I mean, sweet Katharine, in thy bed:

And therefore, setting all this chat aside, Thus in plain terms:-Your father hath consented fon:

That you shall be my wife; your dowry 'greed And, will you, nill you, I will marry you. Now, Kate, I am a husband for your turn; For, by this light, whereby I see thy beanty, Thy beauty that doth make me like thee well-Thou must be married to no man but me; For I am he am born to tame yon, Kate; And bring you from a wild Kate to a Kate Conformable, as other household Kates. Here comes your father; never make denial; I must and will have Katharine to my wife.

Re-enter Baptista, Gremio, and Tranio.

Bap. Now, Signior Petruchio, how speed you with my daughter?

Pet. How but well, sir? how but well? It were impossible I should speed amiss. Bap. Why, how now, daughter Katharine!

in your dumps? Zon Kath. Call you me daughter? now, I promise You have show'd a tender fatherly regard To wish me wed to one half lunatic;

A mad-cap ruffian and a swearing Jack, That thinks with oaths to face the matter out.

Pet. Father, tis thus:-yourself and all the world, That talked of her, hath talk'd amiss of her;

If she be curst, it is for policy; For she's not froward, but modest as the dove: She is not hot, but temperate as the morn; For patience she will prove a second Grissel, And Roman Lucrece for her chastity: And to conclude, we have 'greed so well together, That upon Sunday is the wedding-day.

Kath. I'll see thee hang'd on Sunday first. Gre. Hark, Petruchio; she says she'll see thee hang'd first.

Tra. Is this your speeding? nay, then, good-night our part!

Pet. Be patient, gentlemen; I choose her for myself;

If she and I be pleas'd, what's that to you? 'Tis bargain'd 'twixt us twain, being alone, That she shall still be curst in company. I tell you, 'tis incredible to believe How much she loves me: O, the kindest Kate!-She hung about my neck, and kiss on kiss She vied so fast, protesting oath on oath, That in a twink she won me to her love. O, you are novices! 'tis a world to see, How tame, when men and women are alone, A meacock wretch can make the curstest shrew.

Give me thy hand, Kate: I will unto Venice, To buy apparel 'gainst the wedding day.-Provide the feast, father, and bid the guests;

Kath. I know it is the moon. Pet. Nay, then you lie: it is the blessed sun. Kath. Then, God be blessed, it is the For our first merriment hath made thee jealous.

But sun it is not, when you say it is not; And the moon changes even as your mind. What you will have it nam'd, even that it is: And so, it shall be so for Katherine.

Hor. Petruchio, go thy ways; the field is won. Pet. Well, forward, forward! thus the bowl should run,

And not unluckily against the bias.-But, soft! company is coming here.

Enter VINCENTIO, in a travelling dress.

Good-morrow, gentle mistress: where away? [To VINCENTIO.

Tell me, sweet Kate, and tell me truly too, Hast thou beheld a fresher gentlewoman? Such war of white and red within her cheeks! What stars do spangle heaven with such beauty, As those two eyes become that heavenly face?-Fair lovely maid, once more good-day to thee: Sweet Kate, embrace her for her beauty's sake.

Hor. 'A will make the man mad, to make a woman of him.

Kath. Young budding virgin, fair and fresh and sweet.

Whither away; or where is thy abode? Happy the parents of so fair a child: Happier the man who favourable stars

Allot thee for his lovely bed-fellow! Pet. Why, how now, Kate! I hope thou art not mad:

This is a man, old, wrinkled, faded, wither'd; And not a maiden, as thou sayst he is.

Kath. Pardon, old father, my mistaking eyes, That have been so bedazzled with the sun, That everything I look on seemeth green: Now I perceive thou art a reverend father; Pardon, I pray thee, for my mad mistaking.

Pet. Do, good old grandsire; and withal make known

Which way thou travell'st: if along with us, We shall be joyful of thy company.

Vin. Fair sir, and you my merry mistress, That with your strange encounter much amaz'd

My name is call'd Vincentio; my dwelling Pisa; And bound I am to Padua; there to visit A son of mine, which long I have not seen.

Pet. What is his name? Vin. Lucentio, gentle sir. Pet. Happily met; the happier for thy son. And now by law, as well as reverend age, I may entitle thee my loving father: The sister to my wife, this gentlewoman, Thy son by this hath married. Wonder not, Nor be not griev'd: she is of good esteem, Her dowry wealthy, and of worthy birth; Beside, so qualified as may beseem The spouse of any noble gentleman. Let me embrace with old Vincentio: And wander we to see thy honest son,

Who will of thy arrival be full joyous. [sure, Vin. But is this true? or is it else your plea-Like pleasant travellers, to break a jest Upon the company you overtake?

Hor. I do assure thee, father, so it is.

Pet. Come, go along, and see the truth hereof.

Exeunt PET., KATH., and VET. Hor. Well, Petruchio, this hath put me in

Have to my widow; and if she be forward, Then hast thou taught Hortensio to be untoward. [Exit.

ACT V.

Scene L -- Padua. Before Lucentio's House.

Enter on one side BIONDELLO, LUCENTIO, and BIANCA; GREMIO walking on the other side.

Bion. Softly and swiftly, sir; for the priest is ready.

Luc. I fly, Biondello: but they may chance to need thee at home, therefore leave us.

Bion. Nay, faith, I'll see the church o' your back; and then come back to my master as soon as I can.

Exeunt Luc., BIAN., and BION. Gre. I marvel Cambio comes not all this while.

Enter Petruchio, Katharina, Vincentio GRUMIO, and Attendants.

Pet. Sir, here's the door; this is Lucentio's house: My father's bears more toward the market-Thither must I, and here I leave you, sir.

Vin. You shall not choose but drink before you go: I think I shall command your welcome here, And, by all likelihood, some cheer is toward.

Gre. They're busy within; you were best knock louder.

Enter Pedant above, at a window.

Ped. What's he that knocks as he would beat down the gate?

Vin. Is Signior Lucentio within, sir? Ped. He's within, sir, but not to be spoken withal.

Vin. What if a man bring him a hundred pound or two, to make merry withal?

Ped. Keep your hundred pounds to yourself:

he shall need none so long as I live.

Pet. Nay, I told you your son was well beloved in Padua.—Do you hear, sir?—to leave frivolous circumstances,-I pray you, tell Signior Lucentio that his father is come from Pisa, and is here at the door to speak with him.

Ped. Thou liest: his father is come from Pisa, and here looking out at the window.

[believe her. Vin. Art thou his father? Ped. Ay, sir; so his mother says, if I may Pet. Why, how now, gentleman [to VINCEN.] why, this is flat knavery, to take upon you another man's name.

Ped. Lay hands on the villain: I believe 'a means to cozen somebody in this city under my countenance.

Re-enter BIONDELLO.

Bion. I have seen them in the church together: God send 'em good shipping!-But who Then give me leave to read philosophy. And while I pause serve in your harmony. · Hor. Sirrah, I will not bear these braves of thine.

Bian. Why, gentlemen, you do me double wrong,

To strive for that which resteth in my choice: I am no breeching scholar in the schools: I'll not be tied to hours nor 'pointed times. But learn my lessons as I please myself. And, to cut off all strife, here sit we down: Take you your instrument, play you the whiles; His jecture will be done ere you have tun'd. Hor. You'll leave his lecture when I am in tune? To BIANCA. HORTENSIO retires. Luc. That will be never:-tune your instrument. Bian. Where left we last?

Luc. Here, madam:—
Hac ibat Simois; hic est Sigcia tellus;
Hic sletarat Priami regia celsa senis.

Bian. Construe them.
Luc. Hac ibat, as I told you before,—Simois I am Lucentio, -hic est, son unto Vincentio of Pisa,-Sigeia tellus, disguised thus to get your love;—Hic steterat, and that Lucentio that comes a-wooing,—Priami, is my man Tranio, -regia, bearing my port,-celsa senis, that we might beguile the old pantaloon.

Hor. [Coming forward.] Madam, my instru-ment's in tune.

Bian. Let's hear.-[HORTENSIO plays. O fiel the treble jars.

Luc. Spit in the hole, man, and tune again. Bian. Now let me see if I can construe it: Hac ibat Simois, I know you not,—hic est Sigeia tellus, I trust you not;—Hic steterat Priami, take heed he hear ns not,—regia, presume not,—celsa senis, despair not. Hor. Madam, 'tis now in tune.

Luc. All but the base.

Hor. The base is right; 'tis the base knave that jars.

. How flery and forward one pedant is! Now, for my life, the knave doth court my love: Pedascule, I'll watch you better yet. Aside. Bian. In time I may believe, yet I mistrust. Luc. Mistrust it not; for, sure, Aeacides

Was Ajar,-call'd so from his grandfather.

Bian. I must believe my master; else I promise you, I should be arguing still noon that doubt: But let it rest .- Now, Licio, to you:-

Good masters, take it not unkindly, pray, That I have been thus pleasant with yon hoth.

Hor. You may go walk [to LUCENTIO], and give me leave awhile;

My lessons make no music in three parts.

Luc. Are you so formal, sir? well, I must wait,

And watch withal; for, but I be deceiv'd, Our fine musician groweth amorons. Aside. Hor. Madam, before you touch the instrument,

To learn the order of my fingering, I must begin with rudiments of art; To teach you gamnt in a briefer sort, More pleasant, pithy, and effectual,

Than hath been taught by any of my trade: And there it is in writing, fairly drawn.

Bian. Wby, I am past my gamnt long ago. Hor. Yet read the gamut of Hortensio. Bian. [Reads.] Gamut I am, the ground of all accord,

A re, to plead Hortensio's passion; B mi, Bianca, take him for thy lord, C is ut. that loves with all affection:

D sol re, one cliff, two notes have I; E la mi, show city, or I die. Call you this gamut? tut, I like it not: Old fashions please me best; I am not so nice-To change true rules for odd inventions. Enter a Servant.

Serv. Mistress, your father prays you leave your books,

And belp to dress your sister's chamber up: You know to-morrow is the wedding-day.

Bian. Farewell, sweet masters, both; I must be gone!

[Exeunt Blanca and Servant. Luc. Faith, mistress, then I have no cause to stay. Hor. But I bave cause to pry into this pedant; Methinks be looks as though be were in love:-

Yet if thy thoughts, Bianca, be so humble, To cast thy wand'ring eyes on every stale, Seize thee that list: if once I find thee ranging, Hortensio will be quit with thee by changing.

[Exit. Scene IL-The same. Before BAPTISTA'S

House. Enter Baptista, Gremio, Tranio, Kathar-INA, BIANCA, LUCENTIO, and Attendants.

Bap. Signior Lucentio [to TRANIO,] this is the 'pointed day. (married, That Katharine and Petruchio should be And yet we bear not of our son-in-law What will be said? what mockery will it be, To want the bridegroom when the priest attends

To speak the ceremonial rites of marriage? What says Lucentio to this shame of ours?

Kath. No shame but mine: I must, forsooth, be forc'd

To give my hand, oppos'd against my heart, Unto a mad-brain rudesby, full of spleen; Who woo'd in haste, and means to wed at leisure.

I told you, I, he was a frantic fool, Hiding his bitter jests in blunt behaviour: And, to be noted for a merry man, He'll woo a thousand, 'point the day banns:

marriage, Make friends, invite them, and proclaim the

Yet never means to wed where he hath woo'd. Now must the world point at poor Katharine, And say, Lo, there is mad Petruchio's wife, If it would please him come and marry her?

Tra. Patience, good Katharine, and Baptista too.

Upon my life, Petruchlo means but well! Whatever fortune stays him from his word: Though he be blunt, I know him passing wise; Though he be merry, yet withal he's honest.

Scene II .- A Room in Lucentio's House.

A Banquet set out. Enter Baptista, Vincentio, Gremio, the Pedant, Lucentio, Bianca, Petruchio, Katharina, Hortensio, and Widow. Tranio, Biondello Grumio, and others, attending.

Luc. At last, though long, our jarring notes agree:

And time it is, when raging war is done,
To smile at 'scapes and perils overblown.—
My fair Bianca, bid my father welcome,
While I with self-same kindness welcome thine.—

Brother Petruchio,—sister Katharina,— And thou, Hortensio, with thy loving widow,— Feast with the best, and welcome to my house: My banquet is to close our stomachs up, After our great good cheer. Pray you, sit down:

For now we sit to chat, as well as eat.

[They sit at table.

Pet. Nothing but sit and sit, and eat and eat!

Bap. Padua affords this kindness, son Petruchio.

Pet. Padua affords nothing but what is kind. Hor. For both our sakes I would that word were true.

Pet. Now, for my life, Hortensio fears his widow.

Wid. Then never trust me if I be afeard.

Pet. You are very sensible, and yet you miss my sense:

I mean Hortensio is afeard of you. [round. Wid. He that is giddy thinks the world turns Pet. Roundly replied.

Kath. Mistress, how mean you that? Wid. Thus I conceive by him.

Pet. Conceives by me!—How likes Hortensio that?

Hor. My widow says thus she conceives her tale.

Pet. Very well mended.—Kiss him for that, good widow.

Kath. He that is giddy thinks the world turns round:—

I pray you, tell me what you meant by that.

Wid. Your husband, being troubled with a shrew.

Measures my husband's sorrow by his woe: And now you know my meaning.

Kath. A very mean meaning.

Wid. Right, I mean you.

Kath. And I am mean, indeed, respecting you.

Pet. To her, Kate!

Hor. To her, widow! [down.

Pet. A hundred marks, my Kate does put her

Hor. That's my office.

Pet. Spoke like an officer:—ha' to thee, lad.

[Drinks to Hortensio. Bap. How likes Gremio these quick-witted folks?

Gre. Believe me, sir, they but together well.

Bian. Head and butt! an hasty-witted body

Would say your head and butt were head and horn. [you?

horn.

Vin. Ay, mistress bride, hath that awaken'd

Bian. Ay, but not frighted me; therefore

Vil sleen again.

Pet. Nay, that you shall not; since you have begun,

Have at you for a bitter jest or two. [bush, Bian. Am I your bird? I mean to shift my And then pursue me as you draw your bow.—You are welcome all.

[Exeunt Bian., Kath., and Wid. Pet. She hath prevented me.—Here, Signior Tranio.

This bird you aim'd at, though you hit her not;
Therefore a health to all that shot and miss'd.

Pet. 'A has a little gall'd me, I confess; And, as the jest did glance away from me, 'Tis ten to one it maim'd you two outright.

Bap. Now, in good sadness, son Petruchio, I think thou hast the veriest shrew of all.

Pet. Well, I say no: and therefore, for assurance,

Let's each one send unto his wife;
And he whose wife is most ohedient
To come at first when he doth send for her,
Shall win the wager which we will propose.

Hor. Content. What is the wager?

Luc. Twenty crowns!

I'll venture so much on my hawk or hound, But twenty times so much upon my wife.

Luc. A hundred then.

Hor. Content.

Pet. A match! 'tis done.

Hor. Who shall begin? Luc. That will I.—

Go, Biondello, hid your mistress come to me.

Bion. I go. [Exit.

Bap. Son, I will he your half, Bianca comes.

Luc. I'll have no halves; I'll bear it all myself.

Re-enfer BIONDELLO.

How now! what news?

Bion. Sir, my mistress sends you word. That she is husy and she cannot come.

That she is busy, and she cannot come.

Pet. How! she is busy, and she cannot come!
Is that an answer?

Gre. Ay, and a kind one too:

Pray God, sir, your wife send you not a worse.

Pet. I hope hetter.

Re-enter BIONDELLO.

Now, where's my wife?

Bion. She says you have some goodly jest in hand: She will not come; she bids you come to her.

Tra. That by degrees we mean to look into, And watch our vantage in this business: We'll over-reach the graybeard, Gremio, The narrow-prying father, Minola The quaint musician, amorous Licio; All for my master's sake, Luceutio.

Re-enter Gressio.

Signior Gremio,-came you from the church? Gre. As williugly as e'er I came from school. Tra. And is the bride and bridegroom coming bome? Gre. A bridegroom, say you? 'tis a groom indeed.

A grumbling groom, and that the girl shall find.

Tra: Curster than sbe? why, 'tis impossible.

Gre. Why, be's a devil, a devil, a very fiend. Tra. Why, she's a devil, a devil, the devil's dam.

Tut. sbe's a lamb, a dove, a fool to him! I'll tell you, Sir Luceutio: when the priest Should ask, if Katharine should be his wife, Ay, by gogs-wouns, quoth he; and swore so lond

That, all amaz'd, the priest let fall the book; And, as he stoop'd again to take it up, The mad-brain'd bridegroom took him such a cuff That down fell priest and book, and book and priest:

Now take them up, quoth he, if any list.

Tra. What said the weach, when he erose again?

Gre. Trembled and abook; for wby, he stamp'd and swore.

As if the vicar meant to cozen him. But after many ceremonies done, He calls for wine: A health! quoth be; as if He had been aboard, carousing to his mates After a storm: qualf'd off the muscadel, And threw the sops all in the sexton's face; Having no other reason

But that his beard grew thin and bungerly, And seem'd to ask him sops as be was drinking. This done, he took the bride about the neck. And kiss'd her lips with such a clamorous smack

That, at the parting, all the church did ecbo. I, seeing this, came thence for very shame; Aud after me, I know, the rout is coming. Such a mad marriage never was before: Hark, hark! I hear the minstrels play.

Music.

Enter PETRUCHIO, BIANCA, Katharina, Baptista, Hortensio, Grumio, and Train

Pct. Gentlemen and friends, I thank you for your pains:

I know you think to dine with me to-day, And have prepar'd great store of wedding cheer;

But so it is, my haste doth cell me hence, And therefore here I mean to take my leave.

Bap. Is't possible you will away to-night? Pet. I must away to-day, before night come: Make it no wonder; if you knew my business, You would entreat me rather go than stay. And, bonest company, I thank you all That have beheld me give away myself

To this most patient, sweet, and virtuous wife: Dine with my father, drink a health to me; For I must hence; and farewell to you all. Tra. Let us entreat you stay till after dinner.

Pet. It may not be. Let me entreat you. Gre.

Pet. It cannot be. Let me entreat you.

Keth. Pet. I am content.

Kath. Are you content to stay? Pet. I am content you shall entreat me stay; But yet not stay, entreat me how you can.

Kath. Now, if you love me, stay.

Pet. Grumio, my horse. Gru. Ay, sir, they be ready: the oats have eaten the horses.

Kath. Nay, theu,

Do what thou canst, I will not go to-day; No, nor to-morrow, nor till I please myself. The door is open, sir; there lies your way; You may be jogging whiles your boots are green;

For me, I'll not be gone till I please myself: Tis like you'll prove a jolly surly groon That take it on you at the first so roundly. Pet. O Kate, content thee; prythee, be not angry Rath. I will be angry; what hest thou to do?-Father, be quiet: he shall stay my leisure. Gre. Ay, marry, sir, now it begins to work. Kath. Gentlemen, forward to the bridal dinner: I see a woman may be made a fool

If she bad not a spirit to resist.

Pet. They shall go forward, Kate, at thy command.

Obey the bride, you that attend on her; Go to the feast, revel and domineer, Carouse full measure to her maidenhead; Be med and merry,—or go hang yourselves: But for my bonny Kate, she must with me. Nay, look not big, nor stamp, nor stare, nor fret:

I will be master of what is mine own; She is my goods, my chattels; she is my house, My bousehold stuff, my field, my barn, My horse, my ox, my ass, my anything; And bere she stands, touch her whoever dare; I'll bring mine action on the proudest he That stops my way in Padua. - Grumio, Draw forth thy weapon, we are beset with thieves;

Rescue thy mistress, if thou be a man. Fear not, sweet wench, they shall not touch thee, Kate;

I'll buckler thee against a million.

ACT I.

Scene I.—Sicilia. An Antechamber in LEONTES' Palace.

Enter Camillo and Archidamus.

Arch. If you shall chance, Camillo, to visit Bohemia, on the like occasion whereon my services are now on foot, you shall see, as I have said, great difference betwixt our Bohemia and your Sicilia.

Cam. I think this coming summer the King of Sicilia means to pay Bohemia the visitation which he justly owes him.

Arch. Wherein our entertainment shall shame us we will be justified in our loves; for, indeed,-

Cam. Beseech you,—
Arch. Verily, I speak it in the freedom of my knowledge: we cannot with such magnifcence-in so rare-I know not what to say.-We will give you sleepy drinks, that your senses, unintelligent of our insufficience, may, though they cannot praise us, as little accuse us.

Cam. You pay a great deal too dear for what's given freely.

Arch. Believe me, I speak as my understanding instructs me, and as mine honesty puts it to utterance.

Cam. Sicilia cannot show himself overkind to Bohemia. They were trained together in their childhoods; and there rooted betwixt them then such an affection which cannot choose but branch now. Since their more mature dignities

Re-enter PETRUCHIO.

Pet. Thus have I politicly hegun my reign, And 'tis my hope to end successfully. My falcon now is sharp, and passing empty; And, till she stoop, she must not he full-gorg'd, For then she never looks upon her lure. Another way I have to man my haggard To make her come, and know her keeper's call, That is, to watch her, as we watch these kites That hate, and beat, and will not he ohedient. She ent no meat to-day, nor none shall eat; Last night she slept not, nor to-night she shall not;

As with the meat, some undeserved fault I'll find ahout the making of the hed; And here I'll fling the pillow, there the holster, This way the coverlet, another way the sheets:-Ay, and amid this hurly, I intend That all is done in reverend care of her; And, in conclusion, she shall watch all night: And, if she chance to nod, I'll rail and hrawl, And with the clamour keep her still awake. This is a way to kill a wife with kindness: And thus I'll curh her mad and headstrong humour. He that knows hetter how to tame a shrew, Now let him speak; 'tis charity to show. [Exit.

House.

Enter Transo and Hortensio. Tra. Is't possible, friend Licio, that Bianca Doth fancy any other hut Lucentio? I tell you, sir, she bears me fair in hand.

Hor. Sir, to satisfy you in what I have said, Stand hy, and mark the manner of his teaching. They stand aside.

Her. Grace to boot! Of this make no conclusion, lest you say Your queen and I are devils: yet, go on; The offences we have made you do we'll answer; If you first sinn'd with us, and that with us You did continue fault, and that you slipp'd not With any but with us.

Leon. Is he won yet?

Her. He'll stay, my lord.

At my request he would not. Leon. Hermione, my dearest, thou never spok'st To better purpose.

Never? Her.

Leon. Never but once.

Her. What! have I twice said well? when was't before? make's I pr'ythee, tell me: cram's with praise, and As fat as tame things: one good deed dying

Why, that was when

Three crabbed months had sour'd themselves to death.

Ere I could make thee open thy white hand, And clap thyself my love; then didst thou utter I am yours forever.

It is Grace indeed.-Her. Why, lo you now, I have spoke to the purpose twice;

The one for ever earn'd a royal husband; The other for some while a friend.

(Giving her hand to POLIXENES. Too hot, too hot! [Aside. To mingle friendship far in mingling bloods. I have tremor cordis on me,—my heart dances; But not for joy,—not joy.—This entertainment May a free face put on; derive a liberty From heartiness, from bounty, fertile bosom, And well become the agent: 't may, I grant: But to be paddling palms and pinching fingers, As now they are; and making practis'd smiles, As in a looking-glass; and then to sigh, as 'twere The mort o' the deer; O, that is entertainment My bosom likes not, nor my brows, -Mamillius, Art thou my boy?

Mam. Ay, my good lord.

I' fecks! Leon. Why, that's my bawcock. What! hast smutch'd thy nose?-

They say it's a copy out of mine. Come, captain,

We must be neat;—not neat, but cleanly, captain:

And yet the steer, the heifer, and the calf, Are all call'd neat.—Still virginalling

Affection! thy intention stabs the centre: Thou dost make possible things not so held Communicat'st with dreams; how can this be?-

With what's unreal thou co-active art, And fellow'st nothing: then 'tis very credent Thou mayst co-join with something; and theu dost,

And that beyond commission; and I find it, And that to the infection of my brains And hardening of my brows.

Pol. What means Sicilia? Her. Something seems unsettled.

How! my lord! What cheerl how is't with you, best brother? You look As if you held a brow of much distraction:

Are you mov'd, my lord?

Leon. No, in good earnest .--How sometimes nature will betray its folly, Its tenderness, and make itself a pastime To harder bosoms! Looking on the lines Of my boy's face, methoughts I did recoil Twenty-three years; and saw myself unbreech'd, In my green velvet coat; my dagger muzzled, Lest it should bite its master, and so prove, As ornaments oft do, too dangerous.

How like, methought, I then was to this kernel, This quash, this gentleman.-Mine honest friend,

Will you take eggs for money? Mam. No, my lord, I'll fight. Leon. You will? why, happy man be's dole!

-My brother, Are you so fond of your young prince as we Do seem to be of ours?

If at home, sir, He's all my exercise, my mirth, my matter: Now my sworn friend, and then mine enemy; My parasite, my soldier, statesman, all: He makes a July's day short as December; And with his varying childness cures in me Thoughts that would thick my blood.

So stands this squire Leon. Offic'd with me. We two will walk, my lord, And leave you to your graver steps.—Hermione, How thou lov'st us show in our brother's welcome; Let what is dear in Sicily be cheap: Next to thyself and my young rover, he's Apparent to my heart.

If you would seek us, Her. We are your's i' the garden: shall's attend you [be found. there?

Leon. To your own bents dispose you: you'll Be you beneath the sky. [Aside.] I am angling now.

Though you perceive me not how I give line. Observing Pol. and HER. How she holds up the neb, the bill to him!

Tro. Then go with me, to make the matter good

This, by the way, I let you understand;—My father is here look'd for every day,
To pass assurance of a dower in marriage
'Twixt me and one Baptista's daughter here:
In all these circumstances I'll instruct you:
Go with me, sir, to clothe you as becomes you.
[Excunt.]

Scene III.—A Room in Petruchio's House.

Enter Katharina and Grumto.

Gru. No. no, forsooth; I dare not, for my life.

Koth. The more my wrong, the more his spite appears:

What, did he marry me to famish me?
Beggars, that come unto my father's door,
Upon entreaty have a present alms;
If not, elsewhere they meet with charity:
But I,—who never knew how to entreat,—
Nor never needed that I should entreat,—
Am starred for meat, giddy for lack of sleep;
With oaths kept waking, and with brawling fed:
And that which spites me more than all these wants,

He does it under name of perfect love; As who would say, if I should sleep or eat, 'Twere deadly sickness or else present death... I prythee so, and set me some repast; I care not what, so it be wholesome food.

Gru. What say you to a neat's foot? [it. Kath. 'Tispassing good; Ipr'ytheelet mehave Gru. I fear it is too choleric a meat:

How say you to a fat tripe, finely broil'd? Ime.
Kath. I like it well: good Grumio, fetch it
Gru. I cannot rell; I fear 'tis choleric.

What say you to a piece of beel and mustard?
Kath. A dish that I do love to feed upon.
Gru. Ay, but the mustard is too hot a little.
Koth. Why, then the beef, and let the mustard rest.
[the mustard,

Gru. Nay, then I will not; you shall have Or else you get no beef of Grumio.

Kath. Then both, or one, or anything thou wilt. Steef. Gru. Why, then the mustard without the Koth. Go, get thee gone, thou false deluding slave, [Beats him.]

That feed'st me with the very name of meat:
Sorrow on thee, and all the pack of you,
That triumph thus upon my misery!
Go, get thee gone, I say.

Enter PETRUCINO with a dish of meat; and 'Hortensio.

Pct. How fares my Kate? What, sweeting, all amort?

Hor. Mistress, what cheer?

Koth. Faith, as cold as can be.

Pet. Pluck up thy spirits, look cheerfully upon me.

Here, love; thou see'st how diligent I am To dress thy meat myself, and bring it thee: [Sets the dish on a toble.

I am sure, swee' Kate, this kindness merits thanks. [not; Whatl not a word? Nay, then thou lov'st it And all my pains is sorted to no proof.—

Here, take away this dish.

Koth. I pray you, let it stand. Pet. The poorest service is repaid with thanks; And so shall mine, before you touch the meat.

Koth. I thank you, sir. Hor. Signior Petruchio, fiel you are to blame!

Come, Mistress Kate, I'll hear you company.

Pet. Eat it up all, Hortensio, if thou lov'st me.—

[Aside.

Much good do it unto thy gentle heart!
Kate, eat apace:—and now, my honey-love,
Will we return unto thy father's house,
And revel it as bravely as the beat,

With silken coats, and caps, and golden rings, With ruffs, and cuffs, and farthingales, and things;

With scarfs, and fans, and double change of bravery,

With amber bracelets beads, and all this knavery. What, hast thou din'd? The tailor stays thy leisure, To deck thy body with his ruffling treasure.

Enter Tailor.

Come, tailor, let us see these ornaments; Lay forth the gown.

Enter Haberdasher.

What news with you, sir?

Hab. Here is the cap your worship did bespeak.

Pct. Why, this was moulded on a porringer; A velvet dish;—fie, fie! 'tis lewd and filthy; Why, 'tis a cockle or a walnut-shell, A knack, a toy, a trick, a baby's cap:

Away with it! come, let me have a bigger.

Kath. I'll have no bigger; this doth fit the time,

And gentlewoman wear such caps as these,
Pet. When you are gentle, you shall have one too.

And not till then.

Hor. That will not be in haste. [Aside. Koth. Why, sir, I trust I may have leave to speak;

And speak I will. I am no child, no babe;
Your betters have endur'u me say my mind;
And if you cannot, best you stop your ears.
My tongue will tell the anger of my heart;

Or else my heart, concealing it, will break:
And rather than it shall, I will be free
Even to the uttermost, as I please, in words.
Pet Why, thou say'st true; it is a paltry cap,
A custard-coffin, a bauble, a silken pie:
I love thee well, in that thou lik'st it not.

Koth. Love me or love me not, I like the cap; And it I will have, or I will have none.

Pct. Thy gown? why, ay; - Come, tailor. let us see't.

O mercy, Godl what masquing stuff is here? What's this? a sleeve? 'tis like a demi-cannon: What, up and down, carv'd like an apple-tart? Here's snip, and nip, and cut, and slish, and slash,

Like to a censer in a barber's shop: — [this? Why, what, o' devil's name, tailor, call'st thou Hor. I see she's like to have neither eap nor gown. [Aside Tai. You bid me make it orderly and well,

According to the fashion and the time.

That would unseen he wicked?—is this nothing? Why, then the world and all that's in't is nothing;

The covering sky is nothing; Bohemia nothing; My wife is nothing; nor nothing have these nothings.

If this be nothing.

Cam. Good my lord, be cur'd Of this diseas'd opinion, and betimes; For 'tis most dangerous

Say it he, 'tis true. Leon.

Cam. No, no, my lord!

Leon. It is; you lie, you lie: I say thou liest, Camillo, and I hate thee: Pronounce thee a gross lout, a mindless slave: Or else a hovering temporizer, that Canst with thine eyes at once see good and evil, Inclining to them both.—Were my wife's liver Infected as her life, she would not live The running of one glass mayst see lheaven. Plainly, as heaven sees earth, and earth sees | How I am galled,-mightst bespice a cup, To give mine enemy a lasting wink; Which draught to me were cordial.

Sir, my ford, Cam.I could do this; and, that with no rash potion, But with a ling'ring dram, that should not work Maliciously like poison: but I cannot Believe this crack to be in my dead mistress, So sovereignly being honourable.

I have lov'd thee.

Leon. Make that thy question, and go to rot! Dost think I am so muddy, so unsettled, To appoint myself in this vexation; sully The purity and whiteness of my sheets,-Which to preserve is sleep; which being spotted Is goads, thorns, nettles, tails of wasps; Give scandal to the blood o' the prince my son, Who I do think is mine, and love as mine,— Without ripe moving to't?—Would I do this? Could man so blench?

I must believe you, sir: I do; and will fetch off Bohemia for't; Provided that, when he's remov'd, your high-Will take again your queen as yours at first, Even for your son's sake; and thereby for seal-

I'll give no blemish to her honour, none.

Cam. My lord, Go then: and with a countenance as clear As friendship wears at feasts, keep with Bohemia And with your queen: I am his cupbearer. If from me he have wholesome beverage Account me not your servant.

Leon. This is all: Do't and thou hast the one-half of my heart: Do't not, thou splitt'st thine own.

I'll do't, my ford. Leon. I will seem friendly, as thou hast advis'd me. Exit.

Cam. O miserable lady!-But, for me, What case stand I in? I must he the poisoner Of good Polixenes: and my ground to do't Is he obedience to a master; one Who, in rehellion with himself, will have All that are his so too.—To do this deed. Promotion follows: if I could find example Of thousands that had struck anointed kings, And flourish'd after, I'd not do't; hut since Nor brass, nor stone, nor parchment, bears not one,

Let villany itself forswear't. I must Forsake the court: to do't, or no, is certain To me a hreak-neck. Happy star, reign now!

Here comes Bohemia.

Enter Polixenes.

This is strange! methinks Pol. My favour here begins to warp. Not speak?-Good-day, Camillo.

Hail, most royal sir! Cam. Pol. What is the news i' the court? Cam. None rare, my lord. Pol. The king hath on him such a counten-

With customary compliment; when he Wafting his eyes to the contrary, and falling A lip of much contempt, speeds from me; and So leaves me, to consider what is breeding That changes thus his manners.

Cam. I dare not know, my lord.
Pol. How! dare not! do not. Do you know, and dare not

'Tis thereabouts; Be intelligent to me? For, to yourself, what you do know, you must, And cannot say, you dare not. Good Camillo, Your changed complexions are to me a mirror, Which shows me mine chang'd too; for I must

A party in this alteration, finding, Myself thus alter'd with it.

Cam. There is a sickness Which puts some of us in distemper; but I cannot name the disease; and it is caught Of you that yet are well.

Pol. How! caught of me! Make me not sighted like the basilisk: I have look'd on thousands, who have sped the better By my regard, but kill'd none so. As you are certainly a gentleman; thereto Clerk-like, experienc'd, which no less adorns Our gentry that our parents' noble names, In whose success we are gentle,—I beseech you, If you know aught which does behove my knowledge

Therefore to be inform'd, imprison't not In ignorant concealment.

I may not answer. ·Cam. Pol. A sickness caught of me, and yet I well I must be answer'd.—Dost thou hear, Camillo, [tists? Bion. Tutl fear not me. [tists? Tra. But hast thou done thy errand to Bap-Bion. I told him that your father was at Venice;

And that you look'd for him this day in Padua. Tra. Thon'rt a tall fellow: hold thee that to drink. sir. Here comes Baptista:- set your countenance,

Enter BAPTISTA and LUCENTIO.

Signior Baptista, you are happily met .-Sir [to the Pedant], this is the gentleman I told you of:

I pray you, stand good father to me now, Give me Bianca for my patrimony.

Ped. Soft, sonl-Sir, by your leave baving come to Padua To gather in some debts, my son Lucentio Made me acquainted with a weighty cause Of love between your daughter and himself: And,-for the good report I hear of yon; And for the love he beareth to your daughter, And she to him,-to stay him not too long, I am content, in a good father's care, To have him match'd; and,—if you please to like

No worse than I,-upou some agreement, Me shall you find ready and willing With one cousent to have her so bestow'd; For curious I cannot be with you, Signior Baptista, of whom I bear so well.

Bap. Sir, pardon me in what I bave to say: Your plainness and your shortness please me well

Right true it is, your son Lucentio here Doth love my daughter, and she loveth him, Or both dissemble deeply their affections: And therefore, if you say no more than this, That like a father you will deal with him, And pass my daughter a sufficient dower, The match is made, and all is done: Your son shall have my daughter with consent.

Tra. I thank you, sir. Where, then, do you know best

We be affied, and such assurance ta'en As shall with either part's agreement stand? Bap. Not in my house, Lucentio; for, you know, Pitchers have ears, and I have many servants: Besides, old Gremio is beark'ning still; And, haply, we might be interrupted.

Tra. Then at my lodging, an it like you: There doth my father lie; and there, this night, We'll pass the business privately and well: Send for your daughter by your servant here; My boy shall fetch the scrivener presently. The worst is this.—that, at so slender warning, You are like to have a thin and slender pittance.

Bap. It likes me well.—Cambio, hie you home, And bid Bianca make her ready straight, And, if you will, tell what hath happened,-Lucentio's father is arriv'd in Padua, And how she's like to be Lucentio's wife.

Luc. I pray the gods she may, with all my beart. Tra. Dally not with the gods, but get thee Signior Baptista, shall I lead the way?

Welcome! one mess is like to be your cheer:

Come, sir; we'll better it in Pisa.

Bap. I follow you.

[Exeunt TRA., PED., and BAP. Bion. Cambio.

Luc. What sayst thou, Biondello? Bion. You saw my master wink and laugh upou you?

Luc. Biondello, what of that?
Bion. Faith, nothing; but has left me bere behind, to expound the meaning or moral of his signs and tokens.

Luc. I pray thee, moralize them.

Bion. Then thus. Baptista is safe, talking with the deceiving father of a deceitful don.

Luc. And what of him?

Bion. His daughter is to be brought by you to the supper.

Luc. And then!—
Bion. The old priest at St. Luke's church is at your command at all hours

Luc. And what of all this?

Bion. I cannot tell; expect they are busied about a counterfeit assurance. Take you assurance of her, cum privilegio ad imprimendum solum: to the church; -take the priest, clerk, and some sufficient honest witnesses: If this be not that you look for, I have no more to say, But bid Bianca farewell for ever and a day.

[Going.

Luc. Hear'st thou, Biondello? Bion. I cannot tarry: I knew a wench married in an afternoon as she went to the garden for parsley to stuff a rabbit; and so may you, sir; and so adieu, sir. My master hath appointed me to go to Saint Luke's, to bid the priest be ready to come against you come with your appendix. Exit.

Luc. I may, and will, if she be so contented: She will be pleas'd; then wherefore should I doubt?

Hap what hap may, I'll roundly go about ber; It shall go hard if Cambio go without her. Exit.

Scene V.—A bublic Road.

Enter PETRUCHIO, KATHARINA, and HORTENSIO.

Pet. Come on, o' God's name; once more toward our father's.

Good Lord, how bright and goodly shines the moon! [light now. Kath. The moon! the sun: it is not moon-

Pet. I say it is the moon that shines so bright. Kath. I know it is the sun that shines so bright.

Pet. Now, by my mother's son, and that's myself,

It shall be moon, or star, or what I list, Or ere I journey to your father's house. Go one, and fetch our horses back again .-Evermore cross'd and cross'd; nothing but cross'd!

Hor. Say as he says, or we shall never go. Kath. Forward, I pray, since we have come so far, And be it moon, or sun, or what you please: And if you please to call it a rush-candle, Henceforth I vow it shall be so for me. Pet. I say it is the moon.

Enter Leontes, Antigonus, Lords and Guards.

Leon. Was he met there? his train? Camillo with him? [never

I Lord. Behind the tuft of pines I met them; Saw I men scour so on their way: I ey'd them

Even to their ships.

Leon. How hless'd am I
In my just censure, in my true opinion!—
Alack, for lesser knowledge!—how accurs'd,
In being so blest!—There may be in the cup
A spider steep'd, and one may drink, depart,
And yet partake no venom; for his knowledge
Is not infected: but if one present
The abhorr'd ingredient to his eye, make known

How he hath drunk, he cracks his gorge, his sides [the spider. With violent hefts:—I have drunk, and seen Camillo was his help in this, his pander:—There is a plot against my life, my crown; All's true that is mistrusted:—that false villain, Whom I employ'd, was pre-employ'd hy him: He has discover'd my design, and I Remain a pinch'd thing; yea, a very trick For them to play at will.—How came the posterns

So easily open?

r Lord. By his great authority; Which often hath no less prevzil'd than so, On your command.

Lcon. I know't too well.—
Give me the hoy:—I am glad you did not nurse him:

Though he does hear some signs of me. yet you Have too much blood in him.

Her. What is this? sport?

Leon. Bear the hoy hence; he shall not come about her;

Away with him!—and let her sport herself [Exit MAMILLIUS, with some of the Guards. With that she's big with;—for 'tis Polizenes Hath made thee swell thus.

Her. But I'd say he had not, And I'll he sworn you would helieve my saying,

Howe'er you learn the nayward.

Leon. You, my lords, Look on her, mark her well; be but about To say, she is a goodly lady, and The justice of your hearts will thereto add, 'Tis pity she's not honest, honourable: Praise her but for this her without-door form,—Which, on my faith, deserves high speech,—and straight

The shrug, the hum, or ha,—these petty hrands,
That calumny doth use:—O, I am out,
That mercy does; for calumny will sear
Virtue itself:—these shrugs, these hums, and

When you have said she's goodly, come hetween, Ere you can say she's honest: but be it known, From him that has most cause to grieve it should be, She's an adultress!

Her. Should a villain say so, The most replenish'd villain in the world, He were as much more villain: you, my lord, Do but mistake.

You have mistook, my lady, Polizenes or Leontes: O thou thing, Which I'll not call a creature of thy place, Lest barbarism, making me the precedent, Should a like language use to all degrees, And mannerly distinguishment leave out Betwirt the prince and beggar!-I have said, She's an adultress; I have said with whom: More, she's a traitor; and Camillo is A federary with her; and one that knows What she should shame to know herself But with her most vile principal, that she's A bed-swerver, even as bad as those That vulgars give boldest titles; ay, and privy To this their late escape. Her.

Her. No, hy my life, Privy to none of this. How will this grieve you, When you shall come to clearer knowledge, that You thus have publish'd me! Gentle, my lord, You scarce can right me throughly then, to say Yon did mistake.

Leon. No; if I mistake
In those foundations which I huild upon,
The centre is not hig enough to hear
A school-boy's top.—Away with her to prison!
He who shall speak for her is afer off guilty
But that he speaks.

Her. There's some ill planet reigns: I must be patient till the heavens look With an aspect more favourable.—Good my lords,

I am not prone to weeping, as our sex
Commonly are; the want of which vain dew
Perchance shall dry your pities; but I have
That honourable grief lodg'd here, which burns Worse than tears drown: heseech you all, my lords,

With thoughts so qualified as your charities
Shall best instruct you, measure me;—and so
The king's will be perform'd!
Leon. Shall I he heard?

Her. Who is't that goes with me?—Beseeth your highness.

My women may be with me; for, you see, My plight requires it.—Do not weep, good fools; There is no cause: when yon shall know your

mistress
Has desery'd prison, then ahound in tears
As I come out: this action I now go on
Is for my hetter grace.—Adieu, my lord:
I never wish'd to see you sorry; now. !!eave.
I trust I shall.—My women, come; you have Leon. Go, do your hidding; hence!

Exeunt Queen and Ladies, with Guards. 1 Lord. Beseech your highness, call the queen again.

Ant. Be certain what you do, sic lest your justice

Prove violence: in the which three great ones suffer,

Yourself, your queen, your son.

I Lord.

For her, my lord,—
I dare my life lay down, and will do't, sir,
Please you to accept it, that the queen is spot-

less
I' the eyes of heaven and to you; I mean
In this which you accuse her.

Ant. If it prove She's otherwise, I'll keep my stables where is here? mine old master, Vincential now we are undone, and hrought to nothing.

Vin. Come hither, crack-hemp.

[Seeing BIONDELLO. Bion. I hope I may choose, sir. What! have Vin. Come hither, you rogue.

you forgot me? Bion. Forgot youl no, sir: I could not forget you, for I never saw you hefore in all my life. Vin. What, you notorious villain, didst thou never see thy master's father, Vincentio?

Bion. What, my old worshipful old master? yes, marry, sir: see where he looks out of the window.

Vm. Is't so, indeed? [Beats BIONDELLO. Bion. Help. help, help! here's a madman will murder me. Ped. Help, son! help, Signior Baptista!

[Exit from the window.

Pet. Pr'ythee, Kate, let's stand aside, and see the end of this controversy. [They retire.

Re-enter Pedant below; and BAPTISTA. TRANIO, and Servants.

Tra. Sir, what are you, that offer to beat my servant?

Vin. What am I, sirl nay, what are you, sir?—O immortal gods! O fine villain! A silken doublet! a velvet hose! a scarlet cloak! and a copatain hat!-O, I am undone! I am undone! while I play the good husband at home, my son and my servant spend all at the university.

Tra. How now! what's the matter? Bap. What, is the man lunatic?

Tra. Sir, you seem a sober ancient gentleman by your habit, but your words show you a madman. Why, sir, what concerns it you if I wear pearl and gold? I thank my good father I am able to maintain it.

Vin. Thy father! O villain! he is a sailmaker in Bergamo.

Bap. You mistake, sir; you mistake, sir. Pray, what do you think is his name?

Vin. His name! as if I knew not his name! I have hrought him up ever since he was three years old, and his name is Tranio. Ped. Away, away, mad ass! his name is Lucentio; and he is mine only son, and heir to the lands of me, Signior Vincentio.

Vin. Lucentiol O, he hath murdered his master!-Lay hold on him, I charge you, in the duke's name.-O, my son, my son!-tell me, thou villain, where is my son, Lucentio? Tra. Call forth an officer.

Enter one with an Officer.

Carry this mad knave to the gaol.-Father Baptista, I charge you see that he be forthcoming.

Vin. Carry me to the gaoll

Gre. Stay, officer; he shall not go to prison. Bap. Talk not, Signior Gremio; I say he shall go to prison.

Gre. Take heed, Signior Baptista, lest you be coney-catched in this husiness: I dare swear this is the right Vincentio.

Ped. Swear, if thou darest. Gre. Nay, I dare not swear it.

Tra. Then thou wert best say that I am not Lucentio.

Gre. Yes, I know thee to he Signior Lucentio. Bap. Away with the dotard! to the gaol with himl

Vin. Thus strangers may he haled and ahus'd .- O monstrous villain!

Re-enter BIONDELLO, with LUCENTIO and BIANCA.

Bion. O, we are spoiled! and yonder he is: deny him, forswear him, or else we are all undone.

Luc. Pardon, sweet father. Kneeling. Vin. Lives my sweet son? (BION., TRA., and PED. run out.

Bian. Pardon, dear father. Kneeling. Bap. How hast thou offended?-Where is Lucentio?

Here's Lucentio, Luc.

Right son to the right Vincentio; That hath by marriage made thy daughter While counterfeit supposes blear'd thine eyne.

Gre. Here's packing, with a witness, to deceive us alll

Vin. Where is that damned villain, Tranio, That fac'd and hrav'd me in this matter so? Bap. Why, tell me, is not this my Camhio? Bian. Cambio is chang'd into Lucentio. Luc. Love wrought these miracles. Bianca's love. Made me exchange my state with Tranio, While he did hear my countenance in the town; And happily I have arrived at the last Unto the wished-for haven of my bliss. What Tranio did, myself enforc'd him to;

Then pardon him, sweet father, for my sake. Vin. I'll slit the villain's nose, that would have sent me to the gaol. Bap. But do you hear, sir? [to LUCENTIO] Have you married my daughter without asking my good-will? [go to:

Vin. Fear not, Baptista; we will content you, But I will in, to be revenged for this villany!

[Exit. Bap. And I, to sound the depth of this [Exit. knavery.

Luc. Look not pale, Bianca; thy father will not frown. [Exeunt Luc. and BIAN. Gre. My cake is dough: but I'll in among the rest; Out of hope of all but my share of the feast. Exit.

PETRUCHIO and KATHARINA advance.

Kath. Husband, let's follow, to see the end of this ado.

First kiss me, Kate, and we will. Kath. What, in the midst of the street? Pet. What, art thou ashamed of me? [kiss. Kath. No, sir; God forhid; hut ashamed to Pet. Why, then, let's home again.—Come, sirrah, let's away.

Kath. Nay, I will give thee a kiss: now, pray thee, love, stay.

Pet. Is not this well?—Come, my sweet Kate;

Better once than never, for never too late.

How he may soften at the sight o' the child: The silence often of pure innocence Persuades, when speaking fails.

Most worthy madam, Emil. Your honour and your goodness is so evident, That your free undertaking cannot miss A thriving issue: there is no lady living So meet for this great errand. Please your ladyship

To visit the next room, I'll presently Acquaint the queen of your most noble offer: Who but to-day hammer'd of this design, But durst not tempt a minister of honour Lest she should be denied.

Tell her, Emilia, Paul. I'll use that tongue I have: if wit flow from it, As boldness from my bosom, let it not he doubted

I shall do good.

Now be you bless'd for it! Emil. I'll to the queen: please you come something

Keep. Madam, if't please the queen to send the babe,

I know not what I shall incur to pass it,

Having no warrant.

Paul. You need not fear it, sir:

The child was prisoner to the womb, and is, By law and process of great nature, thence Freed and enfranchis'd; not a party to The anger of the king, nor guilty of, If any be, the trespass of the queen.

Keep. I do helieve it. Paul. Do not you fear: upon mine honour, I Will stand 'twixt you and danger.

Scene III .- The same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter LEONTES, ANTIGONUS, Lords, and other Attendants.

Leon. Nor night nor day no rest: it is but weakness

To bear the matter thus,—mere weakness. The cause were not in being, - part o' the cause, She the adultress; for the harlot king Is quite beyond mine arm, out of the blank And level of my brain, plot-proof; but she I can hook to me:—say that she were gone, Given to the fire, a molety of my rest Might come to me again.—Who's there?

1 Atten. [Advancing.] My lord?

Leon. How does the boy? He took good rest to-night; I Atten. 'Tis hop'd his sickness is discharg'd.

Leon. To see his nobleness! Conceiving the dishonour of his mother, He straight declin'd, droop'd, took it deeply, Fasten'd and fix'd the shame on't in himself, Threw off his spirit, his appetite, his sleep, And downright languish'd .- Leave me solely:

-go, no thought of him; The very thought of my revenges that way Recoil upon me: in himself too mighty,

And in his parties, his alliance,—let him be, Until a time may serve: for present vengeance, Take it on her. Camillo and Polizenes

Laugh at me; make their pastime at my sorrow: They should not laugh if I could reach them:

Shall she, within my power.

Enter PAULINA, with a child.

I Lord. You must not enter. Paul. Nay, rather, good my lords, be second to me:

Fear you his tyrannous passion more, alas, Than the queen's life? a gracious innocent soul. More free than he is jealous.

Ant. That's enough. 2 Attend. Madam, he hath not slept tonight; commanded

None should come at him. Paul. Not so hot, good sir: I come to hring him sleep. 'Tis such as you, That creep like shadows by him, and do sigh At each his needless heavings,—such as you Nourish the cause of his awaking: I Do come, with words as med'cinal as true, Honest as either, to purge him of that humour That presses him from sleep.

Leon. What noise there, ho? Paul. No noise, my lord; but needful conference

Ahout some gossips for your highness.

Away with that audacious lady!--Antigonus, I charg'd thee that she should not come about me:

I knew she would.

I told her so, my lord, On your displeasure's peril, and on mine, She should not visit you.

What, canst not rule herl Paul. From all dishonesty, he can: in this,-Unless he take the course that you have done, Commit me for committing honour,-trust it, He shall not rule me.

La you now, you hear! Ant. When she will take the rein, I let her run;

But she'll not stumble.

Paul. Good my liege, I come,-And, I heseech you, hear me, who professes Myself your loyal servant, your physician, Your most obedient counsellor; yet that dares Less appear so, in comforting your evils, Than such as most seem yours:—I say, I come From your good queen

Leon. Good queen! Paul. Good queen, my lord, good queen: I say, good queen;

And would by combat make her good, so were I A man, the worst about you.

Force her hence! Leon. Paul. Let him that makes but trifles of his eyes First hand me: on mine own accord I'll off; But first I'll do my errand.—The good queen, For she is good, hath brought you forth a daughter;

See how he fares. [Exit 1 Attend.]—Fie, fie! Here 'tis; commends it to your blessing. Laying down the child. Out! Leon.

A mankind-witch! Hence with her, out o'door: A most intelligencing bawd! Not so:

Paul.I am as ignerant in that as you Pef. Worse and worse; she will not come!
O vile,

Intolerable, not to he endur'd!— Sirrah Grumio, go to your mistress; Say I command her como to me.

Hor. I know her answer.

Pet. What?
Hor. She will not come.
Pet. The fouler fortune mine, and there an

Bap. Now, by my holidame, here comes Katharinal

Enter KATHARINA.

Kath. What is your will, sir, that you send for me? [wife? Pet. Where is your sister, and Rortensio's Kath. They sit conferring by the parlour fire. Pet. Go, fetch them hither: if they deny to come.

Swinge me them soundly forth unto their husbands:

Away, I say, and hring them hither straight.

Luc. Here is a wonder, if you talk of a wonder.

Hor. And so it is: I wonder what it bodes.

Pet. Marry, peace it bodes, and love, and quiet life,

An awful rule, and right supremacy; [happy. And, to be short, what not, that's sweet and Bap. Now fair befall thee, good Petruchiol The wager thou hast won; and I will add Unto their losses twenty thousand crowns; Another dowry to another daughter,

For she is chang'd, as she had never been.

Pet. Nay, I will win my wager better yet;
And show more sign of her obedience,
Her new-built virtue and ohedience.
See where she comes, and hrings your froward wives

As prisoners to her womanly persuasion.

Parantar Wattiapina with Blanca and

Re-enfer Katharina, with Bianca and Widow

Katharine, that cap of yours becomes you not; Off with that hauhle, throw it underfoot.

(KATH. pulls off her cap and throws it down.
Wid. Lord, let me never have a cause to sigh,
Till I he brought to such a silly pass!

Bian. Fiel what a foolish duty call you this?
Luc. I would your duty were as foolish too;
The wisdom of your duty, fair Bianca, [time.
Hath cost me an hundred crowns since supperBian. The more fool you, for laying on my

Pet. Katharine, I chargo thee, tell these headstrong women

What duty they do owe their lords and hushands.

Wid. Come, come, you're mocking: we will have no telling. [her. Pet. Come on, I say; and first begin with Wid She shall not [her.]

Wid. She shall not. [her. Pet. I say she shall;—and first hegin with Kath. Fie, fiel unknit that threat'ning unkind brow;

And dart not scornful glances from those eyes, To wound thy lord, thy king, thy governor: It hlots thy beauty, as frosts do bite the meads; Confounds thy fame, ns whirlwinds shake fair

bnds;
And in no sense is meet or amiable.
A woman mov'd is like a fountain troubled—Muddy, ill-seeming, thick, bereft of heauty;
And whilo it is so, none so dry or thirsty
Will deign to sip or touch one drop of it.
Thy husband is thy lord, thy life, thy keeper,
Thy head, thy sovereign; one that cares for thee
And for thy maintenance; commits his hody
To painful labour both by sea and land,
To watch the night in storms, the day in cold,
Whilst thou liest warm at home, secure and

To watch the night in storms, the day in cold, Whilst thou liest warm at home, secure and safe;
And craves no other tribute at thy hands
But love, fair looks, and true ohedience,—
Too little payment for so great a debt!
Such duty as the subject ways the prince.

Such duty as the subject owes the prince, Even such a woman oweth to her husband; And when she is froward, peevish, sullen, sour, And not obedient to his honest will, What is ahe but a foul contending rebel, And graceless traitor to her loving lord?—I am asham'd that women are so simple To offer war where they should kneel for peace, Or seek for rule, supremacy, and sway, When they are hound to serve, love, and obey,

Why are our bodies soft and weak, and smooth. Unapt to toil and trouble in the world, But that our soft conditions and our hearts Should well agree with our external parts? Come, come, you froward and unable worms! My mind hath been as hig as one of yours, My heart as great; my reason, haply, more,

To bandy word for word and frown for frown: But now I see our lances are but straws; Our strength as weak, our weakness past compare.— [least are.

That seeming to he most, which we indeed Then vail your stomachs, for it is no boot, And place your hands below your hushand's foot:

In token of which duty, if he please, My hand is ready, may it do him ease.

Pct. Why, there's a wench!—Come on, and kiss me, Kate.

Luc. Well, go thy ways, old lad; for thou shalt ha't.

Vin. 'Tis a good hearing when children are toward. [froward. Luc. But n harsh hearing when women are

Pet. Come, Kate, we'll to bed.—

We three are married, but you two are sped.
'Twas I won the wager, though you hit the white; [To Lucentio.

And, being n winner, God give you good-night! [Exeunt Per. and Kath. Hor. Now go thy ways; thou hast tam'd a curst shrew.

Luc. 'Tis a wonder, hy your leave, she will he tam'd so.

[Excunt.

To some remote and desert place, quite out Of our dominions; and that there thou leave it, Without more mercy, to its own protection And favour of the climate. As by strange for-

It came to us, I do in justice charge thee. On thy soul's peril and thy body's torture. That thou commend it strangely to some place, Where chance may nurse or end it. Take it up. Ant. I swear to do this, though a present

Had been more merciful. -Come on, poor babe: Some powerful spirit instruct the kites and ravens To be thy nurses! Wolves and bears, they say, Casting their savageness aside, have done Like offices of pity.—Sir, be prosperous In more than this deed does require!-and bless-Against this cruelty, fight on thy side, "oor thing, condemn'd to loss!

> Exit with the child. No, I'll not rear

Leon. Another's issue.

2 Attend. Please your highness, posts, From those you sent to the oracle, are come An hour since: Cleomenes and Dion, Being well arriv'd from Delphos, are both landed. Hasting to the court.

I Lord. So please you, sir, their speed Hath been beyond count.

Twenty-three days They have been absent: 'tis good speed; forefells The great Apollo suddenly will have The truth of this appear. Prepare you, lords; Summon a session, that we may arraign Our most disloyal lady; for, as she hath Been publicly accus'd, so shall she have A just and open trial. While she lives, My heart will be a burden to me. Leave me; And think upon my bidding. Exeunt.

ACT III.

Scene I.—Sicilia. A Street in some Town. Enter CLEOMENES and DION.

Cleo. The climate's delicate; the air most sweet:

Fertile the isle; the temple much surpassing

The common praise it bears Dion. I shall report

For most it caught me, the celestial habits, Methinks I so should term them, -and the reverence

Of the grave wearers. O, the sacrifice! How ceremonious, solemn, and unearthly It was i' the offering!

But, of all, the burst Cleo. And the ear-deafening voice o' the oracle, Kin to Jove's thunder, so surprised my sense That I was nothing

If the event o' the journey Dion. Prove as successful to the queen, -O, be't sol-As it hath been to us rare, pleasant, speedy, The time is worth the use on't.

Great Apollò Cleo. Turn all to the best! These proclamations, So forcing faults upon Hermione, I little like.

Dion. The violent carriage of it Will clear or end the business: when the oracle,-Thus by Apollo's great divine seal'd up,-Shall the contents discover, something rare Even then will rush to knowledge. - Go, -fresh horses;-

And gracious be the issue!

[Exeunt.

Scene II.—The same. A Court of Justice. LEONTES, Lords, and Officers appear, properly seated.

Leon. This sessions,—to our great grief, we pronounce,-Even pushes 'gainst our heart;—the party tried, The daughter of a king, our wife; and one Of us too much belov'd. Let us be clear'd Of being tyrannous, since we so openly Proceed in justice; which shall have due course, Even to the guilt or the purgation.-

Produce the prisoner. [Queen Offi. It is his highness' pleasure that the Appear in person here in court.-

Crier. Silence!

Hermione is brought in guarded; Paulina and Ladies attending.

Leon. Read the indictment.

Offi. [Reads.] Hermione, queen to the worthy Leontes, king of Sicilia, thou art here accused and arraigned of high treason, in committing adultery with Polixenes, king of Bohemia; and conspiring with Camillo to take away the life of our sovereign lord the king, thy royal husband: the pretence whereof being by circumstances partly laid open, thou, Hermione, contrary to the faith and allegiance of a true subject, didst counsel and aid them, for their better safety, to fly away by night.

Her. Since what I am to say must be but that Which contradicts my accusation, and The testimony on my part no other lme But what comes from myself, it shall scarce boot To say, Not guilty: mine integrity Being counted falsehood, shall, as I express it, Be so receiv'd. But thus,—if powers divine Behold our human actions,-as they do,-I doubt not, then, but innocence shall make False accusation blush, and tyranny [know,— Tremble at patience.—You, my lord, best Who least will seem to do so,—my past life Hath been as continent, as chaste, as true, As I am now unhappy: which is more Than history can pattern, though devis'd And play'd to take spectators; for, behold me,-A fellow of the royal bed, which owe A moiety of the throne, a great king's daughter, The mother to a hopeful prince,—here standing To prate and talk for life and honour 'fore [it Who please to come and hear. For life, I prize As I weigh grief, which I would spare: for honour,

'Tis a derivative from me to mine, And only that I stand for. I appeal To your conscience, sir, before Polixenes Came to your court, how I was in your grace, How merited to be so; since he came, With what encounter so uncurrent I Have strain'd, to appear thus: if one jot beyond The bound of honour, or in act or will and royal necessities made separation of their society, their encounters, though not personal, have heen royally attorneyed, with interchange of gifts, letters, loving emhassies; that they have seemed to be together, though absent; shook hands, as over a vast; and embraced, as it were, from the ends of opposed winds. heavens continue their loves!

Arch. I think there is not in the world either malice or matter to alter it. You have an unspeakable comfort of your young Prince Mamillius: it is a gentleman of the greatest promise that ever came into my note.

Cam. I very well agree with you in the hopes of him. It is a gallant child; one that, indeed, physics the subject, makes old hearts fresh: they that went on crutches ere he was born desire yet their life to see him a man.

Arch. Would they else be content to die? Cam. Yes; if there were no other excuse why they should desire to live.

Arch. If the king had no son they would desire to live on crutches till he had one. Exeunt.

Scene II .- The same. A Room of State in the Palace.

nier Leontes, Polixenes, Hermion Mamillius, Camillo, and Attendants. HERMIONE, Enter

Pol. Nine changes of the watery star have been ithrone The shepherd's note since we have left our Without a burden: time as long again Would be fill'd up, my brother, with our thanks;

And yet we should, for perpetuity, Go hence in debt: and therefore, like a cipher,

Yet standing in rich place, I multiply With one we-thank-you many thousands more

That go hefore it. Leon. Stay your thanks awhile,

And pay them when you part.

Sir, that's to-morrow. Pól. I am question'd by my fears, of what may chance Or breed upon our absence; that may blow No sneaping winds at home, to make us say, This is put forth too truly. Besides, I have stay'd

To tire your royalty.

We are tougher, hrother, Than you can put us to't.

Pol.

No longer stay.

Leon. One seven-night longer.

Pol.Very sooth, to-morrow. Leon. We'll part the time hetween's then: and in that I'll no gainsaying.

Pol. . Press me not, beseech you, so. There is no tongue that moves, none, none i' the world

So soon as yours, could win me: so it should Were there necessity in your request, although 'Twere needful I denied it. My affairs Do even drag me homeward: which to hinder, Were, in your love, a whip to me; my stay, To you a charge and trouble: to save both,

Farewell, our hrother.

Leon. Tongue-tied, our queen? Speak you. Her. I had thought, sir, to have held my peace until

You had drawn oaths from him not to stay. You, sir,

Charge him too coldly. Tell him, you are sure All in Bohemia's well: this satisfaction The by-gone day proclaimed: say this to him, He's heat from his hest ward.

Leon. Well said, Hermione. Her. To tell he longs to see his son, were strong: But let him say so then, and let him go; But let him swear so, and he shall not stay, We'll thwack him hence with distaffs.-Yet of your royal presence [to POLIXENES] I'll adventure

The borrow of a week. When at Bohemia You take my lord, I'll give him my commission To let him there a month hehind the gest Prefix'd for his parting: -yet, good deed, Leontes, I love thee not a jar of the clock hehind What lady she her lord .-- You'll stay?

Pol. No, madam. Her. Nay, hut you will? Pol. I may not, verily.

Her. Verily! You put me off with limber vows; hut I, Though you would seek to unsphere the stars with oaths, with oaths, Should yet say, Sir, no going. Verily, You shall not go; a lady's verily is As notent as a lord's. Will you go yet? Force me to keep you as a prisoner, Not like a guest: so you shall pay your fees When you depart, and save your thanks. How say you?

My prisoner or my guest? by your dread verily,

One of them you shall be.

Pol. Your guest, then, madam: To he your prisoner should import offending; Which is for me less easy to commit Than you to punish.

Not your gaoler, then, Her. But your kind hostess. Come, I'll question TON hovs: Of my lord's tricks and yours when you were

You were pretty lordlings then. Pol. We were, fair queen.

Two lads that thought there were no more hehind But such a day to-morrow as to-day, [two? And to be hoy eternal.

Her. Was not my lord the verier wag o' the Pol. We were ns twinn'd lambs that did frisk i' the sun

And hleat the one at the other. What we chang'd

Was innocence for innocence; we knew not The doctrine of ill-doing, nor dream'd That any did. Had we pursu'd that life, And our weak spirits ne'er heen higher rear'd With stronger blood, we should have answer'd heaven Boldly, Not guilty; the imposition clear'd Hereditary ours.

By this we gather Her.

You have tripp'd since. O my most sacred lady, Pol. Temptations have since then heen born to's!

for In those unfledg'd days was my wife a girl; Your precious self had then not cross'd the eyes Of my young play-fellow.

Reward did threaten to encourage him, Not doing it and being done: he, most humane, And fill'd with honour, to my kingly guest Unclasp'd my practice; quit his fortunes here, Which you knew great; and to the certain hazard

Of all incertainties himself commended, No richer than his honour:-How he glisters Thorough my rust! and how his piety Does my deeds make the blacker!

Re-enter Paulina.

Paul. Woe, the while! O, cut my lace, lest my heart, cracking it, Break too!

r Lord. What fit is this, good lady?

Paul. What studied torments, tyrant, hast for me? [boiling What wheels? racks? fires? what flaying? In leads or oils? what old or newer torture Must I receive, whose every word deserves To taste of thy most worst? Thy tyranny Together working with thy jealousies,-Fancies too weak for boys, too green and idle For girls of nine,—O, think what they have done,

And then run mad indeed,—stark mad! for all Thy by-gone fooleries were but spices of it. That thou betray'dst Polixenes, 'twas nothing; That did but show thee, of a fool, inconstant, And damnable ingrateful; nor was't much Thou wouldst have poison'd good Camillo's honour.

To have him kill a king; poor trespasses,-More monstrous standing by: whereof I reckon The casting forth to crows thy baby daughter, To be or none, or little; though a devil Would have shed water out of fire ere done't: Nor is't directly laid to thee, the death young prince, whose honourable the queen, . The sweetest, dearest creature's dead; and vengeance for't

Nor dropp'd down yet.

The higher powers forbid! I Lord. Paul. I say she's dead: I'll swear't. If word nor oath Prevail not, go and see: if you can bring Tincture, or lustre, in her lip, her eye, Heat outwardly or breath within, I'll serve you As I would do the gods.—But, O thou tyrant! Do not repent these things; for they are heavier Than all thy woes can stir; therefore betake thee To nothing but despair. A thousand knees Ten thousand years together, naked, fasting, Upon a barren mountain, and still winter In storm perpetual, could not move the gods To look that way thou wert.

Leon. Go on, go on: Thou canst not speak too much; I have deserv'd All tongues to talk their bitterest!

Say no more; ı Lord.

Howe'er the business goes, you have made fault I' the boldness of your speech.

Paul. I am sorry for't: All faults I make, when I shall come to know them,

I do repent. ' Alas, I have show'd too much The rashness of a woman: he is touch'd To the noble heart .- What's gone, and what's past help,

Should be past grief: do not receive affliction At my petition; I beseech you, rather Let me be punish'd, that have minded you Of what you should forget. Now, good my liege, Sir, royal sir, forgive a foolish woman; The love I bore your queen,-lo, fool again!-I'll speak of her no more, nor of your children; I'll not remember you of my own lord,

Who is lost too: take your patience to you, Who is not nothing.

And I'll say nothing.

Thou didst speak but well, When most the truth; which I receive much.

Than to be pitied of thee. Pr'ythee, bring me To the dead bodies of my queen and son: One grave shall be for both; upon them shall The causes of their death appear, unto Our shame perpetual. Once a day I'll visit The chapel where they lie; and tears shed there Shall be my recreation: so long as nature Will bear up with this exercise, so long I daily vow to use it.-Come, and lead me To these sorrows. Exeunt.

Scene III.—Bohemia. A desert Country near the Sea.

Enter ANTIGONUS with the Child, and a Mariner.

Mam. I am like you, they say.

Leon. Why, that's some comfort.-What! Camillo there?

Cam. Ay, my good lord.

Leon. Go play, Mamillius; thon'rt an honest man. Exit Mamillius.

Camillo, this great sir will yet stay longer.

Cam. You had much ado to make his anchor hold:

When you cast out, it still came home.

Leon. Didst note it? Cam. He would not stay at your petitions;

His business more material

Didst perceive it?-Leon. They're here with me already; whispering, rounding,

Sicilia is a so-forth: 'tis far gone

When I shall gust it last .- How came't, Camillo, That he did stay?

Cam. At the good queen's entreaty. Leon. At the queen's be't: good should be pertinent;

But so it is, it is not. Was this taken By any understanding pate but thine? For thy conceit is soaking, will draw in More than the common blocks:-not noted, is't, But of the finer natures? by some severals Of head-piece extraordinary? lower messes, Perchance are to this business purblind? say.

Cam. Business, my lord! I think most understand Bobemia stays here longer.

Leon. Ha!

Cam. Stays here longer. Of our most gracious mistress.

Satisfy The entreaties of your mistress!—satisfy!— Let that suffice. I have trusted thee, Camillo, With all the nearest things to my beart, as well My chamber-councils, wherein, priest-like, thou Hast cleans'd my bosom; I from thee departed Thy penitent reform'd: but we have been Deceiv'd in thy integrity, deceiv'd In that which seems so.

Cam. Be it forbid, my lord! Leon. To bide upon't .- thon art not bonest: or,

If thou inclin'st that way, thou art a coward, Which hoxes honesty behind, restraining From course requir'd; or else thou must be counted

A servant grafted in my serious trust, And therein negligent, or else a fool, That seest a game play'd bome, the rich stake drawn,

And tak'st it all for jest.

Cam. My gracious lord, I may be negligent, foolish, and fearful; In every one of these no man is free. But that his negligence, his folly, fear, Amongst the infinite doings of the world, Sometimes puts forth: in your affairs, my lord, If ever I were wilful-negligent, It was my folly; if industriously I play'd the fool, it was my negligence, Not weighing well the end; if ever fearful To do a thing, where I the issue doubted, Whereof the execution did cry out Against the non-performance, 'twas a fear Which oft affects the wisest: these, my lord, Are such allow'd infirmities that bonesty Is never free of. But, beseech your grace, Be plainer with me; let me know my trespass By its own visage: if I then deny it, 'Tis none of mine.

Have you not seen, Camillo,-Leon. But that's past doubt: you have, or your eyeglass Is thicker than a cuckold's horn,-or heard,-For, to a vision so apparent, rumour Cannot be mute, -or thought, -for cogitation Resides not in that man that does not think

My wife is slippery? If thou wilt confess,-Or else be impudently negative, To have nor eyes nor ears nor thought, -then say My wife's a bobbyhorse; deserves a name As rank as any flax-wench that puts to Before her troth-plight: say't and justify't.

Cam. I would not be a stander-by to hear My sovereign mistress clouded so, without My present vengeance taken: 'shrew my heart. You never spoke what did become you less Than this; which to reiterate were sin As deep as that, though true.

Is whispering nothing? Leon. Is leaning cheek to cheek? is meeting noses? Kissing with inside lip? stopping the career Of laughter with a sigb?—a note infallible Of breaking bonesty;—horsing foot on foot Skulking in corners? wishing clocks more swift? Leon. Ay, but wby? [treaties | Hours, minutes? noon, midnight? and au eyes Cam. To satisfy your highness, and the enonly.

To use my wings. Impute it not a crime To me or my swift passage, that I slide O'er sixteen years, and leave the growth untried Of that wide gap, since it is in my power To o'erthrow law, and in one self-born hour To plant and o'erwhelm custom. Let me pass The same I am, ere ancient'st order was, Or what is now received: I witness to The times that brought them in; so shall I do To the freshest things now reigning, and make

The glistering of this present, as my tale Now seems to it. Your patience this allowing, I turn my glass, and give my scene such growing As you had slept between. Leontes leaving The effects of his fond jealousies, so grieving That he shuts up himself; imagine me, Gentle spectators, that I now may be In fair Bohemia; and remember well, I mention'd a son o' the king's, which Florizel I now name to you; and with speed so pace To speak of Perdita, now grown in grace Equal with wondering: what of her ensues. I list not prophesy; but let Time's news Be known when 'tis brought forth:—a shepherd's daughter,

And what to her adheres, which follows after, Is the argument of Time. Of this allow, If ever you have spent time worse ere now; If never, yet that Time himself doth say He wishes earnestly you never may.

Scene I.—Bohemia. A Room in the Palace of Polixenes.

Enter Polixenes and Camillo.

Pol. I pray thee, good Camillo, be no more importunate: 'tis a sickness denying thee anything; a death to grant this.

Cam. It is fifteen years since I saw my country; though I have for the most part been aired abroad, I desire to lay my bones there. Besides, the penitent king, my master, hath sent for me; to whose feeling sorrows I might be some allay, or I o'erween to think so, -which is another spur to my departure.

Pol. As thou lovest me, Camillo, wipe not out the rest of thy services by leaving me now: the need I have of thee, thine own goodness hath made; better not to have had thee than thus to want thee; thou, having made me businesses which none without thee can sufficiently manage, must either stay to execute them thyself, or take away with thee the very services thou hast done; which if I have not enough considered,—as too much I cannot,—to be more thankful to thee shall he my study; and my profit therein the heaping friendships. that fatal country, Sicilia, pr'ythee, speak no more; whose very naming punishes me with the remembrance of that penitent, as thou call'st him, and reconciled king, my brother; whose loss of his most precious queen and children are even now to be afresh lamented. Say to me, when sawest thou the Prince Florizel, my son? Kings are no less unhappy, their issue not being gracious, than they are in losing them, when they have approved their virtues.

prince. What his happier affairs may be, are of it:-A prize! a prize!

to me unknown; but I have missingly noted he is of late much retired from court, and is less frequent to his princely exercises than formerly he hath appeared.

Pol. I have considered so much, Camillo. and with some care; so far, that I have eyes under my service which look upon his removedness; from whom I have this intelligence, - that he is seldom from the house of a most homely shepherd; a man, they say, that from very nothing, and heyond the imagination of his neighbours, is grown into an unspeakable

Cam. I have heard, sir, of such a man, who hath a daughter of most rare note: the report of her is extended more than can be thought to hegin from such a cottage.

Pol. That's likewise part of my intelligence: but I fear the angle that plucks our son thither. Thou shalt accompany us to the place; where we will, not appearing what we are, have some question with the shepherd; from whose simplicity I think it not uneasy to get the cause of my son's resort thither. Pr'ythee, be my present partner in this business, and lay aside the thoughts of Sicilia.

Cam. I willingly oney your command.
Pol. My best Camillo!—We must disguise Excunt.

ourselves.

Scene II.—The same. A Road near the Shepherd's Cottage.

Enter AUTOLYCUS, singing.

When daffodils hegin to peer, . With, hey! the doxy over the dale,-Why, then comes in the sweet o' the year; For the red blood reigns in the winter's pale.

The white sheet bleaching on the hedge, With, hey! the sweet hirds, O, how they sing!-Doth set my pugging tooth on edge For a quart of ale is a dish for a king.

The lark, that tirra-lirra chants,— With, hey! with, hey! the thrush and the jay,— Are summer songs for me and my aunts, While we lie tumhling in the hay.

I have served Prince Florizel, and, in my time, wore three-pile; but now I am out of service:

But shall I go mourn for that, my dear? The pale moon shines by night: And when I wander here and there, I then do most go right.

If tinkers may have leave to live, And bear the sow-skin budget, Then my account I well may give And in the stocks arouch it.

My traffic is sheets; when the kite builds, look to lesser linen. My father named me Autolycus; who being, as I am, littered under Mercury, was likewise a snapper-up of unconsidered trifles. With die and drab I purchased this caparison; and my revenue is the silly-cheat: gallows and knock are too powerful on the highway; heating and hanging are terrors to Cam. Sir, it is three days since I saw the me; for the life to come, I sleep out the though

I conjure thee, by all the parts of man, Which honour does acknowledge,—whereof the

Ieast
Is not this suit of mine, that thou declare
What incidency thou dost guess of harm
Is creeping toward me; how far off, how near;
Which way to be prevented, if to be;
If not, how best to bear it.

Com. Sir, I will tell you; Since I am charg'd in honour, and by him That I think honourable: therefore mark my counsel.

Which must be even as swiftly follow'd as I mean to utter it, or both yourself and me Cry lost, and so good-night!

Pal. On, good Camillo.

Cam. I am appointed him to murder you.

Pal. By whom, Camillo?

Cam. By the king.

Pal. For what? Cam. He thinks, nay, with all confidence he swears, As he had seen't or been an instrument To vice you to't, that you have touch'd his queen Forbiddingly.

Pal. O, then my best blood turn To an infected jelly, and my name Be yok'd with his that did betray the best! Turn then my freshest reputation to A savour that may strike the dullest nostril Where I arrive, and my approach be shunn'd, Nay, hated too, worse than the great'st infection That e'er was heard or read!

Cam. Swear his thought over By each particular star in heaven and By all their influences, you may as well Forbid the sea for to obey the moon, Ay, or by oath remove, or counsel shake The fabric of his folly, whose foundation Is pil'd upon his faith, and will continue The standing of his body.

Pal. How should this grow?

Cam. I know not: but I am sure 'tis safer to Avoid what's grown than question how 'tis born. It, therefore, you dare trust my honesty,— That lies enclosed in this trunk, which you Shall bear along impawn'd,—away to-night. Your followers I will whisper to the business: And will, by twos and threes, at several posterns, Clear them o' the city: for myself, I'll put My fortunes to your service, which are here By this discovery lost. Be not uncertain; For, by the honour of my parents, I Have utter'd truth: which if you seek to prove, I dare not stand by; nor shall you be safer Than one condemn'd by the king's own mouth, thereon His execution sworn.

Pol. I do believe thee;
I saw his heart in his face. Give me thy hand;
Be pilot to me, and thy places shall Still neighbour mine. My ships are ready, and My people did expect my hence departure
Two days ago.—This jealousy
Is for a precious creature: as she's rare,
Must it be great; and, as his person's mighty,
Must it be violent; and as he does conceive
He is dishonour'd by a man which ever Profess'd to him, why, his revenges must

In that be made more bitter. Fear o'ershades me:

Good expedition be my friend, and comfort The gracious queen, part of his theme, but nothing

Of his ill ta'en suspicion! Come, Camillo; I will respect thee as a father, if Thou bear'st my life off hence: let us avoid.

Cam. It is mine authority to command The keys of all the posterns: please your highness.

To take the urgent hour: come, sir, away. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE L.-SICILIA. A Room in the Palace.

Enter HERMIONE, MAMILLIUS, and Ladies.

Her. Take the boy to you: he so troubles me, 'tis past enduring.

1 Ladu. Come. my gracious lord.

1 Lady. Come, my gracious lord, Shall I be your playfellow?

Mam. Yo, I'll none of you.

1 Lady. Why, my sweet lord?

Mam. You'll kiss me hard, and speak to me as if

I were a baby still.—I love you better.

2 Lady. And why so, my lord?

Mam. Not for because Your brows are blacker; yet black brows, they say, Become some women best; so that there be not Too much hair there, but in a semicircle, Or a half-moon made with a pen.

2 Lady. Who taught you this? Mam. I learn'd it out of women's faces.— Pray now,

What colour are your eyebrows?

r Lady.

Blue, my lord.

Mam. Nay, that's a mock: I have seen a lady's nose

That has been blue, but not her eyebrows. I Lady.

The queen your mother rounds apace: we shall Present our services to a fine new prince. One of these days; and then you'd wanton with us.

If we would have you.

2 Lady. She is spread of late
Into a goodly bulk: good time encounter her!
Her. What wisdom stirs amongst you?
Come, sir, now

I am for you again: pray you, sit by us, And tell's a tale.

Mam. Merry or sad shall't be?

Her. As merry as you will.

Mam. A sad tale's best for winter:

I have one of sprites and goblins.

Her.

Let's have that, good sir.

Come on, sit down:—come on, and do your best

To fright me with your sprites: you're powerful at it.

Mam. There was a man,—
Her. Nay, come, sit down: then on.
Mam. Dwelt by a churchyard:—I will tell it softly;

Youd crickets shall not hear it.

Her. Come on, then, And give't me in mine ear.

How would he look to see his work, so noble, Vilely bound up? What would he say? Or how Should I, in these my borrow'd flaunts, behold

The sternness of his presence?

Flo. Apprehend Nothing but jollity. The gods themselves, Humbling their deities to love, have taken The shapes of beasts upon them: Jupiter Became a bull, and bellow'd: the green Neptune A ram, and bleated; and the fire-rob'd god, Golden Apollo, a poor humble swain, As I seem now:-their transformations Were never for a piece of heauty rarer,-Nor in a way so chaste, since my desires Run not before mine honour, nor my lusts Burn hotter than my faith.

Per. O, but, sir, Your resolution cannot hold, when 'tis Oppos'd, as it must be, by the power of the king: One of these two must be necessities, Which then will speak, that you must change this purpose,

Or I my life Flo. Thou dearest Perdita, inot With these forc'd thoughts, I pr'ythee, darken The mirth o' the feast: or I'll be thine, my fair, Or not my father's; for I cannot be Mine own, nor anything to any if I be not thine: to this I am most constant, Though destiny say no. Be merry, gentle: Strangle such thoughts as these with anything That you behold the while. Your guests are coming: Lift up your countenance, as it were the day Of celebration of that nuptial which We two have sworn shall come.

O lady Fortune, Per.

Stand you auspicious!

Flo. See, your guests approach: Address yourself to entertain them sprightly, And let's be red with mirth.

Enter Shepherd, with POLIXENES and CAM-ILLO disguised; Clown, MOPSA, DORCAS, with others.

Sheb. Fie, daughter! when my old wife liv'd, upon

This day she was both pantler, butler, cook; Both dame and servant; welcom'd all; serv'd

Would sing her song and dance turn; now At upper end o' the table, now i' the middle; On his shoulder, and his; her face o' fire, With labour; and the thing she took to quench it, She would to each one sip. You are retir'd, As if you were a feasted one, and not The hostess of the meeting: pray you, bid These unknown friends to us welcome; for it is A way to make us better friends, more known.

That which you are, mistress of the feast: come

And bid us welcome to your sheep-shearing, As your good flock shall prosper.

Sir, welcome! [To Pot. Per. It is my father's will I should take on me The hostess-ship o' the day: - You're welcome, Give me those flowers there, Dorcas. Reverend sirs.

For you there's rosemary and rue; these keep Seeming and savour all the winter long: Grace and remembrance be to you both. And welcome to our shearing!

Pol. Shephérdess-A fair one are you!—well you fit our ages

With flowers of winter.

Sir, the year growing ancient,-Not yet on summer's death, nor on the birth Of trembling winter,—the fairest flowers o' the season

Are our carnations, and streak'd gillyvors, Which some call nature's bastards: of that kind Our rustic garden's barren; and I care not To get slips of them.

Pol. Wherefore, gentle maiden, Do you neglect them?

Per. For I have heard it said There is an art which, in their piedness, shares With great creating nature.

Pol. Say there be; Yet nature is made better by no mean But nature makes that mean; so, o'er that art Which you say adds to nature, is an art That nature makes. You see, sweet maid, we marry

A gentler scion to the wildest stock, And make conceive a bark of baser kind By bud of nobler race. This is an art Which does mend nature, -change it rather; but The art itself is nature

Per. So it is.

Pol. Then make your garden rich in gilly vors And do not call them bastards.

I'll not put The dibble in earth to set one slip of them; No more than, were I painted, I would wish This youth would say, 'twere well, and only therefore

Desire to breed by me.—Here's flowers for

Clo. Have I not told thee how I was cozened by the way, and lost all my money?

Aut. And, indeed, sir, there are cozeners ahroad; therefore it hehoves men to he wary. Clo. Fear not thou, man, thou shalt lose nothing here.

Aut. I hope so, sir; for I have about me

many parcels of charge

Clo. What hast here? hallads?

Mop. Pray now, buy some: I love a ballad in print a-life; for then we are sure they are true.

Aut. Here's one to a very doleful tune. How a usurer's wife was hrought to bed of twenty money-hags at a hurden, and how she longed to eat adders' heads and toads carbonadoed.

Mop. Is it true, think you?
Aut. Very true; and but a month old.

Aut. Here's the midwife's name to't, one Mistress Taleporter, and five or six honest wives that were present. Why should I carry lies abroad?

Mop. Pray you now, buy it. Clo. Come on, lay it by; and let's first see more ballads; we'll buy the other things anon. Aut. Here's another ballad, of a fish that appeared upon the coast on Wednesday the fourscore of April, forty thousand fathom above water, and sung this ballad against the hard hearts of maids: it was thought she was a woman, and was turned into a cold fish for she would not exchange flesh with one that loved The ballad is very pitiful, and as true.

Dor. Is it true too, think you?

Aut. Five justices' hands at it; and witnesses more than my pack will hold. Clo. Lay it hy too: another.

Aut. This is a merry ballad; hut a very pretty one.

Mop. Let's have some merry ones.

Aul. Why, this is a passing merry one, and goes to the tune of Two maids wooing a man: there's scarce a maid westward hut she sings it: 'tis in request, I can tell you.

Mop. We can hoth sing it: if thou'lt bear a part thou shalt hear; 'tis in three parts.

Dor. We had the tune on't a month ago.
Aut. I can hear my part; you must know 'tis my occupation: have at it with you.

Shep. Are you a courtier, an't like you, sir? Aut. Whether it like me or no, I am a courtier. Seest thou not the air of the court in these enfoldings? hath not my gait in it the measure of the court? receives not thy nose court-odour from me? reflect I not on thy baseness court-contempt? Thinkest thon, for that I insinuate, or toze from thee thy business, I am therefore no courtier? I am courtier capa-pe; and one that will either push on or pluck back thy business there: wherenpon I command thee to open thy affair.

Shep. My business, sir, is to the king.
Aut. What advocate hast thou to him?

Shep. I know not, an't like you.

Clo. Advocate's the court-word for a pheasant, say you have none.

Shep. None, sir; I have no pheasant, cock nor hen. [men!

Aut. How bless'd are we that are not simple Yet nature might have made me as these are, Therefore I will not disdain.

Clo. This cannot be but a great courtier. Shep. His garments are rich, but he wears them not bandsomely.

Clo. He seems to be the more noble in being fantastical: a great man, I'll warrant; I know by the picking on's teeth.

Aut. The fardel there? wbat's i' the fardel?

Wherefore that box?

Shep. Sir, there lies such secrets in this fardel and box, which none must know but the king; and which he shall know within this hour, if I may come to the speech of him.

Aut. Age, thon hast lost thy labour.

Shep. Why, sir?

Aside.

Aut. The king is not at the palace; he is gone aboard a new ship to purge melancholy and air himself: for, if thou beest capable of things serious, thou must know the king is full of grief.

Shep. So 'tis said, sir,—about his son, that should have married a shepherd's daughter.

Aut. If that shepherd be not in hand-fast, let him fly: the curses he shall have, the tortures he shall feel, will break the back of man, the heart of monster.

Clo. Think you so; sir? Aut. Not he alone shall suffer what wit can make heavy and vengeance bitter; but those that are germane to him, though removed fifty times, shall all come under the hangman: which, though it be great pity, yet it is necessary: An old sheep-whistling rogue, a ramtender, to offer to have his daughter come into Some say he shall be stoned; but that gracel death is too soft for him, say I. throne into a sheep-cotel-all deaths are too

Enter on old Shepherd.

Shep. I would there were no age between ten and three-and-twenty, or that youth would sleep out the rest; for there is nothing in the between but getting wenches with child, wronging the ancientry, stealing, fighting.-Hark you now!-Would any but these boiled brains of nineteen and two-and-twenty hunt this weather? They have scared away two of my hest sheep, which I fear the wolf will sooner and than the master: if any where I have them, tis hy the sea-side, browsing of iry. - Good luck, an't be thy will! what have we here? [Taking up the child.] Mercy on's, a bairn; a very pretty hairn! A boy or a child, I wonder? A pretty one; a very pretty one: sure, some scape: though I am not bookish, yet I can read waiting-gentlewoman in the scare. This has been some stair-work, some trunk-work, some behind-door work: they were warmer that got this than the poor thing is here. I'll take it up for pity: yet I'll tarry till my son comes; he hollsed but even now .-Whos, he hea!

Clo. [Within.] Hillon, lon!

Shep. What, art so near? If thou'lt see z thing to talk on when thou art dead and rotten. come bither.

Enter Clown.

What ailest thou, man?

Clo. I have seen two such sights, by sea and Of good and had; that make and unfolderror,—by land!—but I am not to say it is a sea, for it! Now take upon me, in the name of Time, is now the sky: betwirt the firmament and it. you cannot thrust a bodkin's point.

Shep. Why, hoy, how is it? Clo. I would you did but see how it chates, how it rages, how it takes up the shore! but There weep, and leave it crying; and, for the that's not to the point. O, the most pitcous cry of the poor souls! sometimes to see 'em, and not to see 'em; now the ship boring the moon with her mainmast, and anon swallowed with yest and froth, as you'd thrust a cork in a hogshead. And then for the land service .to see how the hear tore out his shoulder-bone; This was so, and no slumber. Dreams are toys; how he ened to me for help, and said his name was Antigonus, a nobleman.-But to make an end of the ship, -to see how the see fisp-dragoned it: - hut, first, how the poor souls roared, and the sea mocked them; -and how the poor gentleman roared, and the bear mocked him,-hoth roaming louder than the sea or weather.

Shep. Name or mercyl when was this, boy?

Clo. Now, now: I have not winked since I saw these sights: the men are not yet cold under water, nor the bear half dined on the gentleman; he's at it now.

Shep. Would I had been hy to have helped the old man!

Clo. I would you had been by the ship-side, to have helped her: there your charity would have lacked footing. Aside.

Shep. Heavy matters! heavy matters! but look thee here, boy. Now bless thyself: thou mettest with things dying, I with things new-born. Here's a sight for thee; look thee, a hearing-cloth for a squire's child! look thee here! take up, take up, boy; open 't. So, let's see:—it was told me I should be rich by the fairies: this is some changeling:-open 't.

What's within, boy?

Clo. You're a made old man; if the sins of your youth are forgiven you, you're well to live. Gold! all gold!

Shep. This is fairy-gold, boy, and 'twill prove so: up with it, keep it close: home, home, the next way! We are lucky, boy; and to he so still requires nothing but secrecy-Let my sheep got-come, good hoy, the next way home.

Clo. Go you the next way with your findings. I'll go see it the bear be gone from the gentleman, and how much he-hath extent they are never curst but when they are hungry: if there

Enter a Gentleman.

The news, Rogero?

2 Gent. Nothing but bonfires: the oracle is fulfilled; the king's daughter is found: such a deal of wonder is broken out within this hour that ballad-makers cannot be able to express it. Here comes the Lady Paulina's steward: he can deliver you more.

Enter a third Gentleman.

How goes it now, sir? this news, which is called true, is so like an old tale that the verity of it is in strong suspicion. Has the king found his heir?

3 Gent. Most true, if ever truth were pregnant by circumstance: that which you hear you'll swear you see, there is such unity in the The mantle of Queen Hermione; her proofs. jewel about the neck of it; the letters of Antigonus, found with it, which they know to be his character; the majesty of the creature in resemblance of the mother; the affection of nobleness, which nature shows above her breeding; and many other evidences,-proclaim her with all certainty to be the king's daughter. Did you see the meeting of the two kings?

2 Gent. No.

3 Gent. Then have you lost a sight which was to be seen, cannot be spoken of. There might you have beheld one joy crown another, , so and in such manner that it seemed sorrow wept to take leave of them; for their joy waded There was casting up of eyes, holdin tears. ing up of hands, with countenance of such distraction that they were to be known by garment, not by favour. Our king, being ready to leap out of himself for joy of his found daughter, as if that joy were now become a loss, cries, O, thy mother, thy mother! then asks Bohemia forgiveness; then embraces his son-in-law; then again worries his daughter with clipping her; now he thanks the old shepherd, which stands by like a weather-beaten conduit of many kings' reigns. I never heard of such another encounter, which lames report to follow it, and undoes description to do it.

2 Gent. What, pray you, became of Antigonus, that carried hence the child?

3 Gent. Like an old tale still, which will have matter to rehearse, though credit be asleep, and not an ear open. He was torn to pieces with a bear: this avouches the shepherd's son; who has not only his innocence,—which seems much,-to justify him, but a handkerchief and rings of his, that Paulina knows.

I Gent. What became of his bark and his followers?

3 Gent. Wrecked the same instant of their master's death, and in the view of the shepherd: so that all the instruments which aided to expose the child were even then lost when it was | But, O, the noble combat, 'twixt! joy and sorrow, was fought in Paulina! She you see them not, and think me still no gentlehad one eye declined for the loss of her hus- man born: you were best say these robes are band, another elevated that the oracle was fulfilled: she lifted the princess from the earth, and so locks her in embracing, as if she would pin her to her heart, that she might no more be in danger of losing.

r Gent. The dignity of this act was worth the audience of kings and princes; for by such was it acted.

3 Gent. One of the prettiest touches of all, and that which angled for mine eyes,-caught the water, though not the fish,-was when, at the relation of the queen's death, with the manner how she came to it, -bravely confessed and lamented by the king,-how attentiveness wounded his daughter; till, from one sign of dolour to another, she did, with an alas! I would fain say, bleed tears; for I am sure my heart wept blood. Who was most marble there changed colour; some swooned, all sorrowed: if all the world could have seen it, the woe had been universal.

I Gent. Are they returned to the court? 3 Gent. No: the princess hearing of her mother's statue, which is in the keeping of Paulina,—a piece many years in doing, and now newly performed by that zare Italian master, Julio Romano, who, had he himself eternity, and could put breath into his work, would beguile nature of her custom; so perfectly he is her ape: he so near to Hermione hath done Hermione, that they say one would speak to her, and stand in hope of answer:thither with all greediness of affection are they gone; and there they intend to sup.

2 Gent. I thought she had some great matter there in hand; for she hath privately twice or thrice a day, ever since the death of Hermione, visited that removed house. Shall we thither, and with our company piece the rejoicing?

I Gent. Who would be thence that has the benefit of access? every wink of an eye some new grace will be born: our absence makes us unthrifty to our knowledge. Let's along.

Exeunt Gentlemen. Aut. Now, had I not the dash of my former life in me, would preferment drop on my head. I brought the old man and his son aboard the prince; told him I heard them talk of a fardel, and I know not what; but he at that time overfond of the shepherd's daughter, -so he then took her to be,--who began to be much seasick and himself little better, extremity of weather continuing, this mystery remained undiscovered. But 'tis all one to me; for had I been the finder-out of this secret, it would not have relished among my other discredits. come those I have done good to against my will, and already appearing in the blossoms of their fortune.

Could ever yet cut breath? Let no man mock

For I will kiss her!

Paul. Good my lord, forbear: The ruddiness upon her lip is wet; You'll mar it if you kiss it; stain your own With oily painting. Shall I draw the curtain? Leon. No, not these twenty years. Per. So long could I Stand by, a looker on.

Paul. Either forbear, Quit presently the chapel, or resolve you For more amazement. If you can behold I'll make the statue move indeed, descend And take you by the hand: but then you'll think,

Which I protest against,—I am assisted

By wicked powers.

What you can make her do I am content to look on: what to speak. I am content to hear; for 'tis as easy

To make her speak as move.

It is requir'd You do awake your faith. Then all stand still; Or those that think it is unlawful business I am about, let them depart. Proceed: Leon.

No foot shall stir.

Paul. Music, awake her: strike!—[Music. 'Tis time; descend; be stone no more; approach; Strike all that look upon with marvel. I'll fill your grave up: stir; nay, come away: Bequeath to death your numbness, for from him

Dear life redeems you.—You perceive she stirs: HERMIONE comes down from the pedestal. Start not; her actions shall be as holy as You hear my spell is lawful: do not shun her Until you see her die again; for then You kill her double. Nay, present your hand: When she was young you woo'd her; now in age Is she become the suitor.

O; she's warm! [Embracing her. Leon. If this be magic, let it be an art Lawful as eating.

Pol.She embraces him. Cam. She hangs about his neck: If she pertain to life, let her speak too.

Pol. Ay, and make't manifest where she has liv'd,

Or how stol'n from the dead.

Paul. That she is living, Were it but told you, should be hooted at Like an old tale; but it appears she lives, Though yet she speak not. Mark a little while.-

Please you to interpose, fair madam: kneel. And pray your mother's blessing.—Turn, good lady;

Our Perdita is found.

[Presenting PER., who kneels to HER. Her. You gods, look down, And from your sacred vials pour your graces Upon my daughter's head!-Tell me, mine own, Where hast thou been preserv'd? where liv'd? how found?

Thy father's court? for thou shalt hear that

Knowing by Paulina that the oracle

Gave hope thou wast in being,—have preserv'd Myself to see the issue.
